NEW OBSTACLE ARISES IN SETTLEMENT OF THE STRIKE OF TEAMSTERS

Garment Workers Claim to Have Been Slighted By Drivers.

Their Claim Recognized as Just By Federation of Labor.

Drivers Say the Garment Workers Must Now Be Dealt With.

Chicago, June 5.—The garment workers' strike, which practically has been regarded as a dead issue, has unexpectedly reared its head and threatens to become an obstacle in future negotiations looking towards the settlement of the teamsters' war.

In the Chicago Federation of Labor meeting, delegates from the Tailors' union attacked the strike committee for "slighting" the 4,000 garment workers, out of sympathy for whom the teamsters went on strike.

The federation, in the end, was forced to acknowledge that the two strikes were inseparable, and that one could not be settled without the other. For half an hour the delegates wrangled over accepting the report of the strike committee read by Chairman Joseph W. Morton. The objections were that the report confined itself to the progress of the teamsters' strike, excluding all reference to the garment workers' controversy. Charges were made that thousands of dollars contributed weekly by labor unions are being spent for the teamsters' benefit, while the garment workers, according to statements, are "starving."

Teamsters who were present vigorously denied the assertions, and succeeded finally in having the strike report adopted. In addition, President Dold of the federation placed himself on record as declaring that the strike committee never would consent to the settlement of the teamsters' trouble until the garment workers' dispute had been satisfactorily adjusted.

Developments of the utmost significance in the teamsters' strike hinge on the outcome of arbitration negotiations between the team owners and teamsters within the next few days. Both sides are in an aggressive mood, and failure to reach an agreement, it is predicted, will force a walk out of 10,000 more teamsters and bring idleness to thousands of workmen in other crafts. If the members of the Chicago Team Owners' association force the issue with their drivers, similar action on the part of other teaming organizations, it is said, is practically certain.

If the teamsters agree to arbitrate the question of the right of the owners to make deliveries to strike-bound houses, the decision, it is conceded, will be in favor of the team owners, whose contract with the drivers provides that at all times they shall further the interests of their employers. With the team owners making deliveries to all the concerns involved in the struggle, the strike, it is asserted, would lose its force at once. The Truck Drivers' union, with which the team owners have a contract, will meet tomorrow night and vote on the arbitration question.

The Commission Team Owners' association, which has taken action similar to that of the Team Owners' association, has confined the arbitration question to the right of its members to take produce from the express cars and deliver it to the various markets. The Commission Wagon Drivers' union will vote on the question tomorrow night.

Charles Dold, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, has resigned from the teamsters' strike committee. He asserts that his action was due to the fact that for several weeks he has neglected the affairs of the Piano and Organ Workers' union of which he is an official.

Non-union men are still being harassed by sluggers. Albert Johnson, believed to be a non-union teamster, was severely beaten today at Fourteenth street and Ashland avenue. When found by the police he was insensible and was bleeding from a wound in the head. He was taken to a hospital where it was found that several ribs were broken. He will probably die.

TESTIMONY ALL IN IN THE CRAWFORD TRIAL.

Washington, June 5.—The government practically has concluded the introduction of testimony in the case of William G. Crawford, on trial on a charge of having conspired with August W. Machen and George E. Lorenz to defraud the government in connection with a contract to furnish letter carriers satchels to the postoffice department. Wade Chance, formerly president of the Postal Lock and Device company of which Crawford was manager, testified that his title of president was only nominal and that Crawford had full charge of the affairs of the company.

Counsel for the defense offered a large amount of correspondence between Crawford and Chance for the purpose of showing that all important business matters were submitted to Chance and that many of them were in turn approved by Spencer Trask, who financed the Postal Device company.

WENT TOO FAR NORTH.

Falmouth, Eng., June 5.—The American yacht Apache arrived today. The extraordinary delay in her arrival was due to her going too far north and experiencing a series of calms on the banks of Newfoundland. All on board are in good health.

THE KING OF SPAIN ARRIVES IN LONDON TO VISIT EDWARD

Reaches Cherbourg on Royal Yacht and Met By Prince of Wales.

Welcomed By King Edward on Arrival at Station In London.

Portsmouth, June 5.—The king of Spain arrived here this afternoon from Cherbourg on board the British royal yacht Victoria and Albert. The yacht was accompanied across the channel by a strong escort of British cruisers and torpedo boat destroyers. The royal visitor was welcomed at the British naval headquarters by an imposing array of warships, a score of which fired a royal salute as the Victoria and Albert passed through their lines. The young king, who wore the uniform of a British general, with the ribbon of the Order of the Garter, stood on deck evidently keenly enjoying the spectacle, despite the fact that it was pouring rain. The prince of Wales, representing King Edward, awaited the yacht at the quay side, and immediately after the gangway was run up he went on board the Victoria and Albert and warmly welcomed the Spanish king. Their respective suites were then introduced, and subsequently the mayor and corporation of Portsmouth presented King Alfonso with an address of welcome.

Cherbourg, June 5.—The royal train bearing King Alfonso from Paris arrived here at an early hour this morning. The king proceeded on board the British royal yacht Victoria and Albert, where the British greetings and French farewells were exchanged. The yacht then sailed for England, escorted by the British fleet and a French torpedo boat flotilla.

London, June 5, 4:33 p. m.—The king of Spain arrived in London this afternoon. He was welcomed at the railroad station by King Edward. Their majesties arrived at Buckingham palace at 4:58 p. m. The royal visitor was accorded the heartiest reception the whole length of the route. No untoward incident marked the event.

A REWARD OF $50,000 FOR LETTER WRITER

Wealthy Parents Alarmed By Threats of Kidnaping Child.

Oswego, N. Y., June 5.—Driven almost to the point of insanity by numerous letters threatening to kidnap or murder his daughter, Rosamond, John Jay Tonkin, a wealthy and prominent citizen, has announced the offer of a reward of $50,000 for the discovery of the person who has for two years been writing letters to him demanding a large sum of money or dire results. The offer of the reward reveals a story of months of haunting fear which have made life unbearable for the members of the family.

Mr. and Mrs. Tonkin had three daughters. One, Virginia, died three years ago. The shock affected the parents greatly. It is said the body was embalmed and kept in the house for nearly eight months, when the authorities interfered and it was buried. Soon after this came the first letter demanding money or threatening harm to Rosamond. Since then the missives have arrived at frequent intervals. The child has been so strictly guarded that she has grown morose and sickly.

Mr. Tonkin showed the letters to the police, but no clew to the writer could be obtained. Private detectives were employed, with no better results. With nerves shattered by the strain, Mrs. Tonkin took Rosamond to New York six months ago, where apartments were engaged, but the letters followed them and more detectives were put on the case. They were unsuccessful in their attempt to locate the writer, and finally, broken in health and spiritless, Tonkin returned to Oswego with the child. Armed coachmen and detectives always accompany Rosamond when she leaves the house.

On May 28, Cora Sweet, a child, was dragged into a lonely field by a farm hand and murdered. The crime stirred the whole city, and the farm hand, who confessed, was protected with difficulty. This murder so alarmed Mr. and Mrs. Tonkin that they offered the reward in the belief that it would stimulate the search of the letter writer.

The last letter received demanded $50,000, threatening the death of the daughter if it was refused. None of the letters has told how or where the money was to be paid.

DIVER NEARLY DIES UNDER WATER

Chicago, June 5.—A dispatch to the Tribune from Canton, Mo., says: After being imprisoned for twenty-four hours, loaded down by a diver's armor and under fifteen feet of water, Dan Hayes has been brought to the surface in an unconscious and almost dying condition.

He is a professional diver and had been employed to remove the brush and debris from the immense pipe which serves at times of low water to drain Lima lake and transfer its surplus to the river. While at work Hayes was sucked under the pipe and over against a bowlder in a way which prevented him from loosening himself from the tangled hose which held him down.

In signalling to the men in charge of the air pump he could not let them know his location, as the air hose, being wrapped around the rock, caused deceptive bubbles to come to the top.

Major Meigs, engineer in charge of the river improvements, scoured the country for a diver to go to the rescue of Hayes, but was unable to find one until nearly twenty-four hours elapsed. When, after an hour's hard labor, the imprisoned diver was released, his suit was found to be leaking and he would have been drowned had the ordeal lasted another half hour. The agony that he passed through made him appear ten years older than when he disappeared from view.

NON-UNIONISTS RUN SAGINAW CARS

Saginaw, Mich., June 5.—Manned by non-union crews, the street railway company today sent out a number of cars with an officer on front and rear platforms. There was no resumption in the early part of the day of yesterday's attacks on the non-union men.

In accordance with the strike order issued by National Organizer Dilworth of the Street Railwaymen's union, the employes of the street railway systems of Saginaw and Bay City and the interurban line between those cities went on strike yesterday. Eleven cars were sent out here manned by non-union crews, but after running until early afternoon, were ordered back into the barns; last night the tie-up was complete. Strike sympathizers pelted the cars and non-union crews with eggs and other missiles and one car on the Washington line was derailed by a stone placed on the track. No attempt was made to collect fares, while the cars were operated and most of the passengers were adventurous youngsters. Several of the cars had window's broken by missiles.

EIGHT YEARS FOR CONSPIRACY.

New York, June 5.—Samuel Lobley who confessed to taking part in an alleged conspiracy by which the Equitable Assurance society was influenced to loan $55,600 on a life insurance policy which had been stolen from its vaults, today, was sentenced to eight years in Sing Sing prison.

THE UNITED STATES REFUSES TO ALLOW THE RUSSIANS TO REPAIR SHIPS AT MANILA

Injuries to the Vessels Were Not Caused By Sea or Storms.

Must Either Leave the Harbor or Be Interned During War.

Japs Are Evidently Preparing to March on Vladivostok.

Washington, June 5.—Admiral Enquist will not be allowed to repair his ships at Manila. This government has decided that as the injuries to the vessels were not caused either by sea or storm, they would be obliged to refuse permission for the vessels to be repaired there. Today Secretary Taft cabled the following instructions to Governor Wright at Manila, regarding the ships:

"Time cannot be given for the repair of the injuries received in battle. Therefore the vessels cannot be repaired unless interned until the end of hostilities."

Admiral Train has been instructed accordingly. It was stated by Secretary Taft that if the Russian vessels agreed to leave Manila in their present state they were welcome to do so, but as it did not appear that they suffered any damage caused by the sea or storm, this government was obliged to take the position above outlined.

Secretary Taft will cable Governor Wright at Manila to inform Admiral Enquist that in strict pursuance of the international policy adopted by this government, he will be allowed to intern his ships, the Aurora, Oleg and Jemtchug, at Manila. In case he does not adopt this course, his only alternative, after the period allowed by international law expires, will be to put to sea. It is expected here that Admiral Enquist will decide to intern his ships, and orders have been issued for Admiral Train to take charge of the details of interment if the Russian government decides to follow this policy.

ATTACK ON VLADIVOSTOK

Expected From Japs In Very Short Time.

Tacoma, June 5.—Purser P. C. Marrington of the steamer Lynx, just arrived, says that while at Moji, May 10, eighteen transports were seen sailing for Korea. It was understood that the men were to march overland and join the Japanese in North Manchuria. The current rumor, which was well authenticated, was that the Japanese would soon begin a forward movement, having in contemplation the capture of Vladivostok. While at Yokohama and other Japanese ports, officers of the Lynx witnessed other operations of a warlike nature, which convinced them that Vladivostok is the goal toward which the armies of Oyama have set their faces. Every transport, and there were many of them, was heavily laden with soldiers going to join their comrades.

Vladivostok, June 5.—It is expected here that a Japanese attack on the fortress will not be long delayed. There is, however, a calm and determined spirit manifested by the population in face of the forthcoming crisis. The defenses of Vladivostok, on which steady work has been in progress since the beginning of the war, are now considered as having ben completed.

Shanghai, June 5.—Vice Admiral Uriu has arrived off Gutzlaff island. He is probably coming to Woosung.

An ex-Russian cruiser is outside this harbor.

Gutzlaff island is situated in Hangchow bay, a few miles south of Shanghai.

ANXIOUS TO FIGHT

The Reason Russians Went Through the Strait.

Tokio, June 5.—A telegram from Sasebo says: "A member of the Russian staff, being asked why the Russian ships took the risk of essaying the Tsu strait, said:

"We were confident of victory. Reaching Vladivostok was not the only object of our fleet. The emperor commanded us on leaving the Baltic to fight and defeat our enemy, and we were anxious to obey his order. We were confident and ready to fight from the start. Our mission is ended.

"Of the captives brought to Sasebo the battleship Nicholai I is the most seriously damaged. There are many holes in her port side, over three feet in diameter, and the majority of her quick-firing guns on the port side were destroyed. Her forward funnel is partly shot away, and one hole along the water line measures ten feet."

A dispatch from Mazura says the Japanese battleship Asahi was largely engaged with the Russian battleship Borodino. After the Borodino took fire, and when sinking, the Asahi ceased firing, but the Borodino continued to fire. Practically her last shot struck the Ashai astern on the starboard side, killing Lieut. Morishota and seven other men. Morishota's leg was shot off, but using his sword as a crutch, he managed to reach the deck, where he died. A dying soldier asked for

NEW AMBASSADOR RECEIVED BY KING

Whitelaw Reid Presents His Credentials From United States.

Queen Receives Wife and Daughter of the New Yorker.

London, June 5.—Whitelaw Reid, the new American embassador, had an audience with King Edward at Buckingham palace at noon today and presented his credentials.

Three royal carriages were sent to Dorchester house to convey the ambassador and the members of the embassy to the palace. The first was occupied by Mr. Reid and Col. Douglas Dawson, the king's master of ceremonies. Secretary Carter, Capt. Stockton, the naval attache; Maj. Beacom, the military attache; Second Secretary Craig Wadsworth and Third Secretary Einstein occupied the other carriages. At the palace Mr. Reid was received by the great officers of state.

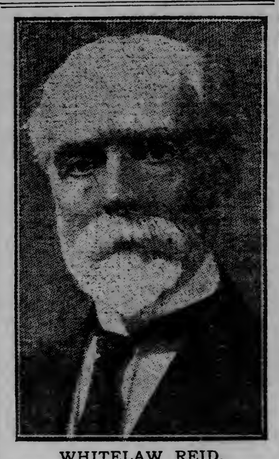
Foreign Secretary Lansdowne drove up to the palace at about the same time as the ambassador, whom he introduced to the king. The latter wore a field marshal's uniform and was surrounded by his suite. His majesty's reception of the ambassador was most cordial.

While the ambassador was presenting the king with his credentials, Queen Alexandra was receiving Mrs. Reid and Miss Reid. Her majesty showed them the interesting objects in the palace.

Secretary Hay paid a formal visit to the American embassy this morning.

The conversation between the king and the ambassador was quite lengthy, his majesty recalling Mr. Reid's previous visits to London and expressing the greatest pleasure at the good relations between the United States and Great Britain. The king also spoke a few words to each member of the embassy.

After the official reception Mr. Reid was ushered upstairs, where his wife and daughter were with the queen and the ambassador was presented to her majesty. King Edward also came in and Mrs. and Miss Reid were presented to him. The King and the ambassador thereupon re-engaged in further conversation. The visit altogether lasted forty minutes, after which the ambassador and his party returned to Dorchester house in the state carriages with coachmen and footmen garbed in long scarlet cloaks.



WHITELAW REID,
New Ambassador to Great Britain.

SENSATIONAL TRIAL FOR MURDER

Kansas City, June 5.—The trial of Mrs. Aggie Myers, charged with complicity in the murder of her husband, Clarence Myers, a pressman at their home here, in May, 1904, was called today at Liberty, Mo. having been taken to Clay county on the change of venue. Frank Hiltman who, it is charged was Mrs. Myers' confederate in the murder, who was tried, convicted and sentenced to be hanged for the crime, will be a witness for the state against Mrs. Myers. Mrs. Myers will be a witness in her own defense. The defense will try to prove that there was no motive for Mrs. Myers killing her husband. The state will try to prove that Hiltman and Mrs. Myers were infatuated with each other and that they killed Myers so that they might marry. Mrs. Myers still adheres to her original story that her husband was killed by negro burglars. The murder was most atrocious, Myers' body being hacked in a horrible manner. Hiltman was arrested at Butte, Mont., where he had fled.

LIGHTNING KILLS ST. PAUL WOMAN

St. Paul, June 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mrs. Mary Bradberg, 60 Kentucky street was killed by lightning while asleep shortly before 3 o'clock this morning. The woman was sleeping alone in the upper part of the house. The bolt struck a corner of the room and tore off part of the side of the house. It darted along the wall and descended through Mrs. Bradberg's bed. She was alive when it was discovered she had been struck, but died before a doctor could reach her. The house was damaged to the amount of $200.

RICH PRESENTS FOR ROYAL PAIR

Berlin, June 5.—Crown Prince Frederick William and the Duchess Cecilia of Mecklenburg-Schwerin today received deputations from the Prussian provinces and cities, who came to Berlin to congratulate them on their marriage, which occurs tomorrow. The designs of the silver service to be given to the bride and groom by the citizens were presented. The service itself consists of more than 1,000 pieces will not be ready for use for three years. Prince and Princess Arizugawa, representing the emperor and empress of Japan, personally presented the gift of Japan today. It consisted of two silver flower bowls of antique and artistic workmanship. The king of Saxony has given four vases, the French government two Sevres vases, some tapestry, the sultan of Turkey rare rugs and porcelains, the Austrian emperor a carriage and two horses and the province of Hosena a state carriage.

BOTH KILLED BY FARM HAND

Conclusion of Authorities After Investigating the Hillsboro Tragedy.

Hillsboro, Ohio, June 5.—Developments today in the killing of Madge Dines, aged 14, and Nellie Hart, aged 16, the former the daughter and the latter the servant of Edward Dines, a farmer, led the authorities to believe the girls were killed by David Baldwin, the farm hand, aged 19, who then blew off his head with a shotgun. It was at first thought that all three had been murdered by some unknown person. The girls were found shot dead in their night clothing in their bedroom and evidences showed a desperate struggle. Baldwin, who had been taken in as a tramp by the farmer, was found in the living room with a discharged shotgun by his side. He had tied a small bottle on the trigger to aid him in discharging the weapon. It is supposed that Baldwin attempted an assault.

THE REVOLUTION IN ARGENTINA QUELLED.

New York, June 5.—Revolution in Santiago del Estro has been completely quelled, cables the Buenos Ayres, Argentina, correspondent of the Herald. Governer Santillan, who was a prisoner, has been liberated by the provincial forces. Governor Santillan wired to President Quintana, telling the details of his capture and liberation.

He says that when the government forces approached the revolutionists they put him and his wife in front of their line. The federal government will be interpolated in the chamber because of the alleged complicity of high federal officials.

LAST YACHT ARRIVES.

The Lizard, England, June 5.—The American yacht Apache, the last contestant in the race for Emperor Williams' cup, finished at 10:20 this morning.

FIRE AT ETIENNE.

Etienne, France, June 5.—Fire has destroyed an extensive portion of the business quarter of this city. The loss is estimated at $360,000.

MOROCCAN QUESTION CAUSES TROUBLE IN FRENCH CABINET

Paris, June 5.—Strong tension is developing in the cabinet as the result of the rejection by the sultan of Morocco of the French reform proposals. The situation is similar to that when Foreign Minister Delcasse suddenly presented his resignation. He has not given any indication of his purposes, but reports circulated in well-informed quarters that he may retire if his policy does not secure the united support of the ministers. It is expected that the sultan's action in proposing to refer the question to an international conference will be submitted to the council of ministers tomorrow. The question of its acceptance or rejection is likely to involve also the cabinet.

Fez, Morocco, June 5.—No doubt is entertained in diplomatic circles that the proposal in behalf of Morocco to submit the French proposals to a conference of the powers signatory of the Madrid convention will be categorically declined by the British, French, Spanish and Russian governments. Uncertainty prevails regarding the attitude of the other powers. It is thought in some quarters that Germany may utilize the Moorish proposals as a pretext to enter into direct negotiations with France, in which case the Moroccan question may possibly be settled in Paris or Berlin. The fact that the Moorish decision was launched on the eve of the arrival here of Gerard A. Lowther, the British minister, is much commented upon and is regarded as being a distinct mark of discourtesy to Great Britain. Count Von Tattenbach Ashold, head of the German mission, is evidently in high favor at the palace, where he has frequent interviews with the sultan.

CHINKS WOULD WITHDRAW AMERICAN CONCESSIONS

New York, June 5.—A dispatch to the Herald from Berlin asserts on what is claimed as "the highest authority," that an intrigue is being actively worked in China, backed by powerful Chinese officials, the object of which is to withdraw forcibly or otherwise the concession to the American-China Development company (in which New York and Belgian financiers are heavily interested) for building all the important railroads between Hankow and Canton.

The withdrawal of the concession is intended, the correspondent declares, to be the first strong step towards closing the open door. Reports of a similar nature were in circulation last January when it was said the Chinese government threatened to annul the franchise because the American syndicate had sold a controlling interest to Europeans.

WASHOUT TIES UP ALL TRAFFIC

Telluride Col., June 5.—Traffic on the Rio Grande Southern railroad between Rico and Durango is paralyzed. It is reported that twenty-eight miles of track have been washed out by the Dolores river near Dolores station. Two or three bridges have also been carried away. The running time of trains between Rico and Durango has been annulled indefinitely. All the wreck trains at the command of the road are at the scene of the washout. It is not known how long it will require to make repairs, but it will probably be two weeks. No tickets are being sold for transportation between these cities.

WELCOME NEWS

Charles Carlson Did Not Die of Spotted Fever.

Bacteriologist Says Death Not Caused By Epidemic Meningitis.

Fears which were more or less awakened by the supposed presence of a case of the dreaded cerebro spinal meningitis or spotted fever in Duluth, will be allayed by the report of the state bacteriologist, which was received this morning by Coroner McCuen.

At the time of the death of Charles Carlson, the butcher, who was supposed to be afflicted with the disease, Dr. McCuen made an examination of the body and took a culture of the germs of the disease. This was forwarded to the state laboratory at St. Paul for analysis.

According to the report received this morning, the analyst was unable to find any diplococcus Intercellularis meningitidus in the culture, but did discover some diplococcus pneumoniae.

"Taking these facts into consideration," the letter read, "I do not think you would be warranted in believing that it was a case of the epidemic cerebro spinal meningitis."

The presence of the pneumonia germs in the cerebrum would cause a form of the cerebro spinal meningitis, but not of the epidemic kind.

"The case was a very peculiar one," said Dr. McCuen this morning, "because of the fact that there were no traces of lobar pneumonia in the lungs, although they had penetrated the cerebrum and even into the brain."

The coroner and the health commissioner had some doubts as to the case, but in order to be on the safe side the body was interred promptly and with every care to prevent contagion.

The report of the analyst is a lengthy one and contains a number of long medical terms which are intelligible only to physicians, but it establishes the fact that Carlson did not die of the disease which has caused such a reign of terror in New York city, and the reports of which, the local physicians say, have been by no means exaggerated. As yet no well-authenticated case of the disease has been reported in Duluth.

Court Nearly Ready.

This week the district court judges will have arranged to conduct the juvenile court established by the new law, which will mean the transfer of the jurisdiction of juvenile criminal cases from municipal to district court. The court will have the option of suspending sentence or of sending the offenders to the state school at Owatonna or the state training school at Red Wing. Where suspended sentences are given, the court will receive the monthly reports of the juvenile defendants. These reports were formerly made to the humane officer.

PAPAL RULE VERY SEVERE

Neglect and Mistakes By Prelates Punished at Once.

Rome, June 5.—Bishops all over the world are said to have become impressed at the unusual severity recently displayed by Pius X. toward several members of the hierarchy. Since the apostolic visitation was concluded in every diocese of Italy by prelates especially appointed for the purpose by the pope, and as the reports of the conditions of each diocese had been examined by Pius X., several Italian bishops have been severely dealt with by the pope because of alleged neglect of mistakes in their pastoral administration.

The archbishops of Montreal and Syracuse in Sicily were suspended a few days ago by Pius X. from the right of administering holy orders, and an investigation has just been ordered into the affairs of the arch-diocese of Florence, whose archbishop had been repeatedly reported to the vatican by some of his clergy. He already has been asked to resign.

Following the resignation of the bishops of Dijon and Laval in France, which was ordered by the pope and which caused so much trouble with the late ministry and the present French officials, it is said that the archbishop of Avington, Mgr. Sueur, has just been summoned to Rome by the pope under similar circumstances and that his immediate resignation will be requested. The archbishop has been accused by the generals of the expelled French religious orders of his diocese of having helped the government's officials in their policy of extermination, refusing to grant permission to teach in his diocese to those congregations which were not legally authorized by the government.

There are at least six other bishops in France who will lose their position as soon as the relations between church and state in that country shall have been defined.

In the Spanish peninsula two cardinals, both archbishops of prominent sees, have been recently the recipients of severe admonitions from the Vatican regarding the way their dioceses were being administered, and one of them, Cardinal Neto, patriarch of Lisbon, tendered his resignation, which, however, was refused by the pope.

In Mexico and in some other South American republics several bishops have received warnings from the Vatican authorities, and some of them have even been summoned within the last few days to come to Rome.

This policy of personal supervision over all the dioceses of the world Pius X. is determined to pursue, because, as he says, having been in charg of a diocese himself for many years, he knows the failings of many members of the hierarchy and feels the necessity, as head of the church, to keep all the prelates of the world under his personal supervision and control.

Pius X. is now also very careful not to take upon himself the direct responsibility of any action which might need to be taken in any diocese by the bishop. As a rule he leaves the matter in the hands of the bishop himself and entirely at the discretion of his own judgment.

As an illustration it is said that a few days ago a bishop who had come to Rome to ask from the pope a special dispensation in behalf of one of his priests was asked by the pope if he had brought the necessary petition in writing. On being shown the paper Pius X. wrote under it: "Left to the judgment and to the discretion of the bishop."

At the bishop's reply that a direct dispensation from the pope would be preferred Pius X. is said to have answered: "That may be, but I assure you I do not wish to suffer in purgatory on your account.

"If you should not act rightly in the matter you will have to go to purgatory yourself. At any rate you are sure to meet me there, because they say so many things against me that I feel I shall also have to spend a few years in the place."

OF HELP TO WOMEN

Are Lectures Being Given on Domestic Science.

Mrs. Marion C. Fisher of Boston today gave the first lecture of a series, which will be continued this week at the Appliance room of the Zenith Furnace room, on West First street. Mrs. Fisher will lecture every afternoon this week, at 2 o'clock, and the course laid out is a most delightful one. "Baking-powder Breads" was the subject of this afternoon's talk, and meats, salads and cakes will be considered on the other afternoons. Mrs. Fisher is a graduate of the Boston Cooking school, and is most practical in her teachings of domestic science. In speaking of the work this morning, she said: "Formerly women thought that knowledge of cooking and housework was in a way a kind of disgrace. They were proud of their ignorance, but a change has taken place and there are few other subjects that are as eagerly studied. Many of the lectures that are being delivered are lacking in practical helpfulness. In my work my greatest aim is to make my teachings practical and of real help to women."

The series promises to be a most interesting one, and is presented to the women through the courtesy of the Zenith Furnace company.

HENRY FREEMAN of Jackson.
DILLARD GIBBARD of Lee City.

Fatally wounded: Andrew Wilson and Harlan Dicks. Seriously injured: John Allen, James Dicks and Letcher Davis.

The fight took place near a "blind tiger" saloon, conducted by a negro. There had been bad blood between Andrew Wilson and Harlan Dicks, a merchant, for some time. They met at a picnic and the clash was followed by a general battle. Freeman and Gibbard were almost instantly killed. Neither Wilson or Dicks can live.

Great Northern Passenger Train Meets With a Mishap.

Northern Pacific Makes Several Changes In Time and Trains.

Great Northern passenger train No. 34 was ditched at Grand Rapids yesterday afternoon. The accident was the result of a half-open switch, which derailed the engine and baggage car. Engineer Osborne was slightly cut on the back of his neck. He was the only person injured.

The engine and baggage car were both pretty well smashed up, and rolled over on their sides in the ditch. Osborne stuck to the cab, and it is considered rather remarkable that he was not more seriously injured. Fireman Redmond jumped. It took some time to clear away the wreck, and when the train finally arrived in Duluth, pulled by an engine secured from Swan River, it was seven hours late. A freight car was made to do service as a baggage car until Duluth was reached. Freight traffic was also delayed several hours.

MAKES CHANGES.

Northern Pacific Puts New Time Card In Effect.

The Northern Pacific yesterday put into effect a new time card. Several new trains were placed in operation, and a number of changes, rendered necessary by the heavy traffic anticipated on account of the Lewis and Clark exposition, were made in the trains which have been running regularly.

Trains No. 5 and No. 6, which have been running between St. Paul and Fargo, will be operated to and from Jamestown, and No. 7 and No. 8, will run between St. Paul and Mandan, N. D., instead of as far as Jamestown only. These changes are made with the intention of relieving the "North Coast Limited" East and West, the "Twin City Express," East, and the "Pacific Express," westbound, of local business, as it is expected that the through trains to the coast will have all the Lewis and Clark exposition and Yellowstone Park passengers they can possibly accommodate, even if run in two or three sections. Trains 7 and 8 will carry one Standard Pullman each between St. Paul and Winnipeg, St. Paul and Mandan, Duluth and Fargo, and St. Paul and Wahpeton.

No. 5 leaves St. Paul at 8:40 a. m., arriving at Jamestown at 8:45 p. m. No. 6 will leave Jamestown at 6:05 a. m., and arrive at St. Paul at 6 p. m. No. 7 will leave St. Paul at 8 p. m., and arrive at Mandan at 2:45 p. m. No. 8 will leave Mandan at 11:30 a. m. and arrive at St. Paul at 7:25 a. m.

New trains Nos. 15 and 16 will run between Helena and Garrison, connecting with the "North Coast Limited" and "Burlington Express," westbound (the Burlington route train from Omaha, St. Louis and Kansas City, reaching the Northern Pacific railway at Billings) and the Burlington express eastbound.

Night trains will be operated between Spokane and Lewiston on the Palouse branch. The "Pacific Express" (westbound) will make connection with this train southbound at Spokane, and passengers from Lewiston and points intermediate to Spokane can make connection at the latter point with the "North Coast Limited" east and westbound and the "Burlington Express" eastbound. This local train will carry one standard Pullman sleeping car in each direction in addition to the usual equipment.

New day train will be put on between Seattle and Portland. It will be known as the "Puget Sound Limited" and is scheduled to cut the time between these cities to six hours and twenty-five minutes. This is an exposition train and is expected to handle an immense traffic. It is something new in train building, far surpassing anything ever used in the West. A combination bag gage and smoking car, first-class coach, parlor and dining cars will comprise the train. These cars are new, having just been received from the makers. The coaches are 70 feet long, weigh 116,550 pounds, an unusual weight, insuring smooth riding.

The "Puget Sound Limited" will leave Seattle at 4:30 p. m., Tacoma at 5:50 p. m. and arrive at Portland at 10:55 p. m. Returning it will leave Portland at 4:30 p. m., Tacoma at 9:35 p. m. and arrive at Seattle at 10:55 p. m.

A new train will also be operated between Spokane and Seattle. This service will enable passengers to make excellent connections for Walla Walla, Washington, both going and coming from Tacoma and Seattle. This train will carry one standard Pullman sleeping car between Spokane and Seattle and one between Spokane and Tacoma, eastbound—one car from Seattle.

The "North Coast Limited," eastbound, will leave Portland at 2 p. m., instead of 3 p. m., as heretofore, arriving at St. Paul at the same time as at present.

Considerable change will be made in the equipment carried by the various Northern Pacific trains. The "North Coast Limited" trains will carry two standard Pullman sleeping cars between St. Paul and Portland, instead of one. One of the six new eighteen-section tourist sleeping cars recently purchased, will be used in each of these trains. These are the largest cars of their kind in service—in fact, the largest sleeping cars of any kind.

The "Night Express" on the Duluth Short Line will carry one standard sleeping car between St. Paul and Duluth and one between Minneapolis and Duluth.

NEW YORK TIPS.

San Franciscan Relates His Painful Experiences.

"I've had to shed quite a little backsheech in the way of tips since I arrived in Washington," said a San Francisco man who dropped into Washington for the inauguration on his way back from New York to the slope, to the Washington Star, "but in nothing like such lump lots as I had to unload while in New York. Two bits is about the size of a correct tip for a waiter in a Washington hotel dining-room or restaurant, and the Washington waiters look pleased and grateful to get that. If you'd offer a New York waiter in a first-class place a quarter tip nowadays he'd probably hand it back to you, together with two bits of his own, and advise you to go and have your shoes half soled with the money.

"A Washington barber, I have found, looks quite amiable when he gets a tip of a dime or 15 cents after shaving a customer, but you don't even get a duck of the head in the way of thanks from a New York barber for slipping him that kind of tip coin. In a first-rate place he wants two-bits, or he loks upon you as a cheap plker. And so on all down the line. I've been let down nice and easy in the tipping business since I've been here and I'm duly and properly appreciative.

"But this whole eastern country could stand a great big antitipping crusade without being damaged up any.

"They're pretty liberal people and all-round spenders out my way, as I suppose you know, but I never saw anybody tip a barkeep out in San Francisco. I saw that idiotic stunt done quite frequently during my recent stay in New York.

"A native of that grab burg took me into a pretty tidy cabinet-drinking place in the Wall street district to stake me to a drink. The tab for his check and mine was 35 cents. He threw a half dollar down on the bar and nodded to the barkeep, who passed him a grin and said 'Thanks.'

"The barkeep rung up 35 cents on the cash register, dug 15 cents change out of it and stuffed the tip into his kick. I don't believe there is a barkeeper in San Francisco who would stand for that sort of thing. I wouldn't take a chance on offering any California bartender a tip for shaping me up a drink under any consideration. He'd unquestionably get chesty and advise me to apply the change toward getting my laundry out.

"But I saw a lot of developments in the tipping line while in New York that caused me to sit up. For example, I went into a telegraph office on upper Broadway with a New Yorker. He handed over the telegram that he had written to the receiving clerk, saying, 'Make that a rush, will you?' and threw a half dollar and a two-bit piece on the counter. The telegram footed up 55 cents and when the clerk passed back the brace of dimes for change the New Yorker said, 'That's all right,' and the clerk, wearing a pleased, surprised expression, tucked the silver into his waistcoat pocket and hustled to the rear to get the telegram on the wire.

"I'm bound to say that the transaction looked kind of mean and gummy to me, but a few afternoons later I went up against a still funnier proposition in the shape of a typewriter girl, who, it seemed needed to be nudged along by a tip for promptly executing some typewriting I had given her to do. I had dictated a number of important letters to the young woman, who has a public typewriter stall in the corridor of one of New York's biggest downtown office buildings, on the previous afternoon. The bill, she told me on that occasion, came to a pat $2 and I handed her the two-spot and strolled with my letters.

"Well, on the following afternoon I approached her with a sizable tabulating job that I wanted to have run off in a hurry. She wasn't busy at the time—fact is, she was reading a yaller-kivered novel. She didn't seem to be as cordial as she had been when I first met her.

"'I'd like to have this job done in a large hurry, miss,' I said to the young woman, 'so's to get it into tonight's San Francisco mail. Can you hammer it out inside of a couple of hours, say?'

"She put a finger to her lips in a pouty sort of way, looked at the ceiling and said, 'Well, maybe I can.'

"'Try hard,' said I, good-naturedly, as I started away, but I was rather puzzled to notice that she sort of tossed her head at me as I went.

"When I got around the corner of the corridor the New York man I was with gave me a kick on the leg.

"'Is that the girl that fixed up your letters yesterday?' he asked me.

"'Uh-huh,' said I. 'She does neat work, too, but I guess she isn't feeling right on edge today.'

"D'je slip her a little extra ribbon money in settling for the work?' he asked me.

"'Great Caesar, no!' said I. 'Has it come to that in this man's town?'

"'Well,' said the New Yorker, 'just you slink back to her and whisper to her that there'll be a little something on the side in the job if she gets it done on time, and see.'

"I always do as I'm told, and I did go back to the typewriter girl's stand.

"'I'm so anxious to have that tabulation finished on time, miss,' I said to her, 'that I'd be willing to—er—willing to—'

"'Well, you ought to have seen her face brighten up.

"'I'll have it finished inside of an hour and a half,' she said, breaking in to relieve me of my embarrassment, and, sure enough, when I went after the tabulation at the end of an hour and a half she had it all tied up waiting for me.

"'Dollar seventy-five,' she said, cheerfully, and I passed her $3, held up a hand in that pleasantly warningful manner that a fellow puts into play when he wants to indicate that there's no change returning, and walked away.

"'Much obliged,' said the girl with a quizzical smile. 'I hope the work will suit you—come again.'

"And only a couple of hours before that she had given me the farthest north gaze because I hadn't tipped her for writing those letters for me on the previous afternoon.

"By the time I get back to New York on the next trip I expect to be sandbagged into tipping a cop tuppence ha'penny for directing me to a street, or handing a car conductor an extra nickel for letting me take a surreptitious puff of my cigar on the back platform, and I wouldn't be surprised if the time 'ud happen around when a fellow might have to tip the paying teller of a New York bank for cashing a check for him.

"While the evil was never so raw out my way as it is back East, the tipping business in San Francisco was bad enough until a general fight all along the line opened up against it about a year ago. The signs are pretty good now that the tipping game will soon be completely obliterated in San Francisco.

"A prominent restaurateur started the ball a-rolling. His scheme was a first-rate thing. He had a number of neat cards printed, and every patron, man and woman, entering the establishment got one of the cards from the door opener. The cards read like this:

"'We prefer to dispense with the patronage of persons who insist upon tipping waiters. We pay our waiters ourselves, and pay them well.'

"The management of the restaurant supplemented this by announcing in the San Francisco newspapers that under a new wage system devised for the purpose of doing away with the tipping nuisance the restaurant waiters were amply paid for their work, and that any waiter caught accepting a tip at the restaurant would be incontinently fired.

"That was a babe of a scheme, and it started the anti-tipping crusade off with a rattle. The proprietor of the restaurant really almost doubled the wages of his waiters in order to atone in some measure for the loss of their tips, and those of the waiters who got grouchy over the new plan were dumped and new waiters willing to work on the new basis for more liberal pay than waiters ever received before in San Francisco since the argonaut days were put on in their places. This restaurant had lost a lot of custom owing to the notorious gouging character of its waiters, but under the new non-tipping deal all of the patronage immediately returned, with far more than enough new trade to more than atone to the restaurateur for the extra money which he had to dish out to his waiters under the new system.

"The thing made such an instant and acclaimed hit that many of the other leading restaurants of San Francisco had straightway to adopt it in order to keep the originator of the idea from getting all of the patronage. It wasn't long before the scheme became universal as to the restaurants, and it developed into a genuine treat to sit down to a meal in a restaurant and feel that the waiter wasn't boring holes through you with his eyes while calculating, as you munched, how you were going to assay up in the matter of the tip.

"The anti-tipping idea immediately took other ramifications in San Francisco. The top-notch barber shops of the town began to display placards in their establishments reading something like this:

"'Customers will oblige by not conferring gratuities upon the barbers, who are employed under an especial agreement not to receive tips.'

"The barbers working in these shops get much better money than those employed in shops where tipping goes, the boss barbers more than making up the extra wages in the increased popularity of their shops.

"So that we've got the top gougers on the run out our way, and I guess maybe that wouldn't be a swell idea for you snow-shovelers back this way to adopt from us slopers."

EXPENSIVE LUNCHES.

Arranging the automobile luncheon is one of the problems in luxury to those persons who prefer an al fresco meal in these spring days to one in a restaurant. Naturally, there are many who are ready to supply this new demand, says a writer in the New York Sun.

One establishment in a side street near Fifth avenue undertakes to supply the entire luncheon and asks only the number of guests and the price one is willing to pay. This is usually a large one, and even for the owner of the $20,000 car this man's luncheons are regarded as a luxury.

Into the hamper he puts cold potted quails, preserved entire and to be eaten just as they come from the porcelain jars. Then there are also cans, which may be sliced and served with no other preparation than what any cold duck would require.

Partridges and grouse are also to be eaten as readily, and they are to be had from this dealer who brings them over from French manufacturers who made them for generations before automobiles were ever thought of. Potted hare is also one of the specialties of this little shop of gastronomic rarities.

If the appettites of the guests are not to be satisfied with cold game or meats, there are also hot dishes, or rather dishes that may be made hot with very little trouble. These include Frankfort sausages, with a slice of boiled French bacon and sauerkraut made in Strasburg, and thus possessing the merits of the French and the German cuisine.

Civets of rabbit cooked with a great deal of pepper, lamb's feet in cream, tripe a la mode de Caen—all these products of French kitchens are to be made ready by an external application of hot water. That is easily supplied by the kettles, without which no well ordered automobile ever leaves its garage.

To these substantial dishes he adds French fruits in glass that need only to be taken out of the bottle to eat, rare pickles and, in the season, fresh caviar.

AVOIDING MOSQUITOES.

A young girl was talking about mosquitoes, says the New Orleans Picayune. She had spent the summer in a place where they were numerous.

"But I noticed," said she, "that when I wore a yellow dress I didn't get a single bite."

"Did you notice that?" said the young scientist, and then he went on eagerly:

"I am glad you noticed that, for it is a verification of certain experiments that we have made.

"We have made these experiments in a gauze tent, and their object was to ascertain the effect on mosquitoes of colors.

"We placed in the tent boxes lined with cloth of different hues, and we found that the little pests crowded frantically into the dark blue box, while the yellow box they would not under any circumstances enter.

"The experiments extended over several weeks. We had in the tent some vessels for the mosquitoes to breed in. We discovered, that next to the dark blue, the mosquitoes sought the dark red box. After the dark red came brown, then scarlet, then black, then slate gray, then olive green, then violet, then pearl gray, then white.

"Thus we proved that mosquitoes noticed colors, and we formulated two helpful hints for the inhabitants of mosquito-ridden districts.

"The first hint is to wear yellow to escape mosquito bites, and to use yellow netting for bed canopies and window screens.

"The second hint is to use a blue-lined box if you want to trap mosquitoes. With this box, in an infested region, you could easily catch and destroy thousands of the insects daily."

BEAUTIFUL GOWNS.

Miss Van Studdiford's Creations Are Gorgeous.

In these days of modern theatricals there are many other requirements in operas besides good music, lyric and librettos. An elaborate display of fashionable gowns is very essential to the complete success of a production, this feature having particular bearing on the patronage of the feminine public. Tell the average society woman that an opera is in town in which the gowns worn are particularly lavish and fresh from Paris and nine times out of ten she will see that opera at any cost. Miss Van Studdiford, star of "Red Feather," was well aware of this sentiment in the public, and planned accordingly to fairly satiate the public with her display of gowns; fresh from the most fashionable costumers in Paris. Miss Van Studdiford's costumes worn in a single night are valued at nearly $4,000 exclusive of jewels, while thirteen gowns purchased for the chorus represent an outlay of $10,000. The display in the ballroom scene, in which the Crown Prince of Romancia is received by Miss Van Studdiford, is probably as gorgeous as ever was staged. A description of some of the gowns is as follows:

Gown worn by Miss Van Studdiford on entering—blue broadcloth, trimmed with pale white lace, satin bodice with real lace sleeves, jeweled buttons and ornaments, value at $760; hat of applique, trimmed with jewels and ostrich plumes, value $75.

Red Feather costume—black velvet coat, with trousers to match, silver trimmings, black velvet cloak, value $160.

Gown worn in finale of Act 1—white broadcloth coat, applique medallions with hat to match, value $500.

Ballroom scene—princess silver spangle gown with real lace, elaborately covered with jewels; front covered with imported roses, the train with the same effect, worked out of silk artificial orchids, value $1,500; a large applique hat with six real ostrich feathers, value $100.

Second ballroom gown—black sequin coat, with long train, value $1,000; large black jet hat, black feather tips and ornaments, value $50.

Bird costume in Act II—golden pheasant, gold cloth, trimmed with real feathers, with hand-painted ornaments, train with same effect; hat, head of bird, value $700.

Black bird—black taffeta silk hat, with real black feathers, with black spangle train and large black hat, with bill of bird.

Humming bird—front has a cream satin effect, trimmed with green and gold, with real feathers, green and blue wings, a grayish blue velvet train; small toque hat, with head of bird, value $500.

Silver bird—silver cloth, covered with pink chiffon, trimmed with pink velvet feathers, spangle back with same effect, with train; small silver hat, value $450.

Cock-a-too—white taffeta, tinted with yellow and trimmed with velvet, spangled in real feathers, back with light yellowish train; hat a wreath of yellow flowers, value $500.

Bird of paradise—yellow satin front, hand-painted, with spangled gold braid and chenille bodice, trimmed with chenille; train gold-braided, with hand-painted feather; hat, head of bird, value $800.

Cardinal—cardinal colored taffeta, trimmed with silk cardinal feathers and silver spangles, back with deep rose effect and hand embroidered in chenille, with train; hat, head of bird, value $550.

THE GORGIO DOCTOR

By Charles Sloan Reid.

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Old Toni lay sick in his tent, and Anita sat upon her feet by his cot, waiting for the gorgio doctor whom she had herself gone to summon, all the herbal remedies of the camp having failed. Toni was 90 years old, and Anita was twenty, the daughter of the old gipsy's youngest son, who, with his wife, was dead, both having died the same year. The oldest daughter of Toni was queen of the band, but hers was a more than ordinary sordid nature, and there was little time she had to spare from the business of getting silver from the gorgios. So old Toni had come to depend upon Anita for every attention.

Anita had the shapeliest foot and ankle in the world, the most exquisitely rounded form, the prettiest hand; and her eyes gleamed like twin stars from a rose-tinted velvet sky. Sandor Costello, the young musician of the band, never tired of looking at her. But the girl feared him. He was lazy, and earned absolutely nothing. His violin alone made him tolerable in the camp, for he affected the "dandy" in his dress, and a sinister leer lurked habitually in his eyes.

As Anita sat by her grandfather, waiting for the coming of the doctor, Sandor came and gazed in upon them. If Toni should die, he could force the girl to marry him. And why should he not die? He was old enough. Anita looked up when Sandor darkened the tent opening. But when she saw him she shuddered and looked again into the face of her grandfather.

But presently Sandor was nudged gently aside by the doctor who entered the tent. A scowl from the musician's eyes followed him, and again the gypsy's form darkened the doorway. Dr. Graves felt old Toni's pulse. Then he turned toward the front of the tent and motioned Costello away.

"Give us light here," he said sternly.

The man glided away, but his hand caressed the handle of a small stiletto as he did so. Anita saw this movement and shuddered again.

Toni was very ill, and the doctor shook his head doubtfully. But he prepared something and explained to Anita how it should be administered.

"I will come again tonight," he said, and turned to take his leave.

Then Anita caught his arm and detained him. Old Toni had fallen asleep; and the girl spoke in a low, anxious voice.

"You must not let him die—you will not let him die, will you?"

Her earnest eyes looked into his, and he saw all the marvelous beauty of them. A sudden fire leaped to life in his soul, and the weight of her small hand on his forearm filled him with strange ecstasy. He dropped his right hand upon hers where it rested on his left arm, and said:

"If all the attention and all the skill at my command can save him, little girl, he shall not die."

"Oh, if you will save him, I will love you and count the stars for you night after night, no matter where we camp."

Somehow Graves felt a strange joy filling his heart, and it was with peculiar earnestness that he whispered:

"Ah, precious, you offer me a tremendous reward."

"He is the only friend I have in the band," continued Anita, "the only one to protect me from Costello, him you saw at the door just now."

"He loves you?"

"So he declares, but I fear him as a wolf with sharp fangs."

"He shall not harm you."

Anita drew a little way from him. "I do not understand," she said.

"I, too, love you," declared the doctor. "And if Toni dies, I shall protect you with my life."

Anita stared at the ground and was silent. And Graves turned once more toward the door.

"I shall come again tonight," he repeated.

All the afternoon Anita thought over what the gorgio had told her; and, while the memory of his words brought a strange joy to her heart, she ever and anon shook her head gravely.

"Gorgios make love lightly," she said to herself, yet the handsome face of the young doctor haunted her.

Toni was no better at night, and Dr. Graves sat a long time by his bedside. Anita sat a little distance away and looked from the face of the doctor to that of her grandfather and back again. And outside, beyond the dim glare of the candle light that came from the tent, a pair of glittering black eyes from the beneath the brow of a swarthy countenance, looked in upon the group.

At last the doctor arose. Toni had gone to sleep again, and was breathing quietly.

"Old Toni has a chance to live," said Graves, approaching Anita.

The girl's eyes beamed her thanks. For a moment the man stood and looked down into these eyes. Then he caught her hand passionately.

"I love you, little Romany maid," he said. "No gorgio maiden has made my heart beat like this. Think about it until old Toni gets well, and see if you cannot love me for more than the fee you promised."

Anita's heart beat quickly, and she lowered her eyes submissively, when he kissed her hand.

The camp was located in the edge of a bit of old forest half a mile from the village, and just as Dr. Graves was about to emerge from this wood into the open highway, a sudden whir in the air above his head caused him to spring back and throw up his hand just in time to catch in his grasp a brown sinewy wrist and prevent the descent of a slender steel blade which had been aimed at his heart. The powerful grip of the doctor wrenched the wrist of the other in such a manner that the gipsy dropped to his knees in pain, and the weapon fell from his hand. It was Costello, and his eyes, dancing from pain, still gleamed vengeance. With his free hand Dr. Graves secured the fallen weapon. Then he walked rapidly away toward the village, leading his prisoner unresistingly, to be delivered to the sheriff a few minutes later.

Old Toni improved for a few days, then began to sink rapidly, and it became evident that the old gipsy would never rise again.

It was a quiet Sabbath morning when he died. Dr. Graves sat on a camp stool a few feet away, and Anita knelt on the ground beside the cot. All had been silent for some moments in the tent, when the old man raised a finger, pointing toward Anita, and turned his eyes toward Dr. Graves. The doctor drew near, for the old man had something to say. The words came in a whisper.

"Her mother was gorgio," said old Toni. "Take care of her."

Dr. Graves dropped to his knees beside Anita.

"Give her to me for my wife, Toni," he said eagerly, at the same time taking the girl's hands in his own.

Tears filled Anita's eyes, but she looked through them trustingly into the eyes of the man beside her. And thus they remained for some moments, while old Toni's dying eyes looked from one to the other slowly. At last he nodded his head in assent and breathed his last.

Presently Dr. Graves drew Anita into his arms and gently stroked her dark hair, as her head rested confidingly against his breast.

A MOTHER IS SEEKING CHILD

"Incubator Baby" Is Subject of Suit at Moline, Ill.

Moline, Ill., June 5.—A pretty 15-months-old girl that was one of the "incubator babies" exhibited at the St. Louis exhibition will be the central figure in a lawsuit to be tried here next Thursday, in which families of three states—Kansas, Illinois and Nebraska—are interested.

The child, like many of the other "incubator babies," was adopted by a worthy couple who took the little one to rear as their own daughter, and now Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Barclay, the foster parents, have made defendants in a suit brought by Mrs. Joey Bleakley of Lawrence, Kan., claiming to be the mother of the child, to have the adoption papers annulled, alleging that she was induced to sign them by fraudulent representations.

Mrs. Bleakley, who seeks possession of the child, is the wife of Joey Bleakley, son of Joseph Bleakley, treasurer of Leavenworth county, Kansas, and one of the wealthy leading men of that state. An interesting feature is the fact that Mrs. Bleakley never has set eyes on the child, and will see the little one for the first time when it is brought into court next Thursday. Mrs. Bleakley before her marriage was Miss Lottie Thompson, one of the belles of Lawrence. She and her husband are separated, but for what reason neither of them will explain.

Mrs. Barclay, who adopted the little one, was formerly Miss Sanborn, daughter of F. E. Sanborn of Omaha, president of the Sanborn company. Her husband is a traveling representative of a large agricultural house.

In February, 1904, Mrs. Bleakley was in a hospital in St. Louis suffering from a severe attack of scarlet fever and complications resulting therefrom, when she gave birth to a baby prematurely. She was told the child was dead and asserts that she was called upon to pay the expenses of its burial. There seems little doubt that the hospital attendants fully believed the child would die, and it was more dead than alive when one of the nurses in charge of an exhibition incubator took the infant to experiment upon. This baby, it is said, was the first child received by the incubator company, and by one of those strange freaks of nature it developed and lived, although it had taken thirty-two hours of hard work on the part of the nurse to resuscitate it after it had been received.

While this was going on the mother was steadily growing worse, and for a while her life was despaired of, but she finally recovered sufficiently to be taken to her home in Lawrence in April.

When Mrs. Barclay, attracted by the prettiness of the baby, sought to adopt it, the nurse assisted her in hunting up its parents. They found that Mrs. Bleakley was the mother, and a representative of the incubator company went to Lawrence to get her consent. Mrs. Bleakley referred the agent to her husband and father-in-law, and the latter, Mrs. Bleakley alleges, coaxed her into signing the papers, telling her, she says, that the babe was not hers.

Later Mrs. Bleakley suspected that she had been deceived, and, going to St. Louis, she learned to her satisfaction that the child was her baby. She secured the services of a St. Louis attorney, and as soon as the Barclays could be located the suit which is to be tried next Thursday was instituted.

SEPARATE CONSULS

For Norway and the Delicate Questions to Follow.

End Impossible to Foresee If Storthing Fails to Act.

Stockholm, June 5.—Though it will be some time before the bill instituting a separate consular service for Norway, as prepared by the special committee, becomes a law, the Norwegians fully expect that the concession will be granted them. In case of failure on the part of the storthing to act, many well-informed Norwegians say there is likely to be rioting and a series of land and labor troubles in their country, the end of which will be impossible to foresee.

The bill as framed provides that the consular service for Norway shall consist of consuls general, consuls and vice consuls, paid and unpaid.

These officials shall be placed under the direction of the Norwegian government department, and their relations to diplomacy are to be defined by royal decree. It is expected that the law will come into force on April 1, 1906.

According to present plans, the delicate and momentous question of the relation of these consuls to diplomacy, and of their subordination in political matters to a common minister of foreign affairs, is left to be settled independently.

And after the law has been passed and sanctioned by royal decree, that is, by a decision of the sovereign in his Norwegian council, countersigned by the Norwegian ministers, bound as they will be by a law duly promulgated and already in existence, it is difficult to see what chance there will be for Sweden, under these circumstances, to obtain a satisfactory settlement of the question of the subordination of these consuls under the minister of foreign affairs.

The people of Sweden argue that that country will have little chance to maintain that unity in foreign affairs which it has all along insisted is the basic principle of the union.

And the Swedes are also inquiring how the minister for foreign affairs can demand the foreign powers shall recognize those consuls for whose acts he will not be responsible.

It is argued that the consuls will find themselves shut out from all useful activity or they will act independently, and the Norwegian department directing them will become practically a Norwegian ministry for foreign affairs. And it is claimed that with the attainment of that end, the only practical and real bond of the political union will have ceased to exist.

Dr. Sven Hedin, in an interview upon the general situation as it exists, said: "The view which we hold in Sweden is that an institution which the two countries have shared in common for close upon a century, an institution which has, moreover, been recognized by the Norwegian storthing, cannot be legally canceled without negotiations resulting in mutual consent. Norway, however, acting independently and for herself alone, desired to force Sweden against her will, to establish a purely Swedish consular service in place of the united service which has acted hitherto. In the same way, a few years ago, Norway endeavored to alter the Swedish flag by banishing the definitive sign of the union from the Norwegian flag (it is still retained, however in the Swedish flag).

"I have been accused of having attempted to intimidate Norway so as to force her back into the union, and of having scrupulously invited the great powers to partition Norway amongst them, as well as giving them plain indications how this partition ought to be accomplished. It is, I admit, flattering to be told that one is able to influence the politics of the great powers of Europe, but I must disclaim all such intentions. Indeed, I comfort myself with the thought that neither the English nor the Swedish press regarded my reflections as anything else but what they really were, namely, warnings against what may happen and which would first of all threaten Norway. All the same, my letter would not, I fancy, have attracted so much attention if it had not been for the fact that Finmark really does constitute a sort of Norwegian Achilles heel.

"In the event of war it would incontestably be Sweden's duty to take up arms in defense of her isolated sister, Norway. It is for the very purpose of keeping this danger at arm's length that Sweden has done her very utmost to maintain the union. If Norway chooses of her own free will to rupture the union Sweden cannot be held responsible for the dangers to which she thereby exposes herself and if these dangers prove also an indirect menace to Sweden then we must, for the future and in obedience to the primary law of self-preservation, study exclusively our own protection, no matter how painful it might be to us to see Norway in the grasp of the despoiler's hand.

"In this manner there is no room whatever for sentimental considerations. Since 1814 Norway has been united with Sweden; but previous to that she was for centuries a dependence of Denmark.

Except for the dependence upon Denmark, that is the situation to which we shall return in the event of a breach of the union, and just as little as before 1814 would the old sentiments coming of "common stock, common creed and of practically common language" induce the Swedes to spend blood and treasure in the defense of their sometime partner against foreign oppression.

"We want our blood and our treasure to defend the ancient soil of Sweden; we cannot afford to sacrifice our army and our fleet for the defense of, say, Finmark, which a Norwegian politician described recently as a God-forsaken sort of a place. Without help Norway cannot effectually defeat that, her extreme northerly province. Her permanent land defenses are in the South, along the Glommen, and have been constructed against Sweden.

"The transport of troops to the Far North is rendered difficult by the fact that there exist no railways and what Norway's means of transport by sea amount to can fairly easily be calculated.

"Suppose now that Finmark were to be attacked by land and that Swedish territory were not violated, it is surely not a little thing to ask that Sweden should plunge into a disastrous war for the purpose of preserving such a 'God-forsaken sort of a place' to Norway, after Norway, in the face of all warnings from Sweden, has broken adrift from the union, which we have always looked upon as a safeguard for us both, and especially for Norway, the partner in peril. No, under such circumstances, Sweden's duty would be clear; it would be hers to observe the strictest neutrality, for a hostile occupation of Finmark would not affect us so closely as that; in order to avoid it we should bring upon ourselves a naval war in the Baltic, and expose our coasts to attack and to all of the unhappy and desolating consequences of such a policy.

"The Norwegians have made capital out of the reminder of Sweden's obligation of defense as regards an isolated Norway, and that at a time when they are preparing to snap all political ties, and especially those ties which serve as the bulwark of our common Scandinavian peninsula. Such policy is indeed neither generous nor chivalrous.

"The only occasion we can conceive as rendering a defensive alliance between us possible is in the case of the two kingdoms being attacked simultaneously. But I would point out that since 1809 Sweden has lived on terms of good fellowship with Russia, and under no circumstances will she take steps that could be interpreted as unfriendly to that country, and least of all would she incur responsibilities which sooner or later might involve her in war with her neighbor on the east.

"We deplore the blind, separatist policy of Norway, but we cannot, we shall not, allow ourselves to be led astray on adventurous paths. A defensive alliance that embraced the navy might readily lead to combinations that would prove very disagreeable for Sweden. For instance, there are in the Norwegian navy two admirals who were promoted to that rank at such an early age that in course of time they will be the senior officers afloat in any of the Scandinavian navies, and consequently would be in a position to claim chief command at sea. That might mean the exposure of the Swedish coast to hostile attack, and it must not be forgotten that Swedish territory can be reached in eight hours' steaming from Libau and eighteen from Reval.

"It is true that the proximity of Russia on the north of Sweden is dangerous for Sweden, but it would be even more dangerous—in fact utter folly—for hope of escaping from that proximity to rush into war with Russia. Once the union is dissolved, if that should become a necessity, Sweden will under no circumstances enter into a permanent defensive alliance with Norway. Besides, Norway is presumably prepared to face all the consequence of the policy which she has pursued for so many years with such persistency and with such consciousness of the end in view."

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Jury Acquits E. P. Farnham of Killiug Richard Galvin.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Deadwood—E. P. Farnham was acquitted by the jury for killing Richard Galvin.

There has been unusual interest in the trial of Farnham of Central City, who shot and killed Richard Galvin at the Queen of the Hills mine several weeks ago. Farnham was postmaster of Central City and interested in a mining company as general manager. Richard Galvin was employed as foreman of the mine. Last February, Farnham returned from an Eastern trip and went to Deadwood to get Galvin's mail, which he started to take out to the camp. Farnham recognized the handwriting of his wife on two of the letters. He opened the letters and was made aware of the fact that undue intimacy had been going on for some time between his wife and Galvin. At the Queen of the Hills hoist some hours later Galvin and Farnham had a clash, which resulted in the killing of Galvin by Farnham. The plea of self-defense was made in the trial throughout. The letters which were written him by Mrs. Farnham intimated that as soon as both parties received sufficient money that they would leave the counthy together.

Pierre—Articles of incorporation were filed for the South Dakota Capital Land Purchasing company, with a capital of $130,000. The incorporators are Pattison F. McClure, C. C. Bennett and Adolph Ewart, presidents of the national banks in the city, and the purpose of the company is the purchase of state capital lands sufficient to raise the funds for constructing the wing of the building provided for at the last legislative session.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Minot—The largest land deal ever consummated in North Dakota closed in Minot when Governor Joseph Devine of this city sold 11,000 acres of farm lands located near Hebron, Hettinger county, to the Janesville, Wis., Land company, for a consideration of $39,218.76. Devine purchased the land three years ago for a song and cleans up a fortune on the sale.

Minot capital incorporated and will build a railroad to Bismarck. The road will be known as the Minot, Bismarck & Southwestern Railway company. Articles of incorporation were filed with the secretary of state today. The capital stock is $500,000. The incorporators are T. P. Kinaias, L. M. Davis, C. J. Brunner, John Ehr, O. M. Champlain and business men of this city. The road is to be built directly south from Minot for about 110 miles. Options have been secured on most pieces of property along the route for a right-of-way.

The orginization of the local company comes as a result of the decision by the Great Northern and Soo roads not to build a line from Bismarck to Minot. The construction of the road by the independent company is but a link in the road, whose destination ultimately is Sioux City, Iowa. Construction work commences on Sept. 1.

Hillsboro—Medical assistance arrived in time to save the life of Charles Rapp, aged 70, who attempted to end his life by taking liniment. He had been despondent for some time.

Among the nuptials last week were those of Miss Agnes Henrietta Paulson, daughter of Mayor and Mrs. J. E. Paulson, and Robert G. Grant, an attorney of St. Paul. They will make their home at St. Paul.

The marriage of Miss Annie B. Bennett, one of the teachers here, and J. M. McPherson occurred at Fargo. They will make their home on the groom's farm, near Galesburg, in the western part of the county.

The 1-year-old child of Mr. and Mrs. John Hagen fell from a second-story window to the sidewalk, and, while the youngster landed on its head, it was picked up uninjured.

THE AMERICAN GIRL RAPPED

English Writer Says Many Married to Titles Are Childless.

New York, June 5.—An interesting discovery which has been made by a writer in the Contemporary Review has been causing considerable talk in smart circles.

He finds that the failure of motherhood among American heiresses who have married titled Englishmen is most marked, while the influence of colonial women on English society is not only more wholesome, but likely to be more permanent.

In his opinion colonial influence in England is masculine, vigorous and wholesome; American influence is feminine, frivolous and fleeting.

He offers some striking remarks concerning the "invasion" of England by American heiresses. Since 1880 thirty British peers or sons of peers have married in the United States. Of these thirteen have no children at all, five have no sons and five have only one son.

The total number of peers' children with American mothers is thirty-nine of whom eighteen are sons.

During the same period twenty-three peers or eldest sons of peers have married in the colonies. Four have no children, seven have one son, eight have two sons and two have three sons. "That is to say," is the writer's comment, "though the number of colonial peeresses is seven less than the number of American peeresses, they have nearly twice as many children, and, while six of them have neglected to present their husbands with an heir, nineteen Americans are guilty of the same neglect.

"In the lower ranks of the aristocracy," the writer proceeds, "figures are even more startling. Of Americans who are wives of Englishmen with a courtesy title or a baronetcy, there are forty-four. Of these seventeen, or nearly half, have no issue, and eight have only one child each.

"It therefore comes to this, that since 1840 the number of titled Americans, exclusive of knights' wives, has risen to seventy-four, of whom thirty are childless and fourteen have but one child.

"Moreover, there is not a single distinguished peer's son with an American mother, whereas there are several with colonial mothers."

The writer's figures may be summarized as follows:

Americans of title, thirty peeresses, thirty-nine children.

Twenty-two wives of baronets, forty-two children.

Twenty-two with courtesy titles, twenty-six children.

Thirty wives of baronets, 102 children.

Forty-two with courtesy titles, 101 children.

"In the face of these figures," the writer concludes, "the contention that by means of American brides fresh vigor may be imported into the British aristocracy is merely ridiculous."

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Boy Backs Horses Off Pier and Drowns Them.

Sault Ste. Marie—While trying to load a wagon, a boy at the Soo backed a team of horses he was driving into the slip at the Union dock, and the animals were drowned. The horses were owned by William Howlett, father of the boy. One of the horses was obstinate, and refused to back as the lad desired, so he climbed out of the wagon and went to the horse's head. The horse got frightened then, and backed up so quickly that before anything could be done the wagon was off the dock, pulling the horses after.

Norway—The Norway school board has awarded the issue of $40,000 worth of bonds recently authorized for the purpose of securing a site and erecting a high school building, to Nuveen & Co. of Chicago, the highest bidder. The bonds are of $2,000 in denomination, one payable each year for a period of twenty years, they bear 4½ per cent interest. Nuveen & Co. offered a premium of $927.50. The successful firm also agreed to furnish the bonds, the printing of which will cost a considerable amount.

Crystal Falls—County Clerk Wall and Prosecuting Attorney Watson have been notified by Judge Stone that the term of the circuit court for Iron county which was to open on Monday, June 5, will not be convened until the 19th of June, thus setting in back two weeks. The principal reason is the fact that Senator Moriarity will be kept at Lansing until about the 16th of June. He has the defense in the Dallafoir case and that is about the only case to come up at that term.

Manistique — The total valuation of assessable real and personal property in the city of Manistique, as fixed by the board of review, is $1,738,821, divided as follows: Real, $865,164; personal, $873,657. The original figures were $16,483 in excess of the final total and as compared with the figures of 1904, are $68,787 greater.

Three muskalunge, the largest measuring forty-one inches long and, dressed, weighing fifteen pounds, were caught in Pike lake, near Manistique, the other day by Alexander Sly. The largest brook trout caught in the vicinity of Manistique this spring weighed three and one-half pounds and was a foot and a half in length. It was taken by Verne Harshman.

NEWS SPREADS QUICKLY.

Indians Speedy Communication Marvel to Whites.

The rapidity with which the news of orders given out from the Union Indian agency, and the Dawes commission spreads to the remotest corners of the Creek nation is a continual source of wonder to the federal officials, says the Kansas City Journal. When, in October, the regulation compelling Indians to accept the pay for their lands in installments of $10 a month was announced it seemed that every Indian in the Creek country knew it at once, for the petitions for sale dropped off immediately. A few days ago, when the order was revoked, and the Indian was allowed to pay for his land at the rate of $50 a month, practically everybody knew it the next day, and business in the Creek land sales department suddenly became lively again.

When it is remembered that there are several thousand full-blood Indians in the Creek nation who cannot speak or read a word of English, and have no way of learning the news of the day except by word of mouth, the speed with which intelligence is communicated to them is most remarkable. Most of the full-bloods live in the hills and mountains, far from railroads and in sections where the daily, or even weekly, papers are seldom or never read.

Gen. Pleasant Porter, chief of the Creek nation, and the best informed man in his tribe, when asked to explain the phenomenon, said significantly:

"It may be mental telepathy. Let me ask you a question. How does the buzzard flying through the air learn that an animal has been killed, and why are there hundreds of them on the scene in less time than it takes to tell it? You may call it instinct, or anything else you please, but the Indians keep as well posted on news that interests them as the newspaper-reading white people.

"My people have formed the habit of communicating whatever interests them to their neighbors, and asking them to pass it on. Every train that leaves Muskogee is loaded with Indians who know personally of an order. They pass the word along and it spreads like wildfire. In the early days the Creeks had regular couriers who carried the news. One of these would visit a town and at sundown the people would gather around him and hear the information he had to impart. The town king would then detail some one to pass it on to the members of the next town or tribe, and the same method would be repeated.

"I have known," said the chief, growing reminiscent, "of foot carriers traveling 100 miles a day with important messages. One morning during the Creek rebellion I sent a messenger out to get volunteers for my army, and before the sun set 1,200 men came into my camp.

"Warriors had a way of announcing the approach of an enemy by giving war-whoops. If the yells followed closely one after another the enemy was near. One prolonged whoop indicated that the enemy was many miles distant, with no danger of immediate attack."

MAY BUY AUTO

Council Will Consider Purchase of One For Fire Chief.

Smoke and Building Ordinances Will Come Up For Action.

Will the city of Duluth purchase an automobile for the chief of the fire department?

That is the question which the council will be called upon to decide this evening.

At the meeting of the board of fire commissioners held this morning, the purchase of an automobile to replace the horses and buggies now used by the chief, was recommended. The members of the board believe that the purchase will be a good business proposition as it will cut off an expenditure of about $40 per month which is necessary to keep the horses now owned. It is also claimed that the machine can be bought for very little additional to what will be realized from the sale of the horses.

Another argument given in favor of the plan, is the claim that much time could be saved in getting to fires with the use of the auto, which would land the chief on the scene in advance of the equipment. This would give him an opportunity to size up the situation, and if it proved to be a false alarm or only a chimney fire he could turn back and save the firemen a part of the run.

Three ordinances are likely to come up at the council this evening for discussion. According to notice given two weeks ago, Alderman Waugh's smoke ordinance will be taken from the table, and either passed or turned down this evening. It provides for a check on factories which allow clouds of black smoke to issue from their chimneys.

The amended building ordinance will also probably be reported this evening. The committee appointed by the council and the Duluth Builders' exchange has been considering the ordinance for two or three weeks past, and it is understood to be ready to report tonight. Several important changes are recommended in the report.

President Haven's ordinance covering the piling of slab and mill wood will also come up for its second reading this evening. It prohibits the piling of more than twenty-five cords of wood one one lot, but exceptions are made in favor of companies manufacturing the wood.

Mothers and daughters will be welcomed all this week by Marion C. Fisher, of Boston, in her practical demonstration of cooking at the appliance room of the Zenith Furnace Co., 331 West First street. Lectures daily at 10 a. m. and 2 p. m.

SALSBURY IS FINED $2,000

Former Grand Rapids Official Is Sentenced For Bribery.

Grand Rapids, Mich., June 5.—Lant K. Saulsbury, former city attorney and the people's chief witness in the bribery cases of the city officials and others implicated by Salsbury in his confession of the methods used in an attempt to secure a water contract from the city, was sentenced by Judge Walcott in superior court to pay a fine of $2,000.

Salsbury was convicted Dec. 4, 1901, of entering into a criminal conspiracy to secure a water contract from the city and accepting $75,000 or a portion of that amount from the agent of the water deal promoter. The alternative of the fine imposed by Judge Walcott was one year's imprisonment. Salsbury paid the fine.

CELLAR MOULD AND SHROUDS

Duluth Health Inspector Says the Two Go Together.

"Mould in the cellars weaves shrouds for the chambers above," is the explanation made by Health Commissioner Murray for the rigid inspection of cellars which is being made this year by the health department.

A mistake was made in The Herald Saturday evening, in the statement that only 200 cellars were inspected last year. This number was inspected in 1903, and over 3,000 were inspected last year. This year the number inspected will be limited only by the number of cellars in the city. The plan of making a thorough inspection of the cellars was inaugurated by Dr. Murray last year and will be carried out even more completely this summer.

LEVY LARGE ASSESSMENT

City Will Collect $89,327.52 From Superior Street Owners.

The largest assessment levied in five or six years past was made by the board of public work this morning, when the preliminary assessment for paving of Superior street from Eighth avenue west to Twenty-sixth avenue west was passed.

The assessment, which is on the basis of 80 per cent of the engineer's estimate of the cost of a tar macadam pavement for the street, amounts to $89,327.52.

Practically no protests were made against it, beyond a kick registered by one property owner that he had not received just treatment. This kick was adjusted.

The assessment will be confirmed in about two weeks, and as soon as it is collected the contract for the work will be let.

WILL TIME FAST AUTOS

Police Have Means to Secure Evidence Against Owners.

With the intention of keeping check on any automobile owners who may exceed the speed limit in the business part of the city the police department has ordered the purchase of three speedometers.

They will be attached to bicycles which are owned by members of the police department, and by means of them the police can tell the exact speed of any machine. Whenever an automobile is seen travelling at what is believed to be too high a rate of speed, a policeman on a wheel to which is attached a speedometer, will be sent in chase of the motorist, and if he can keep up with the auto he can tell the speed at which it is travelling. In case the speed limit is exceeded a warrant will be sworn out for the arrest of the owner of the machine, which can easily be determined by the number.

New York, June 5.—A Paris cable to the Herald says: Some time ago Zola presented to the city hospital authorities the villa at Medan, where Zola passed his summers, and where the majority of his works were written. Preparatory to the departmental authorities taking over the house, which is to become a convalescent home for nurses, an aution sale of Zola's effects will be held on June 11 and 12. The sale will include the furniture generally and the billiard table and accessories of the famous billiard room; also the wine, domestic animals, carriages and plants.

MOTHER AND DAUGHTER DEAD IN MILWAUKEE.

Milwaukee, June 5.—Florence Bellinger, 21 years old, and her mother, Mrs. Anna Meyer, are dead at their home in the rear of 808 Jackson street. Death is supposed to have resulted from drinking the contents of a bottle, supposed to contain brandy. The girl died several hours before her mother. A note was found on the table beside the bed of Mrs. Meyer, which reads:

"Sell everything and give the dead a decent burial. In the purses, $29.56."

A search of the house by the assistant coroner failed to reveal any trace of poison. A further investigation is being made.

LAW POINT RAISED

H. G. Gross' Insurance Case Raises Question of Liability.

Sues to Recover For Value of Stolen Furs.

Judge Dibell is hearing today the arguments in the case of H. G. Gross, a local furrier, against the Fidelity and Casualty company, an interesting insurance action, in which Mr. Gross seeks to recover $260 damages on account of burglar insurance which, he alleges, he understood he was carrying with the company, and for which he claims to have given the company an order.

Several months ago Mr. Gross' place of business was burglarized and several hundred dollars' worth of fur was taken and never recovered. He was carrying a burglar insurance with the defendant company at the time, and, in the course of several days after the loss demanded indemnification in the amount of $260, which amount the company refused to pay, claiming that Mr. Goss' insurance policy did not cover any loss which he might have had from the Michigan street room of his store, which is directly under the store room on Superior street.

The arguments developed that Mr. Gross, in taking out burglar insurance with the Fidelity and Casualty company in 1902 had a policy covering the goods only in the Superior street store. He afterward added the Michigan street store room, and, at the expiration of the insurance, he ordered, as he claims, a renewal of the policy with a change to make the insurance cover both floors.

He admits receiving an insurance policy, but claims that as he had reported the change mentioned, he put it away without examination, supposing that the company had altered the description as requested.

After his loss through a burglary and a refusal on the part of the company to make good for the goods taken from the Michigan street store room, he examined the policy and found that the old policy had been renewed without making the alteration, which he claims to have made, as to having the insurance cover both floors.

Mr. Gross claims that on account of the request for a renewal to embody protection of his entire stock, the blame of negligence should fall on the insurance company, and it should be compelled to stand the loss.

C. E. Adams is attorney for Mr. Goss and Howard T. Abbott represents the interests of the insurance company.

The prisoners were confined in a cell and during the night one of them feigned illness, caling up the jailer who opened the cell door to hand the sick man some medicine. The prisoners, all negroes, overpowered the jailer and rushed through the residential portion of the building and out to the street.

FINDS LONG LOST RING

R. S. Lerch Recovers Jewelry Lost Fourteen Years.

Deputy Sheriff R. S. Lerch is rejoicing over the recovery of a small piece of jewelry which he lost fourteen years ago and which was found under rather interesting circumstances one day last week.

Fourteen years ago this summer, while in the act of stroking a pet dog, Mr. Lerch lost from his finger, at his home on Fourth street, a heavy gold emblematic Scottish Rite ring which Mrs. Lerch had given him. Although a careful search was made of the premises the ring could not be found and it was given up as lost for all time. A few days ago, shortly after Mr. Lerch had removed to another residence, a boy playing on the lawn of the Fourth street residence discovered the ring beneath the grass roots where it had been securely hidden for so many years. The jewelry was just as good as when it was lost, with the exception of the loss of a small piece of enamel from the emblem setting.

Mothers and daughters will be welcomed all this week by Marion C. Fisher, of Boston, in her practical demonstration of cooking at the appliance room of the Zenith Furnace Co., 331 West First street. Lectures daily at 10 a. m. and 2 p. m.

PIER BIDS RECEIVED

Whitney Brothers to Get Port Wing Harbor Contract.

The lowest bid for the harbor improvement work that will be attempted by the government at Port Wing, Wis., was submitted by Whitney Bros. of Superior, whom Maj. Potter, the engineer in charge of this district, has recommended for the contract.

The work to be done consists in the building of a pier, 601 feet in length, at the west side of the entrance to the harbor, of piles, slabs and rock, also a wing wall of piles and timber, at the inner end of the pier, for a length of thirty-two feet, and in dredging a reach for the new pier.

For the improvement of the Port Wing harbor there is $20,000 available, and it is proposed to spend about $14,500 on the new pier work.

The bids were opened this noon by Maj. Potter, and were as follows:

Whitney Bros., Superior, $14,000; A. G. Osman & Co., Duluth, $17,397; Powell & Mitchell, Marquette, Mich., $19,596.29.

The advertised bids called for the erection of the pier and wing wall, not including the rock work and rip-rap, and for the rock ballast and rip-rap. Of the latter work there remains to be placed about 2,100 tons, and the bidding was on the basis of the price per ton. On this Whitney Bros. bid $1, against $1.15 by Osman & Co., and $1.77 by Powell & Mitchell.

For the pier and the wing wall, Whitney Bros.'s bid was $12,000, against $14,982 by Osman & Co., and $15,879.29 by Powell & Mitchell.

In building the pier, about 586 piles of from 32 to 36 feet in length will be used, also about 50,000 feet of pine of coast fir timber.

MARSHALL IS THE WINNER

Duluth Yacht Club Holds Second Race of the Season.

Five Duluth Yacht club boats were entered in a race which was pulled off on the bay course Saturday afternoon. The contest was won by the Spray, sailed by R. W. Marshall, the winner of last year's pennant. The other boats were the Frolic, sailed by C. malg; the Thistle, sailed by Joe Roth; the Florence, sailed by Sterling Smith, and the Sea Gull, sailed by L'Strange.

All but the last were of the new 18-foot class of cat boats, recently received from White Bear. The Spray went around the course, a distance of five and one-half miles, in one hour and two minutes. The time of the Frolic was 1:04¾; the Thistle, 1:02¾; the Florence, 1:0?, and the Sea Gull's time was 1:12. The new boats are giving excellent satisfaction, and are proving themselves to be more speedy than any which were in use by the local club last year. A consolation prize of a small pair of bellows was awarded Mr. L'Strange.

The regular races of the season will probably begin about the middle of the month.

FAVOR OF CONTESTANT.

General Land Office Affirms Decision of Local.

The general land office at Washington has affirmed a decision of the local land office in the case of Lottie M. Shobe vs. Peter Lundell. The decision was in favor of the contestant.

The contest involves lot 4, the northeast quarter of the southwest quarter, the southeast quarter of the northwest quarter and the southwest quarter of the northeast quarter of 14-157-25. Lundell filed a homestead entry on the land on Feb. 11, 1904, the day the township plat was filed. On Feb. 18, 1904, Lottie M. Shobe filed application on the same piece, alleging settlement Dec. 29, 1903. Her application was rejected but she asked a hearing which was granted.

At this hearing, April 14, 1904, she proved herself right and the local office recommended that Lundell's entry be cancelled and that Miss Shobe be allowed to make entry. This is now confirmed.

ASSURED OF LAW

Being Passed on Rate Question Satisfactory to President.

Representative of the Stock Growers Gives Vigorous Talk.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, June 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—Friends of the administration declare that in spite of the apparent apathy of the senate committee toward railroad legislation a bill embodying the president's policy will be introduced at the opening of the next session and that the president is assured of legislation in the line of his suggestion.

The question of the reasonableness of the rates on cattle from the Western ranches to the stockyards has occupied the attention of the interstate commerce commission for some weeks past and thousands of pages of testimony have been recorded. There is no more important question pending before the commission or before congress than this one of the rate on live cattle.

The cattle-growers, who are the complainants against the railroads, have been represented here for the past month or more by S. H. Cowan, of Fort Worth, Texas. Mr. Cowan has appeared for practically every stock grower in the Western and Southwestern states. He is general counsel for the American Stock-growers' association. Before leaving for the West, Mr. Cowan said on the subject of cattle rates:

"It is not only the fact of advances heretofore made in Western rates which command our attention, but the fact that traffic managers persist in the claim, under oath, that every rate challenged to too low, coupled with the declared intention of raising them when circumstances will permit. Previous advances are but a manifestation of the system adopted to do what they claim is their right. If rates are too low they ought to be raised, but we say it must be subject to imperial governmental supervision. The people have the right to go further and absolutely fix all rates and control the operations of the railroads; they are not demanding that right, but if they are defeated at obtaining a fair measure at the next congress, and there comes a national compaign in which the issue is put before the people, a much stronger and far more comprehensive law will be passed as a result than is now demanded."

Speaking of the senate committee's investigation recently concluded, Mr. Cowan said:

"No one can read the reports of it without being impressed with the facts that the principal effort of a very respectable part of the committee was to ascertain some plausible way out of responding to the demands of the administration and public opinion by doing nothing; probably to dish out a milk and water porridge to a hungry public. Others seem quite in earnest. In this puzzle picture the reader will please pick out the supporters of the administration and name them? The railroads were plainly making herculean efforts to furnish grounds for non-action and at least to so modify what might result as to leave it harmless. To this end they had very numerous counsel-presidents and vice presidents, traffic managers and other representatives of railways, foreign railway representatives, college professors and many shippers, the recipients of favors and preferences, ever present in the committee room to advise the senate committee what to do; indeed the questions to ask. The strangest part of it is that the senate committee on making diligent inquiry of them about it were not able to discover from these gentlemen that there was any popular demand for such legislation or to justify the president's position—and furthermore they all with marked unanimity concurred in advising the senate committee that there was very little which needed correction, and assured the committee that they would attend to it themselves and that it was impossible that the railroads should maintain rates that are too high because only the railroads could judge properly of that — it must be left to traffic men, who had already passed judgment upon it; and that judgment was that no rates were too high. In playing the game on this theory of 'heads I win, tails you lose' they have overploved it by demonstrating that 'the king can do no wrong,' while claiming to themselves the royal prerogative. That is was king can do no wrong, hence what he has done is right, if not since he is the judge of it he declares that he is right.

"The organized shippers of the country will undertake to point from time to time the facts which stand back of President Roosevelt and the people as the foundation of the right and the necessity of fair railroad regulation. Whatever of truth there is in the report that the senate committee is against the president's policy will develop later, but it cant budge public opinion and has not done so. The shipping interests will undoubtedly agree upon some clear-cut measure which the administration stands for and when such an one is reported in the senate or the house, I predict that a large majority of both the house and senate will support it.

"The majority of the senate committee and the railroads want the matter so far as possible to go to the courts. This is because they know that the courts cannot satisfactorily to the public fix any rates. Only a tribunal which relies upon its own judgment as much or more than the evidence in a particular case can ever successfully adjust rates. The supreme court says a commission can do this better than a court, and there is no doubt of it. I have no doubt that 95 per cent of all the people of the entire West are with the president. If some senator doubts it let him try it in an election contest—that would settle it."

MAKING NEW CITIZENS.

Stories of the Process In New York.

To be thoroughly convinced of the fact that nearly all, if not all, roads lead to America, one needs only to sit in the office of the naturalization clerk in the federal building for an hour or so, on any week day of the year, and watch the newly landed aliens make their first applications for citizenship papers, says the New York Tribune. They come there in mixed droves at the rate of from 20 to 150 a day. The actual daily average of the office for a year is slightly above 50.

It often happens that some particular events happening either in the United States or in a foreign country will make a marked difference in the number of applicants of a certain race or nationality. For example, immediately upon the death of Queen Victoria hundreds of Englishmen who had been in this country for several years set out to obtain their citizenship papers. In almost every case the reason given for not applying before was that they had never had the heart to renounce their "good queen." After President Roosevelt's visit to "Little Hungary" the number of Hungarian applicants nearly doubled. The Russo-Japanese war has driven thousands of intelligent and ambitious Russians to seek the land of freedom. During the celebration of the Passover recently, foreign-born Jews made up the largest proportion of applicants.

The scenes enacted in the office of Clerk Donovan are always interesting, and often very amusing.

"M. Fiddler," said a typical young Russian one day, as he was asked his name by the clerk. It developed later that Mr. Fiddler was Fiddler by name and fiddler by trade, and that he had taken advantage of his calling to make good his escape from Russia.

One interesting character was a bronze-faced sailor who entered one day and said:

"I say, sir, is this w'ere yer baycome er Yankai?"

"I presume you want your intention papers," said the clerk.

"Ay, ay, sor," replied the sailor, and then continued: "You say it's this 'a way; I'm just left 'ome on a whaler, and as I see N'York, sez I to meself, sez I, shiver me timbers, for 'ere's a blarsted foine country and 'ere I make me 'ome!"

Upon receiving the paper he turned to the clerk and whispered a most cordial invitation to "come out and have some grog."

The routine of business was suddenly disturbed one morning when a broad shouldered Irishman entered the office and announced that he had just left "the Dublin police force and come only a fortnit to join the force in America." He was politely informed that citizenship was an important asset in securing an appointment as a police officer, to which the applicant replied:

"Shtop yer dom foolin'. Don't ye think I know me bizzniess?" And immediately left the office, asking his way to police headquarters.

Some Italians seem to think that upon arriving here it is necessary to Americanize their names.

"Mike Maloney!" shouted a healthy looking son of Italy as he approached the clerk.

"Where were you born?" was asked.

"Italia," answered Mike.

"But you have an Irish name," insisted the clerk.

"No, me no frisha! Me Italia man! In Italia me Michele Delamalogni! In America, me Mike Maloney!"

Michele Delamalogni received his first papers.

A most amusing scene, and one that happens often, was enacted one morning when an old Hungarian entered. Speaking little English, he was told that he would have to get one of his countrymen to interpret for him. Turning slowly from the office, he unceremoniously took hold of the next man on the line, marched triumphantly back and stood in front of the clerk. The latter, addressing the newcomer, said:

"Do you know this man?"

"Sure," was the reply.

"And you are prepared to interpret for him?"

"Sure," was the reply again.

"Very well. Ask him his name, residence and occupation," said the clerk.

"Aska da name 'n da res," said the would-be interpreter, turning to the applicant and trying hard to imitate the inquisitor.

"Yah, yah," said the Hungarian, and immediately launched forth into a volley of Yiddish, which was met by an equally good supply of Italian. This inharmonious duet, once it was begun, would have been sustained all day had not both men been ordered from the room.

A diminutive subject of Roumania, advancing very cautiously into the office one day, had little or no regard for the statutory fee.

"I gif you tirty cents," he said, when told how much his first papers would cost. Then he continued raising the price until within 2 cents of the required amount, when, assuming an injured expression and leaning far over the desk, he said:

"Meester, I gif you seextey-tree cents."

It was with some difficulty that that Shylock was convinced that the government conducted no bargain counter and that one price applied to all.

A case somewhat different from the preceding was presented by a well-dressed Russian, who, upon being told that his first papers would cost him 65 cents, replied:

"Vat iss money when you vant to be an American citizen?"

Frenchmen are usually especially polite when seeking American citizenship, and generally approach the clerk's desk with a gracious bow and apologies for intruding.

"Bon jour, bon jour, monsieur!" is the usual greeting. "First American papier s'il vous plait."

The government furnishes no regular interpreter to the naturlization clerk's office, believing that those who seek American citizenship should be enough interested in its affairs to learn at least enough English to be able to make themselves understood when they come for their papers. But many of them, newly landed, do not know a single English word, and consequently impromptu interpreters of all sorts and sizes are called upon for service.

It often happens that a little child will interpret for two or three big, rough foreigners. A pretty little Italian girl of ten years, according to Commissioner Shields, holds the record as an interpreter. She came to the office with two of her father's employees who had been in the country only a year, and yet the accuracy with which she spoke and the seriousness that she seemed to place upon the entire proceeding greatly pleased the commissionr. The stern look that spread over her face as she repeated the vow would have been worthy of a bishop.

As a result of attempts on the part of some to Americanize their names the records sometimes read like this:

"Willie Duck, Tommy Goose, Jacob April, George November, Joseph Diamond, Adrew Pearl, Iziz Iziz," etc., regardless of any nationality.

It is interesting to watch the future citizens as they emerge, generally in pairs, from Commissioner Shields's office after having sworn to and received their papers. With a broad smile all over their features they come out into the corridor, where they will invariably stop and minutely examine the papers, displaying all the curiosity and keen pleasure of a child with its new Christmas present.

CONTINUE WAR

The President's Interview With Cassini Bears No Fruit.

All Attempts to End Struggle Fruitless at Present.

St. Petersburg, June 5, 7:45 p. m.—The interview between President Roosevelt and Ambassador Cassini at Washington regarding peace in the Far East has not borne fruit here. Foreign Minister Lamsdorff has not yet visited Tsarskoe Selo, but will lay Count Cassini's dispatch before the emperor tomorrow, the regular audience day. The Associated Press was informed at the foreign office that Count Cassini's report places the whole conversation in a purely informal light and it is expected that Russia's answer will be returned in an equally informal manner. The officials did not hesitate to express the opinion that the determination to continue the war, was fixed and definite. They seemed pleased with President Roosevelt's friendly spirit which was manifested in such a form as not to require a formal reply. Ambassador Meyer did not receive any dispatches on the subject during the day and after the flutter of excitement in diplomatic circles, caused by the press dispatches regarding the Washington interview, the representatives of the powers here are disposed to look upon the attempts to end the war as fruitless until after another land battle at least.

Both the foreign office and the admiralty say the decision whether to disarm the three Russian cruisers at Manila or make repairs and try to reach a Russian port was left in Admiral Enquist's hands to determine, according to his best judgment. Little doubt was felt that the cruisers would be interned until the end of the war as before the repairs which a Japanese fleet would be off Corregidor island waiting to capture or sink them.

The admiralty has given out a cabled statement of the dead and wounded on board the three cruisers at Manila, but asserts that no report from Admiral Neboagtoff has yet been received.

Hongkong, June 5.—The steamer Zafiro, which has arrived here from Manila, reports having sighted a Russian volunteer steamer, two supposed torpedo boats, and a three-funneled cruiser, accompanied by a deeply-laden transport, this morning, in Lat. 20.59 north and Long. 115.23 east. The vessels were steering southwest.

St. Petersburg, June 5.—Minister of the Interior Bouligan and Admiral Alexieff, head of the committees of the Far East, have tendered their resignations, which the emperor has not accepted.

Harbin, Manchuria, June 5.—The crews of five Japanese sailing schooners, numbering sixty men, and including six Americans, have arrived here. They were captured by Russian torpedo boats while poaching, near Odima island.

REPORTS SAY THAT WARMBAD HAS FALLEN.

London, June 5.—A dispatch to a news agency from Capetown says native reports have been received in official quarters to the effect that Warmbad, the German headquarters in Southwest Africa has fallen and that the garrison has perished. No news is obtainable except from native sources.

THE BREATHING HABIT.

The Ridgewood, N. J., commuters have nearly all become afflicted with the breathing habit.

"On the way to the trains early in the morning," said an inhabitant of the suburb, "every man you meet is walking erect and breathing deep, long drawn breaths and exhaling vociferously. There is a wager among a number of them as to which can reach the station with the least number of breaths. It's getting so bad your best friend won't greet you for fear of losing a breath."

FOR CARELESS FELLOWS.

One of the novel things in the cane line is a walking stick with a leather thong through the handle, after the fashion of a policeman's nightstick, says the New York Sun. the leather strap is not as long as the nightstick strap, being intended only to go around the wrist. The cane is especially designed for men who have a habit of dropping their things when in an especially happy mood. Although not intended as a defensive weapon, these canes could be used to good effect if the owner were set upon, as the strap would prevent anyone from wresting the stick from his grasp.

GREATEST CARD

Played By the President Is Selection of Bonaparte.

Appointment of Maj. Carson Is Also Very Popular.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, June 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—A great grandson of Jerome Bonaparte, king of Westphalia, and a grand nephew of the first Napoleon, will, on July 1, become the head of one of the most powerful and influential departments of the United States government. The appointment of Charles Joseph Bonaparte as secretary of the navy came like an electric shock to the official life of Washington. Again has President Roosevelt astonished all Washington by making a wholly unexpected appointment. To those who have been more or less intimate with the navy department the appointment of Mr. Bonaparte is looked upon as one of the strongest cards the president has played since he became the head of the nation. Mr. Roosevelt knows the navy department. He served there as assistant secretary, just before the Spanish war broke out, and possibly appreciating that some changes ought to be made, he picked out a man who possibly, above all other men, is best equipped to bring about these changes without fear or favor. Long before Mr. Bonaparte became known as a "thief catcher" and a "crook taker," he earned throughout the East a reputation for fearlessness and independence such as no other man in the law acquired. His intense hatred of hypocracy and his love for homely honesty endeared him to President Roosevelt, and that was the reason why he was chosen as senior special counsel in the prosecution of the postoffice grafters. And his success in bringing the grafters to justice unquestionably had much to do with his selection as Secretary Paul Morton's successor.

The appointment, however, of the great-grandson of a king and the grand nephew of an emperor will not be accepted with any degree of felicitation on the part of the Republican organization of Maryland. In fact mutterings are already heard against the president's selection, and exceedingly lively times are anticipated before the leaders of the Republican party in Maryland will quietly acquiesce in Mr. Bonaparte's elevation as the recognized dispenser of patronage in the Oriele State. The politician, acording to the views of a leading Republican who has to do with the navy department and the secretary, in the way of securing places for henchmen in navy yards or in the Washington gun shop, will find in Charles Joseph Bonaparte an unresponsive and unsympathtic listener.

"It will be woe unto the seekers after soft jobs in the navy and the people who try to bring influence to bear upon assignments to duty will wish they had never been born when they encounter Mr. Bonaparte. He despises politics, looking on it as a slimy game. He has probably voted the Democratic ticket as often as the Republican and has no use for politicians," was the way the genetleman above referred to expressed himself when talking to your corespondent about the Bonaparte appointment. Personally Mr. Bonaparte is a most charming gentleman. He is possibly one of the greatest American orators with a superb line of sarcasm and a marvelous flow of pure English. Essentially a scholar, Mr. Bonaparte loves nothing better than to be able to cloister himself in his magnificent library in his residence on Park Row, Baltimore, or at his country seat in Harford county, Maryland. Mr. Bonaparte hates crowds and nothing gives him the "fidgets" so much as to be compelled to attend a public reception.

As a cabinet officer, while he will be compelled by reason of his position to give a certain number of public functions and dinners, it is "dollars to doughnuts" that Mr. Bonaparte will limit his invitations to the barest possible number the occasion demands.

Mr. Bonaparte is an American through and through. He cares little for foreign travel and the places made famous by the deeds of his ancestors have no charm for him. He is perhaps prouder of his grandmother than of his historical ancestors. She was Elizabeth Patterson, daughter of a Baltimore merchant and known as one of the most beautiful women of her time, one of the group of Baltimoreans that had won wide distinction for their comliness and brilliancy.

Mr. Bonaparte is a devout Catholic and will probably attend mass daily before going to his desk. He will be the only Catholic in Mr. Roosevelt's official family succeeding in that particular Robert J. Wynne, former postmaster general and now consul general at London. The new secretary is a man of large wealth. He is an aristocrat of aristocrats and how he will get along with the run of politicians, big and little, good and bad, will be a positive delight to watch.

Representative Brownlow of Tennessee is seriously in earnest about creating a new state out of the mountain portion of North Carolina, Tennessee, Kentucky and Virginia. He resents with all the forcible language at his command the assertion that practical politics is behind this movement. Col. Brownlow realizes that the consent of four states is necessary to bring about this dream of his, and he does not understand why this consent cannot be had. He stated yesterday, when in Washington, that the mountain sections of the states referred to were wholly out of sympathy with the other portions of these commonwealths. That in Southeastern Kentucky the political sentiment was practically unanimous in its Republicanism. That the same thing was True in Eastern Tennessee. Western North Carolina and Southwestern Virginia are much in the same boat, and he for one would work day and night to bring about the segregation of the sections above referred to and created into a commonwealth unexcelled in its mineral resources and rich in patriotism. While he realizes that there are countless difficulties in the way, he has profound hope the legislatures of the states referred to may be induced to part with the companionship of their Republican neighbors and let them form themselves into an independent state.

The appointment of Major John M. Carson, for many years the Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia Public Ledger and New York Times and the dean of the corps of correspondents at the nation's capital, as head of the bureau of manufactures, department of commerce and labor, has without exception met with more universal approval than any appointment ever made in a generation. Since he left the case in a Philadelphia newspaper office, Major Carson has been a tireless newspaper worker. For nearly forty years he has been in Washington as editor or correspondent of some newspaper. He has enjoyed a larger personal intimacy with more public men than any newspaper writer since the close of the Civil War. He has stood for clean journalism during his whole newspaper career and he leaves the newspaper life of the capital with more genuine well wishes from his associates than ever wept out to any of his calling. He has grown gray in the service. In these "parlous" times it was absolutely refreshing last week to see the troops of friends to call and pay their respects to the best representative of the nwspaper profession in Washington. As one man said yesterday, at a luncheon given by the retiring chief of the bureau, J. Hampton Moore, to Major Carson: "Major, you have won the right to rest. You have led a strenuous life for forty years. You have avoided retailing slander. You have been fearless and fair and there goes with you into your new position the well wishes of every man on newspaper row." And thus one more of the army of newspaper men at the national capital passes out from public view to take up a wholly different line of work at 68 years of age.

Within the next week the army and the navy will be engaged in a titanic struggle to capture or save Washington. The joint army and navy maneuvers, which are scheduled to begin next week in Chesapeake bay have as their primary object the destruction and capture or the salvation of the national capital. Already the North Atlantic squadron, which will participate in the investment of the capital, are moving to their rendezvoux in Chesapeake bay. The navy will endeavor to capture the city, the army being its defender. Dummy mines are being laid in the Potomac and the wasps of the ocean, the torpedo boats and the submarines are making ready to clear the river of these mines so that the great leviathans of the navy may steam up within striking distance of the capital, pass the frowning fortifications of Forts Washington and Hunt to invest the capital. The war game is to be played with every detail as if actually an enemy sought the destruction of the city. The navy department is keeping its plans for the capture of Washington a profound secret. Not a newspaper man will be permitted aboard any vessel of the fleet, and if any information leaks out as to the plans of the naval campaign it will be because some indiscreet officer has vaporized and not of first hand knowledge on the part of the correspondent. Gunpowder will be burned in right good volume and the thunders of the guns on the fortifications together with the guns of the men-of-war will suggest to the citizens of Washington a second edition of a great sea fight.

LESS THAN FOUR WEEKS REMAIN IN WHICH TO GET OUR STOCKS SUFFICIENTLY REDUCED for moving them about—preparatory to occupying the annex to our present store—now being finished for us—and adjoining our present quarters! We're willing to sacrifice profits in order to rid our cabinets, racks and shelves of their present immense stocks of summer wearables—and have started the sale for this very reason!

LITTLE THINGS COUNT.

Small Patents That Have Brought Large Profits.

In the patent office reports one is struck with the multitude of small inventions which are constantly being patented in Washington, says the New York Herald. And a glance at the records would show how many of them have been put into use all over the world and are practically indispensable. Enormous fortunes have been and are made from these simple contrivances. Take, for instance, the copper-toed shoe. This is seldom seen today except in the rural districts, but during the years it was in use the inventor made $50,000 to $100,000. He was an old farmer with a large family of growing boys and girls, and, seeing the rapidity with which the toes of his sons and daughters appeared through their shoes, set himself to finding a remedy for the trouble. Being of an ingenious turn of mind, he cut out a couple of copper strips for each pair of shoes, which he fastened over the tops between the soles and the uppers. The plan worked so successfully that the farmer found that one pair of shoes would suffice where he had been buying two. A city man with an eye to business came along and prevailed upon the farmer to get the idea patented, with the result that a fortune awaited the inventor.

Another simple contrivance which has made a large sum of money is the metal button fastener for shoes, which was made by a man in Providence, R. I. At that time it was considered a fine invention, for the old sewed button was continually coming off. It has gradually grown in popularity, till now very few shoes are made without this appliance.

One man made a fortune by giving a few minutes of thought to the snipping tag which is in such constant use. The great trouble with the paper tag was the almost unavoidable tearing of the tying hole before the package had reached its destination. The cardboard reinforcement, round in shape, on each side of the tying hole was all that was necessary to make the shipping tag a success.

The familiar return ball, a wooden ball fastened to a thin strip of rubber with a ring at the other end, was patented in the sixties and had a rush of popularity which brought its inventor $60,000. It is still in use today. In the spring, when the snow is gone and the sidewalks are clean and dry once more, the little corner toy shops are besieged by scores of children to whom the return ball is once more a necessity.

Everyone is familiar with the puzzle which consists of two painters' hooks which are fastened together in such a way that they can be separated only by one particulr twist. This invention came about by the merest chance. A painter was standing on his ladder scaffold across the front of a house. He had occasion to use a pair of these hooks, and, picking them up hurriedly entagled them in such a way that it was several hours before he could separate them. He made drawings of them and filed an application for a patent, which was granted. The puzzle was sold in large quantities all over the United States, and though it is not known what sum was realized from the sale, it must have been a large one, for the cost of manufacture was less than a cent and the selling price was 25 cents.

Another invention which gained a great popularity recently is the tin cap on the top of beer bottles. This appliance is taking the place of the rubber cork with the iron thumb lever. It is found that the sulphur in the rubber cork is acted upon by the beer, with the result that the rubber deteriorates and the beer spoils.

It is comparatively recently that a patent was granted for an addition to tin cans which did away with the can opener. By a blow on the top of the can around the rim the top would be broken off with a smooth edge. This did not cost the inventor one cent a thousand above the regular price of the cans. Armour, the Chicago meat man, as soon as he heard of the invention ordered 10,000,000 cans to pack meat in to fill an order for the German army. The fortune of the inventor was made in the first six months. His cans are now used all over the country for oysters and fruit.

CONFIDENTIAL.

"Oh, by the way," said one man to another in a West Philadelphia car, says the Philadelphia Record, "I owe you an apology. I received a letter from you several days ago and I have not yet answered it, but that was largely your own fault, for I had considerable difficulty in making out the handwriting. I could not figure it out at all and I turned it over to my stenographer, who has had considerable experience in matters of that kind, for she worked in the postoffice and was frequently called upon to do the same kind of work, but it was more than she could master and she carried it out among the clerks. She managed to make out a word here and there. I took the thing down to the club and we spent a whole evening on it there and succeeded in making out everything but the last line. Do you remember what the last line was?" "Oh, yes," replied the other, "I remember that quite well. That was, 'This letter is in strict confidence.'"

USE FOR SHARKS' SKINS.

Thousands of sharks' skins are annually dried and sold at from 12 shillings to 24 shillings each, according to size, says the Kansas City Journal. Drying makes the skins as hard and smooth as mother-o'-pearl. The material is known as "shagreen," and is largely used for covering whip handles and instrument cases. It is also used by cabinetmakers for polishing fine woods. The fins are made into a glue that is used very extensively by silk manufacturers.

A COMING NECESSITY.

It is becoming evident that the farmers of Minnesota and of the Dakotas, like other farmers in other new and particularly fertile areas, have been using their capital as well as the interest. In other words, while the soil of the spring wheat country has been so astonishingly fertile that there seemed to be no end to it, and it has produced crop after crop without the use of fertilizers such as are necessary in older farming country, there are indications of a change in affairs.

Such a condition cannot always continue, and the time when fertilizers will be a necessity is at hand. Not many years ago the spring wheat country produced a good deal of No. 1 hard spring wheat. Today it produces scarcely any. Still later, when No. 1 hard had dwindled, there was an abundance of the next best, No. 1 northern. Now that has decreased materially, and the third best, No. 2 northern, is the principal product. This clearly shows a deterioration in the soil which was the inevitable result of the policy of sowing to wheat year after year without the use of fertilizers. Besides the deterioration in quality, there has been a marked decrease in quantity from the same cause, and the average yield per acre has substantially diminished. The increased flax acreage will add materially to this running out of the soil, for flax is a notorious consumer of soil properties.

The Eastern and Southern states that have been cultivated for a long time have long since been driven to the use of fertilizers, which are successful in bringing the soil back to something like its original productiveness. A moderate expenditure per acre in fertilizing by scientific methods the soil of the spring wheat country would undoubtedly multiply itself many times in the yield, both in quality and quantity It is only a question of time before the farmers of the Northwest will be driven to such methods, and the ones that adopt it to preserve existing fertility will come out at the end of the crop year considerably in advance of their fellows who stick to the unassisted productiveness of the soil.

Experiment stations in this and other countries have done much to demonstrate the value of commercial fertilizers. A recent consular report states that in the cultivated area of Germany, which is about 79,000,000 acres, about $60,000,000 is spent every year in fertilizing. It is estimated that the effect is to add from seven to ten times that figure to the value of the annual crops. It is asserted that many German farms that were practically worthless a generation ago, now yield heavy and profitable crops. Still more important, this yield is attended by a uniformity that would have been thought impossible in the old days of ignorant, hit-or-miss farming.

THAT DEFICIT.

Since it become evident that the government's books are going to show a deficit at the end of the fiscal year, amounting to about $35,000,000, there has naturally been much discussion about how it happened and what is to be done about it. All sorts of reasons have been advanced for the existence of the deficit, and all sorts of theories have been offered as to how to get rid of it.

It is curious to note how few of the people that have been sagely discussing the situation have thought of the simple remedy of reducing expenses to accord with the income. The average individual who experiences a deficit in his accounts at the end of the year is always expected to do that. He would prefer, of course, to have his employer arrange it by an adjustment of his salary, if the employer could see it that way, but usually he cannot, and it is up to the individual to make his expenses fit his income, rather than to arrange his income to accord with his expenses.

When it comes to the government, however, it appears to be different, though it is difficult to see why it should be so. As soon as a deficit appears, a great chorus of advice arises, and it appears to be mostly all about increasing the government's income to meet the increased expenses. The man that wants to suggest that the government's expenses be pared to meet its income can scarcely make himself heard above the clamor.

Recently Senator Hemenway, who was chairman of the house committee on appropriations last year, rose to remark that the solution should come not in revising the tariff upward or in increasing the internal revenue, but in cutting off wasteful expenditures. His advice has not created any noticeable stir, but it should because of its originality, and surely it has such an unexpected amount of common sense in it that it should receive attention. He points out that the departments have fallen into the evil habit of spending millions more than their appropriations, and then calling on congress to make good through the urgency deficiency bill.

It is difficult to see just why, when congress fixes a limit upon the expenditures of a department for a year, department clerks should presume to spend more than that limit. They do, however, every year, and in every department. Surely Senator Hemenway's idea is much more sensible than the much more common theory that the revenues should be doctored up to meet the expenses. The government should trim its expenditures according to its income, just as much as an individual should, and just as much as a business enterprise should.

WIRELESS TELEGRAPHY.

Those who scoffed at wireless telegraphy as a visionary impracticability have now been relegated to the rank of those who jeered at the telephone, at the electric light, at the railroad, at the steamboat and at every other notable achievement in invention.

The arrival of the steamer Campania in port a few days ago showed conclusively that wireless telegraphy is a success, and that while it has perhaps not yet been thoroughly perfected, it is already a practical working scheme. The Campania reported that they were three days in mid-ocean when she talked at will with either the eastern or western shore of the Atlantic. In the same news sheets that brought this tale of mid-sea gossiping are wireless reports from coasting vessels far and near.

Perhaps there was more incredulity over the statement that it was possible to telegraph without wires than there was over the first astounding assertion that it was possible for two men, many miles apart, to talk over a wire. The achievement is as epochmaking, too, as was that of communicating by wire. It is impossible to arrange any system of telegraphy by wire over the ocean, except through the cables from shore to shore, but wireless telegraphy has robbed old ocean of her pathless mystery. The coastwise reports have become fixtures, and are already well-nigh indispensable. Further development of the invention will make it useful in other ways, and there seems to be hardly any limit to what may be accomplished.

Verily the "world do move." When a few more achievements like this have been made, it will be a rash man who withholds his belief in whatever claims inventors may make.

REACHING PUBLIC SERVANTS.

The story of how the members of the Philadelphia councils began to weaken and flock to the support of Mayor Weaver when he made his fight on the gas steal recently shows what the people can do when they are once aroused. It shows also that the function of voting for and against a candidate does not exhaust their resources by any means, when it comes to bringing recalcitrant public officers into line.

Here is the way some of the members of councils were prevailed upon to change their vote and abandon the ring:

A feed merchant found that he was losing all of his business, because of his stand on the matter.

A saloonkeeper found that the people were picketing his saloon and warning intending patrons that the proprietor was an enemy of the people.

One was a dyer, and people said they could not trust their wool to a man who voted for the gas lease.

One alderman's wife was made ill because her friends ostracised her on account of her husband's vote.

A produce merchant found that nobody would buy of him.

A florist was threatened with the loss of a contract for $10,000 worth of flowers unless he came to the mayor's aid.

One was attorney for a bank and building association, and he was notified that if he voted to override the mayor's veto he would be discharged.

A laundryman found that he had not received an order for washing after he had voted for the lease.

An automobile maker was threatened with hanging and the burning of his works unless he voted right.

A confectioner lost orders from all over the state.

There is nothing creditable to these aldermen in the motives that actuated them in going to the support of the mayor. It was either a bribe or a weak yielding to a threat, depending on which way it is viewed. In no case does it appear that the change was through honest conviction.

But the story is valuable enough to preserve. It shows the people that they have remedies, and these will suggest others.

Hotel Gossip.

Another assessor story is being told around the hotels. It relates to the experience one of Duluth's assesors had with a woman who only recently arrived from the Scandinavian peninsula. The man went up to the door of a house in the West end and, when it was opened, explained his business to the woman who confronted him.

"I am the assessor," he said, and went on to tell what he was there for.

"You are who?" questioned the woman.

"The assessor."

"Meester who?" and a puzzled expression began to spread over the friendly countenance.

"Mr. nothing; I am the assessor. It is my business to fix the value of your personal property, the things which you own, so we will know what you ought to be taxed."

"Vat you say it is you vant?" The woman was getting more puzzled with every attempt to the exasperated assessor to put her on the right road to understanding.

"I am the assessor, a-s-s-e-s-s-o-r, and I want—"

"Oh, I see now," the recently-arrived one interrupted, smiling broadly. "You yust valt a minute," and she left the caller at the door while she disappeared in an inner room.

"Hare you are, I know not what you mane at first," she said, appearing a moment later and handling the astonished assessor a pair of scissors.

Ade and the Bookmakers.

Chicago Post: George Ade is said to be on unfriendly terms with the bookmakers since a recent experience at Belmont Park. A friend approached him the other day with a subscription to bury an old turfman who had just died in the East.

"How much do you want?" asked Mr. Ade.

"A dollar apiece will be enough to pay the expenses," answered the friend.

"What!" said Mr. Ade. "A dollar to bury a bookmaker! Here, take this ten-spot and bury ten of them."

After the release of Nan Patterson one of Mr. Ade's acquaintances criticised the popular attitude toward the accused show girl, resenting particularly the ovation given her when she left the Tombs.

"Well, why shouldn't they cheer her?" asked Mr. Ade. "She killed a bookmaker, didn't she?"

Real Experience.

A Song of Clover.

Over sea the sword gleams,
Loud the cannon booms,
But here we are in clover—
We've mockin' birds an' bloomsl

Reckon we are grateful?—
Not a single bit!
Got too little o' the world
An' want the whole of it!
—FRANK L. STANTON in Atlanta Constitution.

That's Why.

He couldn't understand it,
Why the orders came so slow;
The longer that he labored
Slower seemed the things to go
But the bee got in his bonnet,
And thereafter he was wise—
His business almost doubled
Since he learned to advertise.

And the drums go Rat-tat-bum,
When the fifes are shrilly squealing,
And the painted cages come;

Then I know the show's parading,
And I'm glad to be alive.

SHELLS THAT EXPLODE.

Nature has made many kinds of bombs in the shape of seed pods which open with great force and project the contents to a considerable distance, says the Chicago Chronicle. There is a sea shell which explodes with a formidable noise and suggests a veritable dynamite bomb.

Not long ago a young woman wandering on the shore of Mobile bay picked up a handful of shells left by the tide. Among them were the shells of a small marine snail, the largest of which were not more than a half inch in diameter. She dropped them into her pocket and forgot all about them. till some days afterward she noticed an unpleasant odor which came from her wardrobe.

On taking the shells from her pocket one of them dropped to the floor and exploded with a sharp noise, loud enough to be heard in an adjoining room. She tried another with the same result. The shells were then examined by a scientist, who found the mouth of each firmly inclosed by a membrane of greater or less thickness, formed by the drying of the animal's slime.

This had probably occurred soon after removal from the moisture of the beach, and the inhabitants of the shell dying, the gases of decomposition had entirely filled the air space. On exerting a little pressure a loud explosion was produced, the shell fragments flying in all directions. Out of a dozen shells only two failed to explode. The conditions most successful in making the experiment seemed to be removal from the beach in hot, dry weather, which caused the slime to be exuded in greater quantities than usual and dried it up rapidly.

AN URBAN SPRING.

Issuing from the rocks on Cathedral parkway, between Amsterdam and Columbus avenues, is a spring of fresh water that runs the year round, says the New York Sun. The authorities have trouble in carrying away the flow, as the drains are continually being broken and the water flows over the sidewalk, to the annoyance of pedestrians. The birds, of which there are thousands in the neighborhood, find the little rill anything but annoying. It provides them water to drink—a thing far harder for them to get in the city than food—and a bathing place.

The Weather.

"Into each life some rain must fall,
Some days must be dark and dreary."

Why this is so is not given us to know. We only know that Longfellow spoke truly, both as to weather and as to human life, and our only theory is expressed in the words of a greater poet: "Sweet are the uses of adversity; which, like the toad, ugly and venomous, wears yet a precious jewel in his head." Yesterday and today were gloomily well suited to the thoughts expressed by these quotations. These are the days when people should sagely remark that "it can't last always," instead of croaking out the same words in fine weather. Ten days of good weather surely earned nature the right to a few days of relaxation into temper. Yesterday was a day when it was fine to stay at home with a book and catch up with the world of letters. Light loads on the public conveyances showed that most people were doing something like that.

The northeaster is not due to last long. While there will be showers tonight and probably Tuesday, it will be warmer, and the wind should shift to the southwest this afternoon or tonight, according to the weather man.

United States Department of Agriculture, Weather Bureau, Duluth, June 5.—Forecast for twenty-four hours ending at 7 p. m. (local time) Tuesday:

Duluth, Superior and vicinity: Showers and warmer tonight and probably Tuesday. Brisk to high winds, northeast shifting to southwest this afternoon or tonight.

H. W. RICHARDSON,
Local Forecaster.

Chicago, June 5.—Forecasts until 7 p. m. Tuesday.

Wisconsin—Showers and thunderstorms this afternoon and tonight. Warmer in extreme east and cooler in west portions tonight. Tuesday cooler with fair in south and showers in north portions.

Minnesota—Showers and thunderstorms this afternoon and tonight with cooler in south and west portions and warmer in northeast portion. Tuesday fair and cooler in south portion, probably showers in north portions.

North Dakota and South Dakota—Generally fair tonight and Tuesday except showers in North Dakota tonight. Cooler tonight.

Upper Lakes—Brisk to high southwest winds this afternoon and tonight with showers and severe squalls. Fresh westerly winds Tuesday. Storm southwest warnings 10 a. m. all stations except Duluth-Ashland sections.

March of the Turtles.

Mankato Free Press: The march of the turtles is on.

These are the words on the lips of trainmen and officials of the Minnesota and Iowa division of the Omaha road. To them the march is an annual story.

The Omaha tracks from Lake Crystal to Madelia run between two lakes. When the warm days come the turtles cross from one lake to the other, and clamber up the sides of the embankment, the trainmen say, by thousands to deposit their eggs in the warm sand.

Many of the turtles, once between the rails, wander for miles before they finally escape the endless iron paling, and hundreds are killed by trains.

Wants Too Much.

Minneapolis Tribune: A Duluth exchange is giving space to a practical discussion of whether a family can live on fifty dollars a month and lay by anything for old age. Many laborers at $1.75 a day are giving their testimony and it all goes to show that the American citizen of all classes demands a little more than he can rightfully afford.

Seasonable.

Lippincott's: A speeding automobile met a smoothly gliding cutter on the road.

"Ah!" said the automobile, "where are you going?"

"Sleighing, of course," replied the cutter.

"And you?"

"Slaying!" shouted back the automobile with a horseless laugh.

Conspicuously Lonesome.

Springfield Republican: A railroad president who favors investing the interstate commission with power to fix rates has come forward in the person of A. B. Stickney of the Chicago Great Western. He is much needed by the administration. President Mellen of the New Haven road spoke favorably of Mr. Roosevelt's policy last winter; he could reinforce Mr. Stickney at this juncture in a timely manner.

The Lake Rivalry.

Milwaukee Evening Wisconsin: The steamer Albert H. Gary's cargo of 12,002 tons of ore is a "record-breaker" that puts the Augustus B. Wolvin in second place. But the owner of the latter craft, like Sir Thomas Lipton, has money enough for another "try," and, it is said, will next season put a Wolvin boat at the chutes that will astonish the natives with her hunger for ore.

Told the Truth.

Atlanta Constitution: A Kansas woman advertised in a matrimonial paper that she wanted a husband. She described her home as a magnificent stone building surrounded by a beautiful, well-kept park, and employing an army of servants. In a few days she was deluged with offers of marriage. She was an inmate of an insane asylum.

Literary Opportunity.

Washington Post: It is hardly probable that Secretary Loeb and Pat Crowe will take advantage of the splendid opportunity to collaborate an article on "How We Fooled the Omaha Sheriff."

Shoe Trade Wisdom.

Philadelphia Record: "You've heard of the man who said he drank on two occasions—when he was fishing and when he wasn't," remarks the Shoe Trade Journal. "He is like the wise shoe dealer who only advertises on two occasions—when business is good and when it isn't."

Good times are better for the regular advertiser than for his competitor who neglects to make hay in the sunshine of publicity, and hard times never make such serious inroads on the business of the former as on that of the latter. In periods of prosperity and adversity alike people must wear shoes, and they buy the kinds that are advertised.

Was It Wrong?

We kissed. I ask was it bold
For lips to meet lips in a loving enfold?
To linger in bliss and drink from her lips
The breath that was sweeter than sweet honey drips?
I ask was it wrong to have her fair face
Pressed closely to mine in a rapturous embrace?
Was it wrong for us to make loving so free—
When I am most fifty and she is but three?

E. A. Gilbert and wife have returend from Grand Rapids, Mich., where they went to attend the funeral of Mr. Gilbert's father.

Until Thursday last there were thirty-three prisoners in the county jail, and on that day there were seventeen more sent up, making a total of fifty, while the jail will comfortably accommodate only twenty-four. They are stood up in all ways to make room.

Only about a quarter of a mile of track remains to be laid in the transfer line to connect the Omaha road with the bridge and Duluth. This the Northern Pacific seems indisposed to lay at present, and as a result Duluth is shut off from the promised connection with Chicago.

Nearly 63,000 barrels of flour were shipped from Duluth last week.

Capt. Angus McDougall, so long the popular captain of the propeller China of the Transit line, has resigned his position and will go into the vessel agency business at Buffalo. Capt. The St. Paul & Duluth road has ordered squatters on parts of blocks G and H, Rice's Point, to vacate at once, as the road intends to lay new tracks at a cost of $20,000 to $25,000 to handle the rapidly increasing traffic.

The schooner Sweetheart, well known to Duluthians of the olden days as the first boat ever wrecked at this port, is here this week.

Judging from present appearances, Duluth will have no general celebration of the Fourth of July. No arrangements have yet been made by the hose company, which usually takes the lead in such matters.

A young man from Port Huron, Mich., is making an attempt to establish a "business college" here. He meets with but small success.

Some 1,500 pupils are in the rolls of the public schools.

MIRTHFUL REMARKS.

Washington Star: "The automobile has not accomplished much in actual business," said the utilitarian.

Washington Star: "Honesty," said the man who is earnest but not original, "is the best policy."

"It may be the best policy," answered Senator Sorghum, "but you can't convince me that it's the best politics."

Pittsburg Post: Susan Brett—What sort of a part did Hamlet Fat have in the play?

Susan Brett—And how did he do?

Yorrick Hamm—Oh, he fitted the part all right. He was rotten.

The Music That Carries.

I've toiled with the men the world has blessed,
And I've toiled with the men who strove with zest,
And I've toiled with the men who walled.
And this is the tale my soul would tell,
As it drifts o'er the harbor bar;
The sounds of a sigh don't carry well,
But the lilt of a laugh rings far.

The men who were near the grumbler's side,
O, they heard not a word he said;
The sound of a song rang far and wide,
And they hearkened to that instead.
Its tones were sweet as the tales they tell
Of the rise of the Christmas star—
The sounds of a sigh don't carry well,
But the lilt of a laugh rings far.
—STRICKLAND W. GILLILAN in Success.

Motley for P. Ellard.

Minneapolis Journal: P. Ellard Dowling, editor of the Eveleth Star and whitewasher-in-ordinary for the last legislature, is interesting in some respects. In the last issue of his paper Pellard reads the journal out of the Republican party, excommunicates it with book and ring, and then says:

"Among Republicans proper there is a unanimity of sentiment that makes is evident that the old quarrel is to be relegated to the rear and the state redeemed from its useless double administration. There is no disposition upon the part of the friends of R. C. Dunn to continue the dispute, and the partizans of the other side have largely taken themselves from the pale of Republicanism, thereby lessening their influence to such an extent that possibilities of their doing mischief is comparatively small."

Evidently Brer Dowling, being still within the pale, realizes that his possibilities for mischief "is" still fairly large and should be improved. It is a fact that Republicans generally, including the 80,000 who voted for John A. Johnson, are all ready to drop the old quarrel and get together on the right basis. If Dowling were allowed to run the show, he would show his disregard for the old quarrel by kicking all the anti-Dunn Republicans out of the party, and would then proceed to "redeem the state." It is quite possible, however, that the gentleman from Eveleth will not be the ringmaster in the next convention. He is fitted by nature for another job, and if he has any regard for the fitness of things, he will wear motley.

Suspicious Portable Exit.

Kansas City Star: Congressman Cochran of Missouri wished to illustrate some remarks he was making about suspicious circumstances. In doing so he told of a well-dressed man who registered at a hotel in St. Joseph, Mo. He casually remarked that he never traveled without his own fire escape, at the same time exhibiting the contrivance which he carried. "In case of fire," he said, "I can let myself down from any hotel window." The landlord said gravely: "Our terms for guests with fire escapes are cash in advance."

He Weighs 350.

Washington Post: If forced to adopt heroic measures, the railroad companies may get some satisfaction by compelling Secretary Taft to pay by weight when he travels.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Anoka Free Press: It may be worth making a note of the fact that while the farmers of this county constitute more than 50 per cent of the population they commit less than 2 per cent of the crimes.

Red Wing Republican: Governor La Follette vetoed the voting machine. The governor has a wholesome prejudice against machines.

Brainerd Dispatch: The Age says Aitkin county can't avoid an iron boom. Don't try to avoid it; it's a good thing for any county that can make good and Crow Wing county is in that list.

Princeton Union: Duluth would like the next State convention. As Duluth has the reputation of keeping things cool, there may be a chance for her.

Fergus Falls Journal: The public examiner of Minnesota reports that state banks have been organized at the rate of five or six a week since the adjournment of the legislature. This means that the private banks are incorporating as a result of the agitation to bring them under state control, and the savings of the people will be safer as a result.

Walker Pilot: A man might live in a big city and forget there is a God, but not in Walker. Too much nature, and too little of man's genius in Northern Minnesota to allow one to forget. A few of the godless city folk better come up and get converted.

Sandstone Courier: If the endeavors of the Pine City Commercial club are unknown it will be no fault of the county seat press. If the rest of the business interests of the seat of government in Pine county did as much for the court house town as do its papers, there would be more doing down there all the time.

Red Wing Republican: Twenty-four candidates have already been "mentioned" for Republican nomination for governor next year. Yet, there is room for more. It is good advertising anyway—and perfectly harmless.

The Cry of the City.

Can't you hear the city calling,
Through the smoky gloom?
Saying to the young and old:
"All my streets are paved with gold;
Come and meet me,
Come and greet me,
Come and face our doom!"
Can't you hear the city calling,
Through the smoky gloom?

Can't you hear the world replying,
Through the sparkling air?
"I am coming, coming, coming,
Where the streets with life are humming,
I would meet you,
I would greet you,
For you speak me fair."
Can't you hear the world replying,
Through the sparkling air?

Can't you hear the city crying,
Through the murky night?
Saying: "I am old and weary,
Sick and sorry, dull and dreary;
Who can please me,
Who can ease me,
Make my burnden light?"
Can't you hear the city crying,
Through the murky night?

Was Close Enough.

Collier's Weekly: Champ Clarke, representative from Missouri, dearly loves a good story at the expense of the state of Arkansas. "One day," says Mr. Clark, "as a train from the East pulled up at the dinky little station of a most depressing town in the fever-and-ague district of Arkansas, a passenger thrusting his head out of the car window demanded in bitter tones of a dejected-looking citizen who was leaning against the station door:

"'Tell me, what do you call this dried-up, dreary, God-forsaken place?'

"'That's near enough, stranger,' replied the native in a melancholy voice, 'let it go at that!'"

New York Times: Timothy Woodruff was talking to some friends at Republican headquarters the day after the last presidential election, when someone casually made an observation as to certain returns from Delaware county.

"That's the county," said Mr. Woodruff, "where, they say, the old-time Republicans never die. 'Why,' he remarked, 'there is one old chap there, 98 years old, who voted for Roosevelt, and says he isn't through yet. TO FIGHT BACK

Duluth Labor Delegates Will Give Twin Cities a Race.

Latter Trying to Hog Matters In Federation Circles.

There is likely to be something of a fight on constitutional amendments at the convention of the state federation of labor which will meet next week in Brainerd. The Twin Cities, as usual, show a disposition to hog matters, fearing that Duluth's influence is growing. At present the federation council, all the members of which are from the Twin Cities, are the principal factor in labor matters between the conventions of the federation and now the twin cities, not satisfied with this power, wish to take away from Duluth what little influence she possesses.

The St. Paul Trades assembly is advertising and will introduce in the convention amendments to the constitution of the federation, which combined, will practically abolish the office of secretary-treasurer, at present occupied by W. E. McEwen of Duluth, who has been secretary for ten years. Under the present system, Mr. McEwen receives $900 a year salary, $200 for clerk hire and expenses to cover stationery, postage and other similar expenses. Should the amendments offered by the St. Paul assembly be adopted by the convention, the recompense for the labor of secretary-treasurer would be so cut down as to make it impossible for a man to take the job. These amendments propose that 25 per cent of the receipts of the state federation shall be set aside for the salary, stationery, postage, etc., of the secretary-treasurer, and that he must not exceed that sum. Twenty-five per cent of the receipts of last year, for instance, would amount to $400 and after taking out stationery, postage, telegraph tolls, etc., Mr. McEwen would have had left $47.50 for his year's work, had this scheme then been in force.

The St. Paul assembly claims that the state federation is losing members but it is merely guessing at this for the reports of the federation will show a net gain of many unions over last year. During the year four unions withdrew and five disbanded, but twenty new unions affiliated and one of the unions that withdrew re-affiliated Forty-seven old unions were also rejuvenated. E. E. James of St. Paul, one of the agitators of this movement is secretary of the union which withdrew and reaffiliated.

Yesterday morning the delegates already elected from Duluth unions to the convention at Brainerd, held a meeting at the Trades assembly hall and took steps to effectively fight the amendments offered by St. Paul. President Shartel of the Trades assembly introduced a proposed constitutional amendment which the delegates adopted and which will be introduced in the Brainerd convention as a delegation measure. It provides that the federation council be abolished and that the president, one vice president from each congressional district and a secretary-treasurer be the officers of the state federation and constitute an executive council which shall have the power now vested in the federation council. This executive committee shall meet not oftener than once every three months and then only if necessary, the business of the committee to be done principally by correspondence.

The Duluth delegates recommended the following members for apointment on the standing committees: Credentials, Dan Galpin of the Plumbers' union; rules and order of business, John McDonald of the Typographical union; constitution and law, James Walsh of the Tugmens' union; resolutions, Joseph Shartel, president of the local federation; officers' reports, F. T. Skrove of the Carpenters' union; finance, Bert Campbell of the Lathers' union; organization, George W. Davis of the Carpenters' union; legislation, Henry Perrault of the Cigarmakers' union.

THE Y. M. C. A. SECRETARIES

Welcome Keen Criticism From Men Outside Their Ranks.

New York, June 5.—The meeting of the secretaries of the Young Men's Christian association of North America just closed at Niagara Falls was attended by nearly 1,000 men—about twice as many as at any such previous meeting. They had invited some of the most representative sociologists, scholars, business and professional men to unreservedly criticize their methods. This accounted for the large attendance.

Dr. Buckley, the editor of the Christian Advocate, said that this was the first organization, social or religious, that had ever opened itself to fearless, unrestricted and keen criticism from men outside its ranks.

The secretaries were disappointed whenever the speakers took their time to commend rather than criticize and suggest. From this searching scrutiny of the methods of the association broader plans for its adoption to benefit a larger number of men were expected.

Some severe criticism was given and every weakness and shortcoming of the organization exposed by some of the critics. Dr. Buckley read letters from forty-five clergymen from seven denominations, who were known to have been disaffected. Some urged that the association adopt the broader theology and as many the adherence to the old doctrines. Others urged that no religious teaching be given, and more that there was not enough. In summing up Dr. Buckley urged that each association see that its work was well done, spiritually, educationally, athletically, physically and socially. President Henry C. King, of Oberlin, urged upon the association the necessity of getting and keeping hold of the most thoughtful young men on Bible questions, feeling that it has not enlisted their attention outside of the college association.

President G. Stanley Hall discussed Bible teaching, religious emotions and the association's opportunity of influence with boys in the adolescent period of their lives.

Hon. Carroll D. Wright suggested further educational instruction for wage-earners, and that the association should be made an intellectual center for young men.

J. E. Sullivan, secretary of the Amateur Athletic union, read the secretaries a lecture on clean sport, and told them that the Y. M. C. A. had the power to make athletics decent, and ought to do it.

Dr. Sargent of Harvard, told them that they ought to supply exercise to make every city boy healthy and "improve the condition of the weak and not exploit the proficiency of the strong."

W. T. Ellis had met with cold reception from some associations and called for better social life, for wide-awake men, reminding them that the association is not an "old ladies' sewing society." The study and adaptation of the association to meet the social needs of men will be its greater work in the future.

Ernest Abbott, of the Outlook, told them they were not thinkers, but must be to make the association measure up to the greatest opportunity that was before any organization in the world.

AT NORMAL HALL

Commencement Sermon to Graduates of State Normal School.

Rev. J. W. Powell Discusses "The Larger Meaning of Culture."

The commencement sermon, the first of the exercises of the third annual commencement of the state normal school at Duluth, was delivered yesterday afternoon at normal hall by Rev. J. W. Powell, Jr. The hall was well filled with the graduates and their friends. The Scriptural reading was given by Rev. J. Wilfrid Loughridge, the invocation asked by Rev. Harry W. Johnson and the benediction pronounced by Rev. J. K. Shellenberger. The chorus under the direction of Miss Mason sang three numbers. Mr. Powell's subject was "The Larger Meaning of Culture" and he took his text from II Timothy, 3:17—"That the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto every good work." He said in part:

"That is a praiseworthy custom which has prevailed in this country from time immemorial of inviting some minister of the gospel to speak for a little time to each class of young men and women which goes out of the cloistered precincts of the school and college into the larger life of the world outside. It is the minister's privilege to look upon human life without a certain detachment which is impossible to no other man. It is not without a certain confidence in his right to speak, therefore, that the minister stands in the presence of those who have completed a stage in the preparation for their life's work and seeks to help them as they pause for a single moment to look back over their work, to understand its scope and meaning and to gather up its net results before they take the plunge into the current of the larger life.

"The minister and educator are seeking in the main the same end, namely, the development of character and the preparation of youth for the larger responsibilities of life. It is unavoidable, however, that their point of view should be somewhat different; that they should supplement each other. It is inevitable that the work of the teacher, excellent and necessary as it is and worthy of all praise, should need to be supplemented by the more directly spiritual and ethical interest of the minister.

"It is with a high sense of privilege that I speak to you of the larger purpose of culture, which is the symmetrical development of manhood and womanhood, or in the words of my text, 'That the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works.'

"Let us consider to begin with the purpose of culture. The first object of education is a practical one, to fit the children for the duties of mature life, if our children are to live and prosper in this sort of world, we owe it to them to give them such training as will enable them to earn their living and meet the conditions which the state of civilization thrusts upon them. This is the practical view of education and one of the chief criticisms which is made upon our public school systems is that it is not practical enough. There is little danger that our common school system will ever be too practical.

"The culturist would remind us, however, that the purpose of education is larger than the mere fitting of boys and girls to earn a living or even to be intelligent citizens. Men ought to be more than clerks or bookkeepers, women ought to be larger than household drudges. The value of an educated after all lies not so much in the information imparted as in the training which it gives to the mental powers. It is the utmost importance that our boys and girls shall be given a window of the mind through which they can look out beyond the circumscribed field of their business life or home duties, and come into realization with the great world of human thought and activity. But we see there is even more. When once we have transcended the mere utilitarian point of view we see the purpose of the educational life is the development of character. To awaken in the mind of youth, the enquiring love of truth, to inspire the soul with the devoted love of goodness and to arouse in the heart the earnest purpose to devote oneself to the service of ones kind is not this the purpose of all true culture? Also must the soul be trained to obedience in the path of duty, the spirit be taught to hear the voice of its God, the man be made to understand that Love, which is of all human capacities the most satisfying and enriching is not to be bounded by the ties of family or friendship, but must include enemies and persecutors and those distant neighbors who have least claim upon our attention or our time. When this result has been reached, the truest culture is seen, though the subject of it be unable to read or write his name. Without this there is no real culture though learning be present or artistic skill, or choice friendship, or honeyed courtesy."

HOUSE OF GOD IS DEDICATED

Lutherans of Arnold Have Formal Opening of Church.

The new First Lutheran church of Arnold was dedicated yesterday with appropriate ceremony and the event aroused a great deal of enthusiasm among those who have so valiantly striven to establish a church there for some time. Messages of good will were brought to the congregation from the Norwegian Lutheran congregations by Rev. T. H. Fussum of Duluth, and from the English Lutheran congregations by Rev. J. L. Murphy of Duluth.

Rev. Carl Solomonson of the First Swedish Lutheran church of Duluth, who is also pastor of the congregation at Arnold, in his dedicatory address, set the edifice apart as a house of God and for divine worship. He gave a brief history of the congregation, and told of the splendid work which has been done to establish the church. Those who formed the congregation, though small in number, built the church at a cost of $1,700, and now, at its opening, have a debt of only $300, a really remarkable achievement.

Mr. Nelson of Arnold, who is superintendent of the Sunday school, spoke of his part of the work, which has been the nucleus of the congregation and the church movement. He called it the ground work, as it was, and urged that it be not neglected.

The music of the day was furnished by a mixed quartet from the First Swedich church of Duluth, and some excellent numbers were given. The church was prettily decorated with ferns, evergreens and popies. The attendance was large.

INJURED IN RUNAWAY

West End Young People Are Victims of Accident.

After staggering into O. T. Olson's grocery store at 923 Twenty-third avenue west, with the blood streaming from his face from a deep cut between the eyes, Hartwick T. Hanson, a young man about 21 years of age, telephoned for assistance for himself and the young lady who accompanied him, and then fell unconscious.

Mr. Hanson and Miss Clara Jensen of 125 North Twenty-fifth avenue west, had been driving on the boulevard and were coming down Twenty-fourth avenue west, when the cinch strap broke allowing the runabout to run on to the horse's heels.

The horse became frightened and dashing across the road struck the carriage against a stone pile and threw the occupants to the ground.

Mr. Hanson was very severely cut about the head and on the forehead, while Miss Jensen was bruised under the left eye, and sustained a number of scratches.

In spite of his injuries, Mr. Hanson ran to the nearest store for assistance, and after telephoning his father, came back to where he had left his companion.

In the meantime some passers-by had arrived on the scene, and they assisted Miss Jensen and the young man to the home of Adelard Boire, where they waited for a physician to arrive.

Mr. Hanson was out to St. Luke's hospital, and Miss Jensen recovered sufficiently to go to her home.

Mr. Hanson is the son of P. G. Hanson, the West end real estate dealer, and is employed in the First National bank. Miss Jensen is a stenographer in the employ of O. H. Clark.

STRANGE FACTS.

It seems strange that sometimes your stomach or bowels won't digest your food, no matter what you eat.

It may be the weather, or it may be just the state of your general health, but in any case, there is only one certain, safe and positive method of cure, and that is the proper use of that universal remedy for all forms of dyspeptic trouble or digestive weakness, whether in stomach, liver, kidneys or bowels—Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Strange, it is, that in such little tablets, to be taken a few times a day, may lie such wondrous potential possibilities, that by their use the course of a man's whole life—yes, of the world—may be changed

Yet, who would not appreciate the fact that if Napoleon had not been suffering from Cancer of the Stomach he would have won instead of lost—at Waterloo?

And Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets would have cured his Stomach Trouble had they then been invented, as they have cured thousands of others in the past ten years, who have suffered just as Napoleon did.

So you can readily appreciate that today, by curing all these people, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is helping to get the world's work better done, by people who would do worse work if they were sick, so they must be having a great influence, in a quiet way, on the world's progress.

They may, therefore, be classed as one of the triumphs of science, amongst other discoveries in medicine, mechanics, transportation, etc.

Let this, then, remain in your memory, a fact upon which to act when occasion requires:—

When any organ in your vast digestive machinery gets out of order, you have at your command one of the great inventions of the age, in Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, to put your machinery in order again.

By so doing you will save much useless friction, add to the energy and working possibilities of your bodily machine, and relieve yourself from suffering, disease, weakness, premature old age and death.

All this is strictly in accordance with the most modern teachings of the best scientific schools of health, hygiene and medicine, and it will be to your advantage to lay these facts to heart.

Don't hesitate. Try Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets today.

HALVOR STEENERSON

Wants Indians Given Power to Lease Lands.

St. Paul, June 5.—Congressman Halvor Steenerson of Crookston, who arrived in St. Paul yesterday from Iowa, where he went to take depositions in the case of the state against Charles C. Reeves, charged with murdering one Swenson at Hallock, says that he will renew his attempt in the next congress to secure an act allowing Indians on the Minnesota reservations to lease their land. Mr. Steenerson says that many Indians have more land than they want, that in many instances the lands are not improved, that the state receives no taxes from them and that the Indians and the people are the losers.

Congressman Steenerson will also introduce a bill to repeal the national bankruptcy act, believing that the act has outlived its usefulness and is now taken advantage of by unscrupulous persons who wish to escape their honest obligations.

BLOODLESS BATTLE

To Be Fought By Navy With Chesapeake Fortresses.

Will Also Be Noiseless With Exception of One Pounders.

Washington, June 5.—Sixteen warships will attack the defenses of Washington and Baltimore at midnight June 11 and will continue their operations for six days and six nights. Meanwhile the fortresses along Chesapeake bay and the Potomac river, constituting the artillery districts of the Chesapeake, Washington and Baltimore, will put forth all the defense of which they are capable. With it all, the struggle is to be bloodless, practically noiseless, devoid of the spectacular and intensely interesting only to the army and navy experts who are playing the game and know the constructive effect of the unloaded mines and the empty shells.

These exercises are to constitute the only joint operations of the army and navy during the year. They have been designated "joint exercises," to distinguish them from the more elaborate program of "combined army and navy maneuvers" which was first planned, but which failed of approval for lack of an adequate appropriation from congress. The operations are to be conducted under rules which have been agreed upon by a joint board of army and navy officers.

Considerable importance is attached to the distinction between maneuvers and joint exercises. Maneuvers are held to apply to operations where actual war conditions are simulated, while exercises mean only that certain prescribed problems are to be attained.

In the present instance the object of the several forms of attack by the navy will be to demonstrate the strength or weakness of some particular phase of the defense. The results will be known only at the conclusion of the exercises, and then known only to the proper authorities. This precaution is emphasized as important, that the character and strength of the various defenses, in the event of a possible attack by enemies of the country, be not known.

Various ships will be ruled out of action by the umpires, and various guns of the fortifications will be declared silenced. From the information obtainable the program first contemplates the strength of Fortress Monroe. Expert artillery opinion has long held that this fortress is the principal defense of the Chesapeake, and consequently the cities of Washington and Baltimore. Her big guns are said to cover the channel completely, and together with mine fields, to constitute a barrier that would be impassable to any hostile fleet. This mine field has been extended for the present exercises, the garrison has been doubled, and extra drills in the manipulation of the artillery have been in daily progress for some time and will be kept up until the date of the exercises.

The "hostile fleet" has been assembled under command of Rear Admiral Francis W. Dickinson and with his flagship, the Texas, is lying at Annapolis. On the tenth of June, Admiral Dickins will hold his last communications with shore. He will not divulge his plan or place of attack, but it is the supposition that he will put to sea, having technically established a base at Norfolk. His squadron consists of the battleship Texas, under command of Capt. Bickneli; the protected cruisers Newark and Atlanta, commanded by Badger and Halsey, respectively, the double turret monitor Terror, Commander Fulton; the single turret monitors, Florida, Arkansas and Nevada, Commanders Fremont, Galt and Reynolds; the old line cruiser Hartford, Commander Veeder, the torpedo boat destroyers Philip Worden, McDonnell and Stewart, under command of Lieuts. Mormorick, Curtain, Civase and Sellen, the gunboats Hornet, Siren and Sylvia, manned by the naval militia, and the monitor Puritan by the naval militia of the District of Columbia.

Anchor is to be weighed June 10 and from then on a fascinating game of hide and seek will be indulged in between the artillery and the navy and the whereabouts of the ships may be definitely determined at midnight of June 11. It is explained that night attacks are to ascertain the efficiency of the searchlights of the fortifications and also to give the navy exercise in constructively making these lights dark.

Actual experience has demonstrated that it is most difficult to hit a searchlight and incidentally most difficult to navigate a ship on which a searchlight has been turned, the effect of the light being to blind the navigators as well as the gunners. To render this exercise the more effective the ships of the squadron have been painted four colors; the Texas, Newark, Atlanta, Error, Puritan, Hornet, Siren and Slyvia are white; the Florida, Arkansas, Nevada, war color; the Hartford black and the torpedo boat destroyers dark green. Artillery fire will be directed on the ships as they are picked up by the lights, but for this exercise the mines are not regarded as in existence. The simulated observations of what has been accomplished on each side are to be made by the umpires and observers. On each ship will be a naval umpire and an artillery observer and in each fortress will be an artillery umpire and a naval observer.

No decisions will be rendered, however, as the sole duty of the observers will be to make records of the ranges and shots fired. None of the big guns of the navy will be fired, neither will the big guns of the fortifications be heard. These guns on both sides, however, will be trained on the target teh same as in actual war and their fire will be indicated by the discharge of a blank cartridge in a one-pounder. This is in the interest of economy, as the cost of a blank charge for a one-pounder is much less than for a 12-inch disappearing or naval gun.

To locate and destroy the mine field constitutes another problem. For some weeks, the artillery has had four boats planting mines. These mines are not loaded, but constructively they will be just as dangerous to the navy as though they contained explosives, unless located and destroyed through countermining operations. During these operations also, the artillery of the fortresses will play on the vessels. Then with the mines disregarded the naval ships will demurely sail by the fortifications in broad daylight while again, constructively, they will be hammered by the huge guns of the defense, which will bob up and down in their disappearing carriages to the music of the little one-pounders, which are to make all of the noise. This portion of the exercise is to develop the accuracy of the range finders and the gun trainers. For this fire the channel area is divided into plats, each about the size of a battleship and each with a distinctive number. The range finders are located apart from each other, that a given object on the chart may be considered as one point. When a ship is located in a certain plat its course and speed is observed as it moves to another. Then the gunner is communicated to by telephone to train his gun for a certain plat and fire it at a given second. The big disappearing monster is thus trained and prepared for firing before it is elevated. It is then hoisted at the proper moment, fired, constructively, and lowered into its pit. During this activity on land the guns of the navy are also to be put into active operations and broadside after broadside technically will be hurled at the defenses.

When these exercises have been concluded before one set of defenses the actors will move to another and, should Fortress Monroe be the first point of attack as anticipated, the conclusion of the program there will be followed by the same operations cgaagist the fortresses near Washington and Baltimore.

The operation of the defenses is under the supervision of Gen. James M. Wade, commanding the department of the Atlantic. The men and officers under him for the exercises will number nearly 10,000.

TWO HOMES DAMAGED

Fire, Caused By Defective Flue, Spreads With the Wind.

Fire caused by a defective flue and an overheated pipe, destroyed the frame dwelling occupied by Frank Kruger at 912 East Seventh street last evening, and damaged the home of his brother Joseph, adjoining it, to the extent of $500.

The blaze was first seen issuing from the roof by one of Mr. Kruger's neighbors, and Mr. Kruger and his wife were warned just as they were preparing their infant child for bed.

The flames were carried by the high wind to the adjoining building.

The firemen were delayed in reaching the scene on account of the deep mud in th alley, into which the two steamers sank to the hubs.

Frank Kruger carried insurance to the amount of $500 on the house and $500 on the contents, while his brother had $1,000 on the building and $300 on the contents.

MARKET IS QUIET

Only One Small Lumber Sale Reported at Duluth.

Duluth's New Grade of Lumber Causes Facetious Comments.

A few lumber sales continue in the local market, the last being a lot comprising 500,000 by the Lesure Lumber company. This sale is said to clean the Lesure company out of all its stock except a few odds and ends. The company is not manufacturing this season and may not do so the coming winter. It still retains its mill and holds its timber of which the concern has a large quantity.

Notice of damages to standing timber from forest fires have been frequent in the past two weeks and the timber owners will welcome the recent rains. The loss through this source has been unusually large thus far this season. There is said to have been quite a rush of owners of cut timber piled in the woods to insure it.

The Longyear Lake Lumber company, it is understood, will rebuild the planing mill burned recently. In this fire the company also lost about 15,000 feet of uppers.

The lumber journals of the country are having a little fun over the new grade of lumber that is claimed to be found in the Duluth market.

The American Lumberman of Chicago makes the following remarks:

"Duluth reports the birth of a new grade of white pine lumber. Its Christian name is No. 6. According to the version of a local correspondent the new member is a marvel. The description of the new grade given brings to mind this little gem:

"Pick her up tenderly,
Handle with care.
Go 'bout it gingerly,
So it won't tear.

"It would be interesting were it possible to secure the views of some of the old-time manufacturers, who cut their white pine timber into lumber and sold the product mill run, mill culls out, on the latest addition to white pine grades. The pioneers made lumber and left it to the wholesaler or retailer to make grades. Now the manufacturer not only makes lumber but by getting in close touch with the requirements of consumers he is in a position to make grades well.

"Judging from the unique description of this new quality it is evident that the prophesied day of the four man scoot has arrived. The conveyor is being dubbed of its dead in order to supply material for this additional grade. So long as a market for the community is available and so long as maunfacturers can pick it out and are satisfied to do so all is well.

"Nonsense aside, there is actual economy in this closer utilization of the timber reaching the mills. In the first place, it should be remembered that the bulk of the low grade stock is used for a temporary need—for such as crating, packages and similar purposes. Now if the low grade material that formerly was sent to the burners can fulfill functions of this nature the manipulation of white pine has reached a high development.

"Whenever a new grade comes to be added to the already big list of segregated qualities of white pine lumber it does not represent memerly the best of the refuse which previously had been destroyed but takes in the worst of the previously lowest grade, so that it improves one grade of lumber and opens an avenue for the disposition of part of the material which previously had been wasted.

"No. 6 has arrived and looks as well and hearty as is possible under the circumstances and now some enthusiasts are looking forward to the reappearance of the stork with No. 7."

RUNAWAY RETURNS.

Antoine Prezeskia, the 12-year-old boy who was reported missing on Decoration day, returned to his home Saturday.

Sergeant Fiskett of the police department sent an officer to the house yesterday to see if the boy had returned, and it was stated that he had come home the previous evening.

The boy offered no explanation of his absence, or why he failed to return home after delivering his father's dinner pail, beyond the statement that he had been herding cows.

DEATH CLAIMS WEALTHY MAN

P. L. Kimberly, Prominent Mining Man, Dies at Chicago.

P. L. Kimberly, the multi-millionaire mining man, prominent in mining circles of this country and Canada, died at Chicago yesterday of apoplexy.

Mr. Kimberley's wealth is estimated at about $10,000,000.

For years past he has been interested in many mines throughout the West and was a pioneer in the Lake Superior copper mining regions.

While much of his time was spent in traveling, Mr. Kimberly maintained offices at Chicago, Lake City and San Francisco. His home was in Sharon, Penn., where he was born 59 years ago.

John G. Williams of this city, who has been Mr. Kimberly's attorney for years, received a telegram last evening notifying him of the latter's sudden demise and he left last evening for Chicago with the intention of attending the funeral at Sharon, Pa., tomorrow..

Mr. Kimberly owned a large amount of the stock of the iron mines on the range operated by Jones & McLaughlin.

LIVED IN DULUTH

With Man Named Adolph Gobeil, Say Affidavits.

St. Paul, June 5.—Harvey E. Hall, counsel for the defendant in the action for divorce brought by Bertha H. Rinet against Andrew A. Rinet, brought into the district court Saturday a bundle of affidavits which he read at length before Judge Kelly.

The plaintiff charges desertion, cruelty and adultery, and the defendant comes back with some choice affidavits, in which he alleges that the life of the plaintiff has not been that of a saint. The affidavits are made and signed by Mame P. Little, Thomas H. Little, Anna Beier, Charles Beier and Mrs. Eliza Featherley.

In substance, the affidavits say that a woman bearing a close resemblance to the plaintiff, and whose picture is attached to the papers, lived for several months at Duluth with a man named Adolph Gobeil and that the latter held her out as his wife.

Judge Kelly made an order allowing the plaintiff five days in which to reply to the affidavits.

GAMES TODAY.
Grand Forks at Duluth.
Winnipeg at Fargo.
Crookston at St. Cloud.

In the face of a cheerful northeast zephyr which kept 800 fans stamping their feet to keep warm, the Canucks took the third and deciding game of the series from Duluth yesterday, after a game that was replete with brilliant playing on the part of both teams.

A man named Joseph Sporer was responsible for the trick. He did it with his little left arm, and great is the gladness in Winnipeg today, and the heart of the Winnipeg fan is swelled unto bursting.

Sporer was touched up pretty freely, but he was stingy with his hits when there were men on bases, and by keeping them a safe distance apart prevented them from counting.

Erickson, on the other hand, was hit in bunches. For five innings the big fellow was slinging over balls that looked like half grown peas to the Maroons, and he had the visiting batsmen tearing their arms out trying to hit his cannon ball shoots. The big fellow has only one or two curves, but they break sharply and close up to the plate, and he has speed that fairly makes the ball sizzle. In the first five innings only eighteen men faced him, two being hit by him, and one reaching first on an error.

In the meanwhile Duluth had worked two men across the plate. In the third Si Bennett tore off a beautiful double after Potts had been retired. He went to second on Weiler's scratch single, and scored on a single by Menecie.

Another came in the third when Claytor played the good Samaritan act and allowed McShane to take up his position on first base. Potts was safe on a fielder's choice which caught McShane at second, and then "Si" came up again. He brought the fans to their feet with a other double which landed within ten feet of the spot where the first one fell, and Potts scored from first base.

In the first of the sixth Sporer despaired of having the team behind him win the game, so he started in to do some hitting himself, tearing off a nice two sacker. He went to third on Howell's sacrifice, and scored on a single by Piper.

Artie O'Dea balanced things up in the last half of the inning, however, by banging the sphere over the left field fence for a homer.

"Si" Bennett made a record for himself, by slamming out his third two bagger in the seventh. Once more the ball landed between the right and center fielders, in almost the same spot as the first two, but Si got too anxious and failed to touch the first base, for which the umps called him out, much to Si's disgust.

In the eighth the Maroons started things moving. After Peterson had been caught by Weller, Sporer rapped out his second double, and Howell smashed out a beautiful three-bagger, scoring the pitcher. Then Greene was substituted for Piper, and hit safely into left field, for a single, which brought in Howell and tied the score. Greene was caught on the next ball, trying to steal second, and Tucker went out to Neighbors.

Duluth narrowly missed scoring in the last half of the inning. O'Dea was given his base on balls, and Neighbors was safe on Gatewood's error. Erickson sent a long fly to Greene, which the latter dropped, but Neighbors was caught at second. McAleese sacrificed Erickson to second, and with two men on bases and two out, McShane came to bat. He sent a long fly to center field which Howells nailed, and the chance to score was gone.

In the first of the ninth, with the score tied, Johnson led off with a single, and went to second on Gatewood's sacrifice. Claytor was hit by a pitched ball, and Rogers hit a long fly to Potts on which Johnson went to third. The shortstop scored on McShane's fumble of a difficult grounder by Peterson, and Claytor was caught a moment later by the Duluth third baseman on Sporer's grounder.

Sporer was invincible in the last half of the ninth, striking out Potts and Bennett, and retiring Weiler on a pop-up.

BREAK EVEN.

Crookston and Grand Forks Each Take One.

Crookston, June 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—In a game which was not marred by an error that figured in the scoring, and which developed into a pitchers' battle in which Houck for Grand Forks and Dorn for Crookston were both given the best kind of support, Crookston won a 3 to 1 game yesterday. Both pitchers did splendid work, Houck allowing seven hits and Dorn but four. It was a no-score game up to the sixth inning, when Varcoe got a hit, stole second, reached third on a fielder's choice and scored when Anderson held Olson's arm, preventing a throw to the plate. The interference was not seen by his umps and the score stood. In the last half of the same inning Olson reached first on Caldwell's fumble, stole second and scored on a safe single by Schlatter. The sixth ended the run-getting for the visitors, but in the seventh, to cinch the game, Crokston scored twice more. Ludwig started the fireworks with a two-bagger and Leighty banged the sphere on the nose for three bases, scoring Ludwig. Dorn was there with the stick also and scored Leighty with a safe one. The work of Umpire Long, which has been very bad during this series, showed considerable improvement, and neither side had any roar coming.

This was the last of the series with Grand Forks. Crookston opens Monday with St. Cloud-Brainerd, and Fargo begins a series with Duluth.

Crookston, June 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Grand Forks aggregation administered the kalsomine to the locals Saturday afternoon to the tune of 3 to 0. The game was protested by the Crookston management on the grounds that the umpire would not allow a home run on a ball knocked over the fence, which struck a tree and bounded back. The ball was a foul when it went over the fence, but striking a tree it bounded back in the grounds in fair ball territory. Umpire Long called it a fair ball, but would not allow the Crookston player to take more than one base, prompt fielding stopping the runner at the initial bag. It was the hardest fought game that has been played here this season. The attendance was very small. The score:

THEY SPLIT EVEN.

Fargo and the Twins Each Get One.

St. Cloud, June 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—The St. Cloud-Brainerd and Fargo baseball clubs pulled off a traversty on the national game here yesterday afternoon. The score of 17 to 3 in favor of the Prohibitionists tells the tale. Fargo put two pitchers to the bad and a total of four home runs were batted during the game. The poor work of Umpire Harris was the lamentable feature of the contest.

Things looked well for St. Cloud-Brainerd in the opening, when Ripley, the first man up in the first inning, made a home run over the left field fence. A man hit, a stolen base and a single brought in another tally for the Twins in the second inning. A home run by Catcher Ronesch in the sixth gave the home team their last score—three in all.

With Fargo it was different. After the second inning, the visitors scored at will. A single, a double, a triple and a home run in the third inning netted her four scores. Three singles a double and a home run brought in five more in the fifth. Two were added in the seventh and two in the eighth on a combination of errors, hits and wild throws. In the final round they helped themselves to another quartet of tallies, after which the agony subsided.

Rees for the home team was replaced in the fifth inning by Davidson, but the latter was hit even more freely and in addition was quite wild.

Hanson for Fargo, on the other hand, had things coming his way all the time and but for two home runs the St. Cloud-Brainerd one of the scores would have been worse than a deuce spot.

GAINS ARE SHOWN

By Grain Movements at Atlantic and Gulf Ports.

Exports of Grain During April Show Large Increase.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, June 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—Grain movements at prominent Atlantic and gulf ports during April, as indicated by reports received by the department of commerce and labor through its bureau of statistics, show appreciable gains, if contrasted with like movements for the fourth month of the preceding year, while similar receipts and shipments for the first four months of 1905, although presenting gains for Boston, New York and Baltimore, show losses for the cities of Philadelphia and Galveston. On the Pacific coast total grain receipts were considerably lighter during April than they were during a corresponding month in 1904, the same conditions holding true with regard to a four-month period.

At Boston grain receipts for April reached a total of 2,165,297 bushels, over 1,000,000 bushels in excess of a similar movement in 1904, while shipments which amounted to 1,706,132 bushels were approximately 1,300,000 bushels greater than those of a like month in the preceding year. During the first four months of 1905, receipts of cereals at that port aggregated 8,-221,595 bushels, while the total arrivals for a similar period in 1904 amounted to 5,758,070 bushels. The great increase thus indicated in the 1905 receipts was almost entirely due to heavier corn arrivals, although there was also some increase in the receipts of wheat. Shipments of grain from this city for like periods were 6,111,614 bushels in 1905, and 3,456,093 bushels in 1904.

Grain receipts at New York during the month of April totaled 6,964,339 bushels, of which 6,893,288 bushels represented a rail movement, and 71,051 bushels a river and coast movement. Similar total receipts for the fourth month of the preceding year aggregated 4,681,893 bushels, divided into a rail movement of 4,695,963 bushels, and a river and coast movement of 75,925 bushels.

At Philadelphia receipts of grain during the fourth month of the current year amounted to 1,370,467 bushels as compared with 929,566 bushels for a like month in 1904. Shipments from this port for April were 1,028,565 bushels in 1905 and 557,129 bushels in 1904. During the present year to April 30, 5,118,038 bushels of grain were received at Philadelphia, while for a similar period in 1904 the inbound movement totaled 5,990,939 bushels. Grain shipments at this market were 3,330,588 bushels during the present year to April 30, while a like movement in 1904 amounted to 4,066,378 bushels.

Baltimore's grain receipts during April totaled 2,147,193 bushels, being an amount considerably over 1,000,000 bushels in excess of that representing a similar movement for a corresponding month in 1904. Shipments for the month from this port, which totaled 2,095,607 bushels, were nearly 1,400,000 bushels greater than a like movement in 1904. Arrivals of grain at Baltimore during the first four months of 1905 aggregated 8,412,611 bushels, being 700,000 bushels heavier than similar arrivals in 1904. Total shipments for corresponding periods were 7,299,064 bushels in 1905, and 5,617,079 bushels in 1904. The great increase shown for the current year, both with regard to receipts and shipments for either April or a four-month period, were entirely due to an exceptionally heavy corn movement.

At New Orleans grain receipts for the month of April totaled 1,165,200 bushels, and were approximately 750,000 bushels heavier than a like movement in 1904, btu over 2,000,000 bushels below that for 1903, the decrease as compared with the 1903 figures being caused by heavy shrinkages of receipts of wheat and oats, corn movements for both months being almost identical. Total grain shipments for the month were 1,673,262 bushels in 1905, 715,608 bushels in 1904, and 2,533,228 bushels in 1903. During the first four months of the present year grain arrivals at New Orleans amounted to 18,436,600 bushels, being approximately 12,00,000 bushels heavier than a similar movement in 1904, but only about 700,000 bushels in excess of that for 1903. Corn receipts for the current year, which amounted to 17,-986,800 bushels were over 14,000,000 bushels in excess of similar arrivals in 1904. Shipments for the year to April 30 agregated 16,011,402 bushels, and were composed entirely of corn, with the exception of 31,015 bushels of oats. The total outbound movement of grain for a corresponding period in 1904 amounted to 5,483,535 bushels, while that for 1903 totaled 16,312,139 bushels.

Export withdrawals of grain from the United States for April amounted to 13,847,966 bushels, as compared with 4,769,648 bushels for a corresponding month in 1904. Of the exports for the fourth month of the current year, 8,-522,611 bushels left the country by way of Atlantic ports, 2,454,146 bushels by way of Gulf ports, 595,643 bushels by way of Pacific ports, and 2,275,566 bushels by way of northern border, lake and other principal ports. The outbound foreign movement of grain from the United States during the first four months of the present year totaled 63,-629,069 bushels, as against 33,232,937 bushels in 1904. Of the 1905 movement, Atlantic ports handled 33,145,944 bushels, Gulf ports 21,680,366 bushels, Pacific ports 3,598,731 bushels, and the northern border, lake, and other principal ports 5,204,028 bushels. The Atlantic ports' gain over a similar movement in 1904 was approximately 17000,-000 bushels, while the incerase by way of the Gulf ports by a similar comparison amounted to but about 10,000,-000 bushels.

Of the present year's movement the foreign withdrawals from the Atlantic ports amounted to nearly 52 per cent of the total grain exports of the country, while in 1904 the movement by way of these ports did not equal 50 per cent of a similar total. Of the 63,629,069 bushels of grain exported from the United States during the first four months of 1905, 57,357,362 bushels were corn, the great increase in the outbound movement of this cereal, which was over 34,009,000 bushels heavier than a correspondingmovement in 1904, being almost entirely accountable for the increases shown in the total grain exports.

The total supply of cotton brought into sight during the first eight months of the current season amounted to 11,534,448 bales, as compared with 9,493,825 bales for similar months in 1903-4, and 10,018,123 bales for similar months in 1902-3. The receipts for April of the present year, which amounted to 902,212 bales, were over 100,000 bales below the arrivals for March, but nearly 300,000 bales greater than those for February. The greatest amount of cotton brought into sight for any one month of the present season occurred in October, when 2,399,328 bales were received. Cotton receipts at the various ports during the season to April 30 amounted to 8,555,753 bales, a gain of nearly 1,700,000 bales if compared with similar arivals in 1904, and over a million bales heavier than those for 1903. For the past eight months the net overland movement amounted to 932,643 bales, and although this was somewhat in excess of a similar movement in 1903-4, it fell over 73,000 bales below that for 1902-3.

During the current season the northern mills have taken 1,922,531 bales, while those in the South have received 1,669,688 bales, the northern mills' takings showing a slight loss and those of Southern mills a small gain, if compared with similar receipts for previous years. Of the total export movement for eight months, amounting to 6,962,554 bales, 3,215,485 bales were destined to Great Britain, 695,612 bales to France and 3051457 bales to Europe and other foreign countries. The total export movement for a similar period in 1904 aggregated 5,534,719 bales, and in 1903, 6,208,025 bales.

Total shipments of anthracite coal during the month of April amounted to 5,278,041 tons, as compared with 5,407,-786 tons for t coresponding month in 1904, 5,044,998 tons in 1903, and 4,924,820 tons in 1902. For a four-month period similar movements were 18,867,787 tons in 1905, 18,243,333 tons in 1904, 21,292096 tons in 1903 and 17,022,988 tons in 1902.

The run of petroleum from wells in pipe line producing territory during April totaled 3673,430.60 barrels, as against 3,816,159.79 barrels for a corresponding period in 1904. Similar totals for the first four months of the year were 14,777,773.10 barrels in 1905 and 14,493,140.94 barrels in 1904. Other petroleum receipts for April were 3,-951,592.92 barrels in 1905, as compared with 3,107,934.30 barrels in 1904, while similar receipts for four months were 12,129,844.19 barrels in 1905 and 12,038,-115.71 barrels in 1904.

Y. M. C. A. WITH THE JAP ARMY

Association Needs $10,000 to Send Tents and Secretaries.

New York, June 5.—The Y. M. C. A. branch in Japan is embarrassed by the confidence given it by the Japanese government. The emperor gave the association full permission to go to the troops with its tents and ministrations and $5,000, and the Buddhist priests are now debarred from the army. The generals have telegraphed for more tents and secretaries. There are men ready to go, but the organization needs $10,-000 immediately to send and equip them. The government furnishes transportation.

The Y. M. C. A. is the organization for the Christian churches in Japan as in America. An Episcopal church has sent its rector with the association to the front in Manchuria. In eighteen days one of the secretaries gave personal help and cheer to 31,000 soldiers, most of whom were wounded men.

The 700,000 soldiers will be in camps for the year at least, whether peace is declared or not. The Japanese soldiers are immensely appreciative of the comforts and cheer the American Y. M. C. A. men are giving them and will carry with them in their homes in every country town in the province of Japan the favorable impression of American Christians.

The government has requested the associaion to do religious work for sailors at Port Arthur. Americans may through the association have opportunity of showing sympathy for suffering Japanese soldiers a least. Ten thousand dollars are immediately required. Money may be sent to F. B. Schenck, treasurer, international committee, Y. M. C. A., 3 West Twenty-ninth street, New York city. Churches and Sunday schools are asked to take collections for this purpose.

BONAPARTE WILL BE SUED

Government Wants Property of New Secretary of Navy.

Washington, June 5.—Charles Joseph Bonaparte, who has been selected as successor to Secretary of the Navy Morton, will be a defendant in a suit instituted by the treasury department to gain possession of a piece of land adjacent to the new custom house at Baltimore. The treasury department and Mr. Bonaparte could not agree on the price to be paid for the land and the government has decided that it will have the mater settled in court.

The incoming secretary of the navy is part owner and manager of the land in question known as the "Peabody property.' When asked to put a value on it, Mr. Bonaparte fixed the price he was willing to sell to the government at $50,000. This was considered excessive, the treasury officials offering to pay $32,000. Mr. Bonaparte shaded his price to $47,000, and in the negotiations which followed considerable ill-feeling is said to have developed, and the entire matter was called off by the manager of the property.

As the land is needed in connection with the improvements contemplated by the custom house, it was decided to bring a condemnation suit. The prospective litigation has been the subject of much gossip in the capital. The fact that Mr. Morton is involved in the expected prosecution of the Santa Fe rebate case is being cited as a striking coincidence of the unfortunate complications the government has got into with the secretaries of the navy. Another property adjoining the Peabody tract was valued at a higher figure than that controlled by Mr. Bonaparte and purchase. by the treasury officials for $35,000. This will be used as a precedent in the suit to be bought for condemning the Peabody tract.

RIOTING NEAR CZAR'S PALACE

Demonstration at Pavlovsk Gardens Brings on Attack By Soldiers.

St. Petersburg, June 5.—At a great demonstration last evening in the Pavlovsk gardens near Tsarskoe Selo, the 5,000 persons present clamored for a funeral march in memory of the Russian sailors who had lost their lives in the naval battle in the Sea of Japan. The members of the orchestra became alarmed and fled from the platform when M. Novikoff, former mayor of Baku, rose and said:

"Let us all, by rising, show respect for the victims. Down with the war. We have had enough of blood."

Some eighty policemen entered from either side of the hall and elbowed their way through the crowds toward M. Novikoff, whereupon cries were raised of "Let us attack the police." Chairs were seized and hurled at the police, the crowd being led by a colonel with a drawn sword. The policemen fled precipitately. Order being restored a number of speeches were delivered on the national crisis.

Suddenly the police reinforced to between 200 and 300, again invaded the hall and rushed on the audience with drawn swords. The people defended themselves with chairs and sticks, but after ten minutes were driven from the hall into the garden, where there was a battalion of soldiers, who raised their rifles to their shoulders preliminary to the order to fire being given, causing a panic. The public fled toward the exits and finding them closed smashed the doors and windows of the hall and so gained the street. Many persons were injured, some so seriously that they had to be taken to a hospital. Novikoff was arrested and the gardens were occupied by police and Cossacks. A strong military force was placed on the road leading from Pavlovsk to Tsaarskoe Selo and St. Petersburg and at the railway station. People returning to St. Petersburg from the gardens gave accounts of the affair, which soon became a general topic.

Pavlovsk is fifteen miles from St. Petersburg and a summer resort for inhabitants of the capital. Concerts are given in the gardens daily and are frequented by fashionable and bourgeois audiences, largely composed of people from St. Petersburg.

LEAVES PARIS FOR LONDON

King Alfonso Finishes His Visit to President Loubet.

Paris, June 5.—The last day of King Alfonso's sojourn in Paris comprised an ample program, including a service at the Spanish church, a visit to the museum of the Louvre and the witnessing of the grand steeplechase at Auteil where 125,000 persons were present. Besides the gerat sporting event, the visit of the king and President Loubet attracted a brilliant company of society leaders and most of the ministers and members of the diplomatic corps, including Ambassador and Mrs. McCormick, who awaited the arrival of the king and president in the enclosure where an ovation was accorded them. The race proved an easy victory for M. Rusdock's Canard, with Jockey Woodland up. Seven of the thirteen starters fell.

The day's ceremonies concluded with a dinner given by Foreign Minister Delcasse to his majesty at the Palace D'Orsay. President Loubet, the members of the cabinet and the diplomatic corps, the president of the chamber of deputies and the president of the senate were present.

King Alfonso left $5,000 for the poor of Paris.

MILWAUKEE EXPOSITION

Building Was Destroyed By Fire on Sunday Evening.

Milwaukee, June 5.—The Milwaukee exposition building, occupying a city block, was totally destroyed by fire last evening. The loss is $300,000; insured for $75,000. The building was located on the west side of the city in the block bounded by Fifth and Sixth streets running east and west.

The fire is supposed to have been started from an electric light wire. The blaze broke out in the northwest portion of the gallery just at the time the National Skat congress completed its afternoon session. At the time the fire broke out there were over 1,500 people in the building, but all got out safely. A curtain was discovered to be burning and firemen attempted to quench the flames by use of a chemical but without avail. The interior had been decorated with thousands of yards of flimsy drapery and in a twinkling the flames spread throughout the entire interior.

Stretched across the top of the inside of the structure was a heavy canvass and scarcely had the assembled Skat players got out of the building when the canvass fell with a crash. A general alarm was turned in but it was impossible to check the fire and the building was entirely gutted, leaving nothing standing but the four walls. Many buildings situated to the south of the big structure were threatened and in some cases were slightly damaged.

The exposition building was built about twenty-six years ago and had been used for many years for holding the annual industrial exposition. Aside from this the building had been put to various uses. When Prince Henry of Prussia visited Milwaukee, he was given a public reception within its walls. Many national gatherings have been cared for in the exposition building, it being able to accommodate a larger crowd than any other structure in the city. Among the national gatherings housed in this building were the National Saengerfest, the Northwestern Saengerfest, American Bowling congress, the National Skat congress and many big concerts.

MUCH DAMAGE BY LIGHTING

Several Churches Struck and Many People Panic Stricken.

Chicago, June 5.—During a thunderstorm here yesterday, three churches were struck by lightning and two of them completely destroyed. The storm was the worst of the season and besides the churches several other buildings were struck and damaged. The total loss occasioned by the lightning is estimated at $200,000.

The two churches destroyed were Unity church in Oak Park and Sacramento Avenue Methodist Episcopal church, Sacramento avenue and Adams street. North Englewood Congregational church, Fifty-ninth and La Salle streets, was also struck, but the fire which followed was extinguished before it could gain any headway.

At the time the storm passed over the city, the churches were empty and no loss of life occurred.

Bloomer, Wis., June 5.—A terrific electric storm raged here for two hours, accompanied by a downpour of rain and hail, which badly damaged bridges and railroads. All traffic on this branch of the Omaha is suspended. Crops are badly damaged by rain and hail. Several houses were struck by lightning and some stock killed. The citizens labored all night to save the dam across Duncan creek here. If this went out it would have endangered life and property in Chippewa Falls. It was saved, but the grist mill was badly damaged.

Chippewa Falls, Wis., June 5.—Lightning and rain played havoc with property here yesterday. During morning services at the German Lutheran church, the structure was hit by a bolt of lightning, which tore off part of the roof, and created a panic among the worshippers, many women fainting. The heavy downpour of rain caused a flood in Duncan creek, and the dam at Bloomer has gone out and others are expected to go at any moment. In this city and vicinity barns were blown down, houses unrooted and trees uprooted. A Wisconsin Central passenger train ran into a landslide, derailing the engine and mail coach, but injuring no one.

Abbottsford, Wis., June 5.—A terrific hail and wind storm passed over this section Sunday night. Fruit and gardens were destroyed and many barns and dwellings were blown down. About half of the village of Curtiss, six miles west of here, was wrecked by the wind.

Janesville, Wis., June 5.—Fifty thousand dollars damage was done in the city and county yesterday by a severe wind, rain and hail storm which approached a cloudburst. Reports from the country are that whole fields of beets and tobacco are ruined and corn is badly damaged.

DAY SET FOR OREGON POET

Joaquin Miller to Be Honored at the Portland Fair.

Portland, Or., June 5.—Saturday, July 15, has been selected for Joaquin Miller day at the Lewis and Clark exposition, though, Mr. Miller, himself, in a letter to the Department of Special Events insists that it be called "Poets' Day" and that all the poets be invited. Invitations will be sent to all poets of recognized worth, particularly those in the West. In his letter the veteran poet of the Sierras says: "I have tried on the halo which you have fashioned for me, and it doesn't fit. I am not entitled to first place, except by right of antiquity. There are many poets—most of them poets of promise as yet—but let us get them all together; it will help all around and harm no one." Mr. Miller has promised to be present without fail.

The 15th of July will be the culmination of "Western Authors' Week," during which a notable gathering of Western writers in various lines is expected at the exposition. One of those especially invited is Edwin Markham, who was born at Oregon City, only 12 miles from the exposition site. Mr. Markham now resides at Westerleigh, Long Island, N. Y. The West has many writers—poets, novelists, short story writers, historians and authors of notable books in various fields of literature—and now for the first time is offered an opportunity for them to meet and become acquainted.

No exposition ever has given such recognition to the makers of literature. Commenting upon the designation of a day for Joaquin Miller, the San Francisco Call, says editorially:

"The officers of the Lewis and Clark exposition at Portland have struck out something original by dedicating one day of the expecsition to Joaqin Miller. He gave the state of Oregon its sobriquet, 'The Emerald Land,' from which it has come to be known as 'The Emerald State,' and his fame is closely connected with Oregon, where his career began. He is a native of Indiana, and was taken to Oregon by his parents when a child, over the old Oregon trail, on which so many traveled and so many perished. The honor proposed for him is also a conspicuous recognition of literature. Joaquin Miller is part of the pioneer history of Oregon, and he is a citizen of the Republic of Letters. The state sets the pace for its elders in the treatment of literary genius, and the effect upon other commonwealths will be watched with interest."

Joaquin Miller now lives in a home he had builded on "The Heights," at Dimond, Cal., the identical point where John C. Fremont, the Pathfinder, first gazed upon the glorious Golden Gate. His first home in Oregon was near the town of Eugene, in the Willamette Valley, where one of his brothers still resides. Later Joaquin Miller lived at Canyon City, in Eastern Oregon, where he was a pioneer county judge. His poems breathe the aroma of the vast fir forests of Oregon, and glow with the gleam of the snow-clad peaks in that state and California. By general acclaim he is the dean of Western poets, and undoubtedly he has achieved a wider fame than any living writer on the Pacific coast.

MINNESOTA EXTOLLED

As the State of "Great Opportunities."

St. Paul, June 5.—State Auditor S. G. Iverson, as superintendent of the state imigration bureau, has issued a pamphlet extolling Minnesota as the state of "great opportunities." Mr. Iverson says that Minnesota is one of the most healthful states in the Union, that it has the largest school fund, with the exception of Texas, and that its iron mines are the basis of the billion dollar steel trust.

On the mineral resources the pamphlet says:

"The managers of the steel trust defend its colossal captialization, not by its earning power, not by the plants it owns, not by its patents and foreign and home trade, but by the statement that it owns over a billion tons of iron ore, chiefly in Minnesota that is worth a dollar a ton in the ground and that the ore reserves alone are worth the entire capitalization of the corporation."

"The shipping interests of Duluth rival those of New York in tonnage," adds the pamphlet.

OLD SORES OFFENSIVE-DANGEROUS

Nothing is more offensive than an old sore that refuses to heal. Patiently, day after day, it is treated and nursed, every salve, powder, etc., that is heard of is tried, but does no good, until the very sight of it grows offensive to the sufferer and he becomes disgusted and morbid. They are not only offensive, but dangerous, because the same germ that produces cancerous ulcers is back of every old sore. The cause is in the blood and as long as it remains the sore will be there and continue to grow worse and more destructive. The fact that thousands of old sores have been cut out and even the bones scraped, and yet they returned, is indisputable evidence that the blood is diseased and responsible for the sore or ulcer.

Some years ago my blood became poisoned, and the doctor told me I would have running sores for life, and that if they were closed up the result would be fatal. Under this discouraging report I left off their treatment and resorted to the use of S. S. S. Its effects were prompt and gratifying. It took only a short while for the medicine to entirely cure up the sores, and I am not dead as the doctors intimated I would be, neither have the sores ever broken out again. JOHN W. FUNDIS. Wheeling, W. Va., May 28, 1903.

Valuable time is lost in experimenting with external treatments, such as salves, powders, washes, etc., because the germs and poisons in the blood must be removed before a cure can be effected. S. S. S. cleanses and purifies the circulation so that it carries rich, new blood to the parts and the sore or ulcer heals permanently. S. S. S. not only removes the germs and poisons, but strengthens the blood and builds up the entire system by stimulating the organs, increasing the appetite and giving energy to the weak, wasted constitution. It is an exhilarating tonic, aids the digestion and puts every part of the body in good healtay condition. Book on the blood, with any medical advice wished, without charge.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Bearish Statistics Causes a Weakness In Wheat.

Chicago, June 5.—Bearish statistics, both foreign and domestic, caused weakness in the wheat market here today. In the foreign situation exceptionally liberal shipments from Russia formed the principal source of weakness. Generally favorable weather was the chief factor. Selling was general. July opened 1⅛@1⅛c to ⅝c lower at 87⅝@88c to 88½c and sold off to 87⅜@1½c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 322 cars against 521 cars last week and 342 cars a year ago.

The market was under general pressure the entire day and weakness became more pronounced as trading progressed. Reports showing harvesting had begun in Oklahoma and Southern Kansas were late factors. For July the lowest point of the day was reached at 87c. The market closed weak with July off 1@1⅛c at 87¼c.

Ideal weather conditions had a weakening effect on corn. Lower prices at Liverpool gave bears an additional reason for selling. July opened ¼c lower at 45⅝@⅝c and for a time held around 46½c. Local receipts were 240 cars, with 55 of contract grade.

Later sentiment became quite bullish on covering by influential shorts. After touching 46¼c, July sold up to 50¼c. The market closed strong, with July up ¼c at 49¾c.

A steady tone prevailed in the oats market notwithstanding the weakness of other grain. Commission houses were fair buyers. July opened a shade to ⅛c lower at 30½c to 30½@⅝c, sold up to 30¾c, and then eased off to 30⅝c. Local receipts were 125 cars.

Provisions were firm as a result of higher prices for hogs. Packers were moderate purchasers of ribs. September pork was up 7½c to 12½c at $12.95@13.00. Lard was up 2½@5c at $7.15. Ribs were 5c higher at $7.57½@7.60.

NEW YORK GRAIN.

New York, June 5.—Close: wheat—July, 92¼c; Sept., 85⅝c; Dec., 85¼c. Corn—July, 55⅛c.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Edwards, Wood & Co.: Wheat—Early prices were lower on good receipts; lower cables and prevailing weather conditions that were entirely satisfactory and fitting each section as though made to order. Northwest receipts 250, only 14 less than a year ago, 3 cars at Chicago and fair receipts in the Southwest. Wheat on passage increased 776,000 bus and world's shipments of 12,648,000 bus are 2,500,000 bus more than a year ago, and 3,000,000 bus more than last week. Liverpool closed ¼@¾d lower, Antwerp ⅝c lower, Berlin and Budapest ⅛c lower. Local stocks at Minneapolis decreased 100,000 bus for two days. The receipts of 424,000 bus at primary markets compared favorably with a year ago. Shipments 627,000 bus against 862,000 bus. The visible supply shows a decrease of 1,662,000 bus compared with a decrease a year ago of 372,000 bus. Everything points to even an earlier harvest than expected, and the cutting of wheat has been started in Tennessee. Indian territory and Oklahoma a downward tendency ruled throughout the session closing, prices for July ⅛c higher and for September ⅛c lower than Saturday's. We expect a slow scalping market and would favor sales of September on the bulges.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—Improved weather conditions, lower cables and large world's shipments contributed to an easier feeling in wheat and as the day progressed crop reports of a very favorable character added to the desire of longs to at least lighten their loads. Southwestern markets were under pressure, but there seemed to be no abatement in the bullish enthusiasm in Northwestern markets. What really deters extended short selling and bear pressure on present brilliant crop prospects is the small stocks and good cash demand. July easily becomes congested on very little selling. It will be hard to bull wheat under present excellent conditions, but on the other hand the statistical position for a time, or until crop gets further along, will deter any extensive bear pressure. Conditions seem to warrant the belief of a good trading market.

Corn—Trade was not at all broad and conditions as we view them seem unchanged from a speculative standpoint. 200,000 cash reported sold in this market with the demand reported good. Sentiment is almost wholly bullish. On bulges we still favor selling the new kind.

Oats—There has been a great amount of spreads uncovered by cash people and buying of July and selling of the distant months due to the cash demand. On bulges we would sell the deferred futures.

ADVANCE IN STOCKS

The Market Ruled Strong All Through the Session.

Pools In Special Stocks Active In Their Specialties.

New York, June 5.—Prices in the stock market generally opened the week higher than on Saturday and the gains were wide in some of the speculative favorites. St. Paul rose 1⅝, Union Pacific, Reading and Sugar about a point and Copper, United States Steel preferred, Brooklyn Transit, Smelting and O. & W. a large fraction. There was a gain of 1⅜ in Chicago & Alton.

Large purchasing orders made their appearance after the opening dealings. Reading, Union Pacific, United States Steel preferred and Copper were the chief centers of the activity and their strength stimulated the entire market. Erie second preferred rose 2⅝. Cleveland, C. C. & St. Louis 1⅜ and Atchison, Canadian Pacific, Atlantic Coast Line, O. & W., B. & O., C. & O., United States Steel preferred, Copper, Smelting and Locomotive 1 to 1¼. Realizing wiped out a good part of these gains before 11 o'clock and Copper fell to a fraction under Saturday, after the publication of its financial report.

The realizing in Copper carried it a point under Saturday. Strength in the market was revived by the two-point rise in United States Steel preferred. Norfolk & Western rose 1½. New York Central and Republic Steel preferred 1¼ and Southern Pacific, and Tennessee Coal 1. These advances were not fully held and intense dullness was the feature at noon. Bonds were irregular.

Slowly hardening prices in the general market was the outgrowth of the confident absorption of Ontario & Western which rose 2⅝ to 52 on large dealings. Reading and some of the other low-priced coal stocks were more generally taken, but business in principal stocks was almost nominal.

Spasmodic buying movements in several leading stocks were succeeded by prolonged periods of dullness and slightly sagging prices. Copper, United States Steel preferred and Ontario & Western were each in turn features of the afternoon. Northwestern advanced 2 points.

Pressure was renewed on Copper and it was sold down to 51⅛ carrying some other market leaders to the low level for the day. Ontario & Western, Reading, Norfolk & Western, St. Paul, Union Pacific, United States Steel, preferred, Brooklyn Transit and Sugar reacted 1 to 1⅜. The close was dull and heavy.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: Market closed strong and somewhat higher. The market all through the session ruled strong. Pools in special stocks were active in their specialties. The feeling is generally held that the short interest is large, particularly in Steel. Pittsburg and Philadelphia have very bearish in their views regarding this stock and the short interest in those centers is estimated as quite heavy. It is still a trading market of moderate proportions.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Walker Bros. say: The market today at opening was quite strong and active. Amalgamated Copper was the feature and was bid up very easily. The strength did not last very long and in the afternoon there was quite a lot of profit taking. The early gains were lost. We rather expect to see the market become very dull before long and less interest taken in it.

The value of the company's holdings of securities and investments is placed at $154,280,303.

Another item of assets is a loan of $7,350,000 to the Washoe Copper company. Accounts payable amount to $21,070 and dividends payable May 29 aggregate $1,538,879. The statement contains the following:

At the present time the status of the company and the position of the metal market are more satisfactory than a any time since the early part of 1901. Exclusive of the copper mines, the reduction works, sawmills, railways, real estate, buildings, copper and cash exceed, in the opinion of experts in whom the officers have entire confidence, $50,000,000 over all liabilities of the company.

H. H. Rogers, Jr., has been elected a director in the Amalgamated Copper company to succeed F. P. Olcott, resigned. The other directors were re-elected.

OUR FISH MISNAMED.

Frist Comers Knew Only But Cod, Bass and Trout.

New York Sun: The fishes of the United States are oddly misnamed, according to Dr. Theodore Gill, co-operative worker with the bureau of fisheries. Dr. Gill says:

"The known fishes of England are few, and the early colonists knew few even of them. The newcomers were astounded at the abundance of the fishes about their new home. To these numerous fishes they transferred names of English species with which they were more or less familiar. On account of the greater number of species common to the two countries, those who came from old England to New England were not very far astray, but as they or their successors wandered farther and farther they made many mistakes. A few examples will illustrate:

"Among the most common of the English fishes are the cod, perch, bass and trout. The immigrants to Massachusetts applied these names to fishes of the same genera as the originals, but mostly of different species. Perch has been used in this country as a name for very different sorts of fishes. In England the name is specifically applied to a well known fresh water fish. The immigrants to New England found a fish almost undistinguishable from it and gave it the same name. Others gave it to fishes having no real resemblance. The so-called white perch of the Atlantic coast is, in reality a bass. The silver perch, the gray perch, the white perch of the Ohio river, the red perch and the blue perch are all misnamed.

"Bass is applied to many different species—a score or more, in England it is the proper name of a marine fish common only along the Southern coast. A related species, though of a different genus, was found by the new settlers of Massachusetts and New York and quite properly called bass or striped bass. There are, by the way, several other species in this country entitled to the name, but which, oddly enough, have been given the names of other fishes. For instance, the white perch. All others are quite remote from the true bass—even the so-called black basses.

"Trout is another of the English names variously misapplied. In the old country it is given to a single species generally distributed through the island in clear, cold streams. The Pilgrims found in similar streams in Massachusetts a fish somewhat like it, and called by the same name, although if Izaak Walton had been among them he might have told them it was not a trout, but a char. Others found in Maine landlocked salmon, and in various large lakes another kind, sized salmonid, and applied to them also the name of trout. Settlers in troutless Southern states, bound to give the name to some fish, gave it to the kind generally known as black bass. Along the Southern coast, too, the same trout, or sea trout, was given to entirely different kinds of fishes. When the Americans reached the California coast they found certain fishes of a peculiar family, not at all like trout in shape or fins, but spotted, and these they also called trout. Still another fish, found in the Gila river, a slender, large mouthed cyprinid, was called trout by early explorers and still bears that name.

"But this is not all, or the worst. These odd names are not only widely scattred, they accumulate. Cod and trout are given to the same fish along the Pacific coast. Another fish is called rock cod about Puget Sound, and rock trout and sea trout at San Francisco."

WOULD LICK 'EM AGAIN.

The following letter appeared in the Richmond (Va.) Times-Dispatch: "Sir—In your editorial columns of yesterday you used the expression: 'Robert E. Lee was licked.' If that is alluding to Robert E. Lee when he was in command of the Southern army, Robert E. Lee was not 'licked,' and you should be ashamed to use the expression or allow such to appear in your paper. Robert E. Lee surrendered to superior forces his own worn-out-by-starvation army, but neither he nor they were licked. OLD REB."

Whereupon the editor says: God bless your soul, Old Reb; we beg pardon, and take it all back. And that reminds us: When the war was over one of Mars Bob's men went back to his humble home. His wife, who had had a struggle even harder than his, met him at the door and gave him a kiss of welcome. He told her the news—that the war was at last over, and that he had come home for good.

"Have you all really quit fighting the Yankees?" asked Molly.

"Yes," said John, "we've let up on 'em. But, blame their hides, if they don't behave we'll lick 'em again."

DIDN'T RECOGNIZE HIM.

Judge Tucker of the Boston criminal court is a man of most unpretentious appearance, says the Kansas City Journal. Generally he wears a decided bucolic look. One day recently he was walking along a Boston street carrying a shabby cotton umbrella and looking for all the world like a countryman, when a bunco steerer stepped up to him and claimed acquaintance. "I don't seem to remember you," said the judge. Upon being urged to refresh his memory, the judge, seeing through the little game, calmly said: "Well, my friend, I have sent so many of you boys to jail, I can't remember you all, you know."

MISHAPS TO BOATS

Launch Parties Have Accidents Up St. Louis River.

Several Spend Night There—Other Boats Abandoned.

Mishaps to launches were many and varied on the river yesterday. Quite a number of launch parties had to spend last night at various points up the St. Louis and got in this morning shivering and bedraggled as to appearance. The storm of yesterday afternoon and evening caused most of the tie-ups that launches suffered and oaths both loud and deep were cast upon the waters.

The Bon Ami club, consisting of over thirty persons went up the river yesterday and had a good time until the return trip. The launch grounded quite a piece up and in trying to get off, lost her wheel. Several of them had to go ashore for assistance and the launch got off during the small hours of the morning.

A party of boys from Superior took a ferry boat up the river and in trying to get into the mouth of the stream near New Duluth ran into a marsh and were grounded. The wind kept blowing them in worse than ever and they spent the night there. A great many similar mishaps befell smaller parties, some of them having to abandon their launches at New Duluth and walk in to West Duluth and catch cars for home.

SCORES AT SHOOT.

There were six events at the shoot of the West Duluth Rod and Gun club yesterday and out of the six Frank Jackson carried off the honors in four, each event he was in. There were one 10-bird four 15-bird, and one 25-bird shoots. The results follow:

10-bird shoot—Moerke, 7; Schroeder, 6; Olson, 5; Bishop, 2; Murphy, 2.

15-bird shoot—Jackson, 13; Murphy, 12; Schroeder, 10; Olsen, 10.

15-bird shoot—Jackson, 11; Schroeder, 10; Murphy, 8; Bloomstrand, 6; Bishop, 2.

15-bird shoot—Jackson, 12; Schroeder, 11; Bloomstrand, 9; Murphy, 7; Bishop, 3.

15-bird shoot—Moseman, 11; Murphy, 9; Schroeder, 7; Hansen, 3; Bishop, 1.

25-bird shoot—Jackson, 19; Olsen, 17; Schroeder, 16; Moerke, 15; Bishop 5.

THE MICHIGAN LEGISLATURE

Is Closing With Only One Important Battle Pending.

Lansing, Mich., June 5.—The Michigan legislature has finally decided to adjourn next Wednesday, June 7, at midnight, the final adjournment to be one week later. The primary election bill has been passed and signed, the appropriation bills are practically out of the way, and there is only one more battle of consequence to be fought.

The fight over the tax commission and the bill to tax sleeping car companies has yet to be fought to a finish. Governor Warner is exerting his influence to secure the passage of a bill to decrease the number of tax commissioners from five to three, and the Lovell bill, embodying the governor's ideas, has already passed the house. Railroad influence seeks to attach to it a provision giving the tax commission power to equalize assessments as between the railroads and other property of the state.

Friends of the present tax commissioners are laboring to secure a provision continuing the commission as at present constituted until September, 1906, but Governor Warner desires the change to be made this year. It is a question whether the governor or the railroad lobby will triumph.

Nearly all classes of property in the state have in the past few years been brought under the ad valorem system of taxation, sleeping cars being a notable exception. The success of the Pullman company in obtaining immunity from taxation in Michigan is one of the remarkable features of the tax laws. Bills have been introduced at nearly every session for the past fifteen years, but such bills have always been found dead at the close of the legislature. It is now so late in the session that the bills pending before the legislature on this subject are likely to take the same course.

Last year the sleeping car companies paid a tax of something less than $25 for the privilege of doing business in this state. The proposition this year is to tax them on the same basis as fast freight companies are taxed, which would increase their taxes about 1,000 per cent.

RADIUM IN COLORADO

Why Springs Are Credited With Life-Giving Properties.

Hotchkiss, Colo., June 5.—The learned professors at the Colorado School of Mines have just discovered why the mineral springs of the state have been credited with life-giving properties for so many years. Investigations made by Prof. Wolcott have developed the fact that the waters of one of the springs at Manitou, and of another at Glenwood Springs, contain radio-active properties even greater than are found in the water at Hot Springs, Ark., whose radium features have been exploited throughout the country.

At Hochkiss, too, a spring has been found which is not only impregnated with radium, but which is surrounded by an actual deposit of the strange mineral itself, in the shape of barium sulphate. During centuries of constant trickling through the rocks a mineral deposit eighteen feet in thickness has been created, and a recent examination of this deposit shows that it contains more than 50 per cent of barium and other radium salts.

As a result of the discovery, enterprising Chicago men have stepped in, purchased the local springs, and will erect a sanitarium here, wherein the shekels of the multitude may be exchanged for nature's wonders with general profit for all concerned.

The Hotchkiss springs themselves, aside from their medicinal qualities, are phenomenal. Within a distance of 200 feet are found seven distinct mineral waters. Soda, sulphur, alum and iron apparently issue from the same rock. One spring rises and falls, geyser like, every twenty-four hours, and is so highly saturated with magnesia that its waters effervesce like soda water released from a drug store tank.

Prof. Wolcott, in making his report on the radio-active quality of the springs, classes them as "the most remarkable group which it has been the privilege of any chemist to make known to the public."

HIGHER TITLE.

J. B. Dixon Made Chief Engineer of B. & O.

The maintenance of way department of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad has reorganized and J. B. Dickson given the higher title of chief engineer in charge, with headquarters at Baltimore. The territory of the Baltimore & Ohio system has been divided into three sections for the work of this department and three new positions of engineer of maintenance of way created. Formerly Mr. Dickson was engineer of maintenance of way on the Baltimore & Ohio system.

H. E. Hale has been appointed engineer of maintenance of way of the main line system with headquarters at Baltimore; H. H. Temple, engineer of the Pittsburg system, with headquarters at Pittsburg; and J. A. Spielman, engineer of the Wheeling system, with headquarters at Wheeling, W. Va.

Mr. Hale was division engineer at Baltimore, Mr. Temple division engineer at Pittsburg and Mr. Spielmann was formerly superintendent of the Chicago division. V. K. Hendricks has been appointed division engineer succeeding Mr. Hale and L. P. Rossiter succeeds Mr. Temple as division engineer at Pittsburg. Mr. Rossiter was assistant engineer of the Shenandoah division, with headquarters at Winchester, Va., and in that position he is succeeded by F. J. Batchelder. Mr. Hendricks was previously assistant to the engineer of maintenance of way.

The division engineers will report to the assistant engineers, who in turn will report to the chief engineer. The department is under the jurisdiction of G. L. Potter, third vice president in charge of operation. The maintenance of way department is now in charge of ably educated expert engineers, who will be able to keep up the efficiency to a high standard.

Mr. Dickson has been in railroad service for some time, starting with the Cleveland & Pittsburg railroad and from there he went to the Chicago & Northwestern, and in January, 1902, he came to the Baltimore & Ohio as assistant engineer of maintenance of way.

RUSSIAN VESSELS

Overhauling and Searching Merchantmen Near Hongkong.

Hongkong, June 5.—Vessels of the Russian volunteer fleet are overhauling merchantmen in the waters northeast of this port, according to a report made by the British steamer Ping Suey, which arrived today. The commander of the Ping Suey says he saw four steamers overhauled fifty miles from here by two volunteer fleet steamers.

HONOR ROJESTVENSKY.

Admiral Togo Calls and Yamamoto Sends Flowers.

Tokio, June 5.—Vice Admiral Togo visited Vice Amiral Rojestvensky at the naval hospital at Sasebo Saturday and expressed his sympathy for the admiral's wounds. He praised the desperately courageous fight of the Russians, expressing the hope that Vice Admiral Rojestvensky would soon be able to return to Russia.

Vice Admiral Rojestvensky was deeply moved by the admiral's words and thanked him. He congratulated Japan on the courage and patriotism of her sailors and said it lessened his regret and the sorrow of defeat to know the high character of the victors.

Admiral Yamamoto, minister of the navy, has dispatched flowers for the room of Rear Admiral Rojestvensky. Accompanying the flowers was a letter to the wounded Russian officer saying: "I beg to express my respect for you in discharging your duty like a soldires in fighting desperately for the sake of your fatherland. I cannot refrain from sympathizing with you in your wounded condition and hope the the accommodations of your hospital and ability of our naval surgeons will ease your suffering and speedily restore your health."

Admiral Yamamoto also sent a general letter to the wounded Russian officers and men expressing the hope that their suffering would soon be ended and that they would speedily recover.

BLEW UP GROMSKI

After Nearly All the Crew Had Been Killed.

London, June 5.—The following are extracts from dispatches to the Daily Telegraph sent from various points in Japan relating to the naval battle:

The commander of a Japanese torpedo boat says that the heavy seas dashed brine in the eyes of his crew almost blinding them. This continued for twelve hours and many of his men had their faces skinned. Some were brine soaked, while others were bespattered with the warm blood of their wounded comrades. It is said that on the Russian ships men fell down, not on account of their wounds, but became unconscious from exhaustion. An engineer officer of the Russian destroyer Gromski, describing the fight says: "A Whitehead torpedo struck us right astern. Twenty-one officers and men, including our captain, were killed instantly. Twenty-three others were shot overboard. The remaining twenty-five exploded a charge in the destroyer and sank her. Then we plunged into the sea, expecting to be finished by the Japanese quick-firing guns, but to our amazement, we were rescued by the Japanese."

The captain of the Russian cruiser Admiral Nakhimoff, describing the operations preceding the battle says: "On entering the straits Admiral Rojestvensky hoisted his one signal of battle, which read: 'We must have not only a triumphal entry into Vladivostok, but must sink part of the Japanese fleet on the way.'"

The captain ascribes the defeat to Rojestvensky's indecision and to the utter loss of communication between the ships.

The Nagasaki correspondent of the Daily Telegraph says that all along the coast of Tsu and Iki islands he bodies of Russians are washing ashore every minute, and that they are being reverently interred by the islanders.

FIRST DAY'S BATTLE

Graphically Described By Participants In Fight.

Vladivostok, June 5.—From the accounts of participants in the battle of the sea of Japan as given here can be constructed a picture of the first day of the fight. On the morning of May 27 when the Russian fleet found itself 120 miles south of Tsu island, it was heading for the straits in three columns the battleships and five cruisers on the left, the light cruisers on the right and the transports and torpedo boats between. The weather was foggy and the view therefore difficult.

At 8:30 o'clock in the morning, the Russian fleet was discovered by the Japanese cruiser Idzumo, which blundered upon it in the fog and narrowly escaped capture.

At 10:30 o'clock four Japanese cruisers, the Chitose, Kasuga, Tsuhima and Nitaaka, were discovered to the northeast of the fleet and were fired on by the battleships. The Japanese cruisers disappeared and the Russian fleet proceeded through the straits.

Suddenly, at 1:20 o'clock in the afternoon a gaunt silhouette of Japanese vessels, their greenish blue paint making them scarcely visible in the fog, loomed up to the westward of the Russian vessels. These Japanese consisted of four battleships and the armored cruisers Tokiwa, Nishin, Kasuga, Iwate and Idzumo. They immediately opened a heavy fire which was especially directed against the flagships of the various squadrons of the Russian fleet.

Admiral Rojestvensky signalled to the transports to place themselves on the right of the squadron of light cruisers so as to increase their distance from the fighting portion of the fleet which was now hotly engaged and suffering under the well aimed fire of the Japanese. Owing to the precision of the Japanese gunners and the concentration of their fire on the flagship within an hour and a half the Kniaz Souvaroff and the Osliabia were reduced to wrecks and soon sank.

Almost at the same time as the opening of the engagement between the battleship division, a column of light Japanese cruisers appeared from the eastward and fell upon the retiring Russian transports and the light cruisers. The cruisers Vladimir Monomach and Dmitri Donskoi were detached from the left column and sent to their aid. They were repulsed by the Japanese cruisers but not before the Ural had been brought to a sinking condition.

The battle continued until 5 o'clock without further noticable change in the situation. Soon thereafter the battleship Alexander III began to list badly and dropped out of the line but was quickly repaired, resuming her place and re-opening fire. The battleship Borodino was then heading tho line. The Japanese, noticing the condition of the Alexander III, concentrated their fire upon her and she again dropped out of the line, this time finally, and disappeared.

Such a heavy fire from the Japanese 12-inch guns was then directed against the Borodino she was disabled and sank. This was at 7:30 o'clock in the evening.

The battleship Sissoi Veliky was now ablaze, but was firing every available gun. At this hour the onslaught of torpdeo boats from the coast of Japan and the closing in of the battleships from the left broke up the Russian fleet, all of which, except four battleships and the converted cruiser Ural had been holding together.

During the night the Japanese torpedo attacks continued, but the result was not known here until the report of the commander of the cruiser Izumrud was received from Vladimir bay.

During the battle a mass of Japanese junks is said to have obstructed the movements of the Russian fleet. The Russian officers assert that these junks scattered mines in the paths of their vessels.

The bodies of Lieut. Machlis of the cruiser Almaz and of other officers ands sailors brought here by the Almaz and the torpedo boat destroyers, were buried yesterday.

Capt. Reiff of the destroyer Grozny, describing the capture of Admiral Rojestvensky, said that his vessel, in company with the destroyer Bedovi, on which Admiral Rojestvensky escaped, were steaming northward when they encountered two Japanese destroyers.

The Bedovi signalled the Grozny "How many knots can you make?" and on receiving the reply "twenty-three," ordered full speed for Vladivostok.

The Grozny, instead of obeying this signal, engaged one of the Japanese destroyers, but the Bedovi raised the white flag and the Red Cross flag. While doing battle with her opponent, the Grozny was unable to go to the aid of her consort, which was taken in tow by the other Japanese destroyers. The Grozny succeeded in shaking off her opponent and later encountered another Japanese destroyer, which she sank in a running fight.

EQUITABLE AFFAIRS

Further Inquired Into By State Authorities.

New York, June 5.—The inquiry into the Equitable Life Assurance society by the state authorities was resumed at the Equitable offices today by Superintendent Francis Hendricks of the state insurance department. Second Vice President Tarbell was again before that official, though from what could be learned his examination was brief. Superintendent Hendricks today said he had already examined Jacob H. Schiff. He declined to say what directors, other than officials of the society had been before him.

John A. Stewart, member of the committee of seven appointed by the directors to nominate a chairman, said he would not decide as to his course until Wednesday, when the next special meeting of the Equitable directors is to be held.

D. O. Mills, another member of the nominating committee, said today:

"While it is probable that I will resign, I will not decide the matter until the meeting of the board."

The Crescents defeated the Eighth avenue team yesterday by the score of 24 to 20. The battery for the winners was Eillott and Cumming, and for the losers, Fritz and Herbert.

LITTLE DETECTIVES WITH "EYES OF ARGUS."

It has been said that "A Herald Want Advertisement has a thousand eyes." Sherlock Holmes had but two, although they were uncommonly good ones.

However, Holmes could not have found for you, over night, the one man in the city who most wanted to buy your house, or your store, or your horse, or your yacht, or your library, or your securities, or your automobile, or your old desk, or your piano; or the one man in the city who would be the best partner for you, or the best clerk, or coachman, or handy man; or the one woman in the city who would be the most valuable stenographer for you, or cook, or housekeeper.

But the thousand-eyed little Herald Want Advertisement finds these people for you—and finds them quickly, presenting no bill for "extras" or "disbursements," as Sherlock Holmes would have been apt to do.

When You Want Anything, Is It Not Better to Set a Thousand Eyes Looking For It Than Only Two?

WEDDING OF CROWN PRINCE AND DUCHESS CECILIA CELEBRATED

Marriage Occurs In Palace Chapel Before Brilliant Party.

Bride Richly Dressed With a Train Fourteen Feet Long.

Berlin, June 6.—Crown Prince Frederick William and the Duchess Cecilia of Mecklenburg-Schwerin were married by Dr. Dryander, the court chaplain in the small chapel of the palace at 5 o'clock this afternoon according to the ritual of the Lutheran church which is the same for a prince as for a subject. About half of the four hundred persons present were princes or special ambassadors of other countries with their aides-de-camp. Ambassador Tower attended as the extraordinary ambassador of the United States. Mrs. Tower was with him. Other guests were the diplomatists accredited to this court, the members of the cabinet, generals and admirals. When Chancellor Von Buelow took his place in the chapel he received the quiet congratulations of those about him on his elevation today, to a princely rank by Emperor William. After the other persons were in their places, the visiting members of royal families entered. Especially distinguished among them were the Archduke Franz Ferdinand of Austria, representing Emperor Francis Joseph, the Grand Duke Michael of Russia; Prince Henry, consort of the queen of the Netherlands; the Duke and Duchess of Aosta, representing the king and queen of Italy; Prince Arthur of Connaught, representing Great Britain; Prince and Princess Albert of Belgium; the duke of Oporto, representing Portugal; Prince Ferdinand of Roumania, and the crown princes of Denmark and of Greece. The junior members of the house of Hohenzollern followed and finally came the emperor and empress.

Crown Prince Frederick William entered by a side door of the chapel and waited at the altar for the Duchess Cecilia, who on the arm of her brother, the reigning grand duke of Mecklenburg-Schwerin and, followed by ladies and gentlemen-in-waiting, had left her rooms in another part of the palace and passed through a long corridor hung with pictures illustrating the glory of the house of Hohenzollern among them being battle scenes of the time of Frederick the Great and the coronation of Emperor William I at Versailles.

The duchess wore a wonderful train of silver brocade, made at Moscow, and was the gift of the Grand Duke Michael. It was borne by two pages. The embroideries on the train, which was nearly fourteen feet in length and seven feet wide, were done after the designs of Professor Doepler, in pink and silver. The corsage was cut low and trimmed with lace. The bride's veil was of old Brussels lace of great delicacy and beauty. She wore a tiara and the broad, blue ribbon of the grand star of the Luisen order bestowed on her by the emperor on Saturday.

Crown Prince Frederick William wore the light blue uniform of a major of the First Footguards, with red and white facings. Across his breast was the light blue ribbon of the Wendische crown, the highest decoration of the dukedom of Mecklenburg-Schwerin. He also wore the Prussian order of the black eagle.

The service began with the cathedral choir, high up in the circular gallery, around the dome of the chapel, singing in double quartet, "He shall give His angels charge."

It is the privilege of the pastor, according to the Lutheran rite, to read either one of the several admonitory addresses to the bridal couple, or to make one of his own. Dr. Dryander elected to lay aside the book, taking as his subject the book of Ruth, chapter 1, verses xvi and xvii, beginning:

"For whither thou goest I will go," etc.

Dr. Drylander spoke briefly on the beauty of love, the large responsibilities resting on the youthful pair, their need for the support of faith and spiritual vision. The pastor then asked his imperial highness if he took out of God's hand, to have and to hold, according to God's word and will, her highness, Cecilia? The crown prince answered "Yes."

The same question was addressed to the duchess, with the additional question of "and obey," to which she also answered "Yes." These were the only responses.

The rings were then exchanged, and the bride and groom knelt while Dr. Dryander read the liturgical prayer, closing the ceremony, which had taken precisely twenty minutes.

JAPANESE SHIPS ARE TO VISIT WOOSUNG TO LOOK FOR RUSSIANS

Promise to Remain In Port Only Twenty-Four Hours.

Seven Russian Colliers Are Anchored In That Harbor.

It Is Probable That They Will Be Interned There.

Shanghai, June 6.—Two Japanese destroyers, the Murasame and Sasanami, with Vice Admiral Uriu's squadron off Gutzlaff island, are coming to Woosung today. They have promised to remain only twenty-four hours.

Washington, June 6.—Consul General Rogers, at Shanghai, cables the state department under today's date as follows:

At Woosung are now anchored seven Russian colliers, which will doubtless be interned. It is reported that there are a number of Japanese vessels off Gutzlaff. The Russian torpedo boat Bodri has been interned at Shanghai."

RUSSIANS INFORMED

Of Action Concerning Their Ships at Manila.

Washington, June 6.—The Russian embassy here has made inquiry of the state department as to the intentions of his government respecting the Russian warships at Manila. Acting Secretary of State Loomis has replied by informing the embassy of the general nature of the instructions cabled yesterday to Governor Wright and Admiral Train. The text of Secretary Taft's cable to Governor Wright is as follows:

Advise Russian admiral that as his ships are suffering from damages due to battle and our policy is to restrict all opeartions of belligerents in neutral

UNFOUNDED RUMOR

Of the Assassination of the Russian Emperor.

Berlin, June 6, 2:47 p. m.—It is reported on the bourse that the Russian emperor has been assassinated. A private telegram to this effect has been received by the Mendelssohns, bankers of the Russian government. No details are obtainable. Up to the time of the closing of the bourse the report was without confirmation.

St. Petersburg, June 6.—The rumor circulated on the Berlin bourse of the assassination of Emperor Nicholas is groundless.

PROMISES ASSEMBLY TO OFFSET DICTATOR

Czar Will Issue an Imperial Manifesto at Once.

Sudden Elevation of Gen. Trepoff Causes Consternation.

GEN. TREPOFF.

St. Petersburg, June 6.—The details of the epoch-making of the battle of the Sea of Japan, which are drifting in here through the foreign press, and even the question of peace or war are almost ignored in contemplation of the more absorbing internal situation created by the sudden elevation of Governor General Trepoff to the office of assistant minister of the interior, making him virtually dictator with the dark vision of a policy of reaction and repression. Yet the Associated Press was informed on high authority today that Trepoff's appointment only tells half the story and that there is a brighter side to the picture. As intimated in these dispatches it will come in the shape of an imperial manifesto which will possibly be issued tomorrow the empress' birthday or on Thursday, the festival of the Ascension and will immediately realize the popular demand for a parliamentary regime by creating a legislative assembly consisting of two houses. The lower house will be called the Gosudarstvennaia Duma "Imperial Duma," and the upper house Gosudarstvennaia Sovet, or the present council of the empire. While the upper house will enjoy the preponderance and power, the lower house will also have legislative functions and the right to interpellate ministers, the plan also involving the responsibility of ministers. Delays in the elaboration of the machinery of election will be obviated by the employment of the law of 1884 under which land owners and property owners in the cities and villages, including peasants-elect are representatives to the zemstves, which in effect places representation on a property basis. The emperor retains complete control of the legislative assembly with the right of veto and the power to dissolve assembles and order the new elections.

The assembly will be presided over by a member of the emperor's choosing. Members of the assembly will be elected for three years. Ministers and chiefs of bureaus will be members exofficio. Should the above information prove accurate as there is every reason to believe it is, the prediction of the Liberals at the opening of the war, that the emperor of Japan would give a constitution to Russia appears to be about realized. But if the iron hand of Terpoff is to be gloved in velvet, it is extremely unfortunate that the Russian emperor did not couple Trepoff's appointment with the issuing of the manifesto as the announcement of the former with no palliative, has created something like consternation. The press seems dazed. Most of the papers are unable to fully understand what it means and refrain altogether from comment, but those which speak do so in the strain of the gloomiest forebodings, seeing in the appointment that the Russian people have again bowed down under the galling yoke of the police.

CONGRESS SUPPRESSED.

Action of the Czar Arouses Great Indignation.

St. Petersburg, June 6.—The meeting of the all-Russian zemstvo congress, called for today, for which 280 delegates from various zemstvos and municipalities, including the mayors of twenty-five cities, arrived here yesterday, and at which it was proposed to introduce resolutions calling for the immediate cessation of hostilities, has been prohibited.

The order of prohibition, which arrived only late last night, has aroused the greatest indignation and resentment.

Many of the delegates are determined to defy the government and proceed with the congress, in which case trouble may be expected.

The more radical of the delegates are proposing measures of an extreme type, and there is the greatest anxiety over the probable developments today.

Delegates representing the Social revolutionaries and the "League of Leagues" are in the city, and an effort is being made among them to agree on a basis for common action.

FOND DU LAC, WIS., HAS WORST FLOOD IN HISTORY OF THE CITY

Continued Rain Likely to Put the Whole Town Under Water.

Washouts Cause Two Bad Wrecks on Michigan Railroads.

Milwaukee, June 6.—An Evening Wisconsin special from Fond du Lac, Wis., says: Fond du Lac is battling with the worst flood in its history, and with threatening clouds overhead today, and more rain, the whole city may be under water before another twenty-four hours.

The Fond du Lac river, and both its east and west branches, and the Denvue creek are raging torrents, sending water over the banks for miles beyond. Nineteen thoroughfares are covered with water. The downtown basements and residence cellars are flooded. Business houses and manufacturing concerns will suffer heavily. Crops in rural districts and gardens are practically ruined.

The damage so far is estimated to reach about $100,000 in the city, and North Fond du Lac, with possibly twice that amount in the country.

The tracks of the three railways entering Fond du Lac are covered with water for miles.

The flood is the result of a storm which started Saturday and continued until today. Water on several of the streets of the West side is from seven to ten feet high.

The Kinney livery stable is flooded with water and many horses had narrow escapes.

One hundred thousand feet of logs in three rafts, the property of Moore & Galloway, broke away and were carried into the lake, destroying many boats and damaging others. The plant of the Clark Manufacturing company, and the warehouse of Dahlman & Cooper are flooded.

Appleton, Wis., June 6.—The worst rain storm for years swept this part of Wisconsin during the past two days. This entire country is today practically under water. The Fox river is higher than it has been since 1882, and is still rising. Several paper mills have been obliged to shut down on account of high water. Owing to numerous washouts, no trains on either division of the Chicago & Northwestern road have arrived here from the South since yesterday.

Ionia, Mich., June 6.—Washouts caused by last night's terrific rain have caused two railroad accidents near here, one on the Pere Marquette and one on the Detriot, Grand Haven & Milwaukee line. Two men were killed in the Pere Marquette accident and four members of the train crew were injured in the Detroit Grand Haven & Milwaukee accident. A Pere Marquette train ran into a washout near the state reformatory and the engine was derailed and tipped over. Engineer W. Alvord and Fireman H. Payne of Ionia, were killed and Brakemen Coffee and Nearly were slightly injured.

Detroit, Grand Haven & Milwaukee, west bound train No. 11 from Detroit, also ran into a washout at Tibbits Creek, last night and the engine and one car were derailed. Engineer Johnson, Mail Clerk Evans, Baggagemaster Tolles and the fireman were injured, but, it is said, not seriously.

Detroit, June 6.—Reports today from the state say the rain and wind storm, which was general all over the lower part of Michigan yesterday and last night, was the most severe in many years. In addition to the loss of life reported last night in Sanilac and Tuscola counties, where the storm assumed cyclonic proportions, heavy property loss is reported in all directions. Streams are flooded and out of their banks, and in Western Michigan railroad service is badly delayed. Thirty washouts were reported today on the Pere Marquette system, and the Grand Trunk reported eleven.

At Grand Rapids about 500 homes were surrounded by water. A number of manufacturing plants were compelled to close for the day, their first floors being two and three feet under water.

In Detroit the precipitation was 2.32 inches, the heaviest rainfall in nineteen years. Nearly 500 eastbound passengers, who arrived by boat in Grand Haven from Chicago and Milwaukee, were unable to proceed this afternoon, as the washouts had tied up the traffic.

COTTON REPORT IS MANIPULATED

New York, June 6.—Richard Cheatham of Atlanta, secretary of the Southern Cotton Growers association, who is in this city, has declared his intention of calling President Rosevelt's attention to what he considers gross irregularities in both the preparation and the publication of the government cotton report issued last Friday. Mr. Cheatham will make no charges of bribery or any other crime, but it is understood that he charges some one in the department with having manipulated the figures given them in advance of publication to certain brokers for use in depressing the cotton market.

A MERCHANT KILLS ROBBER

Was Attempting a Hold Up In a Chicago Suburb.

Chicago, June 6.—An unidentified robber, who entered the fruit store of Tielkes Brothers in Ravenswood, a suburb, early today was shot and instantly killed by Michael Tielkes, a member of the firm.

A white robber in company with a negro confederate entered the store and commanded John Tielkes, who was behind the counter, to hold up his hands. The noise made by the intruders awakened Michael Tielkes, John's brother, who had been asleep in a rear room.

Michael seized a revolver and fired three shots, killing the white robber. The negro fled.

TAILORS THREATEN STRIKE.

New York, June 6.—A mass meeting of the Brotherhood of Tailors has been called to demand a reduction in hours and it is likely that a strike of the 50,000 members in this city will shortly follow. The members are largely employed in sweat shops. They say they were promised a 9½ hour day last year, but are compelled to work ten hours or more and can earn only about $10 per week.

DELCASSE RESIGNS AND HIS RESIGNATION IS ACCEPTED

Rouvier Will Act Temporarily as Minister of Foreign Affairs.

Resignation Due to Failure of French Policy In Morocco.

Paris, June 6, 1:20 p. m.—Foreign Minister Delcasse has resigned and his resignation has been accepted. Premier Rouvier will assume temporarily the portfolio of minister for foreign affairs.

The resignation of M. Delcasse is due to the failure of the French policy in Morocco, the sultan having practically rejected France's plans for the reform of the administration of Morocco by proposing that the whole matter be submitted to a conference of the powers signatory of the treaty of Madrid.

M. Delcasse tendered his resignation April 21, but he was prevailed upon to retain the portfolio of foreign affairs. On that occasion, in addition to the controversy over his Moroccan policy,

M. DELCASSE,
Former Minister of Foreign Affairs.

the foreign minister had been severely criticised for his alleged action in permitting French officials in the Far East to connive at Russian breaches of neutrality in those waters, which the French government emphatically denied.

CUPID SEALS THE ROYAL UNION.

AGED WOMAN FOUND GUILTY FOR MAILING MEDICAL ADVICE

Chicago, June 6.—Judge S. H. Bethea, in the federal court, has directed a verdict of guilty against Dr. Alice B. Stockham, 71 years old, and Edward B. Beckwith, manager of the Stockham Publishing company, charged with circulating improper literature by the mails and express. In deciding the case, Judge Bethea said:

"When the laws were framed it was not believed the general discussion of the marriage relation was advisable. If these persons believe they are right in teaching these subjects so that the young may learn of them, they should have their doctrines interwoven in the laws of the land. What we have to do is to uphold the law as it stands."

Among the witnesses for the defense was the Rev. Hiram W. Thomas.

Dr. Thomas testified that he believed the woman's work was uplifting instead of harmful, even to the young, and that Mrs. Stockham has for years been doing a work which is to be commended and not scoffed at.

It was asserted by Dr. Stockham and her witnesses that she has been in the publishing business several years and never had been questioned by the government in regard to mailing what she said to be medical advice. She declared she received hundreds of letters from persons who had read her books thanking her for helping them.

TEAMSTERS WOULD SETTLE STRIKE IN INSTALMENTS

Chicago, June 6.—With the union leaders preparing to settle the Teamsters strike on the instalment plan, and the employers assembly resolved that no plans for a settlement except such as comprise every strike-bound interest will be entertained, the prospects for a cessation of hostilities were not bright today.

The teamsters joint council hoped to end the strike "sectionally" taking the department stores first, and appointed a committee of three members of the Department Store Drivers' union, to meet the State street merchants. Efforts were made to arrange a conference today. The employers announced that they would not make a settlement that did not include every firm involved. However, the teamsters hoped their move would prove an entering wedge leading to larger negotiations.

The executive broad of the teamsters met at the Briggs house and began a conference to discuss means for ending the strike. It was said a plan was made to appoint a committee to wait on the employers. The teamsters believe that if they can make individual settlements with some of the stores, the way will be opened for a general settlement.

Oliver Haglen, a recently appointed policeman was shot at while guarding a wagon at Madison and Market streets today. A bullet missed his head by a small margin. Where the shot came from could not be ascertained.

ALFONSO RECEIVES DIPLOMATIC CORPS

Ambassadors at London Call on the Young King of Spain.

London, June 6.—The king of Spain opened a long program of engagements today with the reception of the doplomatic corps at Buckingham palace. All the ambassadors and ministers now in London, with the staff of the embassies and legations, attended, including Ambassador Reid and the other members of the American embassy. Mr. Reid had quite a long talk with King Alfonso, who referred to some of the ambassador's past services. At the request of the Spanish king, Mr. Reid presented Secretary Carter and the other members of the embassy to his majesty.

Subsequently King Alfonso, escorted by a detachment of life guards, proceeded to attend the celebration of mass at the Roman Catholic cathedral at Westminster. There was some excitement on the way there caused by members of the escort being thrown, owing to their hourses slipping on the wet asphalt.

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains the linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it, or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What To Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills every wish in curing rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. Sold by druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes.

SHEPARD DEAD

Amos Shepard Passes Away As Result of Injuries.

Never Recovered From Fall In Kitchi Gammi Club.

Amos Shepard, the well-known Hibbing mining man, who was injured at the Kitchi Gammi club several weeks ago as the result of a fall, died at Whitewater, Wis., this morning, according to a telegram received this afternoon by his sister-in-law, Mrs. Hornibrook.

While preparing for luncheon at the Kitchi Gammi club, Mr. Shephard was suddenly seized with a fainting spell and fell to the floor, striking the back of his head on the tiling. His skull was fractured. He was removed to the hospital, and after remaining there for some little time was released, the doctors announcing that he had practically recovered from the effects of the accident. The announcement of his death comes as a decided surprise to his many friends in Duluth.

Mr. Shepard was about 45 years old and has long been prominent in mining circles on the Minnesota and Michigan iron ranges, as well as in Duluth. He was formerly in the employ of the Minnesota Iron company at Tower. He left his position there when he was elected register of deeds of St. Louis county.

Subsequently he re-entered the mining business, taking charge of several mines in Michigan, owned by Corrigan, McKinney & Co. Later he was transferred to the Mesaba as superintendent of their iron properties in the vicinity of Hibbing.

Mr. Shepard leaves a wife and several children. His eldest son is at Annapolis naval academy, having been appointed on the recommendation of Congressman Bede.

SAYS PACE IS TOO HOT

Minneapolis, June 6.—Why is insanity on the increase in Minnesota?

Statistics issued by the board of control show that in the past ten years mental disorders have increased at a greater ratio than the population of the state. These facts are confirmed by Minneapolis specialists in nervous diseases who, in their practice, study the cause.

"There are three general causes for the increase of insanity," said Dr. Leo M. Crafts today. "In the first place, wherever a portion of a community is composed of immigrants it will be found that there are more insane among their number than among the natives. In the East insanity is found to be on the increase among the Irish immigrants. The same is true of the Germans, although they are a more phlegmatic people and are less easily affected. In Minnesota the great increase is among the Scandinavians. This is easily accounted for by the fact that the immigrants are transported from their quiet hamlet homes to a strange country. They have to change their mode of life, learn a new language, and come in contact with keen competition. The result is that those who are not equipped physically and mentally for the revolutionary change in their lives, break down and become insane.

"The strenuousness of modern life and modern conditions also affects the lives of everyone. There is no stop, everyone keeps moving and those who are unfit are crushed. Children are rushed through the public schools, the standard for the dull being the same as that for the brightest. When the children finish school they rush into business where the competition is keener than ever. The result is the survival of the fittest. But what of the unfortunates who did not have the same endowments? Many of them are found in the insane institutions or are cared for by their friends.

"In the pioneer days there was not so much insanity, it is true, but the settlers were prepared for the hardy life. The effect was not necessarily shown in that generation, but in the succeeding generation the dry rot is evidenced. This will be found to be true of any community. When it increases in age the fibers of strength weaken through various natural causes.

"The third reason, strange as it may seem, is due in part to philanthropy and is one which our legislators could abolish. Before the world became as civilized and merciful as it is now, neuropathic patients were considered a queer people and were allowed to drift about for themselves or were taken care of by their friends. Modern philanthropy now takes up the cases. The physician refers his case to the probate court, and the patient is taken to an asylum where he or she is treated and in many cases cured. The result is that they go back to their homes, marry and bring children into the world. The children really have but half a chance, as they do not inherit the strength necessary to meet life. That generation helps to fill the insane asylums. In past days the insane could not marry, of course, and their weakness died with them. There should be some regulation whereby the weak-minded should not be allowed to propagate.

"It may be of surprise to some people to know that there averages but one insane case today in the probate court. This means that Hennepin county is sending more than 300 patients every year to the insane asylums.

AN ANNUAL MEETING

Duluth Real Estate Exchange Re-Elects the Old Officers.

The first annual meeting of the Duluth Real Estate exchange was held at the Commercial club this noon and the full set of officers who were elected at the organization of the exchange last February to serve until the first annual meeting, were re-elected. Luther Mendenhal is president, William M. Prindle is vice president, Whitney Wall is secretary and R. B. Knox is treasurer.

On the board of directors William C. Sargent and N. J. Upham were elected to serve a term of three years, L. A. Barnes and John A. Stephenson were elected for a term of two years, and Henry Nolte and J. D. Stryker were elected for one year. The executive, membership and valuation committees will be appointed by the president before the next monthly meeting.

Aside from the election of officers, other matters of interest to the real estate men were considered. Definite steps to prevent the breaking of windows in vacant houses and the wanton destruction of unprotected private property were taken. By resolution it was decided that signs should be printed to be placed on vacant buildings offering a reward of $10 for information which will lead to the conviction of any person or persons found trespassing upon or in any manner injuring such buildings. In the past local real estate men, as elsewhere, have been bothered to a considerable extent by boys and men who seem to take pleasure in breaking windows in unguarded buildings, and by petty thieves who have carried away such articles as they could conveniently handle.

It was ordered that a committee of two be appointed to confer with the Commercial club relative to seeing what help can be given the census enumerators in getting a complete census of the city. Members of the exchange are very desirous that Duluth be given full credit for every one who lives here.

The organization now has a membership of fifty, which includes all the real estate men in the city, with two or three exceptions. Regular monthly meetings are held the first Tuesday of each month at the Commercial club. The members get together at noon, eat their lunch and discuss matters of general interest to those engaged in their particular line of business. Up to the present time the attendance at all the meetings has been good, and much that will prove of benefit to the dealers and city in general has been accomplished.

Following is the full list of members:

The Flood Damage In Western Michigan Will Reach $500,000.

Fond du Lac, Wis., June 6.—The Eldorado dam broke today and the water is rising.

St. Agnes hospital and the convent are badly flooded.

Several washouts are reported on the Wisconsin Central and five on the Chicago & Northwestern. The St. Paul road has not had a train in or out of this city since late last night. Two hotels in the flooded district can be reached only by boat. Street car service from the city to the villages has been tied up, and the interurban line to Oshkosh is not running.

Detroit, June 6.—The storm damage in Western Michigan is estimated at $500,000. The loss in Grand Rapids and immediate vicinity alone will reach $100,000. The list of those injured in the "Thumb" district yesterday by the tornado was increased today when word was received from the village of Kingston that eleven persons were injured there. One of them may die. Thirteen houses and eighteen barns were blown down in the vicinity of the village.

Milwaukee, June 6.—A daily News special from Manitowoc, Wis., says: Rain is still falling here and the floods are the worst ever experienced in this country. A cloud burst occurred at Newton. Many cattle have been drowned and farmers crops have been washed out. The Chicago & Northwestern railroad track for six miles south of here is inundated. The rivers are rising fast and a number of small bridges have been caried away.

La Crosse, Wis., June 6.—The United States weather bureau here has received official notice that the Chippewa river at Chippewa Falls rose ten feet in the past twenty-four hours and is now two and one-half feet abouve the danger line. The sudden rise was due to the arrival of the floods from the north and the hard rains of Monday night. Houses and barns in the lower part of the city are flooded. Two deaths from drowning have occurred. Clarence Cleaves, a log driver, and Paul Labounty, a school boy.

Milwaukee, June 6.—An Evening Wisconsin special from Sheboygan Falls, Wis., says: Last night's heavy rain storm, coupled with recent storms, has caused many thousands of dollars of damages to the businesss district here. The Brickner woolen mills company's dam was carried out, entailing a loss of $10,000. Other business concerns suffered serious damage.

A special from Sheboygan, Wis., says the Arndt mills, on Pigeon river, sustained a loss of $15,000, the high water destroying part of the mill. The Frome Manufacturing company's plant at Howard's Grover was washed out with a big loss. In Sheboygan all the factories' yards are under water.

Janesville reports $75,000 damage in the country.

Chicago, June 6.—Shifting atmospheric conditions on Lake Michigan caused a succession of "Tidal waves" today, two being recorded in Chicago. Each of the seiches on the Chicago side of the lake rose to a height of three and one-half feet. They did no damage. The first wave remained stationary for thirty-five minutes. Later the water rose again to the same height and did not recede for half an hour.

MORE TALK OF PEACE

Paris Hears Russian Ministers Are Making Unanimous Efforts.

Russia Practically Agrees to Internment of Warships at Manila.

Paris, June 6.—A dispatch to the semi-official Temps from St Petersburg, filed at 1 o'clock this afternoon, says:

"It is learned from an authoritative source that the unanimous efforts of the ministers are directed toward peace and they are expected to succeed shortly."

Information reaching here gives a decidedly more hopeful view to the peace outlook. This is particularly true concerning the unity of the foreign pressure which is being exerted. Although it is not yet evident that Russia will yield to these influences, the exchanges in which Berlin is taking an important part are considered likely to exert a strong tendency towards the initiation of peace negotiations. It is the understanding here that Germany and United States are now taking the foremost part in the efforts towards peace with other powers lending them strong moral support.

St. Petersburg, June 6.—Russia has practically agreed to the internment of the Russian warships at Manila.

Emperor Nicholas, according to report, has returned the resignation of Interior Minister Bouligan having declined to accept it. Bouligan tells his friends that with the power conferred on Gen. Trepoff as assistant minister of the interior his position is absolutely untenable.

Moscow, June 6.—In spite of the official prohibition the all-Russian zemstvo congress assembled here today but the delegates met in private houses.

About 180 delegates from various zemstvos and municipalities including the mayors of twenty-five of the large cities arrived in Moscow yesterday to attend the congress. It is proposed to introduce resolutions calling for the immediate cessation of hostilities. The order prohibiting the meeting arrived at Moscow only late last night and aroused the greatest indignation and resentment.

KIDNAPING OF BOY

Stirs an Illinois County and Startling Charges Flying.

Family Feud Between Grandfather and the Boy's Father.

Sycamore, Ill., June 6.—A family quarrel of long standing, marked by long fights in the courts which have scandalized the Methodist Episcopal church circles in De Kalb and adjoining counties, has reached its climax in the kidnaping of Kimball Cormack, 5½ years old, by his father, Rev. Joseph M. Cormack, pastor of the Methodist church at West McHenry.

A sad echo of a school day romance at the Northwestern university, a romance in which a poor struggling student won the daughter of one of the wealthiest farmers in Northern Illinois, came when the minister took his son from among his playmates of the Charter Grove district school and carried him away in an automobile. The abduction of the boy by his parent has caused a great sensation throughout the surrounding country, but a still greater shock is in store if Thomas Marshall, grandfather of the boy, from whom he was stolen, carries out his threat to go to West McHenry, where the boy now is, and take him from his father by force.

Marshall is planning a counter abduction, and upon a scale that suggests an invasion. He will take not one automobile, but a dozen if needed. He will have an army of friends and neighbors devoted to his cause. He will gather arms and in defiance of the advice of peaceful lawyers will carry war into the camp of the enemy, his clergyman son-in-law.

The clergyman, who is pastor of the Methodist church at West McHenry, twenty miles northeast of here, has a few friends upholding his action, and should the two forces meet serious trouble is expected.

Meanwhile Attorneys Adam Cliffe and D. J. Carnes, who for two years have conducted successful legal battles in the courts for Thomas Marshall, are preparing papers for the prosecution of the Methodist pastor. Rev. Mr. Cormack will probably be arrested for kidnaping and may be cited for contempt of court.

Durin gthe pendency of an appeal in the appellate court, Judge Bishop, in the circuit court, ordered that the custody of the boy be vested in the grandfather, who is 75 years old. A case based on an original writ, in the supreme court, also was decided in favor of the grandfather. It was in fear that the decision of the appellate court would be against him that induced the minister to steal his own child.

The fight over the possession of little Kimball Cormack is one of the most remarkable and spectacular that has ever come to the attention of the Illinois courts. It is a fight between a rich man, who raised the son of his dead daughter, against a poor son-in-law, who, he says, practically abandoned his boy to death. The rustics hereabouts, in a mysterious pastoral manner, mention "boodle" now whenever they talk of the case. Thomas Marshall will not say that money is the cause of the present trouble, but he does not deny that disagreements over money affairs, in which the minister wanted notes rightfully belonging to young Kimball and Joseph, an older brother, made over to his name, led to the beginning of the bitter quarrel nearly three years ago.

Everyone in Sycamore, De Kalb and the adjoining counties knows the story back of the kidnaping. It was aired thoroughly in the courts until even the little schoolmates of Kimball Cormack wondered about it in school instead of reading their lesson books. It began at Evanston in 1878, when smiling and pretty Jennie Marshall entered Northwestern university, with Joseph M. Cormack, a poor boy, with aspirations to become a great preacher. He was poor and had to earn his way; she was rich, indulged by a prosperous farmer, and sympathized with the embryo minister. The sympathy grew into love, and when they graduated in 1881 they were engaged.

Rev. J. M. Cormack struggled with country charges for three years. On Nov. 28, 1884, there was a great wedding in the old Marshall farmhouse. The old English farmer and his German wife were pleased at first with their daughter's choice and gave the couple a great "send off." But trouble came. Thomas Marshall said that it was one of "those marriages you think are all right, but find out your mistake later on." Out of respect and love for his dead daughter he will not discuss it more.

But there was no open outbreak. The young minister was given the church at Wasco, a few miles east of his wife's girlhood home. She was an ideal preacher's wife. Everybody who knew her said that. There was a boy born, who was called Joseph. Everything went well, superficially at least, until 1900.

In February of that year Mrs. Cormack was taken to the Presbyterian hospital in Chicago. When Joseph was born she had gone there, too. On Feb. 8 a second boy was born. The mother was very ill. Her husband visited her frequently, but it was only when her brother, George, called to see her that her true condition was known to her parents. Thomas Marshall hurried to Chicago on March 1. He was met there by Cormack, who said he would have to "wait a little while." There were some words between father and husband. The father waited to see his sick daughter, a half hour, an hour, two hours, several hours.

Occasionally Cormack came from the sick room and said "they would be ready" soon. But they never were ready, and Marshall went away to return on the morrow. "I thought I heard father's voice this morning," said Mrs. Cormack that night.

"No, he hasn't been here," the minister is reported to have said.

The next morning when Marshall appeared Cormack met him and said that his wife "had given him such a raking that he could not believe his own ears." The father never saw his daughter alive. He had to return to his farm, and on March 2 his daughter died.

She was buried in the family lot at Charter Grove. The fatehr made arrangements to keep the baby at the hospital for three months. But it did not get along well. George Marshall wrote to Cormack, telling him that the baby should be taken to the country and cared for. A Mrs. Bates also wrote from Chicago to the same effect.

Cormack said he would "see about it," but was too busy with church work just then. Finally Mrs. Ernest was sent to Chicago by the grandfather, and she asked that the minister remove the baby to the country. Even the nurse at the hospital wrote that it would die and should be taken among griends. Even this did not move the clergyman, but Thomas Marshall finally induced him to go to the hospital for the infant. Mrs. Ernest went with him and paid all the expenses with Thomas Marshall's money.

The baby was brought to Mrs. Ernest's home, but she had a 4-months-old infant of her own to care for and finally the infant was lodged in the home of Thomas Marshall. It was a puny babe, but finally it was made healthy and well.

Thomas Marshall used to present his children with sums of money from time to time. He gave them notes payable, in $1,000 denominations. Two of these, which had belonged to his dead daughter, were held by Cormack, as was a third, given to Mrs. Cormack while she was in the hospital, but which was to be divided between the new-born babe and Joseph, the first born, each to get $500.

One day when Kimball, the joy of Thomas Marshall's life, was 2½ years old, Cormack in the course of a conversation asked Thomas Marshall to change the note and make the $1,000 payable to him. The old man refused. "It's the children's money," he said. Often after that there were talks about that note. Finally Cormack said:

"Well, I've been talking a good deal about that note now. I'm going to have it. If you don't do it, I'll take Kimball away."

"I've spent a good deal of money on that boy," answered Marshall. "You have only given him 9 cents. When you get him, I'll have something to say about it."

Then the open warfare broke out. One day in a fit of anger Cormack is said to have said: "Since Jennie died, you have even cut off the money to the children."

"Well, I'm taking care of that boy and that's a good deal," said Marshall.

"Between God and man, you're just as responsible for that boy as I am," the minister is said to have answered.

"All right, I'll keep him," answered Marshall.

Finally Cormack began proceedings to recover the boy, and the case is now before the appellate court. Cormack recently was married again to Miss Maude Miller, a Rockford girl. The whole countryside is with Thomas Marshall in the fight for the boy. He has been a resident at Charter Grove, which is six miles from here, for fifty years. He is a rugged man of the soil, not polished, but sterling. Like the corn that he raises, every grain is the best that the earth can give. He has the determination of his race.

CARS NOW ON WAY

Double Truckers For Park Point Shipped Last Week.

President A. W. Hartman of the Interstate Traction company received a telegram this morning from St. Louis, Mo., stating that the new double truck cars ordered for the Park Point street railway line were shipped last Saturday and that they were likely to be in Duluth within a few days. The cars will be unloaded at the Oneota spur track of the Northern Pacific company and mounted on the trucks when they will be given an exhibition run about the city over the Duluth Street Railway company's tracks, accompanied by a band.

The cars will be taken down to the foot of Lake avenue and taken across the canal during the night, on the aerial bridge, when they will enter immediate service on the Park Point line.

The new cars have been named Aerial and Oatka.

Robert R. Dunn of St. Paul, who is one of the largest stockholders in the Park Point street railway, was in the city today looking over his various interests. Mr. Dunn says that the new cars will be first-class in every respect and are bound to fully meet the expectations of the patrons. He says all that the company now require is a period of pleasant weather.

The work of double tracking the street railway system on the point was completed some days ago, but a crew has been working right along ballasting up the new track and places on the old track that needed raising. The roadbed is now assuming an excellent condition.

UNITED STATES SHIP GOES ASHORE

New York, June 6.—The steamer which went aground off Jones island near Freeport, L. I., late last night and which at first was believed to be a trans-Atlantic liner, proved to be the United States survey ship Caucus. She was still hard and fast on the bar today, but appeared to be in no great danger and with a wrecking vessel lying close by ready to take advantage of the first favorable moment, it is believed she will be floated before night. It is not thought by those who saw the steamer that she had been damaged as she apeared to be resting easily in the sand. The Caucus has a crew of thirty men, all of whom remained on board today.

No explanation has yet been given as to how the Caucus got into trouble. She had been engaged in survey work off Greenport, L. I.

THE EMPEROR WILL NOT BUTT IN

Washington, June 6.—Regarding the attitude of Emperor William toward the war in the Far East, the Associated Press is authorized to say that since the beginning of the war the emperor has been anxious for peace. He has, however, refrained from advising either of the belligerents, believing that until one or the other of them should intimate a wish to conclude peace, any intervention or offer of mediation would prove futile. The emperor, however, has let his strong desire for peace be known.

WIND WAS HIGH

Blew Fifty-Eight Miles an Hour During Thunder Storm.

Vessels In Harbor Cast Adrift But No Damage Done.

Men on the street this morning swore solemn oaths that the wind blew 70 miles an hour early this morning during the thunder storm that prevailed. Others just as solemnly said that it was worse than that and that for wind velocity, this morning's storm had anything beaten that Duluth has heretofore gone up against.

As a matter of fact, when the weather bureau gives out the cold, hard facts about it, the wind hardly came up to the notch. Duluth people are a little bit, if secretly, proud of the northeasters that can develop here, although they outwardly appear to disapprove and cuss them. But they can rest assured that Duluth's northeasters have beaten and can beat in the future last night's gale which was but a gentle zephyr to what can be raised in this great and glorious climate.

Between 4 and 5 o'clock this morning the wind reached a velocity of 58 miles an hour, the weather bureau says, which is pretty fair with the year so young and tender. On May 4 last it reached a velocity of 57 miles an hour and lasted longer than it did this morning. This morning's blow lasted only a few minutes, but it did things to things.

A number of vessels lying out in the harbor dragged their anchors and drifted about the harbor loudly whistling for tugs. No damage was done though. Some outhouses in different parts of the city were unroofed, some walks torn up and a few trees blown down. That is about all that happened besides a few wires being grounded.

ESCAPED FROM JAIL.

Charged With Furnishing Whisky to Indians.

The Grand Maiais Herald says: Felix Tebeau, who has been confined in the county jail for several months awaiting trial at the June term of the district court for furnishing whisky to Indians, escaped last Sunday night. The escape was discovered by William Moore when he brought breakfast to the prisoners Monday morning. Tebeau made his way out by removing a lock, which was fastened with screws that were easily taken out. It is supposed that he headed for Port Arthur. Deputy Hawes was at once sent in pursuit of the fugitive, being taken to Grand Portage in a row boat that night by Hans and Chris Holte. Hawes has returned having abandoned the search in that direction. There were three other prisoners in the jail at the time of the escape, but as they still had only a few days of unexpired terms to serve there was no incentive for them to take advantage of the opportunity to get away.

COMING IN BUNCH

Three Conventions Will Be Held Within Ten Days.

Elks, Eagles and Independent Foresters Are All Coming.

Tomorrow afternoon the delegates to the big state convention of Elks will commence to arrive in the city, and by Thursday morning Duluth will be in the hands of the visitors.

On Thursday afternoon the delegates will go into executive session, while a reception is being given for the visiting ladies in the Spalding hotel parlors.

In the evening a grand ball will be given for Elks only, in the Armory.

On Friday morning the visitors will be taken for a drive around the boulevard. In the afternoon they will take a trip on the lake, and in the evening the convention will be brought to a close with a minstrel performance and social session. The Elks convention will be the first of three which come within ten days.

On June 14 and 15 the high court of the Independent Order of Foresters for the northern part of Minnesota, will meet in Duluth, bringing from 100 to 200 delegates to the city.

The Foresters will not get away before the Eagles will commence to arrive for their monster gathering on June 15, 16, 17 and 18.

Thursday will therefore open a convention season in the city which will last almost without interruption until June 18.

Merchants and citizens in general are therefore watching the weather very anxiously, and hoping that the present northeaster will blow itself out before Thursday, and usher in a spell of fine warm weather which will last until the last Eagle has taken his departure. The programs of all three conventions include trips around the boulevard and on the lake, and these will be out of the question in weather like today's.

ACTIONS ARE DISMISSED

Stipulation of Settlement Filed In Three Cases.

The stipulations of settlement and dismissal of several civil actions started in district court of this county were filed with the clerk of court this morning.

The injunctional proceedings started by P. A. Coffey, of Virginia against the city and city officials to restrain them from locating the new Carnegie library on the site selected or of levying annual tax of $1,000 for its maintainance has been dismissed by mutual consent without costs to either party of the action.

The suit of Aaron Anderson against the Northern Pacific Railway company to recover a strip of land on Connor's point alleged to have been illegally appropriated by the company, and for $1,000 for its occupancy is stipulated for dismissal without costs.

Notice of the compromise and full settlement of the personal injury action of Swan A. Anderson against N. A. Bergstrom was also filed. Swanson was a bricklayer employed by Bergstrom on the construction work of the new railway shops at Proctorknott. He alleges that while he was at his work Bergstrom ordered a heavy stick of timber dropped from above, without proper warning and that he, Swanson was struck in the abdomen by one end of the stick and injured. He demanded damages in the amount of $3,000.

HEARS SOME TAX CASES

Judge Dibell Reduces Assessed Valuation of Malta Mine

Judge Dibell disposed of several tax matters at a hearing held this morning.

In the matter of the 1903 taxes on the Malta mine, in this county, delinquent in 1904, the court ordered that the assessed valuation be reduced to $81,000, and that the company pay its taxes on that amount on the basis of 14.8 mills, the rate for 1903. The company contended that the mine's assessed valuation of 1902, which was $41,000, was taken again in 1903, when, in fact, the mine had been steadily shipping ore, and its value had decreased in proportion to the amount shipped.

In the matter of the delinquent taxes on the Children's Home property in the East end, the court held with the contention of the society that its property should be exempt, on the ground that it is a charitable institution. This was agreed to by the county attorney's office, the only question being raised being of a technical nature, whether or not the society was actually occupying the present grounds when the assessment was made, May 1, 1903, the building not being completed and in use until long after that date.

A reduction to $3.25 per forty acres was made in the case of P. M. Gilford on several forties, on the basis of a $100 valuation per forty, and a similar reduction to $1.95 per forty, was made in the case of J. E. Tappan, the valuation being $60 per forty.

CONVICT GIRL SWALLOWS LYE

In Despair Over Fading Beauty and Postponed Pardon.

Des Moines, Iowa, June 6.—Sarah Guhn, the beautiful Keokuk county girl, serving time in the Anamosa prison for murdering her husband, committed suicide yesterday by taking concentrated lye. The authorities think that she has for two weeks been stealing parts of the lye allotted her to clean her cell.

Mrs. Kuhn married an old farmer, who died from strichnine poisoning. It was claimed that his young wife had given him the poison in beer. In January, 1901, Mrs. Kuhn was found guilty and sentenced for life. Later it appeared that the husband and wife had trouble and that Kuhn had often threatened suicide. Hundreds of prominent Central Iowa people took up the movement for the pardon and two legislatures had the matter up.

At the last legislature Senator Saunders of the pardon committee of the senate alone stood in the way of the pardon. The house passed the bill freeing Sarah Kuhn, but the senate turned it down by a close vote. The pardon was to have been brought up before the next legislature and would undoubtedly have been granted.

Mrs. Kuhn worried because she was losing her beauty. When the last legislature failed to free her, she gave up hope and has since tried several times to kill herself.

West Duluth

TRIED TO GO OUT

Charles McMillan Attempts Suicide at West Duluth.

Only Nineteen-Years Old and No Cause Is Assigned.

Evidently tired of life, Charles D. McMillan of 602 Garfield avenue, tried to go out by the carbolic acid route last night at Meier's hotel saloon, 3741 West Superior street, but medical aid prevented the fulfillment of the attempt. The young man drives a delivery wagon for P. L. Aune, a butcher, doing business at 2224 West Superior street.

The attempt was made about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, in the toilet room of the hotel saloon, which is run by Carpenter Bros. The young man had been delivering meat at the hotel, and went to the toilet room. A moment afterwards he was heard to fall' and an investigation beinb made, was found lying on the floor with an ounce bottle of carbolic acid beside him. He was in convulsions when found, and Dr. Jern of West Duluth was sent for.

He succeeded in saving the young man's life, although McMillan begged to be allowed to die. This morning McMillan is much better, but of course it will take several days yet to get him about. He was taken to his parents' home on Garfield avenue.

P. L. Aune, his employer, said this morning that McMillan's accounts are straight, and he can conceive of no reason why the young man should have attempted his life.

The bride and Miss Doyle were handsomely gowned, and the church and the residence of Thomas Doyle, where the wedding breakfast was served, No. 29 Fifty-third avenue west, were beautifully decorated. A wedding trip to Milwaukee will occupy several weeks, after which Mr. and Mrs. Enright will reside in Hibbing.

MAN KILLED.

Body Found on Tracks Indicates Accident.

The body of George Asher of West Duluth was found on the trestle of the Missabe road, near Third street, last night, and it seems evident from the surrounding circumstances and the appearance of the body that the man was killed by a train. The back of the head was gashed, the skull fractured, and there were other marks and bruises on the body. The body was taken to Stewart's morgue, where it now awaits disposition.

Asher lived at 502 Central avenue, West Duluth, and leaves a wife, one sister and two brothers. No arrangements have yet been made for the funeral, but probably will be today.

Mrs. Horsburgh Dead.

Word has been received in West Duluth that Mrs. Ruth Horsburgh of Tetino, Wash., died there last Tuesday night. She was the eldest daughter of Judge and Mrs. J. D. Flack, who left about ten days ago to attend her, news having come that she was seriously ill. They got there Tuesday just a short time before the end came.

BOOK OF BOOKS

Over 30,000,000 Published.

An Oakland lady who has a taste for good literature, tells what a happy time she had on "The Road to Wellville." She says:

"I drank coffee freely for eight years before I began to perceive any evil effects from it. Then I noticed that I was becoming very nervous, and that my stomach was gradually losing the power to properly assimilate my food. In time I got so weak that I dreaded to leave the house—for no reason whatever but because of the miserable condition of my nerves and stomach. I attributed the trouble to anything in the world but coffee, of course. I dosed myself with medicines, which in the end would leave me in a worse condition than at first. I was most wretched and discouraged—not 30 years old and feeling that life was a failure!

"I had given up all hope of ever enjoying myself like other people, till one day I read the little book 'The Road to Wellville.' It opened my eyes, and taught me a lesson I shall never forget and cannot value too highly. I immediately quit the use of the old kind of coffee and began to drink Postum Food Coffee. I noticed the beginning of an improvement in the whole tone of my system, after only two days use of the new drink, and in a very short time realized that I could go about like other people without the least return of the nervous dread that formerly gave me so much trouble. In fact my nervousness disappeared entirely and has never returned, although it is now a year that I have been drinking Postum Food Coffee. And my stomach is now like iron—nothing can upset it!

"Last week, during the big Conclave in San Francisco, I was on the go day and night without the slightest fatigue; and as I stood in the immense crowd watching the great parade that lasted for hours, I thought to myself, 'This strength is what Postum Food Coffee has given me!'" Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason.

The little book "The Road to Wellville" may be found in every pkg.

PLAY FOR VOTES

May Be Canada's Deportation of American Railway Men.

Laurier Favors Direct Representative of Canada at Washington.

Ottawa, Ont., June 6.—Since the Alaska boundary arbitration nothing connected with international relations has been so widely discussed in Canada as the deportation of Americans employed on the Canadian side of the line on the Pere Marquette railroad. There is a general reluctance to believe that Sir Wilfrid Laurier's administration has lightly taken the risk of serious complications with the United States for the sake of influencing the labor vote in favor of Mr. Hyman, the newly appointed minister of public works, in his candidacy for re-election to the house of commons for London.

Mr. Hyman, in an interview, took the ground that the Americans affected had no cause for complaint, as the United States was the first to enact an alien labor law, which had been enforced with extreme severity. He claimed the Pere Marquette deportations were not retaliatory.

He went further and declared that the warrants of deportation authorized by the Dominion government were simply justice to Canadian labor, which supplies the key, as so many have contended, to the whole business, a deliberate design—namely: to catch sufficient of the London labor vote to secure his re-election to parliament. To take a wider survey of the field, it must not be supposed that the people of Canada on the whole desire to have recourse to reprisals. The truth is the exact opposite.

The hope is universal that the episode vexatious as it is at the moment, may serve a useful purpose in focusing attention on the question both sides of the line and bringing about a reasonable understanding and a better state of affairs between neighbors.

Canadians heartily appreciate President Roosevelt's common sense views on the advantages that would follow the appointment of a Canadian official representative at Washington, with whom the United States authorities could transact ordinary business without being compelled to go through all sorts of useless and tedious formalities in the way of communications with the mother country. In receiving the Canadian section of the international waterways commission at the White House the other day the president voiced the opinion that routine ceremonial, the exchange of official notification, and such like details, which occasioned so much loss of time, constituted a mere meaningless red tape procedure which could well be dispensed with and no one any the worse off.

Canada, he declared, should have at the British embassy at Washington a Canadian representative, a sort of charge d'affaires, familiar with Canadian usages and customs, who would be in a position to expedite matters when the governments of the two countries had business to transact together. In saying this the president gave utterance to an opinion long entertained on this side of the frontier and repeatedly urged in parliament. Sir Wilfrid Laurier himself is believed to be heartily in favor of Canada being directly represented at Washington, and it is hoped this expression of opinion on the part of the president may lead to an arrangement satisfactory to all three countries concerned being at length carried into effect.

The pulpit crusade against the social evils is extending from city to city and soon there will scarcely be a place of any importance in all Canada which has not heard the follies of society denounced and a call to the people to turn their backs on such things and lead better lives. Kingston was the last place to be aroused by the reforming pulpiteer, the Rev. W. T. G. Brown of Sydenham Street Methodist church. He said Canada had disgraced itself by stock gambling. City after city had presented the names of prominent men who have been nothing but gamblers in disguise and who have brought shame and disgrace upon their families. He said there are many women in Kingston who give their afternoons to card gambling instead of attending to home duties and looking after the welfare of their children. He had been informed that in Kingston there were instances of women being intoxicated at afternoon gambling meetings. Reference was made also to the bill before the Canadian parliament to legalize the operations of racetrack bookmakers and the support given by prominent men to this bill was deplored.

Unpleasant stories are getting into circulation affecting some of the officers in charge of the cruiser Canada, which recently returned from a training trip in West Indian waters attached to the British North American squadron. The officers referred to, it is asserted by the jack tars who set these yarns-a-going, have been given positions for which they are not qualified by training and experience and the men have no confidence in them. Their knowledge of naval drill and seamanship is limited to what they have been able to acquire from the noncommissioned men who served in the British navy. The consequence is a number of the crew are dissatisfied and are telling tales out of school.

If Minister of Marine Prefontaine is wise he will make short work of these complaints by removing the cause and putting the right class of men who have learned their business in the royal navy in charge. The Canadian jackies who have served year after year in the king's ships on the North American station have proved themselves willing, apt and efficient seamen, fit to go anywhere and do anything, and they have only good words to say of the British naval officers, and the crew of the Canada would scarcely be talking so much about the men put in authority over them unless there was good cause for their complaints.

PROGRAM MADE

Fair Association to Have Horse Races on July 4.

Liberal Purses to Be Given to Local Horses.

The directors of the St. Louis County Fair association held a meeting at the St. Louis hotel last evening at which arrangements were nearly completed for a good schedule of horse races under the auspices of the association, July 4 next, at the Driving park.

A full program of races for the afternoon of that day has been outlined and it is the intention of the association to hang out some liberal purses, the amounts of which will be be announced a little later, as soon as some other plans have matured.

Attempts to hold races on the Fourth of July in previous years have, from one cause or another, resulted in rather indifferent success, but this season the members of the association expect that arrangements will be made to have some excellent events and, if the weather does not permit of racing on that date the races will be pulled off the first Saturday afterward when the atmospheric conditions are favorable. Under this arrangement the association guarantees that there will be some races anyway, whether on July 4 or the Saturday following.

Another feature of the arrangements is that the schedule of races is so planned that encouragement will be offered the local horses to enter, the idea being that Head of the Lakes horsemen would be reluctant about entering their horses, which will have had little working out, against horses from the other parts of the state that hve been in training for several weeks and are better fit for speeding.

The program includes a free-for-all, trot or pace, open to all horses from St. Louis county or Douglas county, Wis. Another fast event will be the 2:25 class, trot or pace, open to horses from the two counties.

Probably the most amusing feature will be the novelty race. In this event each man entering must have his own horse in the race, but he will be required to drive some other man's horse. The first money will be given to the last horse passing under the wire. As each man will be driving some other man's horse he will use his efforts to see that his own horse is beaten so that the expectations are that the race will not be a slow one.

Besides the trotting and pacing events there will be two half-mile running races, one for horses and the other for ponies, also a gentlemen's driving clas sevent for horses without records, and hitched to buggies.

Last year there was a circus in town July 4 and this interfered with the racing. This year the circus will be in Duluth July 3 and there will be no other large attractive features, it is expected, to interfere with the horse races.

A LESSON IN ETIQUETTE

Given to Speaker Cannon at the Portland Fair.

Portland, Or., June 5.—Uncle Joe Cannon came all the way from the house of representatives to be taught etiquette in Portland. Mrs. H. W. Goode, wife of the president of the corporation, let him know that to dip three fingers in a glass on the speaker's table might be proper in Washington or New York, but it was quite impossible in Portland.

It was warm Thursday, the opening day. Uncle Joe was perspiring freely, when, in the procession headed by Vice President Fairbanks, he entered the large speaker's stand.

Before seating himself, the aged speaker of the national house of representatives marched to the front, where, in full view of many thousands of people, he dropped his hat on the table, poured out half a glass of ice water into his hand and carefully swabbed his head. When he was through he sat down, and Mrs. Goode proceeded to work up a case of society nerves.

Presently, while the party was still waiting for the president to touch the golden key back in Washington, Uncle Joe felt warm again. He went to the table and repeated the performance, but this time he saw a scrap of ice at the bottom of the glass. His long fingers dived after the ice and in a moment those in front smiled to see him briskly rubbing his head and neck with it. They smiled again when they saw him wipe off the ice and drop it into his mouth as if nothing had happened.

Mrs. Goode could not stand the sight another instant. She called Theodore Harde, assistant to the exposition president. The young man hastened to Speaker Cannon and informed him the glass had been intended to drink from, and that wash basins could be found elsewhere.

The speaker of the house gasped and then escorted the young man to the rear of the stand. Uncle Joe's arms sawed the air and those in the back seats say his language was firm, forceful and warm, tearing etiquette to shreds. Only by intervention of high officials and apologies was he induced to deliver his address.

CRAWFORD TESTIFIES IN HIS OWN DEFENSE.

Washington, June 6.—William G. Crawford took the stand in his own defense today in the criminal court where he is charged with conspiring with August W. Machen and George Lorenz, to defraud the government in connection with contracts to supply the postoffice department with letter carrier satchels. Preceding Crawford several witnesses for the defense testified to the defendants good character before he was charged with the offense for which he is on trial. Among the character witnesses were Justice White, of the supreme court of the District of Columbia. Crawford testified that as deputy auditor for the postoffice department, he had no opportunity to learn the manner in which supplies were contracted for and that he had a mere speaking acquaintance with Machen, who government witnesses had testified, was a frequent visitor to Crawford in his office.

BACK FROM FALLS

Delegates From Duluth to Y. M. C. A. Convention Are Home.

Interesting Addresses Were Made By Many Prominent Men.

Phil Bevis, general secretary of the Y. M. C. A.; John A. Goodell, religious secretary, and Norman MacLeod, the secretary of the boys' department, returned this morning on the steamer Heffelfinger from Niagara Falls, where they attended the annual convention of the Y. M. C. A. paid employes.

"The convention gave us all the opportunity to secure the advice and counsel of experts in the different lines of work which come within the scope of the Y. M. C. A.," said Mr. Goodell this morning, in telling of the convention. "The religious work, the educational work, the athletic work, the boys' department work and all the different lines were discussed by the men who are the best informed along those lines.

"We had such speakers as John R. Mott, Carrol D. Wright, the former commissioner of labor; President Henry C. King of Oberlin college, President Stanley Hall of Clark university, Dr. D. A. Sargent of Harvard and James E. Sullivan, secretary of the Atlantic division of the American Amateur Athletic association.

"These men and a number of others gave most interesting talks on different features of the association work, and all those who attended the convention, I am sure, received some valuable suggestions which maye be adopted in their home associations. Most of the speakers found some points in the association to be criticised, and some suggestions to make, although all of them also had some complimentary things to say about it.

"This was the thirty-second annual convention of the association's secretaries, and there were between 600 and 700 delegates in attendance from all parts of the country. There were eleven from Minnesota. Five went from Minneapolis, three from Duluth, one from St. Paul, one from Winona, and the state secretary.

"Our party had delightful weather going down and back, and we didn't feel the effects of this storm until we got almost home.

"Niagara Falls is a most interesting city. The delegates were all shown through the big power house on the American side, where over 100,000 horse power can be developed, and saw the still larger house which is in course of construction on the Canadian side of the falls."

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Counterfeiters' Den Found In Cemetery at Sioux Falls.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Sioux Falls—The discovery by the United States authorities in this city of a counterfeiters' den in what is known as the old Rowland cemetery, situated near Sioux Falls, explains the mystery surrounding recent movements of a strange nature in the vicinity of the old home of the dead. As a result of a raid on the den, the federal authorities succeeded in capturing the man who it is alleged is the maker of great amount of counterfeit money which has recently been placed in circulation at Yankton and other places in the southeastern portion of the state. The only occupant of the den at the time of the raid by the federal officers was Levi Clark, an ex-convict. Ever since it was discovered that spurious coins were being circulated at Yankton and elsewhere Clark has been watched by the federal authorities. The making of moulds and counterfeit money is a mania with Clark. He is an eccentric character and takes great pride in the expert manner in which he fashions the moulds, and has not hesitated to talk even with officers of the law as to his experiness in this regard. The counterfeiters' den was located in the shelter of a clump of plum bushes in the old cemetery and was quite well concealed. None of the manufactured spurious coins were found in the den, but the authorities captured a complete outfit of dies, molds and other implements and material. The capture of the dies and molds indicates that Clark was a confederate of a man giving his name as A. G. Sharp, who was recently arrested at Yankton on the charge of passing counterfeit money. When taken before a United States commissioner for his preliminary examination Sharp waived his hearing and was held for appearance at the next term of federal court.

The coins were made of pewter and given a silver finish by being dipped in quicksilver. While fresh from the quicksilver they are good counterfeits and during a rush of business would be readily taken.

The dies and molds captured in the counterfeiters' den in the cemetery exactly fit the coins passed by Sharp at Yankton, which points to the fact that Clark was engaged simply to manufacture the spurious coins, while Sharp, and perhaps other confederates took care of the matter of getting the counterfeit money into circulation.

Deadwood—The Carnegie free library has been opened to the public in this city. It was built with a donation of $15,000 from Andrew Carnegie.

Mrs. Jennie Snow, who came to the Black Hills in 1877, is dead in this city. She was well known throughout the Northern Hills.

Paul Rewman, who has been manager of the Deadwood Electric Light company for a good many years, will leave in a few days for a trip around the world, which will occupy eighteen months.

News of the death of Roger Sullivan, an old time miner in the Black Hills, has been received. He committed suicide the latter part of May at Park City, Utah. He left a note saying that he was tired of the world.

Bids are being advertised for fourteen miles of telephone construction between this place and the site of the proposed reservoir on Dry creek.

Pierre—In an electrical storm which swept east of this city Charles Thompson of Canning was killed by lightning. He was standing on the prairie watching the storm at the time. He has no relatives in this section, having recently come from Concord, N. H., where two sisters live.

Miller—Officers are after William H. Bennett, music teacher, who left his boarding house here on a bicycle, taking a baby's money bank and other valuables worth $60.

Elk Point—H. P. Beckwith, for nearly five years cashier of the First National bank here and prominent in musical and fraternal circles, has resigned, to take effect July 1. Olaf Johnson, ex-county treasurer, has been elected to fill the vacancy. Mr. Beckwith will be treasurer of the Northern Trust company at Fargo, N. D.

Chamberlain—There is a rumor among railroad men that contracts will be let July 1 for the extension of the line to the Black Hills from the west end of Lyman county—at present under construction—to the Pacific coast.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Grand Forks—The supreme court has denied a rehearing in the case of Thomas Beare against J. A. Wright of Minneapolis and E. C. Bates of this city. Mr. Beare brought an action against J. A. Wright, E. C. Bates and W. H. Pringle for the recovery of $15,000, representing the amount of an investment in the stock of the Kenmare Dry Coal and Manufacturing company, claiming that these men had made false statements to him regarding the value of the property and the financial condition of the corporation. A district court jury awarded him a judgment of nearly $10,000, and the supreme court reversed that decision and held for the defendants, Messrs. Wright and Bates, the district court jury holding that Pringle was not liable. Application was made by Mr. Beare for a rehearing, and this application was denied. Mr. Beare is now engaged in the hotel business at Brainerd, Minn.

The state board of pardons declined to take any action on the application for a pardon for Joseph Basanella, serving a life sentence in the penitentiary for the murder of Axel Anderson.

Hillsboro—Mrs. Thomas Hall, a widow, about 20, died after an illness of two hours. She had been subject to heart trouble and her demise was hastened by a thunderstorm.

Hillsboro defeated Argusville at baseball in a shutout game, the score being 3 to 0.

Sherwood—Sherwood will celebrate the Fourth. Citizens and business men have subscribed over a thousand dollars in prizes, and a band will be hired from across the Canadian line. The program will include baseball and la crosse.

Cando—Judge Cowan sentenced Ed Noyes, Ed O'Neal and Jim Moyan to ninety days in the county jail and $250 fine each for violating the prohibitory law.

HIS LIBERTY

For Life Is the Price of Drink.

Goshen, Ind., June 6.—Because he persists in getting drunk, Frank Cripe, after twelve years of freedom on parole, was returned from here to Michigan City prison last night to serve the balance of his life in prison. Cripe was sent up for the murder of Michael Self, a night watchman. Because he was drunk when he killed Self the jury fixed his punishment for life. That was twenty-two years ago. In 1893 Cripe was paroled upon his pledge to abstain from drinking. He has been repeatedly arrested here for drunkenness since, and upon his last arrest, a few weeks ago, and later indicted by the grand jury, it was decided by Governor Hanley to return the paroled man to prison.

MALTOSE AND HEALTH.

Physicians Say Its Use In the Human System Is of Great Value.

The great value of Maltose as a nutritive substance cannot be exaggerated. In the living organism it is transformed into assimilable sugar more rapidly than saccharose or cane sugar. It is very easy to digest and having not so sweet a taste as cane sugar, it can be taken in much greater quantities than the latter.

"Malta-Vita" is no meaningless coined word; it stands for its literal translation from the Latin and means exactly what it says—"Malt Life." The original phrase "For the blood is the life" is the starting point and final winning post of Malta-Vita, which contains a considerable percentage of Maltose, a natural sweetening agent, easily digestible and readily assimilated by the human economy, forming rich healthy blood.

Now for many years the medical profession have prescribed semi-solid Malt Extracts which contain a large percentage of "Maltose," but which cost from fifty cents to seventy-five cents per pound. "Malta-Vita" contains from eight to ten per cent of this wonderful blood-maker and costs but ten cents per package.

The malt extracts are also valuable on account of their containing the great digestive ferment—"Diastase." In the manufacture of Malta-Vita a malt extract is used, one that has been prepared in all its original purity in our own factory, which has diastasic equivalent of over seventy degrees by the Lintner method of analysis. This diastase acts upon the wheat and converts part of the already gelatinized starch into "Maltose" the blood-making and therefore life-giving Malt Suar. Malta-Vita is now 10 cents per package, the same big package you used to buy for 15 cents.

CUMMINS AS IOWA SENATOR

Will Not Oppose Dolliver But Probably Succeed Allison.

Sioux City, Iowa, June 6.—Governor Cummins will not oppose the re-election of Senator Dolliver. This information has been definitely conveyed to the politicians of this district in a manner to dispose of the alarm that had been aroused by persistent reports to the contrary.

Before he was elected to the senate, Jonathan Prentiss Dolliver represented this section of the state in the national house of representatives. All Northwest Iowa is recognized as Dolliver's very own. At the same time it has been the hotbed of Cumminism. During his long campaign against railroads and in favor of tariff reform, the governor has invariably had the backing of Northwest Iowa. The delegates to all conventions from the Tenth and Eleventh districts have been solidly for Cummins from the time he first snied his castor into the political arena.

Under the circumstances friends of Dolliver and Cummins have been greatly embarrassed by the reported prospect of a contest between them. Although identical, it has been an open secret that each viewed the other with distrust and that their apparent friendship did not extend below the surface. The governor was almost universally criticised by Dolliver's closest friends for not promptly repudiating the report that he had designs on Dolliver's seat the moment it became current. The statement was repeatedly published in January that Cummins was laying his wires for a campaign before the next legislature to succeed Dolliver. It was well known that in his heart Cummins aspired to the senate and would not be deterred from waging a fight against Dolliver by any considerations of personal friendship. But it was thought political considerations would prompt him to disavow such intentions at once.

The governor elected to ignore the newspaper comments and has to this date declined to make any public utterance on the subject. Some of the leading politicians in the Ninth, Tenth and Eleventh districts had reached the point where they had signified their choice as between the two, should Cummins make the race, though maintaining that they preferred to support both and hoped Cummins would wait until death or resignation removed Allison, who will be an octogenarian by the time his present term expores from the arena.

The situation has been relieved by the definite declaration by close friends of the governor, who are recognized as speaking authoritatively, that Cummins would not oppose Dolliver. The latter will, therefore, be elected by acclamation by the next legislature to be elected.

This, therefore, leaves Cummins to be provided for at the expiration of his present term as governor. It is practically conceded that he will be elected senator to succeed Allison, but there is no assurance that Allison will be out of the road for many a day. Allison is said to entertain an ambition to die in the harness and he is a man of great vigor for one of his years. Cummins does not feel that he dare drop out of public life and is, therefore, under the political necessity of either seeking a third term as governor or making a race for congress. The former would entail an upsetting of precedent and Congressman J. A. T. Hull, chairman of the committee on military affairs, who represents the Seventh district from which Cummins hails, stands in the way of the latter.

The governor's friends say he will only consent to run for a third term if nominated almost unanimously, and this, it is feared, the standpatters will never allow. Hull has served eight terms in congress and is exceedingly popular. He is a standpatter and can just about equally divide the vote of his district with Cummins. A compromise is being planned and is considered by both principals, whereby Hull will be made governor and Cummins will go to congress with the understanding that Hull will appoint him senator when Allison dies.

SEVERE WIND STORM.

Williamsport, Pa., June 6.—A severe wind and rain storm passed over this section last night, doing considerable damage. At Avis the hotel of T. Crenner was struck by lightning and destroyed. Several guests escaped attired only in their night clothes.

NAN PATTERSON QUITS.

Altoona, Pa., June 6.—Nan Randolph Patterson, discouraged, disheartened and completely broken in spirit, has severed her connection with "The Romance of Panama" company, with which she was touring, and has gone to her home in Washington, D. C. Just as she was about to enter the train for the East, she said, with tears in her eyes and with broken voice:

"I am awfully sorry that the people have so severely criticised me for adopting a course which, to me, seemed just and right. I want to do the right thing, and can see no harm in my going on the stage, which I have followed as a means of livelihood for some years. I believe that the company with which I was connected had something to do with the opposition raised against me, but surely I cannot be held responsible for this. When I signed a contract I had no idea of what I was going to do.

"I have no plans for the future. I am going to my father's home in Washington, where I shall remain until I am completely rested. Oh, if the people had only been more kind to me, when things were apparently bright after my terrible experience."

Miss Patterson made a poor showing on the stage here, being ill at ease and showing plainly that something was on her mind.

Six views of early Duluth have been acquired by the public library, and it is hoped that these six pictures may be the beginning of a larger collection that will grow in value with the increasing age of the city. The pictures have been enlarged from stereopticon views that were taken in the early days of the city, and will be particularly interesting to the old settlers. Two of the pictures are of Lower Lake avenue, one taken before the canal was cut through, and the other shortly after this had been accomplished. They will be hung in the art room of the library, and will be a source of interest and gratification to those who are concerned with keeping a record of Duluth in the early days.

Last evening the class play of the graduating class of the normal school was presented in the assembly hall of the school, and a large audience witnessed the old Greek tragedy which was chosen for representation. The precedent established last year of presenting on class evening one of the old Greek plays has proved a most interesting one, and under the direction of Miss Pendergast the play is given with a simple dignity that commands the serious attention of the audience. The "Ephigenia at Aulis" of Euripides was the play given last evening by the class of 1905. Costumes is the only outside aid employed, no scenery, with the exception of the entrance to a palace, which is used as a background, being used.

In the reading of all the characters a rare clearness of interpretation was marked, and the many lengthy speeches were followed with ease by those who were entirely unfamiliar with the lines. In the work of the chorus this was particularly remarkable, when one remembers the usual jumble that results when the same text is read by two or more, and fifteen comprised the chorus last evening.

Particularly pleasing last evening was the work of Miss Nellie Gorby, who assumed the part of Clytemnestra, the queen. Miss Gorby read the role with mature dignity that was charming, and looked the type of Greek womanhood much more easily than is possible for most modern girls. Miss Gorby took the part upon short notice, Miss Einarson, who was assigned the role, being ill. Miss Colbraith appeared as Agamemnon, and gave the long speeches of the king without a single sign of hesitancy, and when one considers how verbose the king was, the committing to memory of all his part was not a thing to be lightly undertaken. The entire play was remarkable in that respect, not a single moment did the audience feel it necessary to hold its breath while the prompter hunted up the place, and the actors stood uncomfortable and conscious. Menelaus was well taken by Miss Dysslin, and Miss Doran as Achilles was delightful. Miss Reau was Ephigenia, and the other parts were taken by Miss Harris, Miss Eaton and Miss Stevenson. The chorus was led by Miss Bessie Sturges, and was composed of Mrs. Bessie Giddings and Misses Edith Bell, Eliza Remfrey, Myrtle Stark, Gladys Shaw, Gertrude Schiller, Minnie Perttula, Estelle Hicken, Maude Talboys, Bessie Turnbull, Alice Conklin, Hilda Jorstad, Melinda Lavallee and Laila Scott.

Cost of Engagement Rings.

"You'd be surprised," said a Kansas City jeweler "to know how many engaged girls come in here to ask what their engagement rings cost. I can tell one the minute she steps up to the case. I always make it a point to add about $25 or $30 to the value of a ring, if it is one that costs less than $100, no matter whether it was bought here or not. I do that just to promote the happiness of all concerned.

"Yesterday a girl came in and showed me a ring worth about $85. She hemmed a little and then came right out and asked me what it was worth. I thought I'd do the young man a favor, so I said it must have cost $125.

"'You're wrong,' she replied with a superior air. I thought she knew it was worth less. I didn't want to appear as though I didn't know my business, so I said: "Well, of course, I wouldn't pay—'

"'You see,' she interrupted, 'I know it is worth at least $250. Char—er, a young gentleman friend of mine who knows, told me so.'

"Then, with a smile that was a half sneer, she swept out of the store."

THE BRIDE COOKED

Caladium Bulbs With Drawn Butter Sauce.

"Well, I'll tell you the whole story," said the bride, "and you can judge for yourself how it was. Soon after he had gone away that morning a lot of things came up from the grocery—chiefly vegetables and a little meat for dinner. I know most kinds of food when I see them, but among the vegetables were some that I didn't recognize. Perhaps I'm not very well acquainted with the looks of these things before cooking, anyhow. These new ones were either turnips or small rutabagas, though, and I fixed them. They peeled awfully funny and were hard as a brick and I concluded that they must be some new kind. Well, I followed the cook book recipe faithfully, but when it was finished it did not look as I'd expected it to."

"What did it taste like?" asked her friend.

"I can't describe it except that it was sufficiently dreadful. At first I though of throwing it away and then I was afraid that maybe Herbert was especially fond of this dish and that he would be disappointed when he asked for it. You d-d-don't know how a newly m-m-married woman feels about these things," said the bride, again on the verge of tears. "So when he came home I put the turnipy things on a dish and called him to dinner."

"Well, seeing that you were so awfully considerate as that I think he ought to have eaten it if it killed him," anounced her dearest friend, emphatically. "Men are so unappreciative, anyway."

"Herbert isn't unapreciative," said the bride indignantly. "He is just the kindest husband in the world, only—"

"Only he didn't like the vegetable, I suppose, and got mad about it," interposed the other.

"Nothing of the sort," responded Millie, "but when he tasted it he—well, he went straight up in the air and asked wildly if I were trying to poison him. It seems—it seems—"

"Well, what on earth was it?"

"Why, he'd bought a couple of fine caladium bulbs—those big elephants' ear plants, you know—that the grocer had a special sale on—expected to plant one on each side of the front steps. And I had—c-cooked 'em—with drawn butter sauce!"

The dearest friend regarded her in silence for a moment in an effort to suppress a grin. But she did not succeed, says the Chicago News.

THE TEST

By Nellie Cravey Gillmore.

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Selwyn laid aside his pen, and sat, for some moments, idly thrumming on the edge of the writing table with nervous, unsteady fingers. Overwork, a good deal of worry and a succession of business disappointments had made him look ten years older in the twelve months past, despite his bare twenty-eight.

Presently he resumed his calculations becoming so deeply absorbed as to hardly notice the quick opening and shutting of the library door. Mrs. Selwyn found a seat in a shadowed part of the room, and took up a magazine. Every now and then, she stole a furtive glance toward her husband, a little frown drawing her brows together. Finally, she yawned, threw down her book and crossed the room to Selwyn's corner.

"Come," she said, resting both hands on his bowed shoulders, "I want to talk to you."

Selwyn dropped his pen with a half-sigh, and reaching up, imprisoned her hands suddenly. I'm awfully busy tonight, dear. Won't another time do just as well?"

His wife glanced deprecatingly at the pile of papers that littered the table; then she looked anxiously into the upturned, care-worn face.

"No," she returned, shaking her head with a little smile, "no other time will do at all."

Selwyn rose and commenced to bring order out of chaos. In a little while he had restored each paper to its respective stronghold.

"Is it the opera or—"

"Nothing of so frivilous a nature," she broke in quickly.

"Then—"

Mrs. Selwyn hesitated a second before she resumed: "A letter came to me this morning. I have been considering the advisability of showing it to you. Your right to my confidence is, of course, unquestioned. On the other hand, I dislike extremely to bother you with personal matters at such an inconvenient time." She paused, seeking encouragement.

"Nothing that concerns you could possibly be a bother to me," he returned, as he pushed aside a couple of books.

"Then here it is." She drew forth a crumpled sheet of writing paper from her belt, and held it out to him, watching his expression keenly as he scanned the contents.

When Selwyn had finished, he refolded the letter with careful deliberation and handed it back to his wife. "You will have to use your own judgment in this," he said.

"I would far rather—"

"I beg your pardon—but I would far rather not."

"You are willing, then, to leave the matter absolutely to me?"

"Absolutely."

"Is that to be construed into respect for my ability, or—"

"I meant to prove my perfect trust in you."

Mrs. Selwyn smiled as she slipped into a chair and motioned her husband to take the one opposite.

"All men have a great many affairs of the heart, I suppose, before the one great—"

"Exactly."

"Which, of course, amount to very little in after years—"

"Nothing whatever."

Mrs. Selwyn smiled mysteriously as she tucked the letter back into her belt. "In that event," she observed reflectively, "I shall not give myself the trouble of further debate."

The other laughed, closing his eyes a bit wearily. "There is just one thing I will say," he remarked presently.

"And that?"

"I rather wish there was to be no company at all here for a few months at least."

"I feel that way exactly, only—as all arraungements have been made—"

"Of course. I merely wished to state that my feeling in the matter was entirely impersonal."

Mrs. Selwyn rose as he finished speaking, and went over to the writing table her husband had just vacated. She took up a pen and hastily dashed down the following:

Dearest Margaret:

By all means bring Miss Wethereld along. We shall both be delighted to see her. Fortunately, my husband is not of the sentimental, nor sensitive kind—consequently, there is no awkwardness whatever to be apprehended from a meeting.

Hastily and affectionately,

KITTY.

It was the first time in Katherine Selwyn's twenty-four years that she had ever been guilty of anything approaching innuendo, and the role sat awkwardly upon her. Still, she had no intention of going back now the thing was started. Anyway, the whole affair was more than half jest, so why should she feel any misgivings?

She made her toilet much earlier than usual, and with a more particular eye to personal adornment. Luckily, Miss Wethereld had not spoken to anyone but herself about the engagement for that evening, and Selwyn would naturally be off guard, thinking his wife safe in bed with a sick headache.

And if the truth was known, Kitty Selwyn's head did ache most distractingly and she would far rather, at the last minute, have been safe in bed than where she was. But she mustered her courage and went down full of determination to see the thing through at whatever cost. At the very worst, she could, in case of desertion, pass off everything as a huge joke.

She waited quietly till the last guest had settled to his or her respective amusement, the half-hour prior to dinner. Then, Selwyn went out on the veranda for his afternoon paper, she glided swiftly past him, dropping her fan by the seeming merest accident. The fan was an old one that belonged to Miss Wethereld and bore her name on one of the ivories. Selwyn stooped quickly and picked it up, examining the inscription with a curious expression. The next moment, he descended the veranda steps and followed the owner of it down a wide gravel path that led to the sycamore lane.

"You dropped this, I believe?"

It was quite dark now; only just light enough to distinguish the tall form of a young woman in a familiar white dress.

She held out her hand, bare of rings, and took the fan. "Thank you," she said, a bit under her breath.

Selwyn appeared to hesitate a moment before he turned to go.

"Dick!" This was a wild hazzard, but she dared it.

Selwyn turned, somewhat coldly, and moved back a pace. "Well?"

"Have you forgotten—everything?"

"That would, I think, be the wiser course for—both of us."

The young woman did not reply at once, keeping her face steadily averted. "A man's prerogative," she answered after a little, in a low, concentrated tone.

"I offered the only reparation in my power," he returned shortly, "and that, you would not accept."

At this juncture, a sudden stage fright overcame Mrs. Selwyn, and she turned and fled ignominiously, if with outward dignity.

Selwyn stood where she had left him for several seconds; then he whistled in a soft, amused little way, and started back up the lane.

When Mrs. Selwyn reached her room, she was out of breath and the prey to maddening emotions. What had he meant by—reparation? What could have been the significance of his stiff attitude? A thousand questions assailed her as she rapidly changed her gown for one of pale pink and went downstairs, notwithstanding the sick headache. Selwyn was the first to greet her. "I thought," he commenced—

"I am perfectly well, now," she interposed shortly, "—"

Selwyn captured both her hands and held her off at arm's length for an instant. "You're as white as death," he said sternly, "what have you been doing to yourself? You had no business whatever to get out of bed."

Then Mrs. Selwyn did a most absurd thing. She broke into a storm of sobs, and made a clean confession of her masquerade.

Her husband made no comment for some time. Many different emotions were depicted together on his grave, clean-cut face. Finally, he laughed in a little inscrutable way that belonged to him and said: "I knew it all along."

But to the present day Mrs. Selwyn has not ceased to speculate.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

A Thriving Village Grows Up Near Sault Ste. Marie.

Sault Ste. Marie—Within the past few months there has grown within forty miles of the Soo a thriving little town which is assured of activity for some years to come. This new dot on the map has been placed there by W. F. Fitch, president of the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic, and Chase S. Osborn of the Soo, former railroad commissioner, who are owners of the enterprise. The site of the settlement is what formerly was known as the Osborn caves, but which is now the scene of large limstone quarrying operations. The first step in the development of the community was accomplished last summer, when the South Shore built a branch road to the quarry. Following this a large crushing plant was installed and buildings to house men were constructed. At present about 200 tons of rock are being quarried daily, but this will be increased until the daily output reaches 350 tons, contracts having already been signed for the delivery of this amount to blast furnaces situated in the upper peninsula.

A gang of men will arrive at the Soo to commence work on the improvements contemplated by the Michigan State Telephone company. The work will require at least two months and in the neighborhood of 20,000 feet of cable will be strung.

Iron River—The soloonkeepers and law and order people at Iron River have reached a compromise, the former agreeing, it is said, to keep their places of business closed during church hours. This is what reformers would term "an organized conspiracy to defeat the law."

Bessemer—Last October while John Rowett was hunting in the woods north of Bessemer, he lost his watch. While going over the same ground again last Sunday he was fortunate enough to find it again. The time piece was lying in a small pool of water and when it was wound up readily started running, the works having been in no wise injured by being under the snow all winter.

Marquette—A bicycle rider, while coasting down hill here, struck and seriously injured John Foley, aged 73. He was arrested. Foley's recovery is doubtful.

VERY THIN ICE.

The desperate methods now being resorted to by the czar and his government lead to the conclusion that they are skating upon mighty thin ice, and that they realize it.

Since the defeat in the sea of Japan the acts of the government have been singularly like those of a crowd of men in a panic. The selection of Trepoff as dictator, with powers that appear to be formidable, is an act that would not appear to be calculated to quiet the people, or to soothe the ruffled state of affairs at home, especially as there is a popular belief, apparently, that he has been appointed for no other purpose than to crush popular movements of all kinds promptly, vigorously and mercilessly.

The fears of the czar are clearly exposed when he is driven to the length of the latest move, which is the prohibition of the all-Russian zemstvo congress, which was to have met in St. Petersburg today. Delegates were already on the ground, and every preparation had been made for the congress, which was to consist of 280 delegates from various zemstvos and municipalities, including the mayors of twenty-five cities. The introduction of resolutions calling for the immediate cessation of hostilities was proposed, and it is this that the government seeks to head off.

The arbitrary actions of the government have by no means tended to quiet affairs at home, and on the contrary seems likely to stir them up to a still more dangerous pitch.

Not only is the ice on which the Russian government is walking very thin indeed, but it appears to be cracking at an alarming rate.

THAT EXTRA SESSION.

The early extra session of congress seems to have been abandoned, and it does not now appear likely that there will be a beginning of the work of the national legislature until after the November elections.

Unless there are reasons for this change of plan which have not been made public, there is nothing either admirable or encouraging about it. It seems to have been the result of the pleadings of the politicians, and to have come from a fear that some effect unfavorable to the dominant party might result if congress got together before the elections, and failed to accomplish anything or show an honest intention of accomplishing anything. The distrust of congress involved in this reasoning may be justified, but it is by no means creditable to that body.

The calling of an extra session in November, but a short time before the regular opening, means practically nothing. There will be barely twenty days before the regular session, and congress will hardly get organized. The idea of a special session was to give railroad rate and tariff revision matters the prominence they deserve, and to prevent the professional obstructionists in congress from obscuring the vital issues by the routine of the regular session. That could be accomplished only by having the session begin long enough ahead of the regular session to put it up to congress to do something or to do nothing. In either event the session would serve its purpose. Either the legislation that is popularly demanded would be enacted, or congress would go on record against the will of the people.

To abandon this idea because several states will hold elections in November implies a doubt whether congress intends to do anything or not. It cannot fail to add to the popular distrust of the representatives of the people. It may be good politics from a Republican viewpoint, but it is not good business policy.

THE LOBBYIST.

The latest manifestation that the people are uprising and have a mind to put an end to the corruptive influences that dally with popular government is the campaign against the lobbyist.

True, the fight has been waged only by Governor La Follette and a few other strong-minded governors, but they merely represent a condition of public sentiment. The work of the lobbyist and the corruption of legislators has been a joke for a long time. The joke is beginning to wear out, and the hideous framework under it is becoming visible. The people are beginning to tire of having their representatives corrupted with bribes that they may work for the interests of selfish and predatory institutions whose welfare is often inconsistent with that of the state.

So Governor La Follette is trying to have an anti-lobby bill put through, and Governor Folk of Missouri, without waiting for any legislative action, gave the lobbyists of that state the alternative of proving that they were not lobbyists or of going out of town as ignominiously as any other malefactor is run out of the precincts of decency by the police. Governor Herrick of Ohio, in accepting his renomination recently, took occasion to refer to this movement and condemned the lobby vigorously. "I care not whether the object of the lobbyist be good or bad," he said; "it is subversive of the basic principles upon which American institutions are founded to permit a few men to direct or control legislation, and to put their judgment as to what is best for the people against that of the representatives of the people, elected for the sole purpose of registering their will."

The campaign against the lobby is good. It ought to spread to every state and be fought vigorously, uncompromisingly, and unmercifully. But in this fight it should be remembered that the lobby progresses, too, and that it is no longer the crude, coarse machine it was a few years ago. The real danger is not so much in the outsider, who is often a coarse imitation of diplomacy, as in the lobbyists who are in and of the legislatures, and that by right of a regular certificate of election. That is the modern way of doing business along these lines, and in the campaign against the lobbyist, the lobbyist-member should not be overlooked—he who, accepting an honored and honorable office from the people, betrays that office and for a higher price than the people pay, sells his vote and influence to interests that would and do rob the state and the people that put the traitor there. Compared with this infamous scoundrel, the real, open lobbyist is the soul of honor and a pattern of propriety.

EFFECT OF AGE.

The changes have been rung upon Dr. Osler's statement—which he says he did not make—that man's creativeness ceases at 40 and he ought to be chloroformed at 60, until the subject has become somewhat frayed and it stands, after all the discussion, just where it did before Osler spoke.

There can, of course, be no general rule of that sort. Some men develop their faculties quickly, others much more slowly. Some early-ripening geniuses do brilliant work at a tender age, while others, of slower growth, do not begin to produce their best until they are well advanced in years. Some men, by reason of congenital deficiencies, never do create or produce. Others are so full of life, of energy and of persistence that they continue their productiveness and usefulness until they are long past the allotted three score years and ten.

Each individual is a problem all to himself. Attempts at making general rules of this sort are vain, because there are no general rules. On the whole, Osler's theory has received more severe blows than almost any of the numerous startling theories that have come forth out of our colleges during the past few years, when the professors have apparently been engaged in a deadly rivalry to see which can make the most startling assertions. Instances of world masterpieces of literature, of art, of invention, of statesmanship, of scholarship produced at advanced ages have been abundantly put forth. Anybody can name dozens of them, and the well-informed can dig them up by thousands.

The issue of the individual problem depends upon heredity, environment, industry, persistence and energy, and especially upon each man's regard for his physical, moral and mental being, and his care to keep each branch of his entity in normal health.

YERBA MATE.

The glowing descriptions of yerba mate, the South American tea, given to the public by the state department in the flowing language of Consul Flagg of Rosario, Argentina, leads to the hope that there is still balm in Gilead for the tired, the weak and the depressed.

Yerba mate sounds like something we have all been longing for, and which we did not dream existed outside of the patent medicine advertisements. It sounds like the fountain of youth in search of which poor Ponce de Leon left his aged, weary bones in Florida. It sounds like the universal cure-all, like the philosopher's stone, like the elixir of life, like the catholicon. It sounds better than all the boluses, potions, simples, cordials, ptisans or theriacs that ancient or modern writers have ever written glowing lines about. It even sounds better, more wholesome, more potent and more desirable than a new breakfast food.

Listen to what it will do, as the enthusiastic language of Consul Flagg was reported by The Herald the other evening:

It is a food as well as a stimulant; it arrests the rapid consumption of tissue and the consequent feeling of weariness that comes from excessive labor of mind or body; it certainly does prevent hunger, as the Paraguayan starts out in the morning for a heavy forenoon's work with his paunch filled with nothing more substantial than yerba mate; it does the work of alcohol withouts its evil effects; it takes the place of coffee without producing biliousness or nervousness; it will do instead of tea, and has not the evil effects that lurk in the cup that cheers but not inebriates; it promotes digestion, and banishes the blues and discomfort of dyspepsia; it soothes the nerves and refreshes the tired body; it gives activity to the brain, stimulating man to his highest and noblest efforts.

Verily, Yerba Mate, thou are too good to be true!

Hotel Gossip.

"The biggest part of the state drainage appropriation should go to Northern Itasca and Beltrami counties," said T. J. McParthie of International Falls at the McKay. "On June 10 the state drainage board will meet at Bemidji and I will represent my home town at the meeting, in an attempt to impress the commissioners with the fact that most of the money should come to the Northern part of the state. Beltrami county will also have representatives there with the same object in view.

"Drainage is badly needed in the northern parts of these two counties. The soil up there along the river and ravine beds is of a peculiar formation, and of such a nature that water cannot easily penetrate it. One may often find, even during the dry months, that there is scarcely any water at all in some of the streams below the swamps, while the swamps themselves, located perhaps only two or three rods from the top of the hill leading to the creek bed, are filled with water, which seems unable to reach the streams because of this peculiar soil. In a case of this kind all that is necessary to drain the land is a short ditch, easily dug, from the crest of the hill to the edge of the swamp, and in some instances into the swamp itself a short distance. The expense of draining that whole region would not be nearly as great as would at first appear, owing to the fact that in both counties there are numerous streams with tributaries extending in all directions. The drainage ditches could be extended to these tributaries, and to the rivers themselves at smaller cost than is generally believed. Until this is done thousands of acres of good farming land will have to stand idle, retarding the general growth and development of the country.

"Very few people in International Falls claim to be making money. Everyone who takes up his residence or establishes himself in business there does so with an eye to the future. The town has great possibilities, and every citizen has unlimited faith in it. They expect to be on hand and ready for taking in the dollars when the boom comes. That it will come there is no doubt. The professions are already coming to be well represented. We have four lawyers, two doctors and a dentist. Eight saloons are required to quench the thirst of the people. Most of the trade of these thirsty parlors comes from the surrounding forests and the Canadian side. In Fort Francis the Dominion laws are strictly observed, and all saloons are closed up tight at 11 o'clock every night, and they are not open at all, even the side door, on Sundays. The Canadians have a good time on their side of the river until 11 p. m. and then they cross over to the American side and finish up, generally staying all night. If they want to do things on Sunday they have to remain with us all day."

"Summer clothes are patterned closely after spring clothes, save that they should be a bit roomier for comfort's sake," said T. G. Strom of New York, representing a clothing house, at the Spalding. "Tweed, flannel, homespun and serge are cool and sightly fabrics. The season's suits are cut loose, the coat falling straight from the shoulders without shaping in at the waist line, and the trousers are sufficiently full to allow ease and comfort, although they are not supposed to go to the extreme in point of bagginess.

"As a concession to the heat, and following out the usual hot weather custom, no waistcoat is worn, the leather belt replaces suspenders, and trousers are turned up at the bottom or not, just as the wearer pleases. Contrary to the belief of some persons, who see in it an aping of English customs, the practice of turning up the trousers in summer is a perfectly sound one. When suspenders are put aside for the belt, the bottoms of the trouser legs are apt to trail too low, unless the bottoms are folded up. Nothing denotes untidiness more than this.

"The low-cut russet shoe, which fastens with buckles instead of laces, is a bit of an innovation in certain parts of the East. The correct shoe is quite pointed at the toe and moderately high of heel. The practice many have of wearing patent leather shoes in the summer except with evening clothes shows poor taste and poor judgment. It is purely and primarily a dress shoe, and to use it for business or any other informal occasion is not what would be called very good form."

"There is a remarkable contrast between this weather and that which prevailed in St. Paul and Minneapolis Sunday and Monday," said T. A. Winstrom of Minneapolis at the St. Louis. "While you were wearing your overcoats up here the first two days of the week, and swearing because of the cold, the residents of the Twin Cities were complaining of the heat, and going about with no more clothing on than was absolutely necessary. It was hot and sultry, and everybody stuck to the shade."

"Texas is a remarkable state in more ways than one," said James Custer of St. Louis at the St. Louis. "I made a business trip down there a while ago. There were many things that impressed me about this great commonwealth, but its vast size impressed me most of all. They might as well make half a dozen states out of it, and none of them need be small ones. For plains, pasture land, cactus, sheep lands and wheat and cotton fields, Texas has the rest of the states beaten to a frazzle. Maybe wheat should be left out of the list, but there is a lot of it down there, nevertheless. Between the fertile sections were barren stretches overgrown with sage brush. There were cattle until you couldn't rest. Texas is too big and offers too much variety to be called a state. Better dub it a nation, set it off by itself and let it go at that."

The Weather.

The wind blew more than half a gale last night. And "himeby she blew some more." It howled down out of the northeast, roared around the roof, tore its way through the trees, ripping tough young leaves from the branches and strewing them over the ground, tore the fresh corollas of the fruit blooms into their individual petals and scattered them like tender young snowflakes. Out on the lake it ripped the waves into tatters, and scattered angry whitecaps everywhere. The waves rolled high, and spread themselves in fury against the canal piers and along the shore of the Point.

It was too much for that southwest wind that was to have brought warmer weather. It came up during the night, apparently, for there was a bit of an electric storm, but when it faced that stern, strong wind from over the waters of the lake, it grumbled a little in tones of thunder, and retreated.

The wind reached its climax at 5 o'clock this morning, when there was a terrific squall for about five minutes that brought its velocity up to 58 miles an hour. It fell off after that, and is expected to give way this evening to westerly winds which ought to bring warmer conditions. It will be partly cloudy tonight and Wednesday, with showers.

Last night's storm did not cause high winds anywhere in the lake country except on western Lake Superior. The storm is central over Southern Wisconsin, and light to heavy rains fell over most of the extreme northern states as well as Western Canada.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Frazee Free Press: State Auditor Iverson has adopted practical methods for the sale of state lands and is advertising in various newspapers throughout the state the same as real estate men are doing.

Mora Times: President James J. Hill says that the Panama canal will not hurt the railways. Mr. Hill does not see the point. No one wants the canal to hurt the railways. It is only hoped that it will prevent the railways from hurting certain sections of the country.

Hibbing Mesaba Ore: The Dunn gang of political plungers has already commenced the campaign for next year. A meeting was recently held to size up gubernatorial timber. Give Dunn another trial.

Deer River News: The season opening May 30 for bass is perfectly safe. We tried it—never a bite.

Bertha Headlight: The old saw "that everything comes to him that waits," is all right in a way, but you are more likely to get it if you let the other fellow do the waiting and go after what you want.

Little Falls Transcript: The railroad managers cannot fix fair freight rates as long as dividends and interest must be paid on watered stocks and bonds. As the government would ignore all these fictitious securities, lower rates would be fixed than now prevail. And that is just what the railroad owners fear. The water will be squeezed out of the inflated stocks and bonds.

Hendrum Review: The census now on is expected to show that Minnesota has passed the 2,000,000 mark. If the rest of the state has grown in the same proportion as the Red River Valley there would be close to 3,000,000.

Stephen Leader: The fastest event of the season occurred in Kansas a couple of weeks ago. It was a cyclone.

The Man Who Laughs.

Senator Depew recently gave utterance to this burst of philosophy: "The man who laughs is a doctor without a diploma. His face does more good in a sick room than a bushel of powders or a gallon of bitter draughts. People are always glad to see him. Their hands instinctively go out half way to meet his grasp, while they turn involuntarily from the clammy touch of the dyspeptic who speaks in the groaning key. He laughs you out of your faults, while you never dream of being offended with him and you never know what a pleasant world you are living in until he points out the sunny streaks in its pathway."

Anchored.

Cincinnati Enquirer: Stewart Edward White, the author, lost some money recently through the failure of a trust company.

In Santa Barbara one day he was introduced to an interesting young man from New York.

"What does that young man do?" Mr. White asked on the stranger's departure.

"He is attached to the Commercial bank," was the reply.

"Ah," said Mr. White, "so they attach them now, do they? It's not a bad idea."

Neatly Put.

Cincinnati Enquirer: John Burroughs, the famous natualist, was condemning the cruel sport of fox hunting.

"A red-faced English squire galloping after a fox," he said; "that, to my mind, makes neither an edifying nor a pleasant pitcure."

Mr. Burroughs smiled.

"A red-faced squire chasing a fox," he repeated. "The unspeakable in pursuit of the uneatable."

A REFUGE IN DISTRESS.

A fellow's father knows a lot
Of office work and such,
But when it comes to thinks like what
A boy wants, he ain't much;
For when it comes to cuts or warts,
A fellow's father don't know, but
A fellow's mother knows.

A fellow's father, he looks nice,
And says "A-hem! A-hem!"
But when it comes to cakes and pies
What does he know of them?
He knows the price of wheat and rye
And corn and oats, it's true,
But if you got the leg ache, why,
He don't know what to do.

And if you burned your back the time
That you went in to swim,
And want some stuff to heal it, why,
You never go to him;
Because he doesn't know a thing
About such things as those;
But you just bet, and don't forget
A fellow's mother knows.

And if your nose is sunburned till
It's all peeled off, and you
Go to him for some healin' stuff,
He don't know what to do.
He's just as helpless as can be;
But when a fellow goes
And asks his mother, why, you see,
A fellow's mother knows.

And if a fellow lost his top,
Or anything he's got,
A fellow's father never knows
If he's seen it or not.
And so a fellow never asks
His father, but he goes
And asks his mother, and you bet
A fellow's mother knows.

A fellow's father knows a lot,
But it ain't any use;
So if a fellow's really got
The leg ache or a bruise,
Or if there's anything he wants,
He gets right up and goes
And asks his mother, for, you see,
A fellow's mother knows.

His Job Is Skinning Eggs.

New York Press: For more than a week the man had been out of work. One Monday night, however, when he came back to the lodging house he reported "good luck."

"What are you going to do?" asked his friend.

"Break eggs," was the reply. "I've got a position in a cake and cracker factory. They have people in those concerns who do nothing but crack eggs. They begin at 8 o'clock in the morning and keep it up till 6 o'clock at night. In that time, they tell me, a man who has become expert at the business can break 9,000 eggs, or an average of 1,000 an hour. And he doesn't smash them all at one clip, either. He tackles them singly and disposes of them in groups of five. That is, in order to avoid any accident with overripe eggs, five of them are broken into a bowl and then added to the general stock."

"Great heavens!" ejaculated his friend. "What a monnotonous grind. How much do you get for it?"

"One dollar a day," said the lucky man. "When I get up to the thousand-an-hour mark I'll get $1.50."

Helping His Father.

Harper's Weekly: The small son of a clergyman who was noted for his tiresome sermons overheard two friends of his father saying how dry they were, and how hard it was to keep awake during them. The following Sunday, while the minister was preaching, he was astounded to see his son throwing pebbles at the congregation from the gallery. The clergyman frowned angrily at him, when the boy piped out in a clear treble voice:

"It's all right, pop. You go on preaching, I'm keeping them awake."

Moral: Subscribe Now.

Kansas City Journal: A man who was too economical to subscribe for his home paper sent his little boy to borrow the copy taken by his neighbor. In his haste the boy ran over a $4 stand of bees and in ten minutes looked like a warty summer squash. His cries reached his father, who ran to his assistance, and, failing to notice a barbed-wire fence, ran into it, breaking it down, cutting a handful of flesh from his anatomy and ruining a $5 pair of pants. The old cow took advantage of the gap in the fence and got into the cornfield and killed herself eating green corn. Hearing the racket, the wife ran, upset a four-gallon churn of rich cream into a basket of kittens, drowning the whole flock. In her hurry she dropped a $25 set of false teeth. The baby, left alone, crawled through the spilled cream and into the parlor, ruining a $20 carpet. During the excitement the oldest daughter ran away with the hired man, the dog broke up eleven setting hens, and the calves got out and chewed the tails off four fine shirts.

The West and Morton.

Kansas City Star: Locating in New York upon his retirement from the cabinet July 1, would not alter the fact that Paul Morton, secretary of the navy, is a Western man through and through. He was born in the West, brought up in the West and is completely animated by the Western spirit. That is the reason that he is wanted in the East.

Mr. Morton's successful association with the Santa Fe railway for many years rather seemed to justify the hope that he would resume his connection with that system at some future time. It is known that the company shared this desire and employed strong influences to perfect such an arrangement. But there is always a ready demand in New York for such talent as Mr. Morton possesses and with inducements that are not easy to withstand.

Accepting as authentic the statement that Mr. Morton will assume the management of the New York subway and the elevated railway system at a salary equal to that of the president of the United States, he would be merely following the lead of many strong and able men from the West who have been called to the financial capital of the nation by powerful corporations. Unusual distinction has attached to the career of Paul Morton through his connection with the cabinet, and his close association with President Roosevelt. While this enlarges his prestige it has not caused it. It was his great good fortune to be born in a part of the country where his fine natural equipment found the very best natural development and where it attracted the most flattering attention.

Mr. Morton may decide not to return to the locality of his beginning, but he belongs to the West, and it is the West that will have a special right to feel gratified over the distinction which he is certain to achieve in whatever field he may elect to employ his powers.

Has made hundreds of new friends for us and has cemented the old friendships more closely. It has eliminated all "dickering" from stove buying, and has made our prices so far below competitors that there is no argument left. To see our stoves and their prices is to fully realize that fact. Under this system all stoves are marked in plain figures at their lowest possible cash price (or money value) which is from $5 to $15 less—grade for grade—than the lowest price that can be obtained in any of the "trade back" stores. If you wish to purchase on EASY PAYMENTS, you may do so at the cash prices on the most LIBERAL TERMS for which we charge you NOT ONE CENT.

Maj. Potter Makes Inquiries as to Improvement Desired.

Congress Provides For Examining Keweenaw Point For Harbor.

The last river and harbor act passed by congress provides for the preliminary examination of the south shore of Lake Superior, in the vicinity of Keweenaw Point, with a view of determining whether a harbor of refuge should be established in that locality.

In order that the government engineers may go at work intelligently on this question, Maj. Charles L. Potter, engineer in charge of this district, which also includes Keweenaw Point, has decided to send out letters of inquiry, which will be forwarded to all the different steamboat interests, and to influential citizens, as far as possible, of the northern peninsula of Michigan, and to all other parties that might be interested in the proposed harbor of refuge.

In his letter, Maj. Potter has outlined several specific things regarding which he desires information.

These are as follows:

"1. What interests caused this provision to be included in the bill?

"2. What were their ideas in having such a provision made?

"3. What class of vessels it is proposed to accommodate?

"4. What use the different vessel interests would expect to make of such harbor?

"5. What harbor, if any, was in mind by the interested parties?

"6. Any information any one may have relative to the subject?

"7. As the question seems to lie between Copper Harbor and Lac La Belle, which in your opinion would best serve the purpose, and why?

"8. Is any other harbor of refuge needed near Keweenaw Point, and why?"

Copper Harbor is situated at the most northerly point of the great Keweenaw peninsula, which extends out nearly to the middle of Lake Superior. It is a snug, landlocked harbor, three miles long and of 1,700 feet average width. Around Keweenaw Point great storms come from the northeast and the northwest, and against these the harbor offers ample protection, not only from the waves, but from the wind. The water is generally deep, with good holding ground in the west end, there being an area of about 320 acres, with more than eighteen feet depth. There is also eighteen feet depth at the entrance at low water datum for a width of 280 feet.

Lac La Belle and Bete Grise bay are on the east side of Keweenaw Point, near the northeast extremity. Lac La Belle is a small island lake, about two miles long, a half mile wide and thirty feet deep, distant about three-fourths of a mile from Lake Superior. In 1866 a canal to connect with Lake Superior was cut by a private corporation. In 1884 this cut was practically 100 feet wide at the top, 75 feet at the bottom, and at least 12 feet deep for its entire length, extending from 16 feet depth in Bete Grise bay to 14 feet in Lac La Belle. In 1901 the canal had so filled up that only rowboats or fishboats could pass through and vessels of eight feet draft could get up to the south pier of the entrance.

SHEA IS ARRESTED AND PLACED IN JAIL.

Chicago, June 6.—Cornelius P. Shea, president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, and leader in the strike which has existed in Chicago for the last two months, was arrested and taken to jail last night. With him on the journey from the saloon in which he was arrested and taken to the office of the sheriff, and then to the jail, was Hugh McGee, president of the Truck Drivers' union. Both men were taken into custody on capiases issued on indictments charging them with conspiracy which were voted by the grand jury that adjourned last Saturday night.

NO AUTHORITY

To Rent City Hall For Courthouse Purposes.

St. Paul, June 6.—Attorney General E. T. Young yesterday interfered in the county seat fight between Thief River Falls and Red Lake Falls, when he decided that the common council of Thief River Falls under the law is not permitted to lease its city hall for use as a courthouse for a rental of $1 a year.

The county seat is located at Red Lake Falls and Thief River Falls is anxious to get it. As an inducement, the city council has offered to rent the city hall for use as a courthouse for $1 per annum. The city attorney of Red Lake Falls submitted the proposition to the attorney general with a request for an opinion on the validity of such a transaction. The attorney general decides that a common council has no authority to rent a public building for other purposes than those for which it was intended, especially when the rental is a nominal sum.

ESTATE WORTH $30,000,000

Will of Late William Zeigler Filed For Probate.

New York, June 6.—The will of William Ziegler, the patron of Arctic explorations, was filed in this city yesterday. The estate is estimated to be worth $30,000,000 and after provision is made of $50,000 annuity to Mrs. Ziegler, together with the use of the Ziegler city and country homes, the residue of the estate is bequeathed to Mr. Ziegler's adopted son, William, who is now 14 years old. It provides that the son shall enter into gradual enjoyment of the estate, beginning when he is 25 years and ending when he is 40.

No provisions are made in the will for the continuation of Arctic exploration, but William S. Chant, Mr. Ziegler's secretary, who is now on his way to the Arctic region in search of and to succor the Ziegler expedition in charge of Anthony Fiala, is made one of the executors of the estate.

To Build New Dock.

The Northern Coal Dock company, successors to the Jones & Adams company, is continuing its arrangements for a new coal dock to be erected on Connor's Point, opposite the coal dock now under construction for Hanna & Company. The company plans to spend about $200,000 on the project, the ground being graded this summer and the construction and placing of machinery to be done next fall.

Condition Due to Illness.

Siwert Anderson of Proctorknott was examined before Court Commissioner C. E. Adams yesterday afternoon and was pronounced to be sane. As Anderson was penniless, weak and nervous for want of proper food and had no means of support, the court commissioner directed that he be sent out to the poor farm. Anderson's memory is a blank and the members of the examining board decided that he is recovering from a serious illness and that as he gains strength his mental condition will improve. It is believed that his recovery will be hastened by sending him to a place where there are the proper sanitary conditions and where he can be cared for until he gets stronger.

Will Investigate Forest Fires.

John P. Rosenwald, state fire warden, is in Duluth to make an investigation of the causes of the forest fires which several days ago destroyed several thousand dollars worth of timber and wood at Lakewood and beyond. It was reported at the time of the fire that it was started by a settler burning brush. The law provides that the starting of any fire in brushwood, logs or timber in a negligent manner is a misdemeanor and the person on whom the blame falls can be arrested and prosecuted.

BASEBALL IN COPPER LAND

Teams In Upper Peninsula Going at Fast Pace.

Calumet, Mich., June 6.—The fight for the pennant in the Copper Country-Soo league in the first three weeks of the season has resolved itself into a walkaway for Calumet. The aristocrats have dropped only two games since the opening day. While outbatted in several games, team work has won for them, and the pinch play has been worked successfully, not once, but repeatedly. While Manager Fitchel feels that while his club is the strongest, he is not content with it at present, and there will be some changes.

Thomas Leahy, captain and catcher of the university of Wisconsin team, and Con Lewis, the fast outfielder of the same team, will join the aristocrats this week. Their coming will undoubtedly result in a different lineup. It is likely that Lewis will take Ryan's place in right field. Ryan is batting well and fielding cleverly, but he is not up to Lewis, and will be given his release. He should find no difficulty in finding a berth with one of the other teams. Leahy, who was signed principally for utility purposes, will be stationed at first base and will catch in some of the games. Mutter, the regular catcher, playing first base those days. Pell, who has covered the initial sack since the season opened, will be released.

Numerous changes have been made in the Hancock team. William C. Roche of Detroit, who signed a contract before the season opened to catch, failed to report and was suspended. He has now come to terms and has been given his reinstatement. Perley Croze, catcher, will probably be released. John O'Hara, who tried for third base, was released. Roy S. Gregory, pitcher, and William Wallace were also released. Fred Mason of Grand Rapids, who had the top of one of his fingers taken off in a train accident several days ago, will get into the game in a few days. He will play first base, and Watson, who covered that position, goes to the third sack. Gregory and Wallace, the men released, with George Penegar of Hancock, went to Iron Mountain to play on the independent team there. Hancock has also released John Bricketto, who signed early in the season.

Sault Ste. Marie arrived in the copper country last week for its second series with the local clubs. Several changes for the better have been made in the lineup. Rufks, who played third and caught in a few games, covers first base, and Lizotte has gone behind the bat. Brown, who was released by Lake Linden, is playing third. Frank Barrell was released. The Soo appears to be weakest in its pitching department. Harry Martin, who was catching, was recalled by John Ganzel to play with his Grand Rapids Central league club.

Lake Linden has suspended James B. Hotten of Chicago for failure to report. Kirke, a new catcher, has been signed and make his first appearance this week. The lakes took the long end of the series at the Soo, and by defeating Hancock went into second place. The team is putting up a much better game now and will give Calumet a harder rub in their next series.

Marquette, which applied for a franchise in the league this season, but was refused, will have a chance to see a league contest on June 13. Lake Linden and Sault Ste. Marie have transferred one of their games to that city and if the attendance warrants, other games may be transferred. A special train over the South Shore will carry the copper country fans to the game and special trains will accommodate the iron country fans. Marquette will undoubtedly renew its application for a franchise next spring and the action of the league magnates will depend largely on the results of the games there this summer.

Jimmy Foulkes, a southpaw pitcher with Calumet last season, has signed with Green Bay, Wis. So far President Orr's staff of umpires has given fairly good satisfaction. McWatters of Chicago will last through the season, but McQuirk of Brooklyn, N. Y., has met with some opposition.

TORNADO KILLS AND INJURES

Disastrous Storm In "Thumb" District of Lower Michigan.

Detroit, June 6.—An eletrical storm which seems to have gone through Lower Michigan late yesterday took the form of a tornado in the "Thumb" district. Through the counties of Tuscola and Sanilac it swept a path of death and devastation half a mile wide.

The dead:

MARY SMITH, child of John Smith, a farmer, near Urban.

CHILD of EDWARD PHILPOTTS, a farmer, near Urban.

Fatally injured: Three children of Edward Philpotts; small son of John Smith; Mrs. Wagner; Mrs. William Hutchinson; William Dosser, a farmer.

Seriously injured: John Smith, arm broken; child of John Smith, arm torn off; Edward Philpotts.

In addition to the above Elsie Appleman, aged 12, was killed by lightning at Hemlock, in Saginaw county, and George Morrow was fatally injured at Central Lake in Antrim county.

Three men who had taken refuge with Morrow in a vacant building also sustained severe shocks.

The tornado started northeast of Caro and took a northeasterly direction, sweeping a path half a mile wide in which residences and farm buildings were razed to the ground and stock and crops suffered heavy damage.

Before crossing the line from Tuscola into Sanilac county, the storm spread in two parts. The weaker division passed through Novesta and Snover, while the more destructive branch passed farther to the north reaching Cass City, Urban and Laing.

Chippewa Falls, Wis., June 6.—Great damage has been caused by high water. All buildings and streets in the lower part of the city are flooded. A lumber company has lost thirty million feet of logs by the breaking of a boom. A rise of ten feet in the river is predicted.

Binghamton, N. Y., June 6.—The worst tornado that ever visited this place blew down a large number of houses and barns in the section of the city south of the Susquehanna river last night. This tornado destroyed buildings for several blocks, but so far as reported no one was killed and only one person badly injured. One house was lifted from its foundation and carried several blocks. The family was in the house during its transit and no one was hurt.

TURN HIM DOWN

Rev. J. A. Nyvall Not to Be Pastor of Bethany Church.

Opposition Prevents Election—Olander of Muskegon Now Mentioned.

Bethany Lutheran church of Twenty-third avenue west and Third street, does not want Rev. J. A. Nyvall of Moorhead as pastor. The congregation voted on the matter last night, but the required two-thirds vote necessary for a choice lacked just five of complement. There has been some opposition to Mr. Nyvall in the church ever since his name was first proposed, and it is evident that the opposition has been working, for last night three members of the council, who voted in the council to recommend Mr. Nyvall, voted against him.

The advisory council without dispute a short time ago voted to recommend to the congregation Mr. Nyvall, expressing the belief that he is the best-fitted available man to fill the place opened by the resignation of Mr. Elmquist.

It is now up to the council of the church to meet and consider somebody else for the place, which will likely be done at once. When the council thus meets, it will cal one or more pastors to speak before the congregation as Mr. Nyvall did last Sunday, and then it will be up to the congregation again. It is understood that the opposition to Mr. Nyvall was not based on personal feeling against him or anything like that, but because his English is deficient and he cannot make a speech or preach a sermon in English. The English-speaking element in the church is growing and becoming more powerful all the time so that a minister who can speak in either language readily is required.

When the meeting opened, the name of Rev. J. T. O. Olander of Muskegon, Mich., was presented as a candidate, by a gentleman named Johnson. It was seconded but was ruled out by Rev. Mr. Elmquist, who was in the chair. The motion on Mr. Nyvall was then put and voted down.

The church council met last night after the meeting, but took no action. It will meet again in a few days and it is probable another pastor will be called. It may be that Mr. Olander, whose name was presented last night, will be given a chance.

RECORD OF THE PAST

No Stronger Evidence Can Be Had In Duluth.

Look well to their record. What they have done many times in years gone by is the best guarantee of future results. Anyone with a bad back; any reader suffering from urinary troubles, from any kidney ills, will find in the following evidence proof that relief and cure is near at hand.

Leander Sinotte, rug manufacturer and carpet cleaner, of 1701 Michigan street, Duluth, Minn., and living at the corner of Michigan street and Eighteenth avenue, says: "Some six years ago I gave a testimonial in favor of Doan's Kidney Pills, because I felt so well pleased with the prompt relief from trouble with my kidneys and back, which the use of this remedy brought me. I had been annoyed with constant, dull pain across the loins and through the kidneys. To stoop or attempt to lift anything was sure to bring on sharp twinges of pain. The action of the kidneys were irregular. I tried many remedies, until I got Doan's Kidney Pills, but found little relief and no permanent benefit. The treatment with this remedy completely drove out the whole trouble, and as six years have passed without any return of the complaint I consider my cure a permanent one."

FOREHEAD DENTED.

Young Hanson's Escape In Runaway Miraculous.

Hartwick T. Hanson, the young man injured Sunday in a runaway, is getting along well, but his escape may be said to be amost miraculous. He evidently fell on a pile of rocks for his face is badly cut and bruised, and worse still, the skull of his forehead over and between the eyes is dented inwards. His injuries, however, are less serious than at first feared. He is a son of Former Alderman P. G. Hanson.

Miss Clara Jensen of 125 North Twenty-fifth avenue west, the young lady who accompanied him on his wild ride, is pretty thoroughly shaken up and unstrung, but otherwise is but slightly injured.

Confirms Class at Alborn.

Rev. A. F. Elmquist visited Alborn, Minn., on Sunday, where he confirmed a class of four in Bethlehem Lutheran church there. Two of the class were English and two were Swedish. This was the first meeting held in the new church which was recently completed there, and the attendance was large and apparently pleased over the opening of the new house of worship.

PRINCIPAL FIRED

Superior Board of Education Suspends T. W. McQuarrie.

Charges Made That He Drew Cartoons For Strikers.

Another chapter was added to the Superior public school rumpus last evening when the board of education, after a stormy session voted to suspend Principal T. W. McQuarrie of the Carpenter school, who was charged with aiding in the publication of "The Spirit of '76," a leaflet printed and circulated by high school pupils in Superior when they went out on a strike.

Mr. McQuarrie appeared before the board and was queried for three hours by the commissioners but, on the advice of his attorney, he refused to answer any questions concerning the charges until all the evidence was brought forth by the person making them, to substantiate their truthfulness.

The purpose of the queries was to get Mr. McQuarrie to admit that he drew the cartoons that appeared in the leaflet.

Failing to get any satisfactory answers from Principal McQuarrie the board asked that he and his attorney retire, when they proceeded to discuss his case. One of the commissioners claimed that Mr. McQuarrie had been heard over the telephone in a conversation the nature of which tended to show that he was director of the publication. The commissioner urged that the principal be expelled. Others opposed this procedure until McQuarrie had been heard.

The principal and his attorney were then called back and Mr. McQuarrie made a statement to the effect that he would stand his ground and refuse to answer any questions until the evidence had been presented showing there was some cause other than mere hearsay or street talk.

Following this statement the board voted his suspension, the vote standing six to one, three commissioners being absent.

After the vote had been taken, Archibald McKay, attorney for Mr. McQuarrie declared that it had not been prompted by any intention to benefit the school but that he believed the whole affair was prompted by personal motives.

This declaration stirred up the wrath of the commissioners and one of them resented it in a warm speech. Mr. McKay then told the commissioners that they had exceeded their authority.

Principal McQuarrie refuses to make any public statement at the present time.

STATE LABOR BUREAU

To Co-Operate With Duluth Free Employment Agency.

St. Paul, June 6.—It was announced at the office of the labor commissioner yesterday that arrangements have been perfected whereby the state free employment bureau will co-operate with the city free agency bureau at Duluth in an attempt to supply the demand for help on the iron range and in the northern part of the state.

Applications for help, or for work in the northern part of the state received at the Minneapolis bureau, or the labor commissioner's office at St. Paul, will be forwarded to the Duluth agency, and when occasion demands, the Duluth agency will call on the state bureau for assistance.

The labor commissioner is perfecting arrangements with five other states and one territory, South Dakota, Iowa, Wisconsin, Oklahoma, Missouri, Kansas, to supply harvest hands for the farmers of Minnesota and other Northwestern states.

SMOKE ORDINANCE IS TOO STRINGENT

Railroad and Corporation Attorneys Against Present Wording.

Owners of Bridge Patents Will Push Their Claims.

The council last evening:

Postponed action on smoke ordinance, to hear protests against it.

Received notice of a claim of $20 a day for use of patents on aerial bridge.

Took means to check use of streets for indefinite time by house movers.

Gave police permission to employ Bertillion expert during Eagles' convention.

Requested owner of new theater building to make wall between stage and auditorium, fireproof.

Ordered board of public works to advertise for third time for bids on concrete walks.

At the request of Joseph B. Cotton and W. D. Bailey, representing several of the railroad companies running into Duluth and some of the largest manufacturing concerns in the city, the smoke ordinance was laid over for two weeks, pending a conference which will be held on Friday, June 16, in the office of Alderman Wilson.

Mr. Cotton and Mr. Bailey protested against the ordinance in its present form, as being entirely too stringent.

"I don't believe that anyone will take issue with the fact that a reasonable and fair smoke ordinance is necessary in a city the size of Duluth," said Mr. Cotton. "But this ordinance declares the emitting of dense smoke to be a nuisance. Now the railroad companies have public duties to perform, and to perform them they must have locomotives. To run locomotives they must have fires, and everyone knows that a locomotive couldn't be run through this city on one fire. Every time coal is put on we have smoke. The locomotives have a high pressure and a firebox that is limited in size, and to say that no dense smoke shall be emitted, is to deny us the use of our engines."

Mr. Bailey stated that he had nothing to add to what Mr. Cotton had said, but suggested that the council refer the matter to the city's legal department and to the ordinance committee, and get some pointers from St. Paul, where the smoke ordinance has caused no little discussion of late.

"If it were referred to the committee, I have no doubt an ordinance could be drafted which would be satisfactory to all parties," said Mr. Bailey, and his suggestion was adopted by the council.

Claiming the sum of $20 per day for the use of patent rights on the aerial bridge, Ayers & McDonald, a firm of Minneapolis lawyers representing W. T. Burns, who, it is asserted, owns the patent rights for a swinging ferry bridge, sent a communication to the council last evening demanding the sum of $1,600 for fifty days' use of the bridge and threatening to seek a restraining order if it were not paid.

The matter was referred to the city attorney.

• • •

Alderman Harker, in a resolution which passed without opposition, instructed house moving contractors when applying for a permit in future, to state the length of time they will require to move the building.

The motion was the result of the fire which occurred Sunday evening on East Seventh street. Alderman Harker stated that a building being moved by John A. Johnson had blocked Ninth avenue east for several days, and that the fire apparatus could not get through to the fire, but had to go around by Tenth avenue, where the road was in bad shape.

"I believe that if that house had not been in the road one of those houses which was burned would have been saved," said Mr. Harker, "and I think we should take steps to see that our streets are not blockaded for an indefinite length of time by houses being moved."

Under the new ruling the contractor must state the length of time he will require and furnish bonds to complete the work within that time before a permit will be issued to him.

• • •

Chief of Police Troyer, in a communication, stated that Duluth would probably be a stopping place for thieves on their way from the East to the Portland exposition, and that especially during the big convention of Eagles the city would probably be a Mecca for pickpockets and confidence men attracted by the prospect of a big gathering of excurisonists. He asked permission to employ J. C. Murnane, the Bertillion expert from St. Paul, for the four days during the convention, for a compensation of $5 per day, to assist in running down any professional thieves who might visit the city at that time.

The request was granted.

• • •

In order to easily determine the ownership of any telephone or telegraph pole in the city, Alderman Harker requested the city attorney to prepare an ordinance compelling all telegraph and telephone companies to place name plates on their poles.

• • •

Mayor Cullum, in a communication, called attention to the fact that $36,000 of 6 per cent water and light bonds will fall due May 1, 1906, and urged the council to prepare to take care of the bonds in plenty of time in order to prevent any embarrassment.

• • •

The two aldermen from the Eighth ward disagreed on the question of transferring a liquor license from the Bowery to Fifty-seventh avenue west and Second street. Alderman Getchell was opposed to it on the ground that a number of citizens in the vicinity had petitioned against another saloon in that district. Alderman Chesney stated that some of the same people had told him they do not care one way or the other. The permission to move the saloon was granted, Aldermen Wilson and Getchell voting against it. Aldermen Barnes and Moore were absent.

• • •

City Attorney Bert Fesler reported that the council had no power to appropriate money for the entertainment of the delegates to the convention of chief engineers of the fire department, which will be held in Duluth in August.

• • •

The owners of the new Bijou building now under construction, were requested to build the wall between the stage and the auditorium of fireproof material.

Building Inspector Kielley reported that under the present laws he had no power to compel the contractors to do this, but recommended that the council request it done.

• • •

The council was requested to sanction the purchase of an automobile for the chief of the fire department. The matter was referred.

• • •

Isaac Deatheridge filed notice of a claim against the city for $719.50, which he claimed to be due him for damage done to his stock at the corner of Central avenue and Bristol street, by the bursting of a water main on July 3, 1904. The claim was referred to the city attorney.

• • •

City Engineer McGilvray reported the estimated cost of paving Third avenue west from Michigan to Second streets with creosote blocks to be $10,894.12, and with sandstone, $8,852.25.

• • •

The board of public works was directed to advertise for the third time, for bids on the cement and tile sidewalks to be laid during the year. On the first occasion all bids were thrown out by the council as being too high. On the second advertisement no bids were received, and a third trial will be made.

"I believe we are paying too much for our cement sidewalks," said Alderman McEwen." When in Little Falls recently I was told they got their cement sidewalks for less than $1 a yard. Here we were asked to pay 17 cents a square foot or $1.53 a square yard. I want to see the contractors make a fair profit, and the workmen get a fair wage, but at the same time we have the interests of the people to look after, and I think this price is exorbitant."

The Stage

COMING ATTRACTIONS.

LYCEUM—Friday and Saturday and Saturday matinee, Grace Van Studdiford in "The Red Feather."

"THE RED FEATHER."

"The Red Feather," the principal comic opera success of last season, with its brilliant star, Grace Van Studdiford, will be seen in this city for the second time next Friday and Saturday evenings, with Saturday matinee at the Lyceum theater.

The music of this charming opera is after DeKoven's best style and is marked by his individuality in a very pleasing way; that peculiar quality which distinguishes the great composer's works from compositions by other musicians is present in a large degree; that distinctive air which dominates all DeKoven's selections is present in every number and cannot be mistaken for the inspiration of any other man. The score of "Red Feather" is original and there is never a reminiscent strain to awake the echoes of previous music to the annoyance of the listener. Many consider it the best this noted composer has yet written, and it is away above that of most comic operas. The book, too, which was written by Charles Klein, has a plot worth the hearing and seeing; and its lyrics, the work of Charles Emerson Cook, are something more than clever versification.

Miss Grace Van Studdiford has never been seen to better advantage than as the Countess Hilda Von Draga. She is a picture to gaze on in the handsome costumes which add to her personal charm, and in the dramatic scenes she is all that could be asked for by the most exacting critic.

A PLAN TO EVADE LAW

Scheme Devised to Place Bets on Races In St. Louis.

Chicago, June 6.—Horse racing is to continue in St. Louis despite the passage by the Missouri legislature of the anti-betting law, which goes into effect June 17. At the monthly meeting of the board of stewards of the Western Jockey club, permission was granted the Delmar Jockey club to conduct a race meeting beginning June 12. The officials of the Delmar track believe they have evolved a plan by which the anti-betting legislation can be evaded and still allow patrons of the track to place wagers on the results of the races. The law recently passed in Missouri against betting on horse races treats only of "registering" bets and by the new method of betting to be adopted, no registering of any wager will be made. Instead every attendant at the course will be requred to buy a badge for $1, which will admit him to the grounds and betting ring. On the back of this badge will be several leaves, like those of a season ticket. Each leaf will be numbered and when a better desires to make a wager, he will simply tear off one of these numbered leaves, write down the amount he wishes to risk and hand the leaf to the bookmaker with his money. Every horse in each race will have a file provided for him in the bookmakers stand, corresponding to his number on the racing program and any bet on this animal will be simply placed on the file of that number. After any race, the bookmaker's clerk will simply carry the files bearing the names of the horses finishing in the first three positions to the cashier's stand. When a better presents his badge, his own leaf will be looked upon the file and the bet will be paid. By this method, the officials of the track declare they will be able to evade the law against betting as technically no registering of the bet will have been made. There is no penalty in the present law of Missouri for making or receiving a bet, the registering of a bet alone being mentioned as a felony.

WORK POSTPONED

On Sanitarium For Consumptives at Walker.

St. Paul, June 6.—It has been announced by the state board of control that work on the proposed sanitarium for consumptives at Walker will be postponed until next year. This has been decided upon as a result of the action of the recent legislature in making half of the $50,000 appropriation available in 1906.

The board takes the position that since it is desirable to erect as large and substantial a building as the appropriation will allow, it is best to wait until the entire sum is available. Besides, the board does not know where it is going to get maintenance funds, as the $50,000 is appropriated exclusively for buildings. The attorney general has not decided whether a balance of $17,000 from last year can be used for maintenance.

The girl had been to school in the forenoon and when she came home for lunch, she was scolded by her father for some trivial offense. She went to a drug store and purchased the acid, returned to her home and drank the poison, dying in a few moments.

MOTHER'S FRIEND

IN UNIQUE SIEGE

Frenchman Keeps 700 Soldiers at Bay For Ten Days.

Stronghold Being Blown Up, He Fled But Was Captured.

Paris, June 6.—Since the Three Musketeers held their bastion against a whole army France has witnessed some novel sieges, but never a sturdier defense than that made by Francois Roy, the gamekeeper, who recently kept 700 gendarmes and troops at bay for ten days.

Roy is a peppery tempered old fellow of 70, but still remarkably spry on his legs and tough as hickory. He had been a soldier in his earlier days. Later he had become a gamekeeper, and was suspected of using that office to facilitate his own exploits as a poacher. Anyhow he was accused of preying on the game he was paid to protect and lost his situation in consequence. He swore to be revenged on those who had caused him to be deprived of his situation. At the first chance he fired on one of the men who had lodged information against him. That brought the law down on him and a warrant was issued for his arrest.

Roy declared that like the old guard he might die, but never would surrender. He retired to his little cottage and prepared it to withstand a siege. Standing alone on a slight eminence in the village of Usseau, near Chatellerat, it was well situated for defense.

Roy laid in a stock of ammunition and provisions, pierced the four walls with loopholes, and took pot shots at all emissaries of the law who approached within range. The discreet civilian authorities thereupon turned over the job of capturing him to the military. No local police force in America would ever acknowledge itself incapable of dealing with one man under any circumstances, but they have different notions in France of how the dignity and supremacy of the law should be maintained.

No fewer than 600 infantry and three brigades of gendarmes surrounded the old fellow's improvised fort. Such formidable measures to subdue one man would have excited ridicule in any other country, but Gallic sense of humor is a queer thing.

Railway companies ran excursion trains to the village to enable visitors from afar to witness the imposing spectacle. At one time there were several thousand of them present. When there was no shooting going on they entertained themselves with open air dances to the music of fiddles and gramophones.

A French general of division—Gen. Badin, one of the Tonkin heroes—was put in charge of the siege operations. He conducted them in accordance with the latest and most approved methods of scientific warfare, which is opposed to all needless risk of life. A cordon of troops was posted around the house to keep civilians from crossing the fire zone. Sniping went on at long range on either side for several days without anybody getting hurt, but it was quite as lively as the average French duel.

It was first intended to starve the ex-soldier into surrender, but it was concluded after the lapse of more than a week that that process would take too long. As an experienced campaigner and forager, Roy had laid his plans to keep hunger at bay for an indefinite period. He made it apparent to the besiegers that he was well provisioned by the liberality with which he scattered food from the windows of his fort among the birds and the fowls in his yard. And the spectators began to murmur that they were not getting their money's worth.

A council of war was held. The idea was seriously entertained of bombarding the cottage with artillery, but to that the civil authorities objected unless the military forces were prepared to give a guarantee that no other property would be injured. Then it was decided to blow up the dwelling with melenite. The railway companies declined to transport so dangerous an explosive. They had a pecuniary interest in prolonging the show. Arrangements were then made for transporting bombs by motor cars. They were accompanied by a detachment of sappers.

On the tenth day after the beginning of the military siege at 1 o'clock in the morning an intrepid lieutenant of engineers, accompanied by two sergeants and five sappers, protected by steel breastplates, crawled up to the cottage and laid something like a hundred pounds of melenite against one of the walls. So stealthily did they do their work that Roy did not hear them. With equal success a long fuse was laid to the explosives.

Two hours later a general bugle call sounded. It was the signal for all sentries to scoot out of danger. A few minutes later, at a distance of several hundred yards, the lieutenant ignited the fuse. A deafening explosion followed. When the smoke had cleared away it was found that one end of the building and part of the roof had been blown away. But the door still held fast. Some cartridges were placed against it and it was speedily shattered.

A hasty search of the ruins failed to reveal any signs of the law-defying Roy, who had been apprised of its might and majesty in this stern fashion. But the vigilant better half of the mayor of the town was on the watch with a pair of field glasses. She espied a figure gliding through a field of corn some 200 yards distant and raised the alarm. An excited crowd made a rush for the spot. Roy—for it was he—started to run. With a yell the mob sped after him. The explosion left him in no condition for a sprint race, and they soon overtook him. Kicked, buffeted and spat upon, there would soon have been an end of him if some gendarmes had not galloped up and taken him in charge.

When he recovered consciousness some hours later he said that he had been asleep with a rifle by his side when the explosion had occurred, and taking advantage of the pall of smoke that overhung the place had bolted through the breach in the wall.

But his defense has set France a new military problem. If one man can resist 700 soldiers for ten days, how many men will it require to execute "la revanche" on Germany and take Berlin, to say nothing of all the forts that lie between it and the frontier?

NOTED CASE NOW QUASHED

Ellis Glenn, the Male Impersonator, Finally Goes Free.

Parkersburg, W. Va., June 6.—Ellis Glenn, the most famous male impersonator of the world, is free. For five years she has faced the penitentiary on a forgery charge. Once she was tried, but the jury disagreed, and she has been out on bond for four years. Saturday the prosecuting attorney, who was formerly her counsel, notified the criminal court that he did not think there could ever be a conviction in her case, and it was dropped from the records.

Glenn was allowed to depart free of bond. She was first arrested and convicted of forgery in Illinois, and was sent to the penitentiary as a man. Her sex was there discovered, and the warden refused to receive her. She was then turned over to the West Virginia authorities and brought here for trial for forgery. She pleaded not guilty and gave as her defense that she was a woman and the forgery alleged was committed by her twin brother, whom she resembled so much as to be undistinguishable, and that she changed places with him to save him from the penitentiary.

She passed as a man while residing here and performed the work of a man, being a house painter, a sign painter, a carpenter, a bricklayer, a butcher, a barber, a teamster, a real estate agent, a horse trainer, a paper hanger, a plumber, and engaging in various other employments, all of which she did well. She lived in the family of M. J. Byers for several months and her sex was not discovered. Her identity has always been a mystery, as she has persistently refused to say who she is or where she came from.

She claims that when the forgery with which she is charged was committed she was traveling as a gypsy queen in England, and that she came to America to keep her brother out of the penitentiary.

SMELTING IRON

By Electricity to Be Tested at Sault Ste. Marie.

Duluth Mining Men Expect to Inspect the Experiment.

A number of Duluth iron mining men are taking a special interest in the question of smelting ore by electricity, which is to be the subject of experiments at Sault Ste. Marie, for which the Canadian government has made an appropriation of $15,000, and they are planning to visit the Soo and inspect the experiments when they have progressed far enough to give some idea as to the feasibility of the process.

Referring to these coming experiments, the Toronto Mail and Empire contained the following a few days ago:

R. R. Gamey, M.P. P., has been interesting himself in the question of smelting ore by electricity, and believes that the method is perfectly feasible and will sooner or later be largely used.

"An interesting and valuable experiment is being undertaken by the Dominion government in electric iron smelting," he said to the Mail and Empire recently. "Sometime ago Prof. Haanel, superintendent of mines, Ottawa, with others, went to Europe to investigate iron smelting by electricity. They were favorably impressed with what they saw. A valuable report has been printed and circulated by the professor dealing with their observations. Prof. Haanel has also induced the Dominion government to set apart a sum of $15,000 to make a practical test in Ontario.

"Mr. Clergue of the Soo, with his usual foresight and energy, has offered the department a building and free power for electricity for four months, and as they have a splendid outfit of machine shops and skilled labor, all available at resonable cost, it has been decided to experiment at the Soo, where ore from various localities can be assembled cheaply and quickly.

"Dr. Harault of France, who has had extensive experience in Europe in smelting iron by electricity, is to be in charge and make the test. Experiments will also be made in treating the nickel ores of Sudbury locality, as there are quantities of the nickel mattes at the 'Soo.' The plant will not be in operation for a couple of months as the furnace is not fully designed yet, and the electroids have to be imported from Sweden, nothing of the kind being available here. In a country as scarce of fuel as Ontario is, and dotted with water-power, where cheap electricity can be produced, there seems to be a great opening for electric smelting.

"Professor Haanel is confident of the success of his experiments, and, by the way, he is and old resident of Ontario, having held a chair for years at Victoria.

"I think the Dominion government deserve credit for this appropriation, and if they can see their way clear to initiate a broad, statesmanlike policy in regard to mining industries and resources, it will soon put us in possession of information in such a manner as will be of the utmost value in regard to those resources. In the past we have lacked a bureau conducted in such a manner.

"A strong feature in electric smelting of iron ore is that it makes no difference how much sulphur or phosphorous is in the ore, and by the system magnetic iron can be handled as well as hematite.

"There is no question but that we have an enormous quantity of iron deposits in Ontario of different values. In the past some of these are classed as having too much sulphur, some too much phosprous, or perhaps some other objectionable materiaus, while, again, some deposits are so situated that fuel costs too much to bring to the ore. With electric smelting a success and power transmission so favorable, almost every deposit in Ontario of a reasonable value can be worked.

"The Ontario government should keep a watchful eye on this work. If they are so far behind that they are not ready to sustain a department of mines, or engage in any valuable experimenting, so as to bring our resources to the front, they can, at least, get the benefit for their people of what may be done by others.

"Professor Haanel is also establishing a valuable system of measuring and valuing magnetic ores."

BY AN ANGEL

He Saw Church Moved In a Dream.

Elkhart, Ind., June 6.—The melodramatic recitation of a dream by a country stripling may be the means of reuniting the factions of the Willowdale M. E. church, which have been at bitter war for several months. The schism was caused by the successful fight led by the pastor, Rev. P. E. Greenwalt, to have the church edifice removed from the site in Willowdale it had occupied for thirteen years, to a new location in Riverside, about a mile away.

The change was opposed, and the pastor was defeated. He thereupon submitted the question to the elders and deacons, who sided with him, and he won. The pastor was denounced, and a large part of the congregation withdrew. Placards were found every morning on the houses and trees. The seceders retired to Willowdale schoolhouse and bought hymn books testaments, leaflets and other equipment while the church was put on rollers and started toward Riverside.

Among the pastor's supporters was Harlow Manning, who just attained his majority. He has aspirations to be a minister himself some day, and is a studious youth. Thursday night he attended prayer meeting. He told of his dream. In the vision he had seen the church moved along the street, and just as it arrived at the Big Four tracks the angel of the Lord seized it and returned it to its original location. Three nights in succession he dreamed the dream. He concluded it was a divine injunction, and he would have nothing more to do with the removal of the building.

The finish created a commotion. Rev. Greenwalt was at a loss what to say. The young man's words made a deep impression, and the disaffected party are jubilant. They declare their belief that the Lord sent a message to the Willowdale congregation through Manning. Many even of Rev. Greenwalt's supporters are wavering, and the building may be removed to its old location.

GOVERNMENT RATE CONTROL

Would Revive Traffic of Mississippi River, Says Meyer.

Chicago, June 6.—"There is just one thing that would be likely to revive the old-time traffic of the Mississippi river," said Professor Hugo R. Meyer of the University of Chicago, today. "That is government control or ownership of railways. If we had the German system of railway control in this country we would have men, women and horses dragging small boats along every canal and navigable river, and 200-ton vessels holding their own against railway transportation on the Mississippi. Fortunately in this country we are thirty or forty years ahead of that sort of thing, and I don't believe we want to go back to it."

Professor Meyer has just returned from Washington, where he spent several days giving to the senate committee on interstate commerce the results of his long study of the effect of government regulation of railways in this and foreign countries. He is the foremost authority in the United States on the question of the relation of railroads to industry, and as he has given special attention to the development of the German canal system, his remarks are of special interest.

"I have made a study of this subject in Germany, Australia, Austria-Hungary, France and other countries," continued Professor Meyer, "and in every instance I have found that government regulation has meant a tremendous setback in transportation methods and facilities. There are no steamers worth considering on the Mississippi today, simply because they cannot compete with the railroads under free and natural conditions. Germany has her regulation of railroads done away with natural conditions, and for this reason obsolete and primitive methods of transportation are still largely used. Americans should be proud of the fact that railroads and not steamers move their traffic. It simply shows the tremendous degree of efficiency which the railroads have attained.

"The present agitation for government rate-making will die a natural death, I sincerely trust, for there is nothing in the conditions of this country to demand it. I have studied this question carefully, and would point out to you that every government which has attempted to regulate rates has, in so doing, succeeded only in raising them, in centralizing industry, in prohibiting producers from competing in any distant market, has decreased the efficiency of its transportation service, and finally has retarded by decades the general development and transportation of the country.

"The principle which underlies all the decisions of the interstate commerce commission, that is, that no locality shall be deprived of the benefits accruing to it by virtue of its geographical position, or conversely, that no locality shall be aided to overcome the disadvantages accruing to it through its geographical position, together with the fact that no governmental rate-making body has ever found it possible to make rates on other than a distance basis, shows conclusively that any attempt at governmental regulation in this country would simply be a repetition of the experience of others. And the experiences of other countries have been so generally and thoroughly undsirable that it would be folly for us to follow in their footsteps.

"Just so long as the Mississippi river continues comparatively free from steamers, so long may we feel certain that the railroads are furnishing a wonderfully cheap and efficient transportation service; and, conversely, should steamers ever again be able to compete for Mississippi Valley traffic, it will be because the government, by futile attempts at rate regulation, will so far have crippled the natural development of railroads and industry, and we shall have reverted to the methods of transportation, which are now fifty years behind the times."

TORTURE AND HUMILIATION

For Fifteen Years Face and Body Mass of Itching Sores—Could Not Express Suffering—Doctors Failed—Had Lost Hope

CURED BY CUTICURA AT COST OF $1.25

"My head was one mass of scabs, my forehead was covered down almost to my eyebrows, and I had to wear my hat all the time. My body was covered with spots in size from a pinhead to as large as a silver dollar. A white, crusty scab would form and itch, and words cannot express the torture and humiliation I suffered for fifteen years. I tried many doctors, and all kinds of treatments, but could get no help, and I thought there was no hope for me. A friend told me to get Cuticura. I did, and in three days my head was as clear as ever. I applied the Ointment night and morning, also taking a hot bath three times a week, and using the Ointment freely after the bath. After using one cake of Soap and two boxes of Ointment I was completely cured, without mark or blemish. I was so pleased I felt like running down the street to tell every one I met what Cuticura had done for me. If any one is in doubt about this, they may write to me. (signed) H. B. Franklin, 717 Washington St., Allegheny, Pa."

WOMAN WROTE PRIZE POEM

Wins $100 For Best Ballad on the Portland Trail.

Portland, Or., June 6.—"John Malcolm Graham," winner of the prize of $100 for the best ballad on the Trail, offered by I. N. Fleischner, chairman of the exploitation and publicity committee for the Lewis and Clark exposition, turns out to be a woman, Mrs. A. A. Lindsley, who for a year past has resided in Portland. Mrs. Lindsley is the wife of a former state treasurer of Washington. She is a graduate of the Michigan university at Ann Arbor.

The winning poem was mailed to the publicity committee, signed "John Malcolm Graham, General Delivery." When the judges announced their decision no one knew who "John Malcolm Graham" was, the name not appearing in the Portland city directory.

Nearly four hundred writers of verse throughout the country, some of them widely known, competed for the prize. The judges stated that is there had been a second prize it would have been awarded to Robertus Love, the Missouri poet, at present residing in Portland. His poem is entitled "The Dream of the Star (A Song of the Oregon Trail)," and it will be published shortly in an Eastern magazine. Mr. Love, by the way, is the man who named the Trail, the suggestion being made in a letter from him to Secretary Reed of the exposition about two years ago. The fitness of the name for the amusement street of the exposition lies in its application to the famous old Oregon trail, and "hitting the Trail" has become the familiar slogan of the fair.

Mrs. Lindsley's poem is deemed peculiarly fitting for the purpose, as it brings out in strong, snappy language, the lilt and swing of the rider "hitting the trail" to the westward, shows forth the development brought about by the pioneers, and gives due honor to Lewis and Clark. The winning poem follows:

THE TRAIL.

The call comes, strong and insistent,
Out of the West, "Oh, hark!
Follow through hail and sun the trail
Blazed by Lewis and Clark!"

On with the blanket and saddle,
Ride like the devil possessed,
Swift on the way by night and day,
Hit the trail to the West!

Sting of the wind in our faces,
Crunching of hoofs on sand—
Whate'er betide, pause not, but ride
Straight to the promised land.

Whiteness of sails on the ocean,
Gleaming of gold in the hills,
Glory of grain on the harvest wain,
Curling of smoke from the mills.

Off with the saddle and blanket,
Kindle our hearthfires' spark—
Here's all hail to the westward trail
Blazed by Lewis and Clark!

GOT A RIDE

In Automobile and Her Ambition Was Satisfied.

New York, June 6.—"Sergeant, you know we run down our friends sometimes, though usually they run us down," said Marshall P. Wilder, the monologist, when he found himself under arrest at the One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street station for knocking down a young woman with his automobile.

Mr. Wilder, with his friend, Col. Theodore Marceau, formerly of Cincinnati, and a woman, were returning in an automobile from a trip to Riverside. He was running his automobile at about half speed, he says, and was tooting his horn vigorously. Miss Catherine Collins, of No. 263 West One Hundred and Twenty-second street, stepped off a south-bound Eighth avenue car directly in front of them.

She was knocked down, but the machine was brought to a sudden stop, and did not injure her. Miss Collins, however, collapsed from fright, and a big crowd collected. Policeman Heidenreich arrested Mr. Wilder and his two companions. At the station Mr. Wilder said he was sorry and assured Miss Collins he would not intentionally injure her or any one else for the world.

He offered to pay the doctor's expenses if she was hurt, and, if not, to give her a ride to her home. The victim, who had recovered by this time, admitted she was not hurt and accepted the second offer, saying it was one of her pet ambitions to ride in an automobile.

ESCAPE WAS MIRACULOUS

Manager Jerome of Crookston Fibre Mill Badly Injured.

Crookston, Minn., June 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—Manager Jerome of the Crookston hemp fiber mill, in this city, was caught on the heavy fly wheel shafting of the shive mill at the plant Saturday afternoon and the fact that he is still alive after the terrible pounding which he received before assistance could reach him is considered a miracle.

Jerome had started up the machinery and gone upstairs to adjust several bolts upon the brake when a strap from his overalls caught in the rapidly-revolving shaft, carrying the unfortunate man with it. Jerome endeavored by cutting his clothing to escape his fate. The speed of the shaft was such that he was powerless and he was carried around with the rapidly-revolving machinery hitting the ceiling and floor with every revolution.

At the time of the accident no one was in the mill, save Jerome, and had it not been for the arrival of a teamster, Joe Farley, with a load of hemp from the farm, just as the accident occurred, the unfortunate man's body would have been literally pounded to shreds against the woodwork and machinery of the mill by the revolving shaft.

Farley heard Jerome's cries of pain and anguish and running to the engine house stopped the machinery. Jerome was taken off the shaft more dead than alive, his clothing torn to shreds, several portions of his body torn in a shocking manner and life almost extinct. Medical aid was summoned immediately and the injured man revived. A careful examination brought out the fact that not a single bone had been broken in the terrible ordeal, but that Jerome had been injured severely internally.

The Crookston hemp fiber plant was erected a year ago here under the supervision of Mr. Jerome and since beginning work on the factory he has three times narrowly escaped death. At one time he was hit on the head by a fourteen-pound sledge hammer falling from the upper story from the hand of a workman. At another time he was laid out by a kick from one of the horses and severely injured. The experience Saturday was his narrowest shave, however.

EQUESTRIAN STATUE

Of Himself Is Presented to the President.

Washington, June 6.—President Roosevelt was the recipient yesterday of a beautiful equestrian statute, that of himself as colonel of the "Rough Riders," which is the latest work of the eminent sculptor Macmonnies.

The presentation was made at the White House by Miss Janet Scudder of New York, a pupil of Macmonnies, whose work has been accepted for the Luxembourg galleries at Paris. Besides the president and Miss Scudder, those present at the ceremony, which was quite informal, were Mrs. Roosevelt, the admiral of the navy and Mrs. Dewey, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Bonaparte. The presentation will prove of notable interest, especially in the art world.

The president expressed his unfeigned pleasure.

"I now feel myself," said he laughingly, "a really great man. The distinction of 'being done' by either St. Gaudens or Macmonnies might flatter anybody. I had always hoped to have something in my possession by Macmonnies, but it never occurred to me that I should have something by Macmonnies of me. The statue is exactly as I should like to have it—the cavalry horse, the Rough Rider clothes and the emblematic support to the whole."

When attention was called to the inscription on the shield, which supports the moral force, the president expressed his pleasure.

WHEAT IS HIGHER

Wheat Started Out Firm and Made a Further Advance.

Flax Trading Was Dull and the Market Lower.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 6.—The wheat market was firm and higher this morning, despite excellent weather conditions throughout the United States, the bullish factor being unexpected strength at Liverpool. The cables were the ruling factor, and the gains made during the morning were generally held. Liverpool closed ½d higher, and American markets closed with the following gains on July: Duluth, 1c up at $1.16; Chicago, ¾-7⁄8c up at 85⅛c; Minneapolis, ⅞c up at $1.12⅛; New York, 1⅛c up at 92⅜c; St. Louis, ⅝c up at 79⅝c; Kansas City, ⅝c up at 77c.

Primary receipts of wheat were 270,525 bus., last year 352,180 bus. Shipments 198,766 bus., last year 254,139 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 48,496 bus.

Bradstreet reported a decrease of 3,422,000 bus. last week in the world's visible supply of wheat.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed ¾d higher. In the Chicago market July oats closed 1⅝c up at 31⅝c. July corn closed 1⅛c up at 51c. Primary receipts of corn were 595,400 bus., last year 1,062,700 bus. Shipments 637,250 bus., last year 646,685 bus. Clearances of corn were 198,540 bus.

The world's visible supply of corn last week increased 968,000 bus.

At the Duluth board, July wheat opened 1⅛c up at $1.15⅛, sold up to $1.15⅞ at 11:37 and closed 1c up at $1.16. New September opened at 83c, yesterday's closing price, advancing to 83⅛c at 11:21, and closing ⅛c up at that figure. Old September opened at 86c, yesterday's close, and closed ⅛c up at 86¼c.

Flax trading was dull except in October. September opened at $1.30 and dropped 1c at 11:33, closing 2½c off at $1.27½. October opened at $1.28, dropped to $1.26 at 11:39, rose to $1.26½ at 11:40, dropped back half a cent eleven minutes later and closed 2¾c off at $1.25¾. July closed unchanged at $1.48.

Cash sales were few at the July price. Following are the closing prices:

Wheat to arrive—No. 1 northern, $1.16. On track—No. 1 northern, $1.16; No. 2 northern, $1.08. Durum No. 1, 88c; No. 2, 87c; July, $1.16; Sept, old, 86¼c; Sept., new, 81½c. THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Unexpected Strength at Liverpool Gives Wheat Firmness.

Chicago, June 6.—Unexpected strength at Liverpool imparted a firm tone to the wheat market here today notwithstanding ideal weather conditions throughout the United States. Pit traders were the principal buyers. Offerings were small. July opened ¾@⅞c higher at 87¼@87⅝c. After selling at 87¼@⅝c, the price advanced to 87⅝@⅞c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 200 cars, against a holiday last week and 246 cars a year ago.

Demand continued of a good character the entire session, the market becoming stronger as trading progressed. July advanced to 88¼c. The close was strong, with July up ¼c at 88¼c.

A fair demand from shorts caused a steady tone in the corn market. A moderate advance at Liverpool was the main bull influence. Strength of wheat, however, had some effect. July opened higher at 50¼c, sold at 50⅝@¾c and then eased off to 50c. Local receipts were 512 cars, with 129 of contract grade.

Later the market became decidedly bullish. Reports of small acceptances in the country had an important bearing on the situation. The market closed at the highest point of the day, with July up 1⅛c at 51c.

Oats were firm on a fair demand from cash houses. July opened unchanged at 31⅛c and sold up to 31½c. Local receipts were 341 cars.

A 5c advance in the price of live hogs created a firm tone in the provisions market. September pork was up 2½c at $13.02½. Lard was unchanged to 2½c higher at $7.57½ to $7.60. Ribs were unchanged at $7.65.

Close: Wheat—July, 88¼c; September, 82¼@⅜c; December, 82c. Corn—July, 51c; old, 51½@⅝c; September, 49⅞c; old, 50⅜c. Oats—June, 31¼; July, 31⅜c; September, 28⅝c; December, 30c; May, 31⅜c. Pork—July, $12.80; September, $13.10. Lard—July, $7.42½; September, $7.60@7.62½; October, 7.62½. Ribs—July, 7.45; September, $7.70@7.72½; October, $7.75. Rye—July, 66c; September, 62@63c. Flax—Cash, northwestern, $1.47; southwestern, $1.30. Timothy—June, $2.85; September, $3.10. Clover—June, $11.75@12.25. Barley—Cash, 42@50c. Oats—No. 2, 30¾@31c; No. 3, 30½c. Wheat—No. 2, red, $1.02½@1.03½; No. 3 red, 99c@$1.01; No. 2 hard, $1.01@1.02; No. 3 hard, 80c@$1.00; No. 1 northern, $1.12@1.13; No. 2 northern, $1.08@1.10; No. 3 spring, $1.00@1.07. Corn—No. 2, 52½c; No 3, 52@52c.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Edwards, Wood & Co., Minneapolis: Wheat—Prices were fairly steady during the early trading. First cables were lower, and clear weather prevailed in the West and Southwest, with rain reported in scattered sections of the Northwest. But four cars received in Chicago. Northwest receipts of 214 cars compared favorably with a year ago, Duluth reporting 17 cars for two days. Receipts at primary markets 280,000 bus, against 362,000 bus. a year ago. Shipments 197,000 bus., against 244,000 bus. Liverpool closed ¾d higher and Budapest 1½d lower. Local stocks at Minneapolis have decreased 115,000 bus. for first half of the week. Total clearances, wheat and flour, 58,000 bus. Bradstreets reported a decrease in the world's visible of 3,444,000 bus., one-half of which was east of the Rockies. This was the main sustaining influence for the day, and prices rallied somewhat near the noon hour from the lethargy that had ruled up to that time. Closing prices 1⅛c better than yesterday for the July and ⅝c better for the September. A year ago the visible supply of wheat was practically the same as now, and July wheat in Minneapolis was selling around 96c and September at 83c. The same options in Chicago were selling around 89c and 82¼c. Even the stocks continue to decrease in same ratio as last year, prospects are much better for more than an average yield of winter wheat. Conditions are also favorable to a very early harvest, and it is stated on very good authority that threshing will begin in Texas this week. It looks like only slow scalping changes in the July for the present, and we believe that short sales made on hard spots will yield good profits.

• • •

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—There was a reversal of form in today's market and notwithstanding a smaller decrease in the visible than a week ago, market clearly showed a desire to advance right from the opening. The strength in the Southwest markets contributed much to what is a help but the fact remains the market seemed oversold. It takes but little selling as we have pointed out to congest the July option. The government report had very little effect in shaping the price. We continue to advise buying wheat on the breaks.

Corn—The bulls had their war paint on today and went after the bear scalp right after the opening of the market. Weather indications were all favorable for the growing crop and the statistical position from our point of view scarcely warrants buying corn at present prices. However the short interest is scattered and estimated as quite large and continued strength is causing considerable uneasiness among this element. We do not like the long side at present prices.

Oats—Sympathized entirely with corn, trade being without special significance. The most that can be hoped for is moderate fluctuations on either side.

ALICE DUKE DECLARES

That She Will Smash the Tobacco Trust.

New York, June 6.—"I'll break the tobacco trust in two years. I have been dogged by the Dukes and their agents past the limit of endurance, and now I am determined to fight back. The trust has conspired against me ever since my marriage to Brodie L. Duke last Dec. 19."

Mrs. Brodie L. Duke made this declaration of war yesterday against the tobacco trust, and announced that she had the backing of the entire state of Texas and the Southern Pacific railroad. She is staying with friends at No. 2781 Broadway, and says she will remain here until she has put the trust out of commission.

"The Dukes are back of all this unscrupulous fight against a lone woman. When they found that Brodie L. Duke had married me, they tried in every way to railroad him into a madhouse for the rest of his life, and moved heaven and earth at the same time to put me into state prison.

"If there is justice to be had in any court I shall establish my innocence. And, mind you, there will be no trial of this divorce case before a referee. The Dukes shall not hide behind the doors of a star chamber proceeding. The hearing will be in open court."

WOMAN SECURES MONEY

For Death of Son Who Took Poison.

Fergus Falls, Minn., June 6.—The suit brought by Mrs. Erick Smith against the Modern Woodmen to collect a $2,000 insurance policy on her son's life was settled yesterday on the basis of $2,500. The case has aroused a great deal of interest, as an inquest was held after the boy's death and it was found that he had died from aconite poisoning. His father and brother had both died suddenly, both carrying insurance policies, and when the cause of the boy's death was ascertained, the Woodmen declined to pay, stating that he had not answered the questions relative to the cause of his father's and brother's death correctly. The case has been pending for several months and would have come to trial in June if the present compromise had not been arranged.

HAY KEEPS QUIET.

London, June 6.—Secretary Hay is keeping perfectly quiet, hardly stirring from his hotel. He keeps in close touch with the embassy, however, and the latter is doing all possible to secure respect for his desire to be quiet. The secretary will sail for New York tomorrow on the White Star liner Baltic.

DECLINE IN STOCKS

Market Strong Early But Weakened and Broke Sharply.

Drive Against Amalgamated Was Cause of Slump.

New York, June 6.—Gains and losses of ⅛ to ¼ were shown by the opening prices in the stock market today, but the principal stocks were lower. Copper fell ¾ and Union Pacific and United States Steel showed slightly larger losses than the average. Dealings were on an insignificant scale.

Buying orders appeared in the local tractions, Reading, Union Pacific, United States Steel preferred and Copper, and there was a general advance to beyond yesterday's close. Northern Pacific moved up 8 and Norfolk & Western and local tractions 1 to 1¾. Top prices were shaded before the end of the hour and business became dull. Colorado & Southern and Steel Foundries stocks fell 1, Northwestern 2¾ and Central of Jersey 2½.

Prices receded dully to a lower level than the opening. Rumors from Berlin that the czar had been assassinated had some effect. Reading, Copper, Bng preferred and Twin City Rapid Transit lost 1, Kansas City Southern preferred 1¼, Steel Foundries preferred 2½ and Northwestern 4. There was a rise of a point in Kansas & Texas preferred. Bonds were irregular at noon.

Operations in the general market were not of interest, the volume of business being too small to create an impression on prices. Great Northern preferred gained 2½. Canadian Pacific ran off 1 and Steel Foundries preferred 4¾c.

Very little demand arose for stocks that were pressed on the market during the afternoon, and bear selling became more confident. Copper lost 1¾, Smelting 1½ and St. Paul, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, New York Central, United States Steel and Sugar 1 to 1¼.

There was another spilling out of Copper which carried it 3⅝ under last night and the general weakness was aggravated. Steel Foundries preferred fell 7 and Northwestern more than 5. Union Pacific, Reading, the second preferred and United States Reduction lost 1½ or more and less ran to a point or over for B. & O., Pennsylvania, L. & N., Northern Pacific, United States Steel preferred, Smelting preferred, Lead, Colorado Fuel, Consolidated Gas, Corn Products preferred and Locomotive. The close was weak at the lowest.

Quotations furnished by Edwards-Wood Co., room A, Torrey building.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, New York, to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market is closing lower all around, sharply so in Amalgamated and the Steel Foundries. In the former stock pressure was brought to bear quite strongly. The reported assassination of the czar opens up the question of political disturbance abroad and is in a sense disturbing. Market acts badly; it sags easily notwithstanding the estimated large short interest. Favorable factors are lost sight of, traders are as a rule lending ear to that which foretells disaster.

• • •

Dick Brothers, New York: Market was strong for a time this morning, but later weakened and broke sharply in the late trading following a Lawson telegram attacking Amalgamated. Much of the late selling was professional and for short account, although speculative liquidation was also in evidence. Metropolitan was one of the firm features of the day.

• • •

Walker Bros., New York: The market today at the opening was dull and transactions light. Commission houses had few orders and traders did little. In the afternoon there was a drive against Amalgamated and the market broke sharply. This affected the whole market and it became very weak. Stops were reached. There was little support and the weakness continued until the close. Look for a dull market the rest of the week.

Mexican dollars, 45c. Government bonds, steady; railroad bonds, irregular.

Washington, June 6.—Today's statement of the treasury balances in the general fund, exclusive of the $150,000,000 gold reserve in the division of redemption, shows: Available cash balance, $132,352,039; gold, $69,268,909; silver, $28,633,423.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, June 6.—The cotton market opened barely steady at unchanged prices to a decline of 4 points under scattering liquidation and bear pressure following excellent weather. Cables were little better than expected, prompting some demand and with smaller shorts taking profit orders were pretty well divided with the result that fluctuations following the call were somewhat irregular, but gradually worked off to a net loss of about 4 to 6 points, July being the weakest month under commission house liquidation.

Spot dull; middling uplands, 8.40; ditto gulf, 8.65; sales, 133 bales. Futures closed quiet and steady; June, 7.82; July, 7.90; August, 7.92; September, 7.96; October, 8.04; November, 8.08; December, 8.14; January, 8.18; February, 8.22; March, 8.27.

ALCOHOLISM

Caused Death of Nephew of an Earl.

New York, June 6.—Frederick Canning said to be a nephew of Earl Canning, once governor general of India, and grand nephew of George Canning, prime minister of England, died Sunday night in a lodging house in Thompson street.

Within ten days he had received a remittance from lawyers in London, and the information that he had fallen heir to entailed property in Ireland. The annual rentals of the estate are said to amount to $15,000, but it was not known how much of the estate Canning would inherit.

Alcoholism was written as the cause of death, and it tells the story of ten years in America of the kinsman of the famous Canning. He was educated at Harrow and Oxford, and was one of the seventeen Lancers who marched with Lord Roberts in the famous Afghan campaign in 1880.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS HAVE A NARROW ESCAPE.

Los Angeles, June 6.—The Boston special bearing 250 Knights of Columbus and visitors, which arrived here today over the San Pedro, Los Angeles & Salt Lake road was delayed by a wreck at Calientes in which the passengers in two cars of the train had a narrow escape from death. Two coaches jumped the track as a result it is thought of spreading rails. Several of the knights sustained slight cuts and bruises. A serious wreck was averted only by reason of the fact that the train was running but about seven miles an hour at the time.

PASTOR HAS ENEMY.

Plot to Blow Up Rev. Frizzell's Barn.

Sioux City, Iowa, June 6.—Discovery of a plot to blow up the barn owned by Rev. Dr. J. W. Frizzell, pastor of the First Congregational church, has led the police to adopt measures to protect the life of the divine. Some time ago thieves looted the minister's barn of all the harness there. Friday night the barn was found to be on fire. Later it was discovered a fuse had been attached to a bottle of dynamite put in the barn, but for some reason it did not explode. It is feared the unknown enemies of the minister will now undertake to blow up the minister's home. As Rev. Mr. Frizzell is not radical, the whole affair is a mystery.

POOR GO TO CHURCH.

How Presbyterian Pastor Accomplished the Feat.

Des Moines, Iowa, June 6.—The Rev. A. W. McConnell, pastor of the Clifton Heights Presbyterian church, last week made a request that the congregation abolish the habit of wearing fine clothes to church, as he believed it kept away many of the poorer residents who could not afford fine clothes.

His congregation complied Sunday and he not only had all his regular attendants, but also several hundred working men and women who had not attended regular church services in months, and some in years.

At the conclusion of the church services many of the poorer classes remained and personally thanked the pastor, as did the leading and more wealthy members who are active church workers.

Prayers were offered to make the people more lowly in dress.

HARD FOR BOATS

To Load and Discharge Cargoes In the Harbor.

Heavy Seas Getting Worse and Tying Up Business.

The heavy sea running today is delaying harbor traffic to a considerable extent. The boats are having a hard time to move around the harbor to load and unload and it is rather difficult to get communication to them. Although the weather office reports that the wind and weather generally is moderating, the seas are getting heavier all the time and at present are rolling through the entrance to the harbor and in the harbor proper in heavy swells, pumping boats up and down and making business extremely difficult.

The steamer Waldo this afternoon tried for half an hour to get through the canal but had a very hard time to get headed that way. The sea and wind would swing her around and it was only after persistently fighting the swells that she got through.

Adopts American Plan.

The Northern Steamship company will inaugurate a new American plan service, supplementary to its European plan service, on its Great Lake boats this season. This will be the first year the plan has been tried by the Northern company, but it is believed that it will prove to be popular with certain classes of tourists. This will give the boats both the American and European plan service. The North West will leave Duluth on her first trip down the lakes June 27.

Fine Investment for Young Men and Women

Think of the thousands of young people paying over money to the great life insurance companies every month with the expectation that at the end of twenty years or more they may only get their money back and a very small interest. Then think of the development of the United States in the past twenty years, and look on a map at the location of Northern Minnesota and Wisconsin as related to the head of inland navigation and the expanding markets of growing nearby cities. Will any reasonable man say that the land in this region will not be worth from three to ten times its present price within twenty years? Reason it out for yourself.

Worth $200 to $300 an Acre.

J. Sterling Morton, ex-Secretary of Agriculture, recently asserted that all well-located land in the United States would be worth that price within 50 years.

"I believe," he added, "that money invested in farms is the best possible investment one can make; even if purchased at what some may term 'boom prices,' one will soon see his investment doubled."

We Will Build You a Comfortable House

On any sized tract that you want, from forty acres up, upon payment of only one-quarter of the value of the land in cash, and spread the balance over several years. For a man who wants to get on a farm at small initial cost, this is a remarkable opportunity. All this land is surprisingly fertile, and it will pay you to investigate its possibilities. The Omaha railroad alone placed 900 families in Northern Wisconsin last year. We have about 60,000 acres to choose from.

Best Farming Land in Northern Minnesota.

We also have about 40,000 acres of the richest farming land to be found in this section of the state, all lying within a reasonable distance of railroads and midway between Duluth and the Twin Cities. We will give it to you for one-quarter its value in cash and the balance to suit your convenience. Runs from $5 to $15 an acre.

NOTED ALPINE DOG IS DEAD

Once the Pride of the Hospice of St. Bernard.

Berne, Switzerland, June 6.—From the snow-crested summit of the famous Alpine St. Bernard comes the sad news that Barry II. is dead. He was the finest dog belonging to the hospice of the monks, and, like his noble ancestor, Barry the Great, died in the performance of duty.

Barry II. saved thirty-four lives. Once he brought a baby in his mouth to the hospice, and returning to its parents conducted them in safety to the hospitable shelter. Twice Barry II. was swept away by avalanches, but lived to bark the story.

Heroes, indeed, were these Barrys. First report was that Barry II. had been stolen, but the facts concerning his disappearance were later brought to the agitated monks by three Italians whose lives the grand animal had saved, and whose own was lost in the effort.

The three travelers were climbing the pass from the Italian side, when they became lost in a terrific snowstorm, and in all probability would have perished had not Barry II. discovered them. He led them on to within 200 yards of the hospice, when he slipped and fell sixty feet into a newly opened crevasse. There the disconsolate monks found him, lifeless, his skull crushed by the jagged rocks on which he had fallen. They bore the remains back to the hospice and sang a special Te Deum in the memory of Barry II. Comparatively few mortals have ever better deserved the honor.

The original Barry was the greatest dog that ever lived. His name was made famous by the great number of lives he saved—forty-two, according to Stonehenge, but Rev. Mr. Macdona places the number at seventy-five. He died a grandly tragic and becoming death at the age of 15 years at the hands of a traveler to whom he was carrying life and hope, and who, mistaking poor Barry for a wolf, killed him.

Barry's remains, stuffed, is now one of the most interesting objects in the Natural History museum at Berne.

RAILROAD NEWS

Many People Expected on Excursions Wednesday and Thursday.

Pennsylvania Road Breaks New York-Chicago Speed Records.

The Northern Pacific will run its first excursion of the season into Duluth tomorrow. From inquiries already received it is believed that the special train will be liberally patronized, and probably it will be found necessary to divide it into two or more sections. The train will leave Morris, Minn., at 5 o'clock tomororw morning and will arrive in Duluth at 2:35 o'clock in the afternoon. On the return trip it will leave Duluth at 4:45 p. m. Friday. A very low round trip rate has been made.

The Great Northern will bring its first excursion to Duluth Thursady. It will also draw from Minnesota points, starting at Benson at 5 a. m. and getting here 1:10 p. m. Returning it will leave Duluth at 11 o'clock Friday night. The special will take on passengers at St. Cloud, Wilmar and numerous smaller places. It is believed that two sections, or maybe more, will be necessary to handle all the people.

BREAKS RECORD.

Fast Time Made Between New York and Chicago.

Chicago, June 6.—The Pennsylvania railroad yesterday broke all records for fast traveling between New York and Chicago, by making the run of 897 miles in 17 hours flat. The feat was accomplished by two special trains, one running from New York to Pittsburg in 8 hours and 50 minutes, and the other making the run from Pittsburg to Chicago in 8 hours and 10 minutes.

The runs were trials of speed to demonstrate the ability of the road to put into service an 18-hour service, and maintain the schedule under ordinary circumstances.

South Shore Excursion.

Today occurs the first of the South Shore's anual spring excursions to Eastern points. The demand for excursion tickets has been very heavy, and when the train pulls out at 6:20 o'clock this evening it will have more than the usual number of cars attached. Before it reaches St. Ignace it will be running in two sections. At St. Ignace the excursionists will be transferred to the steamer the City of Alpena and the remainder of the trip to Detroit, Toledo, Cleveland and Buffalo will be by boat. Other excursions by the road will be run this month.

Will Continue Service.

Chicago, June 6.—The Rock Island and Southern Pacific companies announce that it has been definitely decided to continue the Golden State limited in daily service the year around, between Chicago, St. Louis and California, instead of discontinuing the summer months, as in previous years.

Movement of Pacific coast travel is sufficiently great to justify the innovation.

Postpone Plans.

Cheyenne, Wyo., June 6.—The representative of the Associated Press learned yesterday from what is considered an absolutely reliable source that the Burlington road, which has been conducting extensive surveys in the Big Horn basin, with the view of reaching the Shoshone reservation, has indefinitely postponed its plans to build. The large corps of Burlington surveyors now in the field has been recalled and the proposed visit of the Burlington officials has been abandoned. This eliminates all prospect of the great railroad construction war in which the Northwestern and Burlington planned to engage in their race for the Shoshone reservation, to be opened up next year. Agreements between railroads and a lack of development are reported to be the reasons for the abandonment of the railroda.

NORWEGIAN SOCIETY

Of America Meets and Elects Its Officers.

Fargo, N. D., June 6.—The third annual meeting of the Norwegian society of America, which is being held here elected the following officers today: President—Rev. B. Bondahl, Glyndon, Minn.; vice president, A. A. Veblen, Iowa university, Iowa City, Iowa; secretary, Carl Hanson, Minneapolis; treasurer, A. A. Trovaten, Fargo; editor Quarterly, W. Ager, Eau Claire, Wis.; board of directors, B. Amundsen, Decorah, Iowa; Dr. H. O. Enjel, Abercrombie, N. D.

United States Senator Knute Nelson delivered an address before the society today and the university students from Christiania Norway sang a number of Norwegian songs.

SWIMMER DROWNED.

Young Man's Body Found In Clearwater River.

Bemidji, Minn., June 6.—The dead body of the son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Thompson, homesteaders, who live on the Clearwater river near Buzzle dam, was found in the river Sunday afternoon by the father of the young man a short distance from their home.

Young Thompson left home saying to his parents that he was going swimming. He remained away for several hours and the parents became uneasy. The father went to search for the young man and found his remains in the river a short distance from the dam. The circumstances surrounding the drowning indicate that it was purely accidental.

JAPANESE SHIPS ARE TO VISIT WOOSUNG TO LOOK FOR RUSSIANS.

ports, the president cannot consent to any repairs unless the ships are interned at Manila until the close of hostilities. You are directed, after notifying the Russian admiral of this conclusion, to turn over the execution of this order to Admiral Train, who has been advised accordingly by the secretary of the navy.

ALL NEW GUNS.

The Japanese Fleet Had Been Entirely Refitted.

Victoria, B. C., June 6.—Capt. McKechnie of the British steamer Ilford, which carried 1,000 Korean coolies to Salinas Cruz and came here seeking cargo, says that when Togo's warships gave battle to the Russian fleet every Japanese vessel had been fitted with new guns to replace those used in the earlier part of the war. Capt. McKechie claims he carried 30-ton naval guns made by the Armstrongs, as well as 500 tons of cordite and two torpedo boats in sections to Kure from England and he knew of over a dozen steamers which carried naval guns and explosives from England to Japan. Capt. McKechnie says that the cruiser Varlag was raised once, but an accident occurred and the vessel slid down in a deeper part than where she was sunk by the Russians in the battle of Chemulpo. She was afterwards raised a second time. The Korietz was found to be not worth raising.

EVACUATION

Of Port Arthur Completed By Balaschoff's Departure.

Chefu, June 6.—Gen. Balaschoff has arrived here from Port Arthur with his staff and departs today for Russia overland via Tien Tsin.

The embalmed body of Gen. Kondratchenko was brought here by Gen. Balaschoff and will be shipped to Odessa.

Gen. Balaschoff's staff of twenty-eight persons, which accompanied him to Chefu, is departing for home over various routes. This party completes the Russian evacuation of Port Arthur.

PRAISES JAPS.

Admiral Enquist Says Their Gunnery Was Magnificent.

Manila, June 6.—It was asserted on board the Aurora, the flagship of Rear Admiral Enquist, today, that while the authorities at Washintgon have denied the request of the Russian admiral for the opportunity to repair his vessels here, the refusal being based on the fact that their injuries were received in battle, the matter is not entirely determined and that additional instructions from Washington are likely to be issued in regard to interning the cruisers. The Jemtchug already has 150 tons of coal and the Aurora 200 tons. Admiral Enquist is contracting to reclothe his crews. Admiral Train will assume charge of the Army and Navy club in order to extend the courtesies of the club to Admiral Enquist.

Admiral Enquist referring in conversation to the recent battle said:

"When the naval battle commenced I was far in advance of the main fleet, engaged in scouting with the Oleg, Aurora and Jemtchug. Japanese torpedo boats appeared in numbers supported by a few cruisers. A heavy engagement followed. My ships were mainly painted black and white and stood out large targets against the Japanese ships, that were painted an olive green color and which could hardly be seen. Owing to the incessant fire which the Japanese concentrated on my flagship, the Oleg, I transferred my flag to the Aurora. From her bridge I could not see our main fleet and believing it had been defeated and had scattered, I decided for the sake of humanity to retire." The admiral praised the Japanese gunnery and tactics.

The Raleigh, Cincinnati and Baltimore have been sent to the northeast coast of the island of Luzon to look out for Japanese and Russian warships.

SINKING OF THE URAL

Tokio, June 6.—The Russian cruisers Admiral Nakhimoff, Vladimir Monomach and Dmitri Donskoi, having sunk in comparatively shallow water, it is possible to raise them.

A survivor of the cruiser Ural, who is a brother of the chief editor of the Russ, and, apparently, is well educated, said: "The Ural was hit on the starboard side by a 12-inch shell which penetrated and burst in the engine room, smashing everything and causing the funnel and the mast to fall down. Owing to the shock the deck also was rent asunder in many places. The flesh and bones of 500 men killed were scattered in every direction. The horror of the scene is beyond description. The Ural sank at 6 o'clock in the evening."

The narrator and thirty-three other Russians drifted to the coast off the province of Nagato after fifteen hours of exposure at sea.

TERMS OF PEACE

To Be Demanded By Japan Yet Unknown.

Washington, June 6.—Peace in the Far East was the subject last night of another conference at the White House between the president and Mr. Takihara, the Japanese minister. It was the third conference of the day which the president had had on this subject. Mr. Jusserand, the French ambassador and Mr. O'Bierne, the British charge d'affaires having been callers at the White House yesterday morning.

Thus far the minister has not been able to tell the president except in the most general and unofficial way what Japan is likely to demand of Russia when the latter can be brought to discuss peace. Even the minister himself has no idea what Japan's indemnity may amount to. The president was unable to give Mr. Takihara any intimation of how Russia has viewed the annihilation of her fleet and until Count Cassini's report of his visit to the White House has been replied to from St. Petersburg no further progress toward peace can be made in that direction.

Whatever may be the result of the important conference the president had with Count Cassini the exchanges between Washington and the European capitals are gradually bringing about a thorough understanding among the neutral powers which will enable them to present a united front when peace negotiations do begin. European advices received here indicate that the neutral powers are inclined to share the president's aversion to an international conference and that they are inclined to the belief that all interests can best be served by direct negotiations between the belligerents.

The president, it is believed, will endeavor to keep Japan's peace terms within reasonable bounds and the close relations of Emperor Willlam to the czar, it is suggested, will enable the German sovereign to advise the czar with a frankness that even Washington could not assume.

Mr. Takahira said last night that "Tokio is always for peace but," he added significantly, "Russia must first realize the present situation in all its seriousness and be prepared to face it."

LITTLE DETECTIVES WITH "EYES OF ARGUS."

It has been said that "A Herald Want Advertisement has a thousand eyes." Sherlock Holmes had but two, although they were uncommonly good ones.

However, Holmes could not have found for you, over night, the one man in the city who most wanted to buy your house, or your store, or your horse, or your yacht, or your library, or your securities, or your automobile, or your old desk, or your piano; or the one man in the city who would be the best partner for you, or the best clerk, or coachman, or handy man; or the one woman in the city who would be the most valuable stenographer for you, or cook, or housekeeper.

But the thousand-eyed little Herald Want Advertisement finds these people for you—and finds them quickly, presenting no bill for "extras" or "disbursements," as Sherlock Holmes would have been apt to do.

When You Want Anything, Is It Not Better to Set a Thousand Eyes Looking For It Than Only Two?

RUSSIA IS DESIROUS OF KNOWING WHAT JAPAN'S PEACE TERMS WILL BE

Ambassadors at Washington and Paris Ordered to Ascertain.

Practically an Answer to President's Tender of Good Offices.

Situation Is Delicate and Greatest Reticence Is Observed.

St. Petersburg, June 7.—As a result of the meeting of the council of ministers held at the Tsarskoe-Selo palace yesterday, instructions were telegraphed this afternoon to the Russian ambassadors at Washington and Paris to the effect that Russia is desirous of learning Japan's peace conditior3.

St. Petersburg, June 7, 5:50 p. m.—President Roosevelt when this dispatch reaches America should be in possession of Emperor Nicholas' response to his tender of good offices.

The efforts that President Roosevelt has been making to bring the belligerents together, entered on a distinctly new phase last night. Foreign Minister Lamsdorff had an audience with the emperor in the afternoon upon the matter of Ambassador Cassini's communication and at 11 o'clock last night Ambassador Meyer called upon Count Lamsdorff at the chancellory and remained with the foreign minister for some time. Whether this visit was upon the invitation of Count Lamsdorff or at the request of the ambassador, cannot definitely be stated, but there is reason to believe that the visit was in obedience to instructions from Washington, conveying a personal communication from the president, to the emperor, tendering his good offices. The result was that today Mr. Meyer went to the Tsarskoe-Selo in full uniform and was received in special audience by the emperor. Upon his return to St. Petersburg Mr. Meyer hastened to the embassy, whence he sent a long cipher dispatch to Washington. Half an hour later he was closeted with Sir Charles Hardinge, the British ambassador.

The present situation is extremely delicate and the greatest reticence is observed. The foreign office is deserted, this being the empress' birthday, and at the American embassy no statement could be secured. Nevertheless there are some collateral indications that the emperor's response was favorable. The sudden retirement of the French foreign minister, M. Delcasse, who was regarded as not only one of the strongest supporters of the dual alliance, but as one of the stanchest friends of Russia, was a great blow to Russia, and rendered President Roosevelt's friendly tender particularly opportune. Besides it is known, as set forth in these dispatches last night, that the emperor has been strongly advised if he decided to open peace negotiations, to do so through President Roosevelt.

Russians Thought Jap Warships Were Approaching.

Nagasaki, June 7.—The British steamer Cilurnum, chartered by the Mitsui Russian Steamship company of Tokio, bound from Shanghai for Kobe, Japan, was stopped on June 2, eighty miles from the Bell buoy, off the entrance to Woosung, by the Russian transport Rion.

A boarding party, after the steamer's papers had ben examined, removed her hatches and threw overboard 411 bags of beans, 125 bales of cotton and 12 boxes of antimony.

The Russians left again suddenly, stating that the steamer was released. It is supposed that they received a wireless message announcing the approach of Japanese warships.

RUSSIANS ANGRY

With United States For Action on Ships.

St. Petersburg, June 7.—The Russian press, notably the Novoe Vreyma and the Russ, the latter frequently reflecting the views of the foreign office, display a great deal of resentment against the United States for enforcing the twenty-four-hour rule in the case of the three Russian cruisers at Manila. The Russ quotes the American neutrality regulations, and contends that President Roosevelt, in applying the principle that only injuries received during a storm and not in

DIETZ DAM GOES OUT

Controversy on Thornapple River Ends In Unexpected Manner.

Further Danger From Flood at Fond du Lac Is Passed.

Milwaukee, June 7.—An Evening Wisconsin special from Chetek, Wis., says: Cameron dam, on Thornapple river, over which the Dietz controversy with the Chippewa Logging and Boom company hinges, went out today and with it the destruction of many wagon bridges. Several towns in the county have been cut off and there have been no rural letter deliveries since Monday. Only one steel bridge in the vicinity remains in place. No lives are reported lost.

An Evening Wisconsin special from Fond du Lac, Wis., says: Further danger from the flood is past and the damage will not exceed yesterday's estimate of $100,000. Of this amount, $15,000 is suffered by the city. Water is still flowing on several of the streets and avenues, and boats, rafts and vehicles are being used for transporting supplies. The Bowen Manufacturing company and the O. C. Steenberg company plants have closed down, water covering their engines.

FIFTY YEARS IN PRISON

Sentence Given Train Robber Who Dynamited Express Car.

St. Paul, June 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—Advices were received at the headquarters of the Northern Pacific railroad here today, from Philippsburg, Mont., to the effect that Clarence B. Young, who attempted to rob the express car of the Northern Pacific train two miles east of Bearmouth, May 27, after he had dynamited the car, had been sentenced to serve fifty years in the Deer Lodge prison.

Young was arraignd in th district court yesterday and waived his rights and entered a plea of guilty, which was accepted by the court, which then sentenced him. He will be taken to the penitentiary at once.

He will proceed to Washington and confer with President Roosevelt regarding the re-establishment of friendly relations between Colombia and the United States.

NORWEGIANS DETHRONE KING OSCAR AND SEVER UNION WITH SWEDEN

Controversy Over Consular System Causes Storthing to Act.

Assures King That No Ill-Feeling Is Entertained.

Council Will Act as Government of Norway For Present.

Christiania, June 7.—King Oscar's refusal to sanction the bill passed by the storthing, providing for a separate consular service for Norway, culminated today in the passage of a resolution by the storthing declaring the dissolution of the union and that the king has ceased to act as king of Norway. Although the action was anticipated, it caused excitement in this city, on account of the anxiety as to what action the king would take. The crisis became acute May 26, when his majesty, after three months, during which the regency was confided to Crown Prince Gustav, resumed the reigns of office. The council of state immediately submitted to him the consular bill which he on May 26 refused to sanction, arguing that any action must receive the sanction of the mixed council. The Norwegian council of state thereupon resigned and the king refused to acept their resignations, as in view of the state of public opinion it was impossible to form a new government. Demonstrations were held throughout the country endorsing the action of the council of state.

The consular bill, while apparently of little importance, was designed to open the whole question of foreign affairs, which Norway desires to manage independently of Sweden.

Christiania, Norway, June 7.—The storthing today declared the union between Norway and Sweden under one king to be dissolved, and that the king has ceased to act as king of Norway. The storthing further empowered the present state council to act as a government of Norway until further notice and to exercise the power heretofore appertaining to the king.

An address to the king was adopted, declaring that no ill feeling was entertained against him, his dynasty, or the Swedish nation, and asking him to cooperate in the selection of a young prince of the house of Bernadotte to occupy the throne of Norway.

It is not anticipated that King Oscar will consent to any prince of the house of Bernadotte accepting the Norwegian crown. Should the king refuse, there is a possibility that the throne may be offered to Prince Waldemar, the third son of King Christian of Denmark. The people of Denmark are largely in sympathy with the Norwegians' demands.

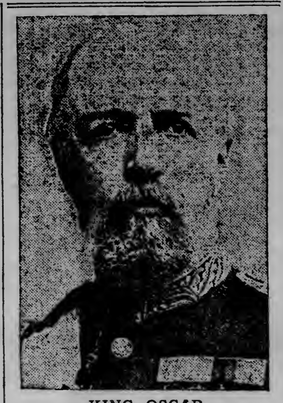
At the opening of the session the government informed the storthing that it relinquished office from today. The storthing thereupon unanimously and without debate passed the following resolution:

Whereas, all the members of the council of state have laid down their offices, and

Whereas, his majesty, the king, has declared himself unable to establish a new government for the country, and

Whereas, the constitutional regal power thus becomes inoperative, the storthing authorizes the members of the council of state, who retired today, to exercise until further notice as the Norwegian government the power appertaining to the king in accordance with Norway's constitution and existing laws with those changes which are necessitated by the fact that the union with Sweden under one king is dissolved in consequence of the king having ceased to act as a Norwegian king."

M. Michelsen, the retiring premier, accepted in behalf of the government



KING OSCAR,
Who Is Deposed as King of Norway.

King Oscar Makes Decided Protest Against Norway's Action.

Not Believed That Sweden Will Adopt Forcible Measures

To Keep Norway Within the Bonds of the Union.

the "honorable and difficult task with which the storthing has entrusted it."

Five Social Democrats dissented from the address to the king.

It is expected that the storthing will issue a proclamation to the Norwegian people regarding the dethronement of the monarch.

The dissolution of the union between Sweden and Norway has been pending for some time, and had its growth in the desire which grew stronger as time passed for the establishment of separate consular systems for the two countries. King Oscar recently vetoed at Stockholm the measure presented to him by the council of state, providing for separate consular representation, and the Norwegians maintained that the king by so doing, and partly by his absence from Norway, had suspended his rights and duties as king of Norway.

One of the causes for the desire in Sweden and Norway for separate consular systems was the fact that Sweden is protectionist and Norway is for free trade, and also because of Norway's more extensive sea trade and other divergencies of commercial interests.

Stockholm, June 7.—King Oscar has sent a telegram to Premier Michelsen, as follows:

"Have received the communication of the council of state and record the most decided protest against the method and action of the government."

London, June 7.—The Christiania correspondent of the Times says he believes he has good authority for saying that Sweden has indirectly assured Norway that no forcible measures will be employed to keep her within the bonds of the present union.

NEW YORK REAL ESTATE SELLS AT $4.00 PER SQUARE INCH

New York, June 7.—The sale to the Mercantile Trust company of St. Louis, just reported, of the famous plot of real estate at No. 1 Wall street, at the corner of Broadway, has given rise to interesting compilations, showing the great rise in property values in this city.

At the figure named in the transaction, $700,000, the plot brought about $4 a square inch, possibly the highest price ever paid in the world's history. The property measures only thirty feet on the Broadway side, and has a frontage on Wall street of thirty-nine feet ten inches. It contains 1,170 square feet.

The next highest figure on record in connection with real estate transactions in this city was that paid in 1872 by Anthony J. Drexel for the site of the Morgan banking house at Broad and Wall streets. This property, measuring 717 square feet, brought $348.67 a square foot. Said the attorney who conducted the trust company's negotiations:

"I have not the slightest doubt that I have secured for our clients the most valuable piece of real estate in the whole world. There is only one Broadway, only one Wall street, and only No. 1 Wall street on earth. It is likely the present lease will be allowed to run to a close. Then, of course, the property will be improved in a manner keeping with its value and location."

For many years a drug store occupied the store room on the corner, which faces Old Trinity. Recently a cigar company obtained this room and now holds a lease for three years. The building is an old-fashioned, four-story brick, almost lost to view among towering sky scrapers. It was erected more than twenty-five years ago at a cost of $8,700. Today the annual taxes on the property slightly exceed that figure. The ground was bought by one of the Silliman family in 1872, at a cost of $18,275. It has remained in the family's possession since then. The oldest existing deed in connection with the plot dates from the beginning of the eighteenth century, when it was sold for $500 by a Dutch settler to an enterprising Irishman.

Benjamin Silliman, who died in 1901, leaving the property to a sister, refused many fabulous offers for the ground, but for some unknown reason would never sell. One instance is related of a joker having offered him gold coins enough to cover the entire ground, to which he agreed, providing they were set up on edge.

KIMBERLY LEAVES NEARLY A QUARTER OF ESTATE TO CHARITY

Sharon, Pa., June 7.—The will of Peter Kimberly, the millionaire steel manufacturer and mine owner, who died in Chicago Sunday morning, was probated today. By the terms Amos Kimberly, his brother, who lives in Iowa, inherits 17½ per cent of the estate and his stepsister, Mrs. Kate Murdock of Salt Lake City will receive 5 per cent. Ira B. Bassett of Cleveland, George A. Baird of Chicago, and John C. Owsley of Sharon, executors, each receive 5 per cent. Mrs. Elizabeth Asay of Chicago will receive 5 per cent, Reuben Williamson, his bookkeeper, gets 1 per cent, Mrs. James Williamson, William Kimberly and Elmer Kimberly each receive 3 per cent. About 23 per cent was left to charities. The estate is estimated to be worth about $8,00,000. The names of the charitable institutions which are to be benefited were not mentioned in the will.

HERRICK WILL NOT ACCEPT EQUITABLE CHAIRMANSHIP

Columbus, Ohio, June 7.—Governor Herrick, who returned from New York today, has not bought out the interests of James H. Hyde, first vice president of the Equitable Life Assurance society, nor has he been formally or officially offered the chairmanship of the board of directors of the Equitable. When seen today he said that there was nothing in the story that such a transaction had been made.

"It is true," he continued, "that I was asked whether if such an offer was made to me, that is the chairmanship, I would accept, but my reply was that owing to the circumstances under which I am placed in Ohio, having but recently been nominated for governor, I could not consider such an offer however flattering it might be.

"No, I didn't go to New York in connection with this business, but on entirely different matters. My name, with others, had been considered for the place of chairman of the board of directors of the Equitable, as I was informed after reaching New York, but further than that in addition to asking me whether I would accept, the place, nothing was done. I did not see Mr. Hyde at all."

WARSHIPS TO SAIL FOR JONES BODY

New York, June 7.—The second squadron of the North Atlantic fleet, consisting of the armored cruiser Brooklyn and the protected cruisers Chattanooga, Galveston and Tacoma, selected by the navy department to bring the body of John Paul Jones from France, will assemble off the naval anchorage at Tompkinsville, Staten Island, today, and will proceed on Thursday to sea on the way to Cherbourg. Off that port the casket containing the body will be transferred to the Brooklyn. Rear Admiral C. D. Sigsbee, who will be in command, will board his flagship off Tompkinsville this afternoon. At the Brooklyn navy yard, carpenters have been busily engaged on the flagship completing an oak platform, which is called the "mahogany sarcophagus," meaning the mahogany casing that is to receive the leaden coffin containing the body of the commander of the Bon Homme Richard.

Admiral Sigsbee expects to make the voyage from Sandy Hook to the Cherbourg breakwater in about thirteen days.

On arriving at Cherbourg, the squadron will be met by the French warships, that are to participate in the final tribute in French waters. Ten days after its arrival, the fleet, it is expected, will sail for Annapolis.

MILLIONS OF DOLLARS

Disbursed In United States For War Supplies.

San Francisco, June 7.—The Call says today: I. T. Egan of New York, now registered at a local hotel, has been in the city for several months, off and on, directing the shipments of munitions of war to Japan. It has been learned that he had charge of the secret shipment to Japan of a fleet of submarine boats that performed such invaluable service in the great naval battle in the sea of Japan.

Egan is the representative of a Japanese firm in New York, who have been the medium through which Japan has been purchasing her material for warfare.

The firm not only operated at this port, but have shipped tons of war material from Seattle and Victoria, and their only failure was the refusal of the local customs authorities to clear the liner Adato, with her contraband cargo of shells. The firm is said to have handled millions of dollars for the Tokio government, and disbursed the greater part of this money in this country.

MURDER SUSPECTED.

Son of Famous Venezuelan Revolutionist Dies Suddenly.

Philadelphia, June 7.—Under mysterious circumstances John Fernadez, son of Gen. Jose Fernandez, a famous Venezuelan revolutionist, known as "El Mocho," died Monday afternoon in St. Joseph's hospital. An autopsy, made by the coroner's physician, indicates that death was due to pneumonia, but some of the young man's friends hint at poison. The symptoms indicate that he was a victim of a drug.

The fact that the dead man was the son of "El Mocho," and had lived in an atmosphere of plots and counter plots makes his friends suspicious that his death may have been due tc revenge by his own or his father's enemies.

Gen. Fernandez, the father, who only a short time ago, was credited with planning a fresh assault on the government of President Castro of Venezuela is now in St. Louis.

CHIEF CAUSE

For Delcasse's Resignation Was Abyssinian Railways.

New York, June 7.—According to the Paris correspondent of the Times, the chief cause for Foreign Minister Delcasse's resignation was not the state of Moroccan affairs, but his refusal to internationalize the Abyssinian railways. Both in France and England, the correspondent asserts, strong financial influence was brought to bear to render M. Delcasse's scheme in respect to the railways abortive. It is expected, the dispatch adds, that the negotiations which have been proceeding with Rome and London on the subject of Abyssinia will now have a different issue than was at first expected.

COHEN BUNKOED OUT OF $7,000

Chicago, June 7.—M. Cohen, a wealthy junk dealer of St. Louis, has reported to the Chicago police the loss of $7,000 by a "wire-tapping" swindle.

Cohen met five men in St. Louis and they unfolded to him an elaborate plan to beat the races which are in progress at the Latonia track. He came to Chicago with the men and they took him to a room in a building near Sixteenth street and Michigan avenue. There were intricate electrical machines there and he thought the scheme was a good one. For three days he remained there with the party.

During that time he advanced large sums of money aggregating $7,000 and then the five men disappeared. There is no trace to the whereabouts of the swindlers.

TWO BOYS MEET HORRIBLE DEATH

Atlantic City, N. J., June 7.—Two boys have met a horrible death by cremation on the beach here. They were Ordner J. Delaney and William Jeffries, both of this city, aged 5 and 7 years, respectively. The two boys were inseparable companions. They went to a brush heap of pine trees on the beach front, dug a hole beneath the pile and crawled under. It is believed they had matches, for soon the brush was ablaze and before the boys could crawl out they were cremated. Their charred bodies were scarcely recognizable.

KING ALFONSO THE LORD MAYOR'S GUEST

Welcome to Young Monarch Is of the Heartiest Description.

Route of Procession Continuous Archway of Flags and Flowers.

London, June 7.—King Alfonso today visited the city of London and enjoyed the hospitality of the lord mayor and corporation at the Guild hall. For the first time since his majesty's arrival in England the weather was sufficiently fine to enable him to appear in an open carriage and for the first time anything in the nature of really large crowds gathered to welcome him. The welcome to the young monarch was of the heartiest description. The route of the procession which passed under a continuous archway of flags and flowers was lined with troops. Halts were made at the boundaries of the different boroughs to receive and answer the addresses of the local authorities. At each of these points the decorations were of an especially elaborate character and the crowds were notably large. King Alfonso unrestrainedly showed his pleasure at the demonstrative greetings which culminated in a scene of great enthusiasm as he entered the Guild hall. There was assembled a brilliant gathering of members of the royal family, cabinet ministers and naval, military and court officials. The city's address of welcome was presented to the king in a gold casket.

KING ALFONSO.

King Alfonso did not reply to the presentation address which referred to the admiration which the citizens of London had for the art and literature of Spain and the services of that country in the cause of civilization and which recalled the commercial ties uniting the two countries.

FRENCH PREMIER DIRECTS AFFAIRS

Takes Up the Duties of Former Minister Delcasse.

Will Permanently Retain the Portfolio of Foreign Affairs.

Paris, June 7.—Premier Rouvier, as minister of foreign affairs took up the active direction of the foreign office today, conferring with the chiefs of departments in various pending foreign questions. Jules Cambon, the French ambassador to Spain, whose name has been mentioned as the possible successor of M. Delcasse, was among the callers at the foreign office but M. Rouvier's permanent retention of the portfolio of foreign affairs is now considered settled as President Loubet and parliament wish him to surrender the portfolio of finance and give his attention to the foreign situation. Either former minister of public instruction, Poincare, or the former minister of public works, Badin will probably succeed M. Rouvier, as minister of finance. Important diplomatic changes are also thought likely to be made as a result of the cabinet changes. One report is that the Marquis De Revereaux, ambassador ot Vienna will succeed M. Bihourd, as ambassador at Berlin and that Jules Cambon may be transferred to St. Petersburg. The officials do not confirm these reports, saying it is too early to forecast the changes resulting from the new regime.

M. ROUVIER,
Premier of France.

NEED GOOD WEATHER

Local Contractors and Builders Have Been Much Delayed.

Building Operations Are Very Lively at Present Time.

The weather has continued to greatly hinder the contract work underway on new building operations, thus far this month and the contractors are very anxious to get a spell of warm, dry weather. At the present time there are a vast number of new buildings in the process of erection, not in any one particular locality, but in localities pretty well scattered over the city from West Duluth to Lakeside.

Some of the builders claim that actual building operations are more active now than a year ago at this time.

The wet weather has especially caused delay in foundation work. In cases where the building has advanced so far that inside work could be done there has not been so much delay, but in other cases where contracts call for the completion of business blocks by certain dates the contractors and builders have had cause for uneasiness.

Several new business properties which were to have been completed for occupancy by June 1 were not ready by that date though some few of them are far enough along now that the concerns to occupy them are moving in and several others will be completed within a few days.

The matter has not been quite so urgent with residence building, although delay has been caused in almost every case. With six weeks of continued favorable weather a great many of the existing contracts will have been cleaned up along that line of building operations.

Permits are being issued right along for new homes that are, to be constructed this summer, the cost running from $1,500 or less, for the cottages or less pretentious house to homes worth from $3,000 to $5,000, while there are many permits being taken out for flat buildings. From the present outlook it is expected that the flat building movement will be especially active this year, particularly in the hill district between Seventh avenue west and Tenth avenue east.

The building contractors have made some complaint of late over the practice said to exist of persons getting out plans and securing bids for new buildings before making any move toward securing the money with which to build. When the plans are submitted for bids the contractors claim that they figure on the basis of present prices of materials. If the person proposing to build delays operations for several months after the bids are made the prices of building materials may undergo a change and are as likely to be higher as they are to be lower, and, besides the contractor making the lowest bid may have taken other contracts during the time that the first prospective builder is making up his mind and the operations coming, as it were, in bunches, more or less annoying delay is caused.

French & Bassett's One Price System of Selling Pianos

VERSUS

The Dickering Plan

This is a proposition that should vitally interest every intending piano purchaser, and the public at large, for it is as much a question of morals as of buying a piano at the lowest possible price.

Under our One-Price System you will find all instruments tagged and marked in plain figures at their lowest possible price — which you will find much lower than those of other piano stores, after the dickering process has been fully completed. Take, for instance, our beautiful high-grade piano at $185. The ordinary store will start by asking you $350 for an equal piano and then by easy stages, and after much dickering, will come down to about $250, which is $65 higher than our one plain marked price.

There are several reasons why we can sell fine and reliable pianos at such remarkably low prices. We are the only piano house in Duluth or Superior, buying all instruments out and out for spotcash, direct from the manufacturer. We sell more pianos in Duluth and Superior than all other dealers combined.

We conduct this piano business in connection with our large and long established Furniture and Housefurnishing Store, thus making a great saving in expense. In this piano store every price is absolutely guaranteed as the net cash value of the instrument, and when customers wish to purchase on time, interest will be charged at the rate of 5 per cent per annum on deferred payments.

The product of seventeen leading piano makers is here and each make is a leader in its particular grade.

The public is cordially invited to see and hear our beautiful pianos and to investigate our One Price System. It will save you many dollars and much time.

Very easy terms of payment will be arranged at from $5 to $10 a month.

Old instruments will be bought or taken as part payment at their cash value.

We cannot see why the purchase of a noble instrument like a piano should be surrounded by the conditions that pertained to the old-fashioned horse-trade we read about, can you?

If you go to a dickering piano store and don't dicker on the price, you will pay double what the instrument is worth, and if you do dicker, you will pay more than it is worth anyway, only not so much more—but you will probably lose your self-respect, your temper and your peace of mind.

Why not avoid all this and come here and buy under our ONE-PRICE SYSTEM? We invite you to come and investigate and to make comparisons.

Special Notice—

We do all kinds of piano repairing and will be pleased to make an estimate on your work.

Expert tuning and regulating in all its branches. Satisfaction guaranteed.

COMPLAINTS OF CORRUPTION

In Several Northern Counties Received at Governor's Office.

St. Paul, une 7.—Governor John A. Johnson may probe into the affairs of several counties in the northern part of the state, from which complaints of corruption and maladministration have been received. It was stated at the governor's office yesterday that from three to five complaints are being received every day, and that many counties, villages and townships are involved.

The complaints have been referred to Attorney General Young and if it is found that the governor has jurisdiction and there is a cause of action, proceedings will be instituted similar to those instituted in Beltrami county.

It is said that in several instances much evidence of gross maladministration has been produced. This evidence will be examined carefully and in those cases where the governor has no jurisdiction, the complaints will be informed of the law and the methods they should pursue to bring about the desired reforms.

It is charged that ditches, roads, bridges and public buildings, in many municipalities, have not been let to the lowest bidder as the law provides. It is complained further that the floating indebtedness of some of the municipalities is above the legal limit, that some of the officials have been guilty of gross misconduct and bonds have been issued in violation of the law.

"The Beltrami county investigation seems to have caused a wave of popular sentiment in favor of municipal reform," said an official at the governor's office.

SEARCH UNSUCCESSFUL.

No Trace of Missing Tower Boy Found.

Tower, Minn., June 7.—Three hundred employes of the Tower Lumber company and other men of Tower numbering between 500 and 600 searched all day yesterday and far into the night for little Gus Wermen, the 7-year-old son of Matthew Wermen, who disappeared Saturday night at 8 o'clock. Not thes lightest trace of the boy was found. The Minnesota Iron company closed its plant today and its 400 employes are joining in the search.

The missing boy, whose father is employed by the Tower Lumber company, accompanied his aunt to a store in the village Saturday evening. While within she heard a cry and hurrying out failed to find any trace of the little boy. Gus Puhaka, another employe of the mill, explained when questioned that his son and the Wermen boy had been bothering his horse, that he had chased the two boys and catching young Wermen had whipped him and sent him home crying. The aunt hurried to the Wermen home, but the boy was not there, and his mother had not seen him since leaving with the aunt.

EPIDEMIC OF RABIES

Among Dogs, Cattle and Horses Is Reported.

St. Paul, June 7.—Reports of an epidemic of rabies among the dogs, cattle and horses of the northern part of the state were received yesterday by the state live stock sanitary board, and Executive Agent Ward issued an order requesting owners of dogs in the affected communities to muzzle and chain the animals for a period of ninety days, when it is hoped that the epidemic will have died out.

The reports received by the board are meager, but they are sufficient to lead the officials to believe that the situation is serious. It is said that the most violent cases of rabies have occurred in Crookston, Red Lake Falls and Warren. It is reported that many horses and cattle and one person, Dr. Langevin of Crookston have been bitten by dogs affected with rabies. The cases are said to be increasing at an alarming rate.

ZEMSTVO CONGRESS

Meets In Moscow In Spite of Government.

Moscow, June 7.—The all-Russian zemstvo congress, the delegates to which included the mayors of twenty-five of the largest cities, met yesterday, notwithstanding government prohibition and resolved with practical unanimity to demand the convocation of a zemsky sobor, and the submission to it of the question of peace or war. The morning and afternoon sessions of the congress were held without interference on the part of the authorities, though the afternoon session, which assembled in an open hall, had to be adjourned to a private house because of a crowd of auditors present, the president of the congress stating that he was assured the police would interfere unless the meeting should be held behind closed doors.

Practically all the delegates are in favor of peace, the minority wishing the zemsky sobor called for the sole purpose of acting on this question.

The Taxation Question.

To the Editor of the Herald:

Your leader on taxing mortgages is real interesting. I might ask why it would not be equally just to exempt owners of personal property, buildings and trade from taxation If it is possible for mortgage owners to escape taxation, and they are all on record, it is much easier for a large amount of personal property to escape taxation. Undoubtedly the law is not worth the paper it is written on Let it therefore be enforced until someone smashes it by court proceedings.

On the other hand, if assessors are able to evade the law taxing mortgages, I don't see why they cannot evade the law assessing personal property and buildings just as well. Who is going to prosecute them? I don't own any property in Duluth, don't want to own any for manufacturing purposes or even a residence, as long as chattels or buildings bear a tax, though I might own some for speculation only. I am handicapped enough to pay taxes on my improvements in Superior, and if anyone wants my property in Superior they can have it for the cost of the improvements and I will throw in the lot.

No, Mr. Editor, the only rational system of taxation is land value. Everybody has to use the land. Any other puts you on a foaming, churning sea of human hoggishness, deceit and perjury, in which there is all kinds of opportunity for evasion. Land taxation in Duluth would give Duluth a great advantage over Superior, in Superior a great advantage over Duluth. In St. Louis and Douglas counties over St. Paul and Minneapolis. In short, it would kill off the land speculators who hold industry and enterprise by the throat.

Wind Damaged Derricks.

The high wind of yesterday morning damaged the derricks at the Jones & Adams dock in Superior to the extent of $5,000. The front of the hoisting bridges which extend from the dock forty feet in the air in a slanting postion, was blown down and practically demolished. The bridge was one of three recently installed and, until it can be replaced, the work of unloading coal boats at the dock will be retarded. It is estimated that about twenty days will be required to replace the structure blown down.

CLAIM THAT GRAFT EXISTS

Court Ties Up Funds of Douglas County Town.

The funds of the town of Superior have been tied up tight until next November, through a temporary injunctional order issued by Judge Vinje of circuit court in Douglas county, Wis. The order restrains the town officials from issuing or paying any warrants against a levy made at a minority meeting of the town electors held April 12, until the hearing for a permanent injunction and for an accounting of the moneys paid out by the town board for some months past.

It is expected that when the case comes to trial there will be some matters of a rather sensational nature developed for the reason that charges have been made alleging the fradulent issue of town orders by members of the board, padded payrolls and a systematic graft claimed to have been carried on for a number of years.

The trouble originated at the annual town meeting in April, when a factional fight was started those having been in control of the town affairs for a long time past pulling out of the meeting and holding another at a later date when the town levy was made which is now enjoined. The other faction, which is called the reform element, claims to have the majority of the electors. This faction met June 1 and made another annual town levy.

The court is now to decide which faction shall control the town's finances.

Dredging Work Completed.

The work of dredging out a sand bar at the entrance to Ontonagon harbor by the Zenith Dredging company of Duluth has been nearly completed and lumber boats are now enabled to enter and get to the docks. The contract called for the removal of about 36,000 cubic yards of earth and the dredging company began work May 21 last.

That Automobile.

To the Editor of The Herald:

The city fathers postponed action on the recommendation of the board of fire commissioners to purchase an automobile for Chief Black. The statement has been made that the cost of the horse, buggy and driver would offset the expense of the automobile. But will it? Is this simply meant to throw mud in the taxpayers' eyes? I am informed by one of the aldermen that the cost of the machine will be in the neighborhood of $1,800 or $2,000. Six months at least in every year the auto will be out of business, and the horse and buggy will have to be resurrected. Statistics for the past ten years will conclusively prove that a very large proportion of the fires which Duluth has had took place in the dead of winter, when the auto will be practically in the scrapheap. The taxpayers should be thankful that the fire commissioners did not include in their recommendation that a "calliope" should go with the automobile.

Duluth, June 7.

SEARS' WILL MISSING.

Boston, June 7.—The last will of the late J. Montgomery Sears, Boston's largest taxpayer, which disposed of an estate of about $25,000,000 has disappeared. Mr. Sears' attorney turned the document over to him, it is stated several months ago, after it had been executed and attested, but though a previous will, executed many years ago, has been found, the family has been unable to discover the slightest trace of the second document.

CHANGES IN OFFICERS.

Bates Called to Washington For Department Duty.

Washington, June 7.—Orders were issued at the war department yesterday relieving Maj. Gen. John T. Bates from duty in command of the northern military division embracing the departments of the lakes, the Missouri and Dakota, with headquarters at St. Louis and directing him to proceed to Washington and report to the secretary of war. Brig. Gen. Benjamin Winn commanding the department of the Missouri, with headquarters at Omaha, Neb., in addition to his present duties, has been ordered to assume command of the northern division until a permanent assignment is made. These orders were issued in anticipation of the retirement of Major Gen. George L. Gillespie, assistant chief of staff, on the 15th on his own applications after nearly forty-eight years of active service. Gen. Bates will be assigned to duty as assistant chief of staff on the 15th inst and the understanding in military circles is that he will be made lieutenant general and chief of staff on the statutary retirement of Lieut. Gen. Chaffee, April 14, 1906. Inasmuch as Gen. Bates will retire Aug. 26 of the same year he will serve at the head of the army for a little over two months. The vacancy in the list of major generals caused by Gen. Gillespie's retirement will be filled by the promotion of Gen. George M. Randall, the senior brigadier now on his way from the Philippines. Col. A. L. Wagner of the general staff, will be promoted to brigadier general.

GRAND LODGE, I. O. O. F. MEETS AT MILWAUKEE.

Milwaukee, June 7.—Between 1,200 and 1,500 Odd Fellows and their wives are in attendance upon the grand lodge of the I. O. O. F., and the annual session of the Rebekah assembly.

In his annual address, Grand Master E. A. Kehr, recommended that the per capita tax be increased 10 cents per member, to create a surplus, and that something be done for old members of defunct lodges.

Secretary Hoes' report showed a loss in the number of lodges over a year ago of seven. The membership on Dec. 31, 1903, was 17,027, and that of Dec. 31, 1904, was 17,275.

The amount paid for the relief of brothers for that of widows, and for the burial of the dead amounted to $32,878.93. The total receipts for the past year were $168,569.50.

DEMOCRAT ELECTED.

Portland, Or., June 7.—Dr. Harry Lane, Democrat, is mayor-elect of Portland by a plurality of about 1,000 over his leading opponent, George H. Williams, Republican incumbent. With the exception of Dr. Lane, and two Democratic councilmen, the Republican ticket was elected in its entirety. The people voted to grant a franchise to a competitive telephone company.

London, June 7.—At yesterday afternoon's session of the house of commons, William Court Gully officially announced his resignation, on the ground of ill health, of the speakership, which he had held for a decade. Premier Balfour and Sir Henry Campbell Bannerman made a brief speech of regret, after which the premier announces that tomorrow he would introduce a resolution, praying the king to elevate Mr. Gully to the peerage, as is customary in the case of retiring speakers of the house of commons.

Painkiller CURES CRAMPS & COLIC
PERRY DAVIS

The ceremony this morning at the Cathedral of the Sacred Heart at which Miss Mary Elizabeth Parker, daughter of Charles Edward Parker, became the bride of Hugo John Kremer was one of exceeding grace and dainty beauty. The affair was a lilac wedding and in the decoration the beautiful fragrant blossoms in lilac shades and white were used and the same tones were used in the gowns of the wedding party. The altar was banked with the purple flowers and graceful ferns and with the lighted tapers and the fragrance of the flowers as an incense the service was one of especial charm.

Before the ceremony a musical program was given by Miss Wolford at the organ and Mary Syer Bradshaw. At 10:30 o'clock the wedding music was played and the party entered the church. The ushers, S. S. Rumsey, Bert Kremer, Charles Parker and Percy Ginder came first and were followed by the maid of honor, Miss Mildred Cooper and then the bridesmaids, Miss Sara Smith and Miss Hettie Gould, both of Superior. The matron of honor, Mrs. A W. Hepworth, came next and last the bride with her father. They were met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Frank Parker and the service was read by Rev. Father Corbett.

The gowns of the wedding party were most attractive the only color suggestions being in the lilac tones and greens. The bride wore a beautiful robe of heavy lace with a long veil caught with orange blossoms, and carried a prayer book. Mrs. Hepworth wore a gown of sheer silk tissue flecked daintily with the lilac color. She wore a lilac lace hat and carried purple lilacs tied with maline. Miss Cooper wore a dainty gown of white, decorated with eyelet embroidery and wore a hat of valenciennes lace and carried a graceful bouquet of asparagus ferns tied with a soft bow of maline. The maids both wore dainty gowns of white India linen trimmed in lace with lace hats trimmed in white lilacs and carried the white lilacs fastened with green ribbons. A large number of guests were present for the ceremony and the day was the ideal day for the June bride.

At 1 o'clock a wedding breakfast was served at the Spalding. The table decorations were lovely in pink and white tulips and covers were laid for twenty-two.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mrs. Kremer, mother of the groom of Fond du Lac, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Kremer of Fond du Lac, Mrs. Frederick Nelson Finch and Miss McMichael of St. Paul.

Mr. and Mrs. Kremer left in the afternoon for a wedding trip and will return to Duluth and be at home during the summer on Park Point.

The affair is for the members and their women friends.

The welcome to the senior class was extended by Miss Mary Bartlett and Miss Eva Stevenson of the graduates responded. The remaining toasts were, "Our President," by Miss Kate Joyce, "Hopes For the Future," President E. W. Bohannan and "Memories," Miss Carrie Neff. After the banquet a business meeting of the association was held and Miss Fenton was re-elected president; secretary, Miss Gertrude Schiller and treasurer Miss Willena Marshall.

For Summer Wear.

Organdies and other sheer cotton stuffs assume more importance as the hot months draw near, and the sheer one-tone cottons in all of the shadings found among the characteristic notes of the season. The stuffs, either plain or mercerized, are much fancied by French makers, and are not only made up alone, but are combined with silk quite as though they were materials of great cost and rarity. Raised dots in self-tone or eyelet embroidery in self-tone or white are introduced upon these cottons more often than any other ornamentation, says an exchange.

The sprigged nainsooks and percales taken up by some of the fashionable dressmakers of Paris last summer are to be exploited still more widely this season, and the simple materials are made up with as much care as though they were worth high prices.

The embroidered Swisses, both in all white and in color on a white ground, are prettier than ever before, and are finding great favor. Shaded dots or lozenges embroidered on white are particularly effective, and among these designs one with dots of varying sizes and shading from light to dark bright blue sprinkled over the white surface is especially good.

Plumetis in one tone or with embroidered designs in color or white or ecru ground has a considerable vogue, and the muslis, batistes and fine lawns, whether plain, embroidered in eyelet design, are all desirable.

A GIRL AND A TELEGRAM

By Fannie Heaslip Lea.

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Wolcott flung himself out on the sand, at Cynthia's white canvas-shod feet, and watched the sea gulls dipping and drifting over the summer sea.

"You shall be the princess," he said at last.

"Is they servant a housemaid?" said Cynthia unkindly, "that she should do this thing. Every little penny-a-liner has a princess nowadays, its an overworked royalty. If you're going to find me a name, let it be original at least."

"There has never been a Mrs. Hugh Wolcott," he suggested modestly, "that sounds well, too."

"Sounds like a story in the 'Hearth and Fireside,'" she retorted with a sniff. No, I don't want to be a princess, and you are neither the boy, the knight, the jester, nor any of the other milk and water inanities that figure in the princess fiction. When I remember my nose," she added, wrinkling the despised feature like a meditative rabbit, "I am tempted to believe that you are making fun of me."

Wolcott kept wise silence for a moment, then—

"You want a story-book name," he said tauntingly, "something like Reginald Ten Eyck, or Percival Cholmondely, or—"

"Or what?" she asked curiously.

"Or Mrs. Mortimer Winthrop," he said with great distinctness, lifting her finger, that was poking industriously at the white sand of the beach, and turning it so that its single diamond flashed blue in the sun.

There was silence—a long, cruel silence, in which Cynthia sat with both hands clasped in her lap, and Wolcott pulled his hat low over his eyes to shut out the senseless sea gulls that dipped and drifted like awakening memories.

"Cynthia," he said after a moment, hoarsely, "why did you ever promise to marry Winthrop? When I went West two years ago, it was with the firm intention of coming back as soon as I possibly could. It wouldn't have been fair to ask you to wait—I had no prospects. How did I know that my respected uncle would die, and leave me the wherewithal to enter Paradise, any more than I knew that Paradise would be closed to me when the time came?" He was almost staggered at his own temerity, must be rushed on blindly. "Why did you ever let me think you cared?"

"Did I?" she asked innocently.

"How?"

"How?" he mocked her. "Why by all the hundred and more little ways you women know for fooling a man—by a flower you dropped, or a word, or a look—by a dance you saved for me—there may have been no definite promise, but you knew you had led me on, and you knew I cared."

"If you cared," said Cynthia in a small tempest of fury, "why, in heaven's name didn't you say so?"

"Cynthia!"

"You are quick enough to complain now," she said, the words stumbled over each other they came so fast, "but how did I know then that you cared? What was I to wait for? An understanding never made—a promise never spoken?"

She was quivering with excitement—not the butterfly Cynthia of half an hour ago, but a new Cynthia with scarlet cheeks and tragic eyes.

"It is very brave of you," she continued, "to come to me now, and reproach me for not waiting. I thought you cared—yes, but you left me with the same friendly good-bye that you gave a hundred others—nothing else—and how was I to know? If you had told me, if you had asked me to wait—"

"Yes," he cried eagerly.

The butterfly Cynthia came back like a mask, with a mocking smile and guarded eyes.

"Why, I should have waited," she drawled, "but you didn't come back, and Mr. Winthrop came."

"Cynthia," he begged, "is it too late?"

"Entirely," she answered with the airiest of smiles. "It was too late from the day you left. I have forgotten, long ago. Next time you think you love a girl—"

"There is no next time," he said sullenly.

"Well, just as a piece of abstract advice, then," she laughed a little, "next time don't leave too much to the girl's imagination—she forgets."

They fell into silence again, Cynthia toying with the strings of her sunbonnet, and the man breaking a piece of driftwood into vicious splinters. The sand acted as a good muffler to approaching footsteps, and Winthrop, the cause of this dissension, followed by a uniformed small boy, with a yellow envelope, was upon them before they knew it. He beamed delighted upon Cynthia—men of Winthrop's type always beam.

"Here's a telegram, Cynthia," he said, cheerfully. "I found the boy looking for you up at the hotel, and brought him along."

"A telegram!" cried Cynthia scrambling to her feet. "For me? How funny. Is it money—or a personal—or a message from Molly Endicott I'm due at her house party next week." She slipped one finger beneath the flap of the envelope, and smiled at them deliciously.

"Why don't you open it?" said Winthrop practically, "there may be an answer."

She tore it open, and Wolcott turned to Winthrop with a jest on his lips that was never uttered, for Cynthia's hand grasping the bit of paper fluttered to his arm, and Cynthia's eyes, pitifully frightened, stared into his.

"What is it, Cynthia?" cried Winthrop sharply.

"Read it, Hugh," she whispered faintly, and even in that moment Wolcott was shaken with the knowledge that she had forgotten Winthrop's very existence.

"Come tonight," he read in a hushed voice, "your father is dead."

"Hugh," she begged, "is it true? It's written there."

She swayed on her feet, and he took her hand to steady her.

He dared say nothing for fear of saying too much.

"There is something wrong," said Winthrop, "what is it, Cynthia? You look pale, dear."

"My father," she said monotonously, "he is—Oh, daddy, daddy—" and the rest was lost in a storm of sobs that spent itself on Wolcott's shoulder.

Winthrop looked dazed—very naturally—and his honest, ruddy face became an ugly grey.

"Cynthia," he said gently, but she seemed not to hear him, and, though Wolcott felt the extreme caddishness of his position, he could not for the life of him relax his arms, nor urge her to go.

So they stood, absurdly enough, Winthrop aloof and pale—Wolcott with Cynthia's head against his shoulder, and a mourning desire to keep it there forever, regardless of honor, justice, everything, when the messenger intruded his personality—

"Sign," he said, callously, pulling at Winthrop's sleeve.

"Sign for her," said the other man grimly, and Winthrop took the pencil.

He touched the page, just barely, then—

"This telegram is for Miss D. Gordon," he said amazedly, "that would be Miss Dora Gordon—at the cottage—"

A bomb would have been slower and less startling. There was a chaotic five minutes, in which Cynthia flew from Wolcott to the hateful message, while the messenger excused and explained, and finally went off with a semblance of haste under Winthrop's stern threat, and then Winthrop, Cynthia and Wolcott stood before the problem of their lives.

Winthrop solved it with sturdy dignity.

"I'd better tell you two good-bye," he said, almost easily. "I'm leaving on the next train, and—good-bye," he turned away abruptly, but come back before he had gone five steps to say: "It's all right—I'm glad it wasn't your father, Cynthia." Then he went, and they watched him out of sight in silence.

"He is a better man than I," said Wolcott bitterly, at last. "I couldn't have done what he has done."

Cynthia said nothing, only turned to him shyly, and with outstretched hands, at whose touch the gates of his Paradise swung open before him.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Finlander Run Over By Wood Train and Instantly Killed.

Newberry—Isaac Hill, a Finn, employed as woodchopper at the camps of the Michigan Iron company, was run over by the wood train near Newberry, and was instantly killed. Hill was standing on an empty flat car, and attempting to jump off while the train was in motion went under the car and was ground to pieces.

Manistique—Domonick Potvin, clerk of Newton township and one of Schoolcraft county's leading citizens, dropped dead last week while engaged in harnessing his horse. He was aged 43. At one time he was in the hotel business at Seney, but for some years lived on a farm near Gould City. The remains were taken to Cheboygan for burial.

Escanaba—Because the galvanized iron pipes which now connect buildings on Ludington street, Escanaba, with the water main will be seriously affected by the action of the electric current passing into the ground and in time will cause many leaks, action is to be taken by the common council whereby the present pipes will be replaced with lateral pipes of lead.

Manistique—George Ames has broken all previous records made in Manistique and contiguous territory by sawing 2,523 ties in a day of ten hours at the White Marble Lime company's mill. No special arrangements were made for the record-breaking run and the regular crew handled the timber. The day's record would have been materially increased had the force of men disposing of the product been able to keep it out of the way of the saw.

Menominee—The annual school census for the city of Menominee shows a falling off in the number of children of about 500, compared with a year ago. The total is 3,732. The Fourth and Seventh wards have increased considerably, most of the rest having fallen off. In the First ward the report shows a falling off from nearly 400 to 298, but it is thought that there has been some mistake in compiling the report and the names are to be recounted at once.

Emil Noblet, while on his way to attend a meeting of the board of review at Bark River, Delta county, met with a peculiar accident which came near resulting seriously. In some way a match became ignited in his pocket and his clothes caught fire. The wind was blowing in the opposite direction to which Mr. Noblet was driving and he failed to notice the fire until it had burned the back of his coat nearly out and the flames were encircling his shoulders. He made fast time in getting out of his burning wardrobe and escaped without injury.

BOOK WORM

Is Found In a Freshly Printed Volume.

New York, June 7.—When F. L. Marshall of the Presbyterian board of publication opened a new book to review it, he found that he was not the first to attack its pages. There had been one before him, but, having begun conscientiously with the first blank page, had gone no farther than the title page.

"A book worm!" ejaculated Mr. Marshall, and shut the book hastily, lest the rare grub should escape. The worm had eaten a neat oblong hole through three pages and had just begun on the fourth. He had built for himself a neat little nest on the inner side of the cover, within which he lay, stretching himself lazily when the book was opened.

As a rule, book worms prefer old volumes, but the somewhat formidable name of the new book may have proved attractive.

The true book worm, as it appeared in magnified form in a sketch several centuries old, had a plate-like covering and pronounced horn-like projections with which to do its deadly work.

The grub found in this work was a soft white worm about one-half inch in length, with a brown head, but in the "Enemies of Books," the work to which reference was made, it is described under the name of Anobrium.

So far as any bookman to whom the subject was referred knows, this is the first appearance of a book worm in a new book.

NO SECRET ABOUT IT.

GAMES YESTERDAY.
Winnipeg, 2; Fargo, 1.

GAMES TODAY.
Grand Forks at Duluth.
Winnipeg at Fargo.
Crookston at Brainerd.

The weather once more interfered with the Duluth players assuming the roles of tiger-tamers yesterday, and as a result but one game will be played with Spike Anderson's bunch on the present trip. The Duluth men have not yet rubbed up against the Tigers, which may account for the high position the latter hold in the pennant race. The next series with the Grand Forks men will be on June 29 in Grand Forks, and the fans will not have another opportunity to see the Tigers perform until late in July.

Only three games separate the two leading teams, and if the White Sox should lose this afternoon their hold on first place would be a precarious one.

WINNIPEG TAKES GAME.

Gets First Blood In Fargo Series.

Fargo, N. D., June 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—Winnipeg took the first of the series with Fargo yesterday afternoon in a splendid game by a score of 2 to 1. The going was slow and the Peggers proved the better mud larks.

Maloney was up for the visitors and Berrigan for the locals. The twirler from up near the North pole had the better of the argument, allowing two less hits, giving one less base on balls and hitting no one. The slippery sphere prevented Berigan from having his usual perfect control, and in addition to a pair of free passes he located the spine of Manager Clayton with a swift inshoot. A pair of wild pitches were also chalked up against the local slab artist. Altogether the afternoon was not a good one for him.

Features of the game were the usual number of double plays and the fast work in each. Fargo had three of the quartet to one by the visitors. Tucker did a sensational stunt in the sixth by capturing Fitzgerald's short fly back of short with a skate in the mud on his countenance.

There was no scoring till the sixth, when the visitors worked the "squeeze." With one down Gatewood hit safely, swiped second and went onto third on Jarvie's bad hoist. On a signal he started for home and Claytor dumped a little one in front of the plate, which he really beat out, but the umps could not see it that way.

In the seventh Johnson booted Jarvie's drive and Rose tore off a terrific two-sacker, on which the little catcher registered Fargo's only score.

In the eighth Green hit, Tucker advanced him to second and Berrigan's wild pitch got him around to third, from where he scored on Johnson's safe swat.

Winnipeg got the first man out in every inning except the sixth and seventh, but Berrigan kept his hits well scattered.

Maloney prevented Fargo from hitting with men on bases, and in three innings a pair was left around the lines.

This was Tradition's first appearance and she was in grand condition. At the lifting of the barrier Tradition went to the front followed by Lady Henrietta. At the end of a quarter of a mile Tradition drew away from her field with a lead of ten lengths. From the half mile to the finish she just galloped along in front and won by five lengths. Coy Maid was second, six lengths in front of Klamsha.

A special municipal election was held at Lincoln, Neb., Tuesday under the new charter. The Republicans made a clean sweep, electing seven aldermen, the only officers voted for.

HORTON OUT TO BEAT STEVENS

Warm Congressional Contest In St. Paul District Expected.

St. Paul, June 7.—State Senator Hiler H. Horton of St. Paul has given it out that he will file for the Republican nomination for congress in the Fourth district next year. He will try to wrest the nomination from Fred C. Stevens, who has represented the district continuously since his first election in 1894.

The announcement has been made by Horton openly. He had some thought of trying last year, but deferred until the close of his term in the state senate. It is given out that he will have strong backing, and politicians in St. Paul predict one of the hottest fights ever in the congressional primaries.

Congressman Stevens has risen to a prominent position at Washington, taking an active part in tariff, railroad rate and other important questions, and having excellent committee assignments. He has also been successful in landing things for his district, the St. Paul and Stillwater federal buildings being monuments of his work. The district includes Washington and Chicago counties in addition to Ramsey.

It is understood that Horton will attack Stevens because the congressman failed to prevent Minneapolis from getting its street car line into the Fort Snelling reservation. Horton has been a leading figure in the state senate. He is an able and resourceful speaker, and as Congressman Stevens is no mean campaigner himself, a lively contest is predicted.

FORT SNELLING SOLDIER MAKES A DARING ESCAPE.

St. Paul, June 7.—A daring escape from Fort Snelling was made yesterday afternoon by Louis J. Aristill of troops B of the eleventh cavalry, who after a few months of liberty following desertion from the army surrendered himself to the Fort Snelling authorities two months ago. Aristill was working at the stone crusher when he knocked down the guard, seized the sentry's rifle, covered him with it, and then fled towards the woods along the river bank.

Aristill had been sentenced to serve eighteen months by the general court-martial shortly after his surrender to the Fort Snelling authorities. During the two months since his sentence was pronounced he had shown no signs of dissatisfaction.

WHOLE TOWN BURNED.

Ashland, Wis., June 7.—The little town of Swallow, eighteen miles north of Lac du Flambeau, was entirely wiped out by fire Sunday afternoon. A sawmill, owned by J. R. Marr, considerable timber and lumber belonging to Emerson brothers, and a dozen homes, an office and a general store were destroyed. The home of James McCalby alone escaped.

As the result of trying to stop the progress of the flames, Albert Bean is in St. Joseph hospital at Ashland, badly burned. Fred Rising is also seriously injured.

The families of Swallow were: Fred Leonard, wife and two children; J. R. Marr, wife and four children; L. Richison, wife and four children; Philip Nogle, wife and one child; John Zimple, wife and two children; James McCalby and wife.

TWO KILLED IN A RAILROAD WRECK.

Los Angeles, Cal., June 7.—Two men are dead and several others are injured as a result of a collision between the westbound Overland passenger and a newspaper special on the Salt Lake railway four miles from Riverside, yesterday. The passenger coaches bearing Ohio delegates to the convention of Knights of Columbus in this city were attached to the Overland, but none of the delegates were injured. The dead:

T. E. CARY, Los Angeles, brakeman on the Overland.

SELZER NORMAN, brakeman on newspaper train.

Mail Clerk Frank W. Shott was thrown from the train and had three ribs broken.

The failure of the engineer of the Overland to observe orders is alleged to have been the cause of the wreck.

THE NEGLECT OF

PRIVATE DISEASES

A Stitch in Time Saves Nine.

The Northwest's most successful and reliable SPECIALIST In Men's Diseases

Many men have been made miserable by the unfortunate contracting of some poisonous special disease which, through neglect or improper treatment, has completely undermined and shattered the physical strength and mental faculties. No greater mistake can be made than to consider lightly the first evidence of the introduction of any private disease into your system, or to neglect the first symptoms of Nervous Debility, caused by improper and unnatural habits, excesses, dissipation, etc.

Such indifferences and neglect of the first symptoms are responsible for thousands of human wrecks, failures in life and business. Men! why take such desperate chances? The manifestations of the first symptoms of any disease or weakness should be a warning for you to take prompt steps to safeguard your future life and happiness. You should carefully avoid all uncertain, experimental, dangerous or half-way treatment, for upon the first treatment depends whether you will be promptly restored to health again, with all taint of the poisonous disease removed from your system, or whether your disease will be allowed to become chronic and subject you to future recurrences of the disease, with the various resulting complications, etc.

One consultation with us may change your whole life. Delays are dangerous.

If we could but see and treat all men when the first symptoms show themselves there would soon be little need for specialists in chronic diseases, and there would be few men seeking a rejuvenating of their physical, mental and sexual powers, and there would be none marked with the indellible stamp of constitutional Syphilis; and the sufferers from Prostatitis, Varicocele, Gleet, Kidney and Bladder Diseases, would be reduced to a minimum.

The Progressive Medical Association offers every afflicted man the care and attention of a skilled specialist in men's diseases, and a sure cure. Consultation free and confidential. Office hours 8 a. m. to 8 p. m. Sundays 10 a. m. to 1 p. m. If you cannot call write Dept. A.

Mr. Rooney, who was 37 years of age, was quite prominent in Democratic political circles, being at one time a member of the Duluth police department and later a stenographer and bookkeper at the state capitol.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Rooney, live at 2408 West First street. Two brothers, Francis of Duluth and John of Collingwood, Ont., and one sister, Mrs. Ellen Dan of 2401 West Superior street, also survive him.

BELIEVE HIM TO BE THE MURDERER

Police Think They Have Captured Man Sought By Sheriff.

Suspect Picked Up In Austrian Saloon on Bowery.

If their suspicions are confirmed, Detectives Frank Schulte and Donald Irvine this morning captured Mate Capan, the Austrian, who is wanted for the murder of Frank Polcar in Eveleth on Nov. 21, 1904.

Capan has eluded the authorities for over six months and during the last week or two has been dodging a sheriff's posse, which was searching for him through the woods of Northern Minnesota.

He was caught this morning in an Austrian saloon near the corner of Sixth avenue west and Superior street. When arrested by the detectives he was reading a paper on which were written some Austrian words, among them "Michael Capan." He had in his possession an employment ticket made out in another name, but the detectives feel satisfied that he is the man for whom the county authorities have been searching.

He answers to the description sent out by the Eveleth police in every respect, having the peculiar shaped nose mentioned, the sharp peaked face, and the stoop of the shoulders. His height of five feet seven inches also tallies with the description, and he has grown a short mustache as stated by the Eveleth authorities.

The description on which the local police were working was rather meager, but so far as it goes the man arrested this morning complies with it. The fact that the name of the murderer was written on the slip of paper he was reading also tends to confirm the suspicions.

The prisoner had little to say when he was arrested, and signified his inability to talk English. He denied, however, that he was the man who was wanted by the officers.

Complete identification of the prisoner will be impossible until the Eveleth authorities have been communicated with.

The crime for which Capan is wanted is the murder of another Austrian, named Frank Polcar, which occurred during an Austrian dance in Eveleth, on Nov. 21, 1904. Capan and Polcar engaged in a quarrel during the dance, and Capan is claimed to have drawn a revolver and shot Polcar, who died from the wound five days later. Capan escaped immediately after the affair, and has been at large ever since that time. It was thought that he had made his escape from the country, but he was seen a few weeks ago about Eveleth, and is now believed to have spent the entire winter in this part of the state, working in the different lumber camps.

BEAT HIS FORMER WIFE

Divorce Failed to Rid Mrs. Johnson of a Husband.

In spite of the fact that his wife had secured a divorce from him, Andrew Johnson evidently believed that he still had a right to use the husband's prerogative of hammering his wife when the inclination seized him.

Yesterday he is claimed by the police to have gone to the home of his former wife, and to have beaten her unmercifully.

When arraigned in court this morning he pleaded guilty to the charge of disorderly conduct, and Judge Cutting gave him a straight jail sentence of seventy-five days without any alternative of paying a fine.

IS SENTENCED UNDER NEW LAW

John Williams Gets 60 Day Jail Sentence For Larceny.

The first criminal action to be disposed of in district court under the new law permitting the county attorney to proceed on information, without holding the accused to the next grand jury, came up before Judge Ensign this morning. John Williams, charged with grand larceny in the second degree entered a plea of guilty to the information filed and was given a 60-day jail sentence. His sentence will expire a month before the next grand jury is in session. If Williams had not made application and had decided to await the action of the grand jury he would have remained in jail until next September, unless bail was furnished, and might then have been sentenced to spend another sixty or ninety days in jail as a punishment for the crime.

Edward Lindwall, who pleaded guilty to petit larceny, on an indictment by the last grand jury, was fined $50.

NO REPLY THIS WEEK.

Thomas Lowry Unavoidably Detained In the East.

Through a rather roundabout method, notice was received this morning that there will be a delay in the communication from Thomas Lowry regarding what may be expected in the way of street railway srvice improvements.

City Attorney Fesler received word this morning from Manager Warren, who got it from Mr. Goodrich, who had a letter from Mr. Lowry, that the latter was unavoidably delayed in New York and would not be able to return to Minneapolis for a week or longer. His answer will therefore not be received by the city council until a week from Monday evening.

The letter was due here before the meeting of the council Monday evening, according to his statement to the city attorney.

NOT A DICTATOR.

Gen. Trepoff Merely Has Control of Police.

St. Petersburg, June 7.—Gen. Trepoff, assistant minister of the interior, today received the representative of the Associated Press at his office in the chancellory of the general governor's office and discussed the responsibilities of his new post and the policy he intends to follow in curbing the radical agitation. With his added duties, Gen. Trepoff is an extremely busy man. The general seems to have aged ten years since he assumed the reins of the capital. He said:

"It is a mistake to suppose that I am in any sense a dictator. In addition to being governor general of St. Petersburg, his majesty has placed in my hands the control of the police regime in Russia and authority over political crimes, appointing me for that purpose assistant minister of the interior. I am fully conscious of the task before me, but I hope to discharge my duty to my emperor and restore public tranquility and order. My policy will be to prevent unlicensed political agitation and to confine political movements strictly within the scope of the law. My appointment does not mean in any way a change in the program of reforms which will proceed prallel with the work before me. The project proposed in the rescript on reforms, that is to say, a national assembly, has been completed by the Bouligan committee and is now under consideration by the committee of ministers. Its announcement may be expected in a few days."

GEN. BOYNTON BURIED.

Washington, June 7.—Gen. Henry Vanness Boyton was buried today in Arlington national cemetery with distinctive military and civic honors. Although a civilian at the time of his death, he was accorded a funeral befitting an officer of the rank he at one time held in the United States army, that of brigadier general.

SHELLS FOR THE JAPS.

San Francisco, June 7.—The steamer Mongolia, which is scheduled to sail for the Orient today, will carry treasure valued at about $500,000. In the cargo is a shipment of several thousand big shells for the Japanese naval vessels on the way from England. F. P. Sargent, commissioner of immigration, will be a passenger for Honolulu.

RUSSIA DESIROUS OF KNOWING WHAT JAPAN'S PEACE TERMS WILL BE.

battle, can be repaired in American ports, not only narrows the American regulations, but infringes recognized principles of international law. This paper declares it has official warrant for the statement that representations have been made to Washington on the subject.

The Novoe Vreyma is exceedingly sarcastic. After a slap at Great Britain for the alleged manner in which her vessels dogged the Russian fleet, from the time it left Cronstadt, and for trying to force all the powers to accept her interpretation of the rules of neutrality, the Novoe Vreyma declares that President Roosevelt, to whom it refers as "Mr. Roosevelt," contaminated by England's example, arbitrarily interprets his own rules in a sense favorable to Japan, adding:

"Mr. Roosevelt takes full advantage of the fact that Russia is helpless and powerless to do more than protest. The Japanese minister is reported to have hastened to express his gratitude to America for this act of impartiality, which is partial to Japan. We trust Mr. Roosevelt is satisfied with his success."

The admiralty, it can be stated, is reconciled to the interment of the three Russian cruisers at Manila, but opposes on principle the rule that warships injured in battle cannot repair their machinery and boilers at neutral ports. The officials add that friction over this minor question would be exceedingly unfortunate just at the time that President Roosevelt is assuming the delicate role of trying to bring the belligerents together.

FEARFUL TO BEHOLD.

Battleship Orel Received a Terrible Rain of Shells.

Tokio, June 7, 6 a. m.—A correspondent of the Associated Press has been permitted to inspect the Russian battleship Orel, now lying at Maizuru. The Orel received a terrible battering. Her hull shows forty gaping holes pierced by large shells and many smaller where she had been hit, while the superstructure, her upper works and upper decks were riddled by shells, steel fragments and splinters. The starboard forward 12-inch gun was smashed ten feet from the muzzle, either by shell or by explosion. A fragment of the gun went over the bridge, smashing the rail and rafter carrying away the breech of a 12-pounder buried itself in the signal locker. From the main deck upward the condition of the vessel was terrible to behold. Steel partitions were smashed, the gangway was broken and stanchions wrecked. Gear of various kinds covered the decks and the state of the alleyways shows that mark of the flames increased the scene of desolation. The main armor belt is intact. The turret armor generally withstood the battering from shells, although two of the six inch turrets were rendered unserviceable by shots which struck close to their base. Several smaller guns were dismounted and smashed. A grewsome sight was a bulkhead bespattered with blood, fragments of flesh and hair.

The Orel is sound structurally, although it will be necessary to practically reconstruct her from the water line up. The condition of the ship shows that the crew underwent a terrible ordeal before they surrendered.

PLUCKY CAPTAIN.

Russian Commander Stuck to Post, Badly Wounded.

Manila, June 7.—No deaths have been reported among the Russian officers or sailors since the arrival here of the three cruisers commanded by Rear Admiral Enquist.

Among those who had narrow escapes from death is Capt. Nebolsin, commander of the Aurora, on which vessel Enquist hoisted his flag after the Oleg had been disabled. While Capt. Nebolsin was in the tower a shell exploded there, but did not injure him. Later he left the bridge of the Aurora in charge of the first officer and went to the main deck in order to supervise the work of subduing the flames, the Aurora being on fire, and of caring for the wounded and killed. On his way to the main deck another shell exploded near Capt. Nebolsin and five fragments hit him, three in the head, one in the right side and one on the right ankle. The captain was stunned for a few moments. He, however, quickly recovered and proceeded to look after the wounded. He then returned to the bridge and continued to command the Aurora without receiving any surgical aid. He never gave up the command of the vessel at any period of the fight or while on her way here. Chief Surgeon Kravtchenko praises the captain highly for his courage and endurance.

LACK OF LEADER

After Rojestvensky's Injuries Disastrous to Russians.

Gunshu Pass, Manchuria, June 7.—The Associated Press correspondent is informed that reports have been received at army headquarters from Vladivostok, indicating that the naval defeat was due largely to lack of leadership after Rojestvensky was wounded, the engagement being carried on practically without signals after the first hour and no attempt being made to adapt the movements of the fleet to meet the maneuvers of the Japanese. Nobody on board any vessel in the fleet was in the secret as to Rojestvensky's plans, the commander-in-chief's only confidant being Rear Admiral Voelkersam, who died early in the fight.

Up to the time of the battle, these reports say, fortune favored the Russians, there being almost no sick in the hospitals and all the ships being in good condition.

No one in the fleet cherished any illusions. At the most it was noped that enough vessels would reach Vladivostok to threaten Japan's absolute control of the sea and to make the Japanese pay as dearly as possible for every ship lost. The hopes of the Russians went no further than this.

The Russian ships had enough coal to reach Vladivostok, but there was an inadequate supply of shells and ammunition for a prolonged battle, whereas the Japanese operating near their base were not under the necessity of stowing away enormous quantities of coal and could carry a double quantity of shells or replenish their ammunition from auxiliary vessels.

The Russian officers assert that the ships surviving the first day's battle must have been practically out of ammunition.

LINEVITCH CONFIDENT

That He Can Defeat the Japanese Army.

Headquarters of the Russian Army, Gunshu Pass, Manchuria, June 7.—Undismayed by Rojestvensky's defeat and full of confidence as to the outcome of the approaching battle, Lieut. Gen. Linevitch is for war to the bitter end, and he believes that the Manchurian army is now strong enough to assume the aggressive.

To a question put to him by the correspondent of the Associated Press, to whom he granted an interview yesterday, as to whether he was for war or peace, the commander-in-chief replied, firmly and without the slightest hesitation:

"Most certainly I am for war. I am a soldier. The emperor's will is naturally my law, but my voice now, as before, is for the continuance of the fight.

"With the destruction of our fleet vanishes, of course, the hopes of those who, at the beginning of the war, wished to make peace at Tokio, but our defeat at sea has not interfered with my plans—absolutely not one whit. I consider myself strong enough now, not only to hold my ground, but even to advance.

"I am no prophet, and have no desire to be one, but I firmly believe that I can and will defeat the Japanese in Manchuria.

"I have asked the war office to send me reservists of the youngest classes, instead of older ones, not because the latter make poor soldiers, but because, with plenty of young and vigorous reservists it would be unjust as well as inadvisable to call the older men from their more settled life."

A SCHOONER GOES TO PIECES IN HEAVY SEA.

New York, June 7.—One life and possibly more are believed to have been lost near Sandy Hook today when an unidentified two masted schooner struck on Homer shoal and was pounded to prices by the heavy seas. The schooner is thought to have been a fisherman which usually carries a big crew. Only one man was seen on the wreck after the schooner struck the shoal, however, and he disappeared when the vessel went to pieces.

We have had a number of horrible cases resulting from the excessive use of whiskey, beer or other alcoholic stimulants attract our attention in the last few days, and we wish to say that we have the greatest confidence in Orrine, and do not hesitate to recommend it to any one for the positive cure of the liquor habit.

The Orrine Company, Inc., Washington, D. C., have so much confidence that Orrine will cure the liquor habit that they refund the money if it fails to cure. Orrine No. 1 can be given in tea, coffee or food without the knowledge of the patient, as it is absolutely colorless, tasteless and harmless. Orrine No. 2 is in pill form, for those desiring to be freed from this disease. Either form $1 per package. Ask us about Orrine—we are the agents in this city. F. W. THE MORTGAGE TAX.

On another page of this issue is published a letter from a North Dakota subscriber commenting upon The Herald's editorial against the taxation of mortgages, and asking why, if mortgages should be exempted, personal property, buildings and business enterprises should not also be exempted. From this the correspondent goes on to make an argument for the land tax, otherwise known as the single tax, of which the late Henry George was the leading exponent.

The Herald does not believe that mortgages should be exempted from taxation, and did not argue in favor of their exemption. It simply pointed out that under the present system of taxation in this state, which requires the assessment of all property at its full value, to tax mortgages would be to doubly tax the owner of mortgaged property, or to confiscate the interest due the mortgagee. Mortgages should be taxed, but the proper tax is upon the income from them, not upon the mortgages themselves. Such a tax is impossible under the state constitution as it now stands, and one of the principal reasons The Herald had in dwelling at length upon the mortgage tax was that it furnished a conspicuous example of the inadequacy and injustice of the present system, and a striking argument in favor of a change. A year from next fall the people will vote upon an amendment to the constitution eliminating the present constitutional restrictions upon tax laws, and opening the way for a more modern, efficient and just system of taxation.

There are many arguments in favor of the land tax which are not easily overthrown, but it does not yet appear to have appealed to many thinkers, and it is impossible to hope for its enactment into law in Minnesota at present, if it ever does come. Between the present cumbersome, complicated and unsatisfactory tax system of Minnesota and the simple land tax is a wide distance, within which there is room for vast improvement without going quite to the length of adopting the land tax. While the lawmakers may not decide that the land tax is the proper system to adopt, they can adopt a system that is vastly better than the present one, and one feature of it ought to be a tax upon the income from credits.

THE CANNON CRACKER.

Next month comes the nation's birthday, and in many communities preparations are being made for elaborate celebrations of the event. The small boy, bent upon doing himself as much injury as possible through the evil workings of the cannon cracker, the cap pistol and the torpedo, is already counting the days and laying his plans, which involve a day just as long as he can make it and just as full of incident as he can stuff it.

In view of the nearness of this annual celebration, it is well to contemplate a few figures which have been gathered together by careful observers, and which the Ladies' Home Journal presents far enough ahead of the day to permit folks to think it over and guard against Fourth of July casualties as much as possible. Here is an itemized statement of the results of one Fourth of July:

Died of lockjaw, caused by injuries	406
Died from other injuries	60
Totally blinded	10
Number who lost one eye	75
Arms and legs lost	54
Number who lost fingers	174
Number otherwise injured	3,670
Total number of casualties in the United States	4,449

The toy pistol, the toy cannon and the cannon firecracker are found by the Journal to be the most dangerous weapons, a large proportion of the accidents being due to their use. None of them are fit things to be entrusted to the care of the small boy, no matter how much he may want them and how bitterly he will bewail his fate if he is deprived of them. Many youths and men, old enough and big enough to know better and to take care of themselves, also handle these implements of danger and injure themselves and others.

The Herald would not be so cruel as to suggest depriving the small boy of all means of making a noise on the Fourth. There are plenty of ways, however, that do not involve so much danger to himself and others, and he should be confined to them.

A bill proposing to prohibit the sale of cannon firecrackers in this state was offered in the Minnesota legislature last winter, and defeated. No particular reasons were offered why it should be killed, but it was, and it ought to be resurrected and passed, and the city of Duluth, too, should have reasonable restrictions and see that they are rigidly enforced.

EDUCATING THE PUBLIC.

The railroads are taking note of the condition of popular sentiment so far as they are concerned, and are about to establish two bureaus from which they will conduct a national campaign of education.

This is an excellent plan, if it is conducted properly, and the railroads are to be commended for forming it. It is much to be feared, however, that they will not conduct it in quite the proper manner, and that instead of changing public sentiment by changing their ways of doing business, they will seek to create a favorable sentiment by ingeniously arranged statistics and cleverly compiled figures. While these may fool some of the people, they cannot fool everybody, and there will always be somebody to call attention to their weak points and undo all the work these bureaus of popular education may do.

One course of popular education there is, however, that they could pursue with complete success, and that nobody could defeat. Indeed, nobody would want to defeat it. They might first arrange a schedule of rates that would form a reasonable return upon the money fairly invested. They might next agree not to discriminate either against individuals or localities. They might next agree never to give rebates, or to treat anybody any better than they treat everybody else. They might next agree to provide accommodations now furnished by private companies that claim to be beyond the law that regulates the railroads, such as the sleeping car companies and the refrigerator companies.

This course of popular education would be a complete success. It would utterly destroy the movement for government regulation of rates, for there would then be no need of it. It would immediately put the roads on a friendly footing with the public, which would be quick to recognize the spirit of fairness and to reciprocate it, if it was honestly extended and faithfully preserved.

It is to be feared, however, that this is not quite what the railroads intend to do with their campaign of education. It is more likely that they will set skillful jugglers of figures at work to get up tables that will show that the railroads have been making as little money as the beef trust. They will be more likely to attempt to convince the people that the railroads have never given rebates, have never dictated political nominations, and have never put railroad representatives into congress, in the senate and upon the bench.

The railroads, it is likely, are going to overlook a golden opportunity to set themselves right before the people.

A HYPNOTIC CURE.

The cure of drunkenness by suggestion, hypnotism, telepathic influence or whatever one may feel like calling the process is not exactly new, but it may be news to many that it has been tried, and with success. A new form of the plan has just been tried in Paris, and it opens up new fields of possibilities. It is nothing more or less than curing the patient while he is asleep, so that his diseased appetite may pass gradually away from him without his consent, and without his knowing, until somebody tells him about it, what has become of it.

The experiment, as reported by the Paris Journal des Debats, is interesting. A well known psychologist conducted the experiments, which are well-authenticated. The patient had absolutely refused to accept a cure. He was content in his degradation, and preferred to be a drunkard. Yet he was cured against his will, and remained cured, though the cure is now four years old. He was 25 years old, married, and of average health. He had used liquor from his seventeenth year, and his wife—foolish woman—married him to reform him. This cure, of course, was a failure. He was a prodigious drinker, and violent when drunk.

The experimenter decided to try suggestion during sleep, and the treatment took place four or five times a week. Though the patient did not know what was going on, there was slow and steady improvement. Gradually his drinking wore off, until in a year he drank only upon occasion. The treatment continued for eighteen months, at the end of which time the cure was complete, and has so remained. He drinks occasionally, but his will is the complete master of his appetite.

This is a triumph for the theory of suggestion, though it is questionable to what extent the cure may be used. No doubt if the patient had been a party to the process, and had lent his own efforts toward the cure, it would have been accomplished much more quickly, for habit is a very measurable proportion of the drink evil, even when it has become a disease.

THE FIELD SURVEY.

The Grand Rapids Independent says that Itasca county towns are going after drainage with commercial clubs. A live, energetic commercial club is the sort of "big stick" that does things.

Hotel Gossip.

"They are getting shooting down to a pretty fine point now," said E. N. Ramsey of Cleveland at the Spalding. "I am not much interested in trap shooting myself, but a short time ago I attended a tournament in Cleveland with a friend of mine. There is more to this imitation pigeon smashing than the average mortal would believe. I believe it is a good training for the eye, and also for the mind, to a certain extent. You have to do some pretty quick work with both your eyes and mind if you want to become a crack shot.

"The average devotee of the sport, or those who have been at it any length of time, at least, know just what a certain charge of powder will do and what it won't do. They can tell you at what distance a certain load is the most effective and why a particular size in shot should be used. Some of the shooters have the game down so fine that they use different loads for various distances. There was a time when the man who sought recreation with the shotgun was looked upon with some degree of distrust by the community. It is different now. The sport has been taken up by all classes of men, and the expert ranks are made up from a selection of keen-witted and quick-thinking men.

"They tell me that the deadly squint along the top rib of the gun is now a relic of past usages among up-to-date gunners. The crack shots most of them shoot with both eyes open. They are thus better able to follow the rapid flight of the pigeons. It is all a matter of practice, and in a short time it is as easy to shoot with both eyes open as with one, they say."

"Kentucky is now about to adopt the northern idea of running an advertising car through the state and country to set forth the agricultural advantages of a certain section, or to show the farmers what can be done with a particular kind of crop," said G. L. Ferguson of Louisville at the St. Louis. "The first car of the kind will be known as the 'Alfalfa and Corn Special.' The railroads have agreed to furnish, free of charge, equipment and crews for the carrying out of the idea.

"The car will make its first trip through the state early in the fall, according to present plans, and its object will be to induce the farmers of the state to grow more alfalfa and raise more stock, which would mean just that much more business for the railroads, so they can well afford to be liberal. The Kentucky experiment station only recently began to look into the alfalfa proposition. An average production, it has been found, is three tons to the acre, and a ton is valued at in the neighborhood of $14. Clover, in comparison, yields only about two tons to the acre, and is worth slightly less than alfalfa."

"It is queer the way a habit sometimes takes hold of a fellow," said M. A. Gates of Minneapolis, at the St. Louis. "You get to doing things day after day and are hardly conscious that you are doing them. You don't think about it much until something particular brings it to your attention. I read in an Ohio paper the other day of how, when a man walks down town day after day, taking the same route, he sets his foot in the same pathway more often than he thinks. It cited the experience of one man that made him be on the lookout for loose bricks.

"The man in question unknowingly stepped on the corner of one particular piece of stone pavement that had sunk a trifle, and hard rains had filled the ground with so much water that stepping on the stone caused the water to splash. After the rains, every time the man would step on the stone about a pint of water would be squirted up his trouser's leg. This happened two or three mornings in succession, and finally, to avoid a recurrence of the mishap, he marked the offending stone with a blue pencil, resolving never to set his foot there again. The rain the following night obliterated the pencil mark, and the first thing he did the next morning was to step on the same old corner."

William J. Tilton, business manager for Chauncey Olcott, who will appear at the Lyceum theater on the evening of June 17, was at the Spalding yesterday. He came direct here from Spokane and hurried East last night. At New York the position of steward on the steamship Providence awaits him. He will be engaged in the capacity of steward through the summer season. The Providence is one of the palatial steamers plying between New York and Newport, and a position on her is much to be desired.

"Mr. Olcott and his company will close the season in Duluth," said Mr. Tilton. "He and his associates in the company are looking forward with a good deal of pleasure to the time when they will arrive in the city, for it marks for them a long vacation after a very successful season's work. Duluth is quite popular with the show people as a rule anyway, and it is generally with the most pleasant recollections that they think of the town. Mr. Olcott will not go directly East. He will remain in and about the city for several days. It is his desire to visit the iron mines on the ranges, and to take a fishing trip to some of Minnesota's famous streams and bass lakes, also to loaf around town a few days. Probably other members of the troupe will follow his example, and several of them will stay here for a time before going to their homes in the East."

Turn On the Consumer.

Baltimore American: The president, it is asserted, has in the case of the purchase of canal supplies, merely served notice on the trusts that they can not hold up the government. They may, however, be enabled to overcome their chagrin in more effective holding up of the private consumer, with which interference does not seem to be seriously threatened.

A Note of Discord.

Indianapolis News: After the railroad magnates of the country have been unanimously telling the senate committee how rates are being constantly cheapened the Cattle Raisers association of Texas comes before the interstate commerce commission and presents evidence that rates have been raised 6 to 9 per cent since 1898. This looks like disturbance of harmony, if it is not lese majeste.

The Weather.

"And when she was good she was very, very good,
And when she was bad she was horrid."

That's something like Duluth weather. Yesterday it was "horrid," but today, how different! Some time in the night the northeast wind, that rude disturber of the peace, slunk away after satisfying his temper, and left the waves to beat their fury slowly out upon the beach. This morning dawned as clear and soft and fresh as a morning in Eden. There was little wind, so little that it was difficult at times to tell which way it came, except that it certainly did not come from the northeast. It was warm, delightful and altogether charming.

It should be noted that while the past few days in Duluth have not been altogether lovely, Duluth had none of the cloud-bursts, cyclones, terrific electrical storms and other destructive weather phenomena that have visited less favored localities. Most people would prefer a northeaster to a cyclone, disagreeable as the former often is, and Duluth, though she does have an occasional northeaster to add to the spice of variety, never has the sort of storm that adds the element of danger.

There is no danger of a swing to the other extreme, of uncomfortably hot weather. The weather man says that the wind will hover in the northward, with a tendency toward the northeast, and it will be partly cloudy tonight and Thursday.

The storm has moved its center to the Upper Ohio valley and Lake Erie, and it is warmer this morning near Lake Superior and in the extreme Southwest. It was cooler from the Missouri valley eastward to the Atlantic coast.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Mankato Free Press: No, dear Marie, not all of those Monday clubs, organized by women, hold their meetings at the washtub.

Grand Rapids Independent: Almost every town in Itasca county is going after the drainage question with a club (commercial club).

Rosian Region: The average good citizen is not only expected to "do his share," but to devote a lot of his time to coaxing men who are not willing to do anything for the public good.

Northome Record: This state has gone stark-mad over its educational institutions. To provide school house funds it has all along been robbing this section. And in doing this it is killing the goose that laid the golden eggs. A little of that money spent in roads would make this in a few years a section of the state whose ratio of taxes would provide for such a system of schools, as the narrow minded educators of today have never dreamed.

St. Hillaire Spectator: Will the representation at the next Republican state convention be based on the vote fo Roosevelt or the Dunn vote? This is the question some of last year's bolters are interested in lately and indicates that politics will be a live topic soon.

Moorhead Citizen: There are many who take newspapers simply to find proof and support for the opinions they have already formed. If they find anything in opposition then it is goodbye to the paper. They demand the same of their minister, their teacher and their political parties. And the papers become cowardly, the ministers stereotyped, the teachers pedantic, the parties "stand-patish" and one self becomes foolish—insolent and foolish.

Red Wing Republican: The first cherries of the season have made their appearance. They are four-eighths pit, three-eighths skin and one-eighth cherry.

Dawson Sentinel: We know very little about John Rockefeller's money. But we do know that his oil is tainted.

Fosston Thirteen Towns: Cannot avoid noticing that some at least of those caught by the lightning rod fakirs recently have been too economical to subscribe for newspapers of the day.

Evil of Overinsurance.

American Medicine: One life insurance evil is the unscrupulous agent who skillfully evokes the emotions of the father of a family to the end that a larger policy is written than can be sustained. In the standard companies lapsed policies are a distinct loss, for their calculations are based upon a continuance of each one, are based upon a continuance of each one, yet it is claimed that as a rule they are a source of great revenue. When it is remembered that a very large percentage of policies are allowed to lapse—some say 25 per cent, or more—it is evident that it is a great evil. In view of the tender nature of the emotions played upon, the natural anxiety for the family's future, it is a gruesome business, to say the least. No safe company will insure anyone for a larger amount than can be kept up by the insured's known income, but there is no way of checking the evil in the case of the poor, who take out small policies. Cannot the examining physician do his share toward correcting the matter in cases where he is certain that there has been undue influence on impressionable people? It surely is a duty he owes to the man and the company, and to society also.

No Danger of Bankruptcy.

Boston Transcript: Secretary Shaw hit the nail on the head when he told a meeting of business men at Topeka that there was no danger of this government becoming bankrupt. "Bankruptcy" is a word not lightly to be used. Unfortunately there is a disposition in some quarters to confuse a deficiency of revenue with a government default of payment. The condition of the treasury does not in the slightest degree warrant this confusion of terms. Our treasury has an available cash balance which is sufficient to more than take care of all demands and leave something handsome over. The credit of the United States was never better than it is at this moment.

Is Squaring Herself.

New York Herald: Maryland once gave the United States senate a Wellington, and to even matters up has now contributed a Bonaparte to the cabinet.

FLASHES OF FUN.

Philadelphia Ledger: "I was surprised at the way you flirted with that young man. You know you're a married woman."

"Yes, but he didn't."

Chicago Tribune: "We demand equal and exact justice for all," shouted the orator, "regardless of wealth or social position, and we want men who are big enough and broad enough to recognize this great—"

"Well, if that's what you want," interrupted a young man with a wicked-looking eye, "what's the matter with Taft?"

San Francisco Call: Katherine—The public is waging war against the milk trust."

Kidder—Yes, and the public will be forced to take water, as usual.

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "Those Philadelphia political bosses are taking the reform spasm very philosophically."

"What are they doing?"

"Well, they've ordered a lot of bigger ballot boxes and have opened night schools for the stuffers."

Detroit Free Press: First Moth—Where are you going to spend the summer?

Second Moth—I have made arrangements to board with a fur coat, but I don't know whether I'll be able to stand it. It's fearfully crowded already.

Yonkers Stateman: Redd—Did you ever go over a fence when out horseback riding?

Greene—Oh, yes.

Redd—How did you get the horse to go over?

Greene—I must have misunderstood you. The horse did not go over.

Philadelphia Ledger: Hicks—I never saw anyone as slow as that fellow Rakeley is.

Wicks—Slow? Why, the man is positively fast.

Hicks—But see how long it takes him to sow his wild oats.

The Upland Meadow.

With canter, gallop and head toss we plunge through the sun-bathed air—
The scent of grass in our nostrils, the wind at play in our hair.
The clouds are dancing before us, the shadows chase o'er the plain,
Then on, and up to the corner, and back to the fence again!

With canter, gallop and head toss, in proof that the day is ours,
We kick up the dust behind us, we stop and pluck at the flowers.
We look far down to the valley and sigh for folk who must work—
Then on—a race to the corner and back, with the stop a jerk!

Or, limbs grown tired in the gallop, we browse where the clover grows;
We steep ourselves in its sweetness, in beauty take our repose.
The crack of whip and the sharp command—bridle, check and rein.
Are far away. We are masters now. Ah, what is life to gain!

They can't know life who just labor, ne'er shaking the traces free,
Nor reaching upland meadows, with broader vision to see
How cramped the shadowy valley where the roads are narrow, while here
There's all the pasture to run in, where sun and the stars are near.

Then on, and up to the corner, and back to the fence again!
The clouds are dancing before us, the shadows are in the plain!
With canter, gallop and head toss we plunge through the sun-bathed air.
The scent of grass in the nostrils, behind us a kick for care!

—The Outlook.

Taft and the Judges.

Secretary Taft has always been an enthusiastic admirer of the late Justice Lamar of Mississippi. Mr. Taft was assistant attorney general when Justice Lamar was on the United States supreme bench. The first time the big Ohio man appeared before that august tribunal he stumbled through a small duty just as the judges were about to retire. He was much embarrassed and felt that he had not appeared at all to advantage. As he was about to hurry away Justice Lamar came over, threw an arm over his shoulder and said in kindly tones: "It's all right, my boy. Don't you be afraid of those old fellows on the bench. They won't bite you. Even if they wanted to their teeth are too old and worn to do much damage. If you but know it, yours are twice as sharp." The secretary, in telling of this incident, says: "From that day to this I have never ceased to thank the lovable Mississippian for making me have faith in myself."

Be Bold.

Write on your doors the saying wise and old,
"Be bold! be bold!" and everywhere—"Be bold;
Be not too bold!" Yet better the excess
Than the defect; better the more than less;
Better, like Hector, in the field to die,
Than like a perfumed Paris turn and fly.

LONGFELLOW.

Putting on Gloves.

Chicago News: That Ohio convention handled the railroad issue with all the resolute firmness with which the average individual handles a hot potato.

A Scene Worth Watching.

Buffalo Express: It is easy to see one of the places where trouble is going to break loose next. As head of the Massachusetts militia General Miles has been ordered to meet President Roosevelt on his trip to Boston and give him welcome.

Largest Civilized Nation.

Leslie's Weekly: The United States is by far the largest of all the civilized nations except Russia, which has about 130,000,000 inhabitants. The German empire has 56,000,000, Austria-Hungary 47,000,000, Japan 47,000,000, the United Kingdom 42,000,000, France 38,000,000, Italy 32,000,000, and Spain 18,000,000, China has 350,000,000, but she does not count in a calculation of this sort. Owing to the rapid growth of the United States, the English language is now spoken by more persons than use any other civilized tongue. Charles V. said he spoke German to his horse, French to men, Italian to his lady friends and Spanish to God. In his days, three and a half centuries ago, Spain was a land on which the sun never set, England was only a small spot on the map, and the English language held only a minor place in the civilized tongues. Today 130,000,000 of people speak English, 100,000,000 speak Russian (or not all the people of the empire talk the national tongue), 75,000,000 use German, 75,000,000 employ Spanish, including the inhabitants of the Latin-American countries, and 40,000,000 speak French.

Moreover, the lead for English is rapidly lengthening. Nearly two-thirds of all the people who speak the English tongue are in the United States.

Cause for Congratulation.

New York Tribune: Canadians in America—and there are thousands of them—have reason to congratulate themselves that there is no immediate prospect of Uncle Sam's sending them northward in order to balance the deportation of Americans from Canada.

Naval Qualifications.

Chicago Chronicle: Engineer officers in the navy now enjoy line rank, but if we are to judge from what one of them says, they do not want enlisted men to share the privilege with them. "Warrant machinists," says the office: referred to, "have neither the education nor the training to fit them for engineer officer." This declaration has a sound disagreeably reminiscent of Admiral Sampson's views respecting "social qualifications." There is no sufficient reason why a warrant machinist should not gain a commission if he proves his fitness for it.

Barbers Playing High Cards.

Portland Oregonian: The secretary of the Iowa state board of health has issued an ultimatum to physicians and surgeons to remove their beards, contending that they are unsanitary and carry disease germs. In these days of coercion, it may be that the Iowa Barbers' union is responsible for this reform.

Inked All Over the Map.

The following interesting document in Nelson's autograph was sold for £13 10s. at a London auction the other day:
WOUNDS RECEIVED BY LORD NELSON.
His eye in Corsica.
His belly in Corsica.
His arm at Teneriffe.
His head in Egypt.
Tolerable for one war.

Why Soldiers Desert.

Pittsburg Dispatch: The ordinary American soldier possessed more than sufficient intellgence to give something better than an excuse for the conditions by which he is surorunded, but when General Chaffee attempted, by personally questioning privates in the army, to discover why so many men deserted from the ranks he was unable to obtain the desired information. It is true he received answers from every man questioned, but the answers were of such nature as to prompt the belief that if the men could give a reason they had no desire to tell it.

It is recored that the general was informed that some men deserted because they did not like the surroundings of the post at which they were stationed, while others were sure it was because there was no fishing in the immediate territory. At no time was complaint made against the fact of service or that the government did not accord them the treatment they expected when they enlisted.

The investigation was conducted by a man who had served as a private soldier and should know some of the conditions surorunding their lives, yet it elicted nothing of importance. However, it might not be beyond the bounds of possibility that there is no general reason, and every man who leaves the service without the consent of his superior officer does so because he has some particular reason that might warrant his action, but would be lightly taken by anotner soldier.

His Chivalry.

Cincinnati Enquirer: Thomas W. Lawson was discussing bitterly an attack that had been made on him by a broker.

"It was a chivalrous attack," he said.

"It had in it the same spirit of chivalry that used to animate the words and deeds of old John Henry.

"Henry came to Charleston one day to buy a cow. He found, finally, the cow he wanted, and the price, to his amazement, suited him. It was a good, low price, and yet the cow had not a blemish.

"'There be no blemishes about this cow?' said John Henry.

"'Nary a blemish, John,' the salesman said.

"'How comes it, then, ye're sellin' her so reasonable?'

"'Well, I'll tell you, fair and square,' said the salesman. 'She don't milk good. She sometimes kicks, and kicks hard, when hein' milked.'

"'Oh, that's no consequence,' said John Henry. The wife does the milkin'."

Useless Request.

Lippincott's: "Do you say your prayers in the morning or at night?" asked Ted.

"At night, of course," answered Rob. "Anybody can take care of themselves in the daytime."

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: There is something very odd about how much youth thinks it knows.

You can't always tell whether a man is so attentive to his wife because he loves her so much or is afraid of her.

It is very dangerous for a girl to flirt with a man unless she is making a fool of him, which she always is.

The harder a man can laugh at the mishaps of others the harder he can get mad at the man who laughs at his.

All whist players should be muzzled, poor ones so that their chatter can't interfere with the game, good ones so they can't cuss the poor ones.

GOVERNOR HERE

Chief Executive of New York Is In the City.

Nothing to Say on Politics But Likes Business Outlook.

GOVERNOR HIGGINS.

Frank W. Higgins, governor of the state of New York, is in the city today. The governor, who is quite extensively interested in range iron ore properties, and also in timber lands, and whose business here at this time has to do with these interests, came in over the Omaha road this morning and registered at the Spalding. He is undecided as to the length of his stay, but his visit in the city will probably be brief, owing to the call of his official duties in the Eastern state.

Mr. Higgins refused absolutely to have anything whatever to say on politics, either municipal, state or national. He remarked that it was too early to make any presidential forecasts, and that he had nothing to offer on any other kind of politics. He expressed himself as being very well satisfied with business conditions as they seem at present to exist throughout the country.

"Business throughout the country, and particularly in the East, appears to be in fine shape," he said. "The country is prospering, and I see no reason to believe that the era of prosperity will not continue for an indfinite period. Signs of a possible panic, or any serious financial depression, are lacking.

"The last time I was in Duluth was nine months ago, and I had paid other visits here even then, so you see I am no stranger to the Head of the Lakes. I haven't been in town long enough to definitely decide just how prosperous you are, but from what little I have seen I should judge that residents of the city have sufficient reason to be satisfied with business and affairs in general. The weather is certainly agreeable, and comes as a welcome change from that which we have been having in the East. We have not really been suffering with the heat, but it has been unpleasantly warm at times this year."

THE LEGAL STATUS

Statement of Present Conditions of the Bridge Litigation.

Trouble May All Be Settled Out of Court.

Owing to the many new developments in the threatened litigation concerning the aerial bridge, the following statement of the present status of affairs, was prepared this morning from statements made by the city attorney and other city officials who are familiar with the case:

The contract between the Modern Steel Structural company and the city provided that the city furnish the foundations for the towers, and with them furnished the company agreed to construct the bridge for $100,000. The law authorizing the bridge bonds provided that the bridge should not cost more than $100,000 free of all encumbrances. The attorneys of the Commercial Investment company, which purchased the bonds, after examining them, held that all the proceedings in regard to the bond issue were regular, and they are now considering the question as to whether or not the furnishing of the foundations for the towers by the city, violates the requirement of the law authoriang the bonds, which limited the cost of the bridge to $100,000. The foundations were put in by the old Duluth Canal & Bridge company, which forfeited the foundations by failing to carry out the provisions of its contract. The opinion of the attorneys on this point is expected before the end of the week.

It is understood that those directly interested in the litigation, would not be surprised if the bond attorneys held either that the issue was unauthorized or that if the issue was legal, the contract with the Modern Steel Structural company was invalid.

Former City Attorney Mitchell held that the default of the Duluth Canal & Bridge company on its contract to build the bridge, forfeited the foundations to the city, and the present city attorney is of the same opinion. It also seems that the attorneys examining the bonds think it probable that such was the effect but they want a decree of the court determining this.

In the background all of the time, stand the holders of the bonds issued by the old company. Bonds of the face value of $20,000 were issued by the Duluth Canal & Bridge company before it ceased work. What action will be taken by them is problematical, but it is said that legal papers in some action have been in the city for nearly two weeks, ready for service. Minneapolis attorneys are representing the bond holders.

A third phase of the question is represented by the notice received last Monday evening by the council, that W. T. Burns, who claims to hold patents on the bridge car, claims $20 a day for the use of the patents. Mr. Burns has not heretofore figured in the matter but he holds the patents claimed by C. A. P. Turner up to the present time. Under the contract between the Modern Steel Structural company and Mr. Turner, the latter was to receive 8 per cent of the contract price for his plans and specifications, and the license to operate the bridge under his patents. The claim is that this $8,000 has not been paid to Mr. Turner or to Mr. Burns and that the city has therefore no right to operate the bridge.

It is understood that the contract between Mr. Turner and the company provided that the $8,000 should be paid when the company was paid by the city. The bridge not yet being paid for, there is nothing due Mr. Turner or Mr. Burns.

The city attorney maintains that the Burns or Turner claim is a matter of secondary importance to the city because the city not having paid the Modern Steel Structural company, can insist on a settlement of the Burns claim before settling with the structural company. It is understood that the company is ready to settle with Burns or Turner as soon as the city settles with it, and there is therefore not likely to be any serious litigation on this phase of the case.

Oscar Mitchell, the former city attorney, is representing the Modern Steel Structural company, but he is at present out of the city. When he returns it is not unlikely that the attorneys interested will get together and arrange some sort of an agreement of the various matters in controversy. If there is no settlement, it is understood that the whole matter will be thrown into the United States court, the summer term of which will begin July 11.

In the meantime the city has the bridge and will operate it under the regular schedule.

From these facts it would appear that the city is protected as far as the Burns or Turner claim is concerned, by the money withheld from the Waukesha company. In regard to the bond difficulty, in case the Commercial Investment company's attorneys should refuse the issue, it is understood that the Waukesha company is prepared to take the bonds in lieu of the money, and the only phase of the question left to dispose of will be the threatened trouble between the bondholders of the old Canal and Bridge company, and the city. This litigation has not yet been commenced, and it is not known what form it will take.

NOT ENOUGH TEACHERS

For Sunday School Work, Says Speaker Price.

Milwaukee, June 7.—W. C. Price of Chicago addressed the State Sunday School association convention at the First Baptist church today, his topic being, "Trained Sunday School Workers."

One idea that the church should get rid of, he said, was that all that was needed was to have a good heart. The church was making a mistake in the training of too few Sunday school teachers. There should be thirty to forty teachers to one minister. Pick out those of ability and train them thoroughly for the work. Teachers should receive some certain recognition. They should be installed the same as a bishop. The best paid workers in the church were those who worked for Christ.

The Gidding Sale of Wearing Apparel Starts Out to Day With Re-newed Interest.

The past two days' unpleasant weather interfered materially with the sale of Tailored Suits at a half off and the handsome gowns, dresses, coats and wraps at a third and a fourth off, but it started out this morning with renewed interest. But three weeks remain according to their present calculations before the break through the walls of their present building to their annex store and by that time they desire to have their stocks reduced to such a point as will enable them to be moved about without much trouble and this sale has been planned with this point in view, as they advertise they are willing to pay their customers liberally to help them move. On another page they give some examples of present reductions.

ENDANGERS LIVES

Hermantown Farmers Protest Dupont Powder Company's Magazine.

Ask County Board to Afford Them Some Relief.

One of the first matters that came to the consideration of the board of county commissioners this morning was a vigorous protest from a number of the property owners and residents in Hermantown against the proximity of the Dupont Powder company's explosive storage houses to their places, and which they claimed endangered greatly their property and their lives. The farmers petition the county commissioners to investigate the conditions and take such steps as may be possible to afford them relief. The communication was referred to the county attorney for an opinion as to the county board's authority in the matter.

The petition, which was signed by eleven property owners and residents, read as follows:

"We, the undersigned property owners in and adjoining section 12-50-15, Hermantown, would respectfully represent as follows:

"That within the past year a company, known to us as the Dupont Powder company, has put up, in the northeast quarter of said section, four houses for the storage of dynamite, giant powder, high grade explosive caps, etc., and have such explosives stored there in very considerable quantities, sometimes more, sometimes less, but always in such quantities, so we understand, as to be a continual menace to life and property within a radius of at least a mile from said houses.

"That one of your petitioners has lived for many years within 1,000 feet of said houses, another within 1,400 feet, and others at distances ranging from 2,000 to 5,000 feet, and that their rights, both as to person and property, have been entirely disregarded by the company storing the expositves.

"We would further state that there is a school house, owned and controlled by the independent school district of Duluth, situated within about 3,300 feet of the powder houses, said school having average attendance of some eighteen scholars.

"Your petitioners would therefore respectfully request your honorable body to investigate this matter, and grant us such relief as is within your power."

A communication was read from Bert Fesler, city attorney, offering on the part of the city to conpromise the matter of the city's claim against the county in the matter of the expenses of contagious diseases by the city waiving its claim to more than one-half the general expense incurred and paid by it, and offering to settle the whole matter upon receipt of 50 per cent of the claim, or the sum of $1,733.02. He states that if the county board will authorize settlement for the amount mentioned, he will have the council pass an appropriate resolution accepting the same in full settlement of the county's obligation on the bill. The total amount of the claim for contagious diseases presented by the city against the county, covering a period from Oct. 5, 1903, to June 30, 1904, amounts to $3,466.04. Assistant County Attorney W. G. Crosby raised the question as to whether certain items in the bill were properly chargeable to the county.

Mr. Crosby, in an opinion filed with the communication, says the county is liable for such expenses as were incurred in the prevention and general control of the disease and for one-half of all expenses incurred in the care of specific patients, provided they were residents of the city at the time and unable to pay for their own care. These two points, he claims, were covered by the statements of the former commissioner of health. After a careful examination of the several items, Mr. Crosby says he thinks the settlement proposed is advantageous to the county and as little as would probably be allowed by the court in the aggregate, if so submitted for decision. The assistant county attorney gives this as his opinion although certain charges seem to him as objectionable.

The matter was discussed at some length and it was the sense of the board that a resolution would be passed authorizing the settlement proposed.

Judge Ensign of district court appeared before the commissioners and stated that as the juvenile court is just starting under jurisdiction of the district court judges, there will be something needed in the way of supplies, the nature of which the court has not yet determined. He asked that the judges and the clerk of district court be authorized to go ahead and procure the things necessary, and by resolution the board granted the permission asked.

Judge Ensign stated that the court would be started on the policy of reducing the county's expense as much as possible and that in cases where the juveniles are brought here from the outside towns in the county, and it is necessary to have their parents or near relatives as witnesses the latter will be paid actual expenses of coming to Duluth instead of the regular witness fees. "I believe," said Judge Ensign, "that this court will be the means of saving the county in the way of criminal prosecutions. It is in the hands of the court to do just as it believes right with the children. There have been too many of them sent to jail."

A communication was read from H. M. Bracken, secretary and executive officer of the state board of health in which he refers to a supposed case of smallpox in a newly organized town of St. Louis county, which he directed the county health officer to investigate. This the county health officer did and presented his bill to the state board of health which ordered it paid. Dr. Bracken says the township is entitled to recover half the amount of the bill, namely, $20 from the county and he presumes the state is entitled to recover the township's half. The letter was referred to the county attorney.

In a communication from E. C. Blanchard, superintendent of the Northern Pacific Railway company, the board was notified that the overhead bridge at Short Line Park, which was built in 1897, is in very poor condition, being full of holes and much in need of paint. The commissioners are requested to inspect the bridge and put it in condition so that the company's property will not be endangered.

The board directed the bridge inspected by a committee and the necessary repairs to be made.

John Armstrong, former superintendent of the county roads, has notified the county board that he will take an appeal from the disallowance of his claim of $567 for the care of the county's road team, in district court. The notice of appeal was sent through H. B. Fryberger, Mr. Armstrong's attorney.

About a year ago Mr. Armstrong was discharged by the board it being discovered that there was no provision under the law for a road superintendent. On appeal by taxpayers from the allowance of his claims for salary for two or three months the same were held up and Mr. Armstrong brought suit in district court to recover. The court, holding that the board had no authority to create the office decided that so long as Mr. Armstrong did work for the county at the direction of the board he was entitled to pay and ordered pay for the actual services rendered.

Some time ago Mr. Armstrong filed with the county auditor a claim of $567 for taking care of the county's road team for a period of time extending over the statutory limitation of six years. This bill the commissioners turned down at the May meeting. The county road team, it is said, was used for the express use of Mr. Armstrong when he was overseeing the road work and for his convenience in getting around on the ronds. During that interval he kept the team at his own premises. It is understood that if the case is brought to trail the county will probably make a counter claim against Armstrong for pay for the time he was using the team. While acting in the capacity of road overseer Mr. Armstrong was paid $5 per day.

WOMAN BELIEVED

To Have Drowned Herself In the Mississippi.

Anoka, Minn., June 7.—Mrs. J. L. Gaslin, a pioneer resident of Anoka county, left her home while temporarily insane yesterday morning and is believed to have drowned herself in the Mississippi river.

Mr. and Mrs. Gaslin have been living at Champlin, just over the line in Hennepin county, for a year. Mr. Gaslin sustained a stroke of paralysis and had threatened to end her sufferings by drowning.

She arose yesterday morning about 5 o'clock, but no one heard her leave the house. She left a note for her husband, upon which was written, "Live for the rest." Citizens are dragging the river for her remains.

A lightning bolt from the storm early yesterday morning struck the residence of John G. Houston. The damage was slight.

MILLERS ARE HOLDING MEETING AT KANSAS CITY

Kansas City, June 7.—Millers from many parts of the United States were in attendance today at the opening session of the third annual convention of the Millers' National Federation. President Espenshied of St. Louis replied to Mayor Neff's address of welcome. The president's annual address, and the announcement of standing committees, took up the time of the first session. In the afternoon the reports of Secretary Jamme of Chicago, and the traffic manager, Herbert Bradley of New York, were read. The remainder of the day was devoted to papers. One of the important questions that will come up before the convention is the better protection in bills of lading for flour.

PROSPECTS BRIGHTER

For a Settlement of the Teamsters Strike In Chicago.

Chicago, June 7.—The prospects for a settlement of the strike are brighter today. A new committee is being appointed by the Teamsters' Joint council to negotiate with the Employers' association, which is willing to confer with any committee having power to act. At the headquarters of the strikers, it is said, however, that unless every demand is conceded, the new committee cannot settle the strike.

The Team Owners' association has taken no action as yet in regard to the refusal of the truck drivers to deliver to strike bound houses. The reported determination to discharge drivers for refusing to make such deliveries will doubtless not be carried out until the result of the new peace negotiations is known.

Chicago, June 7.—Peace prospects in the teamsters' strike took a new lease of life today, the teamsters' joint council having agreed to accept the employers' conditions for another conference. The action was taken in the absence of President Shea.

Levy Meyer, attorney for the merchants, was notified that a committee, possessing plenary powers, was ready to meet a similar committee of employers.

It was believed the employers would consent to a conference, possibly today, on this basis.

President Walter J. Gibbons of the teamsters' council named the strikers' representatives. On the committee are members of every union now affected by the strike, including the express drivers.

The revival of peace hopes, it was expected, would postpone, for the time being at least, the impending crisis between the team owners and the truck drivers. The union had voted unanimously to reject the arbitration proposal of the owners.

While the action of the truck drivers was a shock to the team owners, it was not considered probable, in the light of the other developments, that they would make a move at once to lock-out 8,000 drivers in their employ.

BOTTS MUST DIE.

Peoria, June 7.—The supreme court this morning refused the application of the attorneys for Otis Botts, under sentence of death for wife murder, for a supercedeas. Botts received the news that he must hang, June 16, unmoved, and said: "Well, I can't help it." He murdered his wife, Jan. 5, by strangling her to death with a hair ribbon.

High Water at Grand Rapids, Mich., Doing Damage.

Residents Driven to the Second Stories of Houses.

Grand Rapids, Mich., June 7.—With the Grand river at flood tide, and still rising, as a result of the terrific rains over its watershed in forty-eight hours, twenty factories had been compelled to close today by the high water up to noon, and 2,500 men are out of employment.

The river has broken completely out of its banks in the southern end of the city, tearing over the high Front street grade line and West Wealthy avenue, flooding basements and first floors, driving residents to the second stories of houses. Help has been sent out in the north end of the city, where every effort is being made to strengthen the new protecting dyke.

Half the factories on the West side are closed down and every basement in that section is flooded.

The pumps of the American Plaster company, whose gympsum mines extend under the river, have closed down and the water will probably pour into the mines and do heavy damage.

The city's supply of electricity is failing. The Edison company has been obliged partially to suspend in its power house. At Lowell, which is also on the Grand river, the water is higher than at any time during last year's record breaking flood.

BIG TOWBOAT SINKS.

Louisville, June 7.—After completing a journey of 1,800 miles without mishap, the towboat W. W. O'Neill, one of the largest in the river service, struck an obstruction in the canal today and sank. Capt. Carrollton and crew of twenty-five escaped. The boat is worth $100,000. It is believed she can be raised.

STRANGE FACTS.

It seems strange that sometimes your stomach or bowels won't digest your food, no matter what you eat.

It may be the weather, or it may be just the state of your general health, but in any case, there is only one certain, safe and positive method of cure, and that is the proper use of that universal remedy for all forms of dyspeptic trouble or digestive weakness, whether in stomach, liver, kidneys or bowels—Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Strange, it is, that in such little tablets, to be taken a few times a day, may lie such wondrous potential possibilities, that by their use the course of a man's whole life—yes, of the world—may be changed

Yet, who would not appreciate the fact that if Napoleon had not been suffering from Cancer of the Stomach he would have won instead of lost—at Waterloo?

And Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets would have cured his Stomach Trouble had they then been invented, as they have cured thousands of others in the past ten years, who have suffered just as Napoleon did.

So you can readily appreciate that today, by curing all these people, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is helping to get the world's work better done, by people who would do worse work if they were sick, so they must be having a great influence, in a quiet way, on the world's progress.

They may, therefore, be classed as one of the triumphs of science, amongst other discoveries in medicine, mechanics, transportation, etc.

Let this, then, remain in your memory, a fact upon which to act, when occasion requires:—

When any organ in your vast digestive machinery gets out of order, you have at your command one of the great inventions of the age, in Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, to put your machinery in order again.

By so doing you will save much useless friction, add to the energy and working possibilities of your bodily machine, and relieve yourself from suffering, disease, weakness, premature old age and death.

County Commissioner Neil McInnis, who is in the city attending a meeting of the county board, at one time in his capacity as justice of the peace, imposed a fine on Mate Capon, the man who is accused of murdering Frank Polcar.

Sheriff Bates took the prisoner to Eveleth this afternoon, however, for identification by the Eveleth authorities.

DIRECTORS RESIGNING

Several More Sever Connection With the Equitable Society.

New York, June 7.—The board of directors of the Equitable society, which adjourned from last Friday for the purpose of electing a chairman of the board with plenary power, began shortly after 1 p. m. today. Twenty-five directors were present.

Possibility of further concerted action by the general agents of the Equitable society, who held a meeting here several weeks ago, and adopted resolutions of censure against J. H. Hyde, was forecasted today. A dozen of the general agents from widely separated states were seen about the Equitable building. All said they were on a vacation and that as their advances had been cut off they had come to New York to "learn where they were at."

Joseph T. Lowe, who was the first director to leave the meeting did so shortly after 3 o'clock. He said that he had resigned as director of the Equitable society and that there had been other resignations besides his own. Nothing had been done, he said, towards selecting a chairman for the board of directors.

DEFIES EXPULSION

Wrapped In Folds of the American Flag.

Chicago, June 7.—Mrs. Sue M. Simpson wrapped herself in the silken folds of the American flag today, raised her right hand and defied the Woman's International Union Label league to expel her from the organization on a charge of treason. Accusations were made against her by the president, Mrs. Mayme Bretelle, during a convention of the order at Hull house social settlement here.

"If I can't get justice from your hands, I can at least get justice from these Stars and Stripes and what they represent," cried Mrs. Simpson. It is charged that Mrs. Simpson wrote letters to President Gompers of the Federation of Labor, alleging that as the affairs of the league were in such a chaotic condition, she felt that it was incumbent on her to reorganize the order under another name and under the jurisdiction of the federation.

MIKADO TO FIX PEACE TERMS

And Will Reap All the Fruits of Victory.

Washington, June 7.—When peace is made in the Far East it will be concluded by direct negotiations between Japan and Russia. There will be no congress of the powers to discuss or dictate terms, as was the case at the close of Japan's war with China.

The only use for an intermediary will be to forward to Japan the intimation of Russia that she is ready to quit fighting and seek peace. But if the neutral power that performs this office for the czar should attempt to indicate the terms on which hostilities should cease, Japan would refuse the overtures. She proposes to deal directly with Russia in peace as she has in war, and she intends to keep for herself the fruits of victory.

In this position Japan will be supported by her ally, Great Britain. England, it is said, has already, in an informal way, made it known that she will take no part in any international conference such as has been suggested in some quarters should be held at the conclusion of the war to consider the peace terms. This stand, which is distinctly in the interests of Japan, will prevent the calling of such a conference, because it makes its failure certain from the start.

Generally, it is believed here now that peace will not come until after the impending big battle in Manchuria has been fought. Should the czar decide, either in the near future or after the coming land battle, that the time has come for peace, some officials here look for intervention on the part of the German kaiser.

If the kaiser should send to Russia a strongly worded note to the effect that the interests of Russia herself, and of humanity, demand that hostilities should cease, and that nothing could be gained by further fighting, the czar could save his face by publishing the fact to the world, and announcing that, under such pressure, he was compelled to yield.

Another possibility which is entertained in some quarters is that Russia may not sue for peace at all. Letting her armies fall back into Siberia, she could maintain indefinitely an attitude of belligerency without actual hostilities. Japan, it is believed, will not pursue beyond the confines of Manchuria. In this way Russia might avoid the payment of a large indemnity to Japan.

Count Cassini, the Russian ambassador, in his talk with the president, lent color to this view of possible Russian policy by pointing out that Russia could lose nothing either by waiting or by continuing the war on land. On the sea, he said, Russia had nothing to lose, while no part of the territory of the Russian empire had been lost, nor its frontier endangered.

'Tisn't safe to be a day without Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil in the house. Never can tell what moment an accident is going to happen.

Stroudsville, Pa., June 7.—The Sugar Hollow wire fence telephone line is now in successful operation from McMichael's to the residence of John Bond, five miles away. Farmers living in the western part of Monroe county built it for their own convenience.

There are a number of 'phones connected, and the farmers are elated over the unique wire fence telephone service. The line has no stockholders, no superintendent, nor officers of any kind. Everybody is perfectly free to use it, repair it, extend it and regard it as his own.

SHOCKING TALE

Told By Blackshire's Slayer In His Prison Cell.

Says That He Was Hired By the Victim's Wife.

Parkersburg, W. Va., June 7.—"Bub" McCroskey, who is in jail charged with complicity in the murder of Henry Blackshire, at Brooksville, on the night of May 3, has made a full confession, in which he admits his part in the crime, but asserts that Bert Hendricks, who is also in jail, charged with the crime, fired the fatal shot. He says they were employed to commit the murder by Mrs. Blackshire, wife of the victim, who is in jail charged with complicity in the crime. The confession was made to Sheriff E. G. Gainer of Calhoun county, who took McCroskey to the jail at Harrisville to separate him from the other prisoners. Hendricks has been taken to the jail at Glenville, while Mrs. Blackshire is still confined in the jail at Grantsville.

"Mrs. Blackshire tried for a long time," said McCroskey, "to get us to kill her husband. She has been after Hendricks and myself since last fall to get us to kill him. We discussed the matter many times, but it was not till she became importunate and insisted upon our doing the job at once that we consented to do so. Several months ago she tried to get us to waylay her husband on his way home from his mill at night. Her plan at that time was that she would secure Blackshire's revolver and give it to us. We would shoot him from ambush at a lonely part of the road, and then place the revolver in his hand so as to give the impression that he had committed suicide with his own revolver. This plan was abandoned after Mrs. Blackshire and Jack Pettit had examined the life insurance policy carried by Blackshire. It was found, upon reading the policy, that it would not be paid in the event of suicide, so that put an end to the suicide plan.

"At various subsequent times Mrs. Blackshire discussed the matter with us, and made further plans for her husband's taking off. Mr. Blackshire sat in the front part of the house nearly every evening and played dominoes with his children. Mrs. Blackshire tried to get us to fire at him through the window, and kill him as he was playing with the children. Two or three times we passed before the window for the purpose of killing him, but each time, when we saw the man we knew so well sitting peacefully in the bosom of his family, playing and joking with his little children, our nerve failed us, and we refused to commit the horrible crime which we had been employed to commit. Mrs. Blackshire promised to make our task easy by raising the window a little and placing a spool of thread under the sash to hold it up while we fired through the opening. Each time we went to the house to do the job we found the window raised and the spool under it as she had promised, but we had not the heart to shoot the old man in the presence of his children.

"When the job was finally done Mrs. Blackshire had sent all the children away from home for the night. One little son had returned and was in the house when the murder was committed, but we did not know it till we got there. Otherwise, I doubt if we would have gone to the house at all.

"Mrs. Blackshire kept at us almost constantly and wanted to know when we were going to do the job. On the afternoon of May 3 she visited us at my home and insisted that the matter should not be delayed any longer.

"We had both been drinking pretty heavily and our sensibilities were somewhat dulled, so when she made the final appeal we consented to come to her home that night about 12 o'clock and put her husband out of the way. She agreed to send the children away, and it was all arranged that in order to prevent any suspicion we should mask and demand money from Blackshire. The arrangements were completed about 5 o'clock in the afternoon, and shortly before midnight we appeared at the Blackshire home. The house was dark and there seemed something dreadful about the place, so that our nerve failed us. Four times we went up to the door, but each time one of us would turn back. Retreating a little way, we would each take another drink out of the quart bottle of whisky which we carried until we were nerved up to the proper point. At the fifth attempt we entered the house. We both knew it well and in addition we carried dark lanterns. We found Blackshire in his bed asleep. Wakening him, we demanded money, and he replied that he had none. When he started to get out of bed we grabbed him, one on each side, and dragged him to the sitting room adjoining the bedroom. When we came in Hendricks carried the lantern.

"This was handed to Mrs. Blackshire, who carried it into the sitting room and held it while Hendricks put a bullet in Blackshire's head. He fell to the floor, dead. Mrs. Blackshire did not seem excited in the least, but held the lantern without trembling while the fatal shot was fired. The noise aroused her little son, who rushed half asleep into the room. She gathered him up in her arms and hurried out of the house. Then we left.

"The next morning the news was spread quickly through the community that masked robbers had demanded money from Blackshire and when he refused to give up his money had killed him in the presence of his wife. Mrs. Blackshire said that on account of the masks worn by the men she had not been able to see their faces. It was only a short time till there seemed to be some suspicion that Hendricks and I had been implicated in the murder, and we thought it best to get out of the country. We left together and went to a friend's near Parkersburg. But we were without money, and I came back to Brooksville to get the money which Mrs. Blackshire had promised us for killing her husband. She tried to collect the life insurance, but failed, and then came our arrest."

The working up of the case, the arrests and the securing of evidence which seems strong has been accomplished by Prosecuting Attorney A. G. Matthews of Calhoun county; Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Bell and Sheriff Gainer. These officers say there will be no further arrests at the present time. Jack Pettit, who was indirectly implicated by McCroskey, is said to have left the country and cannot be found in Calhoun county. The grand jury which is to take up the case of the prisoners will be convened on July 18, and their trial will probably follow immediately.

It makes no difference how long you have been sick, if you are troubled with indigestion, constipation, liver and kidney troubles, Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea will make you well. 35 cents. Ask your druggist.

"PRINCESS ALICE"

Is Lively, But a Real American Girl.

Washington, June 7.—Miss Alice Roosevelt is now in Cincinnati, the guest of Mrs. Longworth, mother of Congressman "Nick" Longworth. Several times she has been reported engaged to the handsome Ohioan, but the story is denied each time. However, the visit has revived it again.

"Princess Alice," the society papers here have dubbed her. But if she's a princess, Alice Roosevelt, is an American princess, unspoiled by adulation, her pretty little head straight on her shoulders, although she has been the toast of the country for two or three years.

Full of rich, red blood; affectionate; the only being in all this wide, wide world who can twist Theodore Roosevelt around her finger; a little self-willed, but a jolly good fellow; somewhat unconventional at times—she came by that honestly—but with a high regard for the real proprieties amusement-loving, but discriminating and of late indigenous; still a girl, wholesome and healthy, but gradually growing more womanly and taking on added dignities. Such is Alice Roosevelt, Princess Alice, the premiere American girl.

Her father's occasional sternness of demeanor has no terrors for Miss Alice. "She can twist the president around her little finger," said one of the White House attaches in discussing the young lady. "Whenever there's any trouble here, we get Miss Alice to fix it up for us. She is certainly good that way. It doesn't take her long to bring smiles to the president's face, no matter how angry he may be when she begins."

Occasionally Miss Alice enlivens things a bit about the White House. One day there was quite a formal dinner gathering. She burst into the room and seated herself on the edge of a chair, swinging her feet at a lively rate and addressing her conversation to one of the younger members of the party, recalling with laughter some incidents of the evening before.

Her demeanor quite shocked two or three of the grand dames who witnessed it, but the president himself didn't seem to find it worth mentioning, although Mrs. Roosevelt's eyelashes were lifted just the fraction of an inch.

On another occasion—this being a stately and official White House reception—Princess Alice perked up a bit when she caught a couple of attaches matching quarters in a corner. "I'm in," she declared, and as her quarters were found not to be counterfeit she was permitted to participate in the sport.

Her joy in open-air amusements and sports is undisguised.

She is a baseball fan. When the local club was leading the American league for a brief day or two recently, she occupied a box during one or two of the games and cheered with the best of them when the home team made a hit. Automobiling is her delight.

She has one of her own, but takes special pleasure in occupying a seat with Ned McLean, John R. McLean's son, in the racer recently acquired by that young gentleman. Young McLean is one of her best friends and a frequent caller and escort.

Princess Alice likes to go to the theater. Miss Ethel Barrymore is said to be her favorite actress. But she doesn't insist on the attractions being strictly "first-class." Recently, accompanied by the Countess Cassini, who has been her special chum; Miss Boardman, Lieut. Fortescue and several others, she attended a melodrama of dull red hue at a local playhouse, the very existence of which is ignored by the "high social set."

After her visit to Cincinnati she is to go to the Philippines with Secretary Taft's party. Of course, it may be only a coincident, but Congressman Nick Longworth finds that he, too, must visit our island possessions on public service, and he is to be one of the party.

PREHISTORIC FIND.

Pile of Petrified Bones Unearthed at Pueblo.

Pueblo, Colo., June 7.—Workmen, excavating for a residence in the heart of Pueblo, unearthed a pile of petrified bones, this week, that has caused intense enthusiasm among Colorado scientists. Though the entire skeleton was not found, those portions which remained have been identified as belonging to an immense specimen of ichthyosaurus, a marine enaliosaurian of the oolitic period.

The discovery was made at a depth of sixteen feet whn a shovel, in the hands of one of the workmen, came in contact with a hard substance, surrounded by soft earth. Further excavation was carefully made, with the result that a well-preserved vertebrae, fifteen feet in length, was unearthed, together with a number of ribs, several teeth and portions of the skull.

Unfortunately for the demands of science, before any concerted attempt could be made to preserve the find, the whole specimen was broken up by curiosity seekers and taken away in small pieces, not, however, before identification had been made complete. The find has been reported to the Smithsonian institution.

The elaborate program which the druggists of the city are preparing for the meeting of the Minnesota State Pharmaceutical association, which will be held here on July 18, 19 and 20 is nearing completion and in a few days will be sent out to the druggists of the state in order to interest them to the extent of getting them to come here for the meeting. This will be the twenty-first annual meeting of the state association. A. Charles LeRicheux of Duluth, is president of the association and he has been working hard, assisted by a committee of the local druggists to make the coming meeting the most succesful in the history of the organization.

All of the sessions of the annual meeting will be held in the Commercial club rooms. As the invitations and programs impress upon the druggists that they must bring their wives, the social features of the meeting will be not secondary even to the business of the association. Beginning at 9 o'clock that morning the opening session of the meeting will take place. It will be opened by President LeRicheux and an address of welcome will be given by Mayor M. B. Cullum, which will be responded to by Thomas Vogeli of St. Paul. Following this will be the roll call, reading of minutes, the president's address and the reports of officers. Adjournment will be taken until 2 o'clock when the day's program will be continued as follows:

Report of committee on membership; reading of communications; election of members; nomination of officers; nominations for state board of pharmacy; 3 o'clock p. m., reception and dance to members and ladies at the Commercial club.

On the Verge of Insanity and Suicide With Weeping Eczema

SAVED BY

D. D. D. Prescription

Tiffin, Ohio, February 10th, 1905.

D. D. D. Company.

Gentlemen: For over fifteen years I suffered with the Weeping Eczema of the hands. My hands were so swollen and painful I could not work at my trade. Could not write a letter. Nights after night I walked the floor unable to sleep. I was in such a frenzied state I was on the verge of insanity and suicide. I tried all kinds of remedies and all kinds of doctors. Spent almost every dollar I had in the futile effort to find relief. I was ready to kill myself. After I had about given up in despair, Mr. J. H. Morcher advised me to try the D. D. D. Eczema Remedy. The first application gave me some relief. It partly stopped the itching and burning and I slept some at night. I continued faithfully its application until I used eight or nine bottles. I am now entirely cured, and never miss a day's work. I cannot tell you how grateful I feel. —JNO. HONK.

We have hundreds of just such grateful letters from sufferers that have been cured to stay cured. We can just as surely cure you, no matter how fearful or loathsome your skin affection. Act now before you become crazed with the suffering. Don't dose the stomach for Eczema and skin troubles are not blood diseases, but result from parasites in the skin. This scientific application to the skin (D. D. D. Prescription) we will guarantee to cure or we will refund every cent you pay us.

D. D. D. Prescription costs but $1.00 per bottle.

Of Real Estate Prices In Various Large Cities.

Agricultural and Mineral Lands Share In the Advance.

New York, June 7.—One of the most interesting and satisfactory evidences of widespread increase in values is afforded in the real estate of the United States.

In every city of the country large and small, trade in realty has been steadily improving for the last six or seven years; demand is active and values have been advancing all along the line. In cities like New York, Pittsburg, San Francisco and New Orleans the rise in prices has been amazing and the changes in the buildings in those cities are marvelous.

It is not confined to the cities, however, the rise in values, but it is to be found in agricultural and mineral lands as well as in city lots, and one of the most marked and at the same time one one of the very best features of the movement in agricultural and mineral lands is that they are being taken up by new holders, individual holders to a very large degree, thus adding to the fixed and active population of the country to a far greater extent than if acquired by captialists for mere holding as investments.

Agricultural lands in every section of the country are bringing excellent prices, and as the farmers and planters have all been making money in the last few years agriculture is attracting many of the immigrants who come to our shores, an dthus relieves the cities from great pressure for employment in various classes of labor.

The great majority of the immigrants who arrive in the United States have some knowledge of planting and cultivation of grain and fruit, but in the nineties of the last century agriculturists were so poorly recompensed that farming was not a favorite means of earning a livelihood and the newcomers, to a very great percentage, pressed for employment in the cities.

The restoration of agriculture to its former state of profit and independence not only enables farmers and planters to pay their laborers and helpers better wages, but at the same time in many cases permits of the employment of additional forces of helpers and the cultivation of increased areas.

It also is the inducement which has attracted purchasers of lands among our own citizens and increased the desire of the immigrants to become land owners, as now they are assured of profitable returns from their labors upon even a few acres of Uncle Sam's domain.

The Southern states are now exceedingly active in their efforts to secure immigrants and from the capes of Virginia to the mouth of the Rio Grande each and every state is putting forth strenuous exertion to attract the tide of newcomers to the fertile South. They are succeeding, and the thousands of persons from Europe who have already started to Louisiana and Texas this spring will be followed by steadily increasing numbers from all parts of Europe. Before the war slavery and the immense area of individual estate holdings in the South prevented and strong tide of European immigration.

After the war the disturbed condition of the South, the poverty of the inhabitants and the uncertainty attending business generally in that section operated against the peopling of those states. Both before and after the war the unsanitary condition of the cities and towns of the South were alarming to Europeans, who believed it the home of yellow fever and fevers of malarial origin.

The freedom from yellow fever of the entire South for the past few years, the world recognized improvement of sanitary conditions in Cuba, thus safeguarding the Southern states has changed this opinion in Europe and the people there know now that health is as well assured in the South as in the North, and that with a more genial climate, as orderly and as honest government the results of their toil will be as great and as secure as in any part of the world.

The South is at last before the world in its true and proper light, and the coming ten years will witness an astounding growth of the Southern states in population, wealth, manufactures and in all classes of commercial and financial affairs. The wide awake people of Ohio and Indiana cannot get into too close touch with the business people of the Southern states, for in those states at the very threshold of the two northern states named there will be a business development that will eclipse the magnificent development of the mighty West.

Pensacola, Mobile, Tampa, New Orleans and Galveston will be to the South and the Middle West all and much more than Cadiz and Barcelona are to Spain, Marseilles and Toulon to France, Genoa and Venice to Italy. The population of the Southern port cities will increase at unprecedented rates, and the tonnage of the Gulf will rival and probably eventually surpass that of the Great Lakes or that of the Atlantic seaboard.

Once the Panama canal is opened to the world the gulf stream of commerce for both the Atlantic and Pacific oceans will run through that waterway, and the creation of this trade current will mightily affect both Northern and Southern ports of the United States. It requires not even ordinary business knowledge to foresee the future great destinies of our ports of the gulf and the augmentation of the importance of the Southern section of this Union.

Within five years the great systems of interurban electric roads, which have done and are doing so much for the people of the entire states of Ohio and Indiana, will be duplicated in Kentucky, Tennessee, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Texas and Louisiana, and the Gulf coast cities will be the goal of all these electric roads. It is to the interest of all the business men of the Middle West that the gulf and the lakes be the terminal, and then with the Ohio and Mississippi rivers, with the great steam railway lines and the ever ready electric tramways, the great heart of the American Union, the Middle West, will hold the business advantages that her central position naturally gives her. As the Far West improves and develops; as the East becomes more populous and overflows with wealth; as the South flourishes and adds millions to the number of her people, the great Middle West will be strengthened by them all and prosper in the midst of prosperity.

The business men of the great Central states occupy the most enviable position of any business men of the world today. They hold the central position of the Union, and the American Union holds the central position of the business of the world.

Chicago, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Pittsburg, Louisville and St. Louis can be, and will be, more powerful in commercial and financial circles when the Panama canal opens than they are today, for they will exert a more potential influence upon the gulf ports than they are doing on the Atlantic ports at this writing. The increase not only in foreign commerce of the gulf ports, but in the internal commerce of the Southern states, will bring millions of dollars direct to the cities named where only thousands come today. Prosperous as the cities named are now, actively employed as are their residents, far greater measure of prosperity is in their future, and an assured active employment for hundreds of thousands of additional residents who will be required to fill the demands for the products of mill, factory, shop and forge.

FELL FROM A PRECIPICE

With Horses Two Hundred Feet and Still Lives.

Central, Colo., June 7.—A fall of 200 feet from a precipice in the mountains here was the fate of Mrs. George Sheldon Smillie Monday, but she still lives, and it is said she will recover, although severely bruised and cut.

Mrs. Smillie, who is a well-known artist, formerly of Kenosha, Wis., is here with her husband, a New York painter, on their honeymoon. They were maried in Kenosha Easter Sunday.

The young woman, who is athletic and a lover of outdoor life, secured a buckboard and two horses Monday and drove along the great pass west of here. It extends beside huge cliffs and deep canyons are below it. At places the rough road is not more than eight or ten feet wide, and it takes a skillful reinsman to pass along it.

Mrs. Smillie was passing the narrowest part, near a sharp turn, when the horses apparently bolted and rushed straight over the edge of the precipice into the 200 feet of space beneath. No one saw her fall.

The accident was discovered when a ranchman, riding along the pass, saw the wreckage of the buckboard below, one horse dead and another nearby, grazing. He gave the alarm and a rescue party lowered the ranchman into the abyss.

There he found Mrs. Smillie clinging to a rock in a stream, into which she fell. The fact that the water was below saved her life and that of one of the horses. She was still conscious when found, but fainted as the ranchman was holding her while being lifted up the cliff with a rope.

A HOPELESS FIGHT

It is as impossible to conquer the king of diseases—Contagious Blood Poison—with Mercury and Potash as it would be to conquer the king of the forest in a hand-to-hand encounter, as thousands who have had their health ruined and lives blighted through the use of these minerals will testify. They took the treatment faithfully, only to find when it was left off, the disease returned with more power, combined with the awful effects of these minerals, such as mercurial rheumatism, necrosis of the bones, salivation, inflammation of the stomach and bowels, etc. When the virus of Contagious Blood Poison enters the blood it quickly contaminates every drop of that vital fluid, and every muscle, nerve, tissue and bone becomes affected, and soon the foul symptoms of sore mouth and throat, copper-colored blotches, falling hair and eyebrows, swollen glands, sores, etc., make their appearance. Mercury and Potash can only cover up these evidences for awhile; they cannot cure the disease. S. S. S. has for many years been recognized as a specific for Contagious Blood Poison—a perfect antidote for the deadly virus that is so far-reaching in its effects on the system. S. S. S. does not hide or mask the disease, but so thoroughly and completely cures it that no signs are ever seen again.

SSS S. S. S. while eradicating the poison of the disease will drive out any effects of harmful mineral treatment. A reward of $1,000.00 is offered for proof that S. S. S. contains a mineral ingredient of any kind. Treatise with instructions for home treatment and any advice wished, without charge.

Huron Boy Killed By a Blow From a Single-tree.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Huron—Earl Ramsell, aged 15, son of Richard Ramsell, died from injuries received while assisting in dipping cattle at Clark & Venables' vat. He was driving a horse hitched to a rope used in forcing cattle into the vat, when one of the tugs broke, the singletree flying backward and striking him on the head. He was not considered in immediate danger until a short time before his death.

Aberdeen—Howard W. Cole, aged 38, sheriff of Brown county and secretary-treasurer of the State Sheriffs' association, died Tuesday. He was a pioneer of 1881 and prominent in politics and Masonic circles.

Work has finally commenced on the Hatz block at Main street and First avenue west. Contractor C. Lepper of Blue Earth, Minn., has charge of the work.

A large barn and adjoining shed on the McCluskey farm, a mile and a half northwest of Aberdeen, were destroyed by fire. The farm is rented by R. L. Steves, a milkman, and he estimates his loss at $2,00. Eight head of horses, including two valuable stallions, were burned.

R. H. Johnson, a traveling man for the Sioux Paving Brick company of Sioux City, died at St. Luke's hospital of septic peritonitis after an illness of but a few hours, aged 35. He had come to Aberdeen to meet a customer when he was taken sick.

In circuit court the case of John Bircher vs. the Modern Brotherhood of America was decided in favor of the plaintiff, who was awarded a verdict of $1,011.09. Birchers wife, who was drowned in a creek near Aberdeen last fall, carrid a policy in the oder for $1,000. Payment was refused on the ground that she committed suicide. Bircher claimed that his wife was insane and was accidentally drowned while in that condition.

The jury in the case of George Osthoff, a druggist of Columbia, accused of selling liquor contrary to law, disagreed. The case will not be tried again until the next term of circuit court.

Egan—Arrangements are about combe the best encampment ever held since pleted for the annual encampment of the Lake Madison Veterans' association, which will be held in Egan June 13, 14, 15 and 16, and the prospects are that it will the organization of the association. There will be a band concert every day by the Francis concert band of Slayton, Minn.; a ball game every day, and the usual merry-go-round and bowery dance. The encampment will be held in one of the finest groves to be found in the state, only half a mile from town. Plenty of tents and other accommodations for all who attend.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Grand Forks—John McCabe, who lived for years at Ardoch, and later in this city, left an estate valued at $65,000 to Catholic institutions, except for a small bequest to his only living relative.

Mr. McCabe went to Los Angeles at the beginning of last winter, and died at St. Joseph's hospital there in January. Copies of his will have just been received here, showing the following bequests:

James McCabe, New York, a cousin, $3,500; Bishop Conaty Los Angeles, $400; Bishop Fitzgerald, Little Rock, $400; Bishop O'Gorman, Sioux Falls, $400; Bishop Shanley, Fargo, $400, $300 of which is for the education of young men at St. Joseph's seminary at Baltimore; Rev. M. J. Henry, for Home for Irish Girls, $200; St. Benedict's academy, Grand Forks, $300; St. Joseph's hospital, Los Angeles, $2,000.

The remainder of the estate is bequeather to St. Joseph's hospital and Bishop Shanley of Fargo, for the support of the poor.

Mr. McCabe owned a valuable half-section farm near Ardoch, but it is understood that he disposed of this before leaving for the West, and the large estate consists almost entirely of cash.

"The will has not been probated in this county, the schedule being sent to a bank here in which he had some funds.

Mary C. Edmunds has brought an action against the city of Grand Forks for $5,000 for injuries received in falling on a defective sidewalk. The sidewalk was partly torn up, the authorities refusing to allow the owner to replace it with a plank walk. In that condition it was left all winter, and the city will bring an action against the owner, M. L. McCormick, to collect whatever amount Mrs. Edmonds is awarded by a district court jury.

Lakota—L. M. Fillmore, clerk of court, died Tuesday after an illness of several weeks. He was serving his third term, having been re-elected on the Republican ticket last fall. His home was in Petersburg in this county. He leaves a wife and son, the latter a resident of Minneapolis. He was 65 and was one of the early settlers in Nelson county.

ASKS DIVORCE AT SEVENTY

Have Not Spoken to Each Other For Twenty Years.

Indianapolis, Ind., June 7.—Hamilton L. Grubbs, 75 years old, and his wife, Julia, aged 70, have not spoken to each other for twenty-one years, although they have lived under the same roof during all that time and have eaten at the same table. Application tor divorce has now been filed by Mrs. Grubbs.

It was agreed when this estrangement began that they should live together until all their children had become of age. The youngest daughter was then an infant in arms. When the little one was old enough to walk and talk she became a sort of messenger between her parents. She sat between them at the table, proffering food first to one and then to the other. When she became older she tried to act as mediator between the two seeking with all the tact at her command to bring about a reconciliation, but her efforts were in vain.

Miss Rose, then an infant, is now a blooming young woman. A short time ago she decided to leave the parental home. Thereupon Mrs. Grubbs sued for divorce. All the other children had already left. Mrs. Grubbs' purpose is to go to Illinois and make her home with her sons.

A trifling incident brought about their alienation. The couple had lived happily together in their little home for more than a quarter of a century, and six children had been born to them. One day a peddler came along and took a fancy to a flock of geese which Mr. Grubbs, or Uncle Ham, as he was familiarly known, had on his farm, and offered a good price for them. Uncle Ham was for selling them, but his wife demurred. She wanted the down for a bed. But Uncle Ham said he did not like to sleep on feather beds. This led to bickerings.

In the end the geese were sold. Then Uncle Ham and his wife repaired to the sitting room and drew up an agreement that they would continue to live together for the sake of their children, but that no communication should ever pass between them. Uncle Ham should occupy the left side of the house and his wife the right.

RAILROAD NEWS

Party of Burlington Officials Reach the Yellowstone Park.

Some New Views on Government Rate Making Given.

St. Paul, June 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—A telegram was received at Northern Pacific headquarters today from F. M. Bell, city passenger agent of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy road at Chicago, who is conducting a party of Burlington officials through Yellowstone Park, saying that they had arrived at Mammoth Hot Springs hotel after a three days trip, having had the "best time of their lives." In the party were A. S. Crawford, division passenger agent, Galesburg, Ill., H. S. Jones, division passenger agent, Burlington, Iowa, F. C. Sharon, southwestern passenger agent, Kansas City, R. H. Crosier, division passenger agent, St. Joseph, Mo.

This tour of the park was merely cursory as three days is the quickest time ever made by a coach over the 140 odd miles of park roads, comprised in the regular park tour. H. W. Child, president of the Yellowstone Park transportation company, left Mammoth Hot Springs twenty-four hours ahead of Mr. Bell's party, in a buggy. He covered 135 miles in sixteen hours with only four changes of horses, which indicates the almost perfect condition of the roads this year.

SOME NEW VIEWS.

A. J. Earling Writes of Government Rate Making.

Local railroad men are showing a good deal of interest in an article on "The Effect of Government Rate-Making Upon Internal Commerce," written by A. J. Earling, president of the Chicago, Milwaukee St. Paul Railway company. The substance of Mr. Earling's views, as expressed in the article, which appears in Harper's Weekly, may be seen from the following extract:

"There is no basis upon which rates for transportation can be fixed by the government, except the inexorable basis of distance. In no other way can rates of transportation be made from and to ports of different states without giving to some of them a preference over others.

"The effect of this upon the great agricultural districts of the Middle West would be more disastrous even than upon the manufacturers. The system of transportation has been so adjusted by the carriers themselves that the products of the farm, both grain and live stock, though produced a thousand miles or so from the seaboard, are able to compete in the stock markets of the world with the products of other great producing regions in this and other countries. The great national food-producing district comprised in the region drained by the Mississippi is so situated that it cannot profitably ship its products to foreign markets if the arbitrary differences of distances were applied against them. If the varied resources of this region were limited to local markets—that is, to the points of consumption nearer to them than to any other competing regions of production—the paralysis of its great agricultural and live-stock-raising industries would amount to an appalling calamity. Nothing but the most intricate and scientific adjustment of rates with each other, so skilfully arranged as to overcome the inequalities of distance and the disadvantages of location, has given to the great prairie states of Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Wisconsin and Minnesota, or to the wheat fields of North and South Dakota, the marvellous prosperity they have attained, and to the position they occupied in the markets of the world. To build across the channels of their commerce to impediments of constantly increasing distance from marked would be to render desolate and barren garden spots of American agriculture."

Delayed By Washouts.

Passenger trains on Southern and Central Wisconsin railroad lines were delayed for several hours yesterday by numerous washouts. The delays were more noticeable on trains running into St. Paul than on those coming to Duluth. The Omaha yesterday was less than two hours late, while the Milwaukee train from Chicago that should have reached St. Paul at 11:25 a. m. was abandoned, and the passengers were transferred to the train scheduled to reach St. Paul nearly five hours later.

A SURPRISE PARTY

How the Authoress Turned the Tables on Her Friends.

A distinguished authoress with her husband moved to a California fruit ranch to get free from stomach and nervous troubles. She tells her food story as follows:

"The change to outdoor life, abundance of fresh fruit, etc., did help us some, but as the necessity of cutting out all indigestible foods and thus striking at the root of the trouble, had not sufficiently impressed itself on our minds, we continued to indulge our appetites, till at last I was prostrated for a long time with a serious illness, during which I was simply starved on 'gruel and things.' One day while in this condition I demanded Grape-Nuts, merely because I wanted something I could chew. My wish was complied with, under protest at first, however, and then as no bad results followed, the crisp, nutty grains were allowed me in the way of humoring a harmless whim.

"To the surprise of everyone, the stomach which had persistently refused to retain the sloppy messes usually fed to sick folks, readily assimilated the Grape-Nuts, and I was soon able, and when I got to that point my health and strength came back to me rapidly. On recovery, and taking up my work again, I adhered to Grape-Nuts food for berakfast and supper, eating a good, plain dinner at noon.In four weeks I gained ten pounds in weight. I have constantly used Grape-Nuts food ever since and greatly to my advantage.

"My faith in Grape-Nuts was a matter of much jesting to my family, and once when my birthday came around, I was told that a special dinner would be prepared to honor the anniversary. When I entered the dining room I was surprised to find it decorated with Grape-Nuts boxes, some empty, some full, and some filled with flowers, etc., etc., and the joke was hilariously enjoyed. My time came, however, when I returned the surprise by producing a delicious Grape-Nuts pudding, and dates stuffed with rolled Grape-Nuts and cream. Then 'those who came to scoff remained to gorge themselves,' if I may be pardoned the expression. It has not been difficult since that day to win converts to Grape-Nuts." Name given by Postum company, Battle Creek, Mich.

Ten days' trial is proof.

SAD AND SUDDEN

Ending to Wedding Tour In New York.

New York, June 7.—The wedding tour of Mr. and Mrs. De Witt Ottman of Albany was brought to an abrupt conclusion in this city.

Married in Albany, they had come down the river on one of the night boats, arriving betwten 7 and 8 o'clock, and had taken a carriage to the Hotel Netherland.

Soon after their arrival there Mr. Ottman showed signs of insanity, and in the course of an hour he became violent.

The bride was completely unstrung as the first manifestations of her husband's derangement. She also had to have medical attendance. Later she rallied sufficiently to return to Albany.

The Soo train from Montreal was delayed seven hours.

Many Coming.

W. S. Chadwick, promoter of the traveling passenger agents' convention, to be held in Duluth next Monday, has received forty replies from men who have been invited to attend. Almost with one accord they say they will be on hand on the day of meeting.

FATHER SHOWS POWER

In the Domestic Affairs of His Daughter.

Memphis, Tenn., June 7.—Because his daughter had announced her determination to marry Norman McLeod, John Walton of Auburn, Miss., seized her trousseau and made a bonfire of it. Then he ordered her to marry Eugene Hudson, a politician of Terry. The daughter complied with the request. The ceremony was performed at Jackson.

This is the second time that Walton has shown his power in the domestic affairs of his daughter. About two months ago Miss Walton obtained a divorce from Eugene Brent, a merchant of Jackson, her maiden name being restored by the court. She married Brent against her father's will, and, although they seemed happy she obtained the divorce when the father commanded her to do so. Hudson had been rejected by the girl.

DESERTION CHARGED

By Wife Against Well Known Yacht Owner.

New York, June 7.—Mrs. Alfred Thurston Baker, who formerly was Mary O. Pemberton, a member of one of the most prominenet families of Philadelphia, has begun suit for absolute divorce against her husband, a well known yacht owner. Baker sailed from New York two weeks ago on his yacht for Europe. He now is there, and it is understood he will remain away until after the evidence of his wife's suit has been heard on July 30.

Meanwhile Mrs. Baker is living in this city, her two children being at St. Paul's college in Concord, N. H.

The application for divorce is based on the ground of desertion and will be tried before a referree in Philadelphia.

DOCTOR SUES

For Two Thousand Dollars For Treating Arents.

New York, June 7.—Dr. Gustav A. Fensterer of Floral Park, L. I., has brought suit against George Arents, Jr., who was thrown from his automobile and seriously hurt in the Vanderbilt cup race at Mineola on Oct. 8 last, for $2,000 for his services. Dr. Fensterer attended Arents from the time he was hurt until Dec. 1, when the patient was pronounced cured. The doctor says when he presented his bill for $2,000 Arents declined to pay that much and offered him $710.

Dr. Fensterer was one of the doctors stationed on the course. He cared temporarily for Arents and took him to the Nassau hospital.

Dr. Andrew J. McCosh, a specialist, was called in consultation, as was Dr. R. B. Kimball, Arents' family physician Some time is said to have been spent in discussing the probability that Arents' skull was fractured. It was decided at: last that it was not.

Dr. Fensterer thereupon took charge of Arents. He says that he sat up fourteen nights with Arents without removing his own clothing. By doing this, he says, he saved Arents' life.

Dr. Fensterer's lawyers say it will be shown that Dr. Kimball received $1,100 for nine visits. Dr. Fensterer's plea is that if the visiting physician had his bill audited and paid, his bill for fourteen entire nights and fifty calls besides also should be paid.

BOY IN HOSPITAL

Bravely Takes Optimistic View of His Accident.

Philadelphia, Pa., June 7.—"I guess I won't be able to play lawn tennis, but the doctor says I'll be able to ride horseback."

Walter Walsh, as he lay on a cot at the Jefferson hospital with both legs cut off below the knees, thus philosophized. His courage and nerve, the like of which was never heard of before in that institution, have moved in admiration even the surgeons and attendants.

Ten days ago, as Fort Washington, the boy, who is 17 years old, was struck by a Philadelphia & Reading railway train. Both legs were crushed. They were amputated as a last resort, in an attempt to save his life.

As the boy regained his senses from the anesthetic which had been administered, he looked over at Dr. Abbott and said:

"Hold up that Sunday paper for me, will you? I want to look at the funny pictures."

The doctor did as he was bidden. Walsh lay on his cot and laughed. Since that time he has rallied. Never once has he complained of the pain he is suffering, and he has been pronounced by Dr. Abbott to be completely out of danger.

When seen the boy was propped up on his cot with pillows, reading a book. He smiled and said:

"I'm feeling good today. I'll be all right soon, and then I am going to learn to ride horseback. The doctor tells me what I can do it without my feet.

KOCH IN COURT AGAIN.

His Trial Regularly Set For July 6.

Mankato, Minn., June 7.—The June term of district court convened yesterday, and the case of the state against Dr. George R. Koch for the murder of Dr. Gebhardt was first called.

Dr. Koch was represented by A. E. Clark and Pfau & Pfau of this city, and the state by Gen. Childs and County Attorney Wilson. Agreeably to the order of the court made here recently, the case was fixed for trial on July 6 and Judge Cray turned to Dr. Koch, who was in court, and ordered him to be present at that time.

The state will have a new attorney to assist Gen. Childs.

"Albert Pfaender of New Ulm will continue in the position," said Gen. Childs "and in addition, the state will engage another lawyer, but just who, I am not prepared to say. We are looking over the field now preparatory to making a selection."

Dr. Koch had nothing to say to the reporters except that he was feeling well and was having a fine practice in his new offices.

The case of S. M. Bear of Sioux Falls vs. Leslie McCleary, son of Congressman McCleary, involving damages of $5,000 for alleged slander, has been continued over the term.

There are fifty-six civil cases and two criminal, and the business of the term will probably hold until July 6, when Koch's trial commences.

SOCIAL LEADER SHORT $2,500

Mrs. Adele Barnes Removed as Postmistress at Delavan.

Delavan, Wis., June 7.—Postoffice Inspector George Rodenback has announced that Mrs. Adele Barnes, a leader in church and social circles and the postmistress of this city, is short in her accounts $2,500. She has been removed and John Delaney, one of her bondsmen, placed in charge awaiting a recommendation by Congressman Cooper as to her successor.

For seven years Mrs. Barnes has been postmistress, having been appointed twice despite the fact that prominent Republicans sought the office. She was chosen soon after being divorced from her husband, D. B. Barnes, a prominent attorney.

The postoffice inspectors have at different times visited the Delavan postoffice, but no shortage was found, Mrs. Barnes having made loans to cover the amount. Monday Rodenback came unexpectedly and discovered the delinquency.

Mrs. Barens was overcome. Every effort will be made to prevent her prosecution by the federal authorities. The shortage will be made good by the bondsmen and residents of Delavan, who believe the woman innocent of any wrongdoing, but think she neglected to keep the books properly. She refuses to make any statement.

SENSATIONAL CASE

Of an Iowa Preacher Has Another Chapter.

Marshalltown, Iowa, June 7.—Another chapter has been added to the sensational case of Rev. J. A. Johnston, who disappeared from Gilman without keeping an appointment to deliver a memorial sermon, and who was said to have become intoxicated the Saturday previous in this city. Johnston played the same peculiar antics at the little town of Elma that he did at Gilman.

There he had applied for and had been elected to the position of pastor of the Congregational church. He preached one sermon that was satisfactory in all respects and then suddenly disappeared. He wrote a letter to the clerk of the church board saying that his mother was very sick and he would not be back to Elma. Before leaving, however, he borrowed several sums of money.

Next he appeared at Gilman in this county, and applied for the pastorate of the Methodist church. He preached one sermon and was so satisfactory that the people asked the presiding elder to appoint him supply there until conference should meet. Then he came to this city and became drunk. He never returned to Gilman, where he had borrowed $8 from one of the bankers, giving a mortgage on his furniture. He wrote a letter to the church officials at Gilman. This time his wife was sick, according to his story, and he would be compelled to give up the Gilman pastorate in order to look after her health.

In the meantime the church authorities at Elma had warned the people at Gilman against him. It is believed that Johnston is a rank imposter and that he has been leading a Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde existence for some time. Some of the Gilman people say his mind is affected. The one sermon he preached at Gilman was on the subject of the sin of deception.

THE EDITOR'S POETRY.

Western Specimen Tells Eastern Editor About It.

Brooklyn Eagle: "I'm an editor," said he, as he planted his feet on the Eagle editor's desk and lit that functionary's pipe. "I throw ink on the Up-Gulch Shorter at Deadwood, and you bet I make some reading matter for the boys. Take the Shorter on exchange here?"

"I think not," replied the editor. "Don't know that I ever heard of it."

"You ain't been long in the ink business, have you?" asked the stranger, quickly. "You don't seem to be up in literature of the day. The Shorter throws more influence to the square foot than all the papers in Deadwood. Let me show you the style of that periodical," and he drew a file of back numbers out of his pocket. "See them advertisement? All cash. Meeting of the county board; fist fight in the common council; mine caved in on nineteen men; four women lynched; mayor of town convicted of burglary; raid by Indians—all live news items. See the editorials? This is what I say about the Rapid City Enterprise: 'The distinguished consideration in which we hold the three-ply jackass who edits our noxious contemporary is only equaled by the rapidity with which the tumble-bugs will roll him out of town in the spring.' Spicy, eh? You bet! There's some poetry. Wrote it myself. Made it up out of my head. How's this?

"'The opposition have nominated 'that lousy, drunken, dissipated, cock-eyed horse thief, Jim McFadden, our candidate is Patty Maddent!'

"And we elected him, too, for old stock! We go in for poetry out our way, from 'way back."

"We don't do it in just that way here," said the Eagle editor, with a smile. "Our folks—"

"That's where you're off. You haven't educated your folks up to high taste. Where I live we're cultured clear to the root. Here's my remarks about the editor of the Vermillion Repeater, when he wanted to split the territory: 'We don't want to reflect on the press, but we are compelled to say that the editor of the Repeater has stole government mules so long for a living that he begins to flatter himself that he, too, is an ass!' That busted his business.

"Now, here's a little criticism on our Opera house that was regarded very high: 'Manager Whitney is giving a high tonder performance than our citizens have a right to expect for two-bits. He has engaged the beautiful Gambetta for two weeks, and her standing jump shows careful thoughts and study, and her toe whirls are unprecedented in the history of the ballet. Mr. Whitney has stored up the east end of his minstrel troupe with the justly celebrated Patsy Maginnis, the bones of modern eras. We are sorry to chronicle a row at his temple of Thespian virtue last night, and we recommend Manager Whitney, if Sang Johnson comes monkeying around there again, to crack his nut with a bottle.' And he did it, too. It shows the power of the press."

"I suppose your paper is confined to local matters. You don't do much in the way of literature," said the Eagle, by way of keeping up the conversation.

"There's where you're off your back again. It comes high, but our people will have it. See this story from Harper's boiled down to half a column, but it gives all the facts. Then here's a poem by my daughter. She's a powerful slinger when she's fed up to it. Boiled beef sets her goin' and a bottle of beer fetches the balance. How does this strike you? This is hern. It's called 'Ode to Night.'

"The Evening for her bath of dew
Is partially undressed.
The sun behind a bestial flush
Is setting in the West.
The planets light the heavens with
The flash of their cigars,
The sky has put its night-shirt on,
And buttoned it with stars.

"I love this timed, shrinking Night,
Its shadows and its dew;
I love the constellations bright,
So old and yet so new;
I love night better than the day,
For people looking on,
Can't see me skinning round to meet
My own, my darling John.

"You don't get any better truck than that in the East. You see, our people have got to have the first crop or bust. It livens a paper up, too, this poetry, and it's phat for the printers. Here's a little thing I dashed off on the Yankton Vindicator for claiming that I swindled the government on a hay contract:

"A delirious Yankton reporter
Has been pitching into the Snorter.
We find he's the man
Who adopted the plan
To kill his wife rather'n support her.

"He ain't been seen since. Well, pard, I must get out on the trail. If you're ever out Deadwood way drop down the chimney and see me. You might as well put me on your exchange list, and if you ever pick up an item you can't use, drop me a line and I'll pay you a little something. So long."

HORSESHOE LUCK.

A new explanation is offered for the belief in the luck of old horseshoes, says the Chicago Chronicle. St. Dunstan was a skilled farrier. One day while at work in his forge, the devil entered in disguise and requested Dunstan to shoe his "single hoof." The saint, although he recognized his malign customer, acceded, but caused him so much pain during the operation that Satan begged him to desist. This St. Dustan did, but only after he had made the evil one promise that neither he nor any of the lesser evil spirits, his servants, would ever molest the inmates of the house where the horseshoe is displayed.

TATTOOED COMPLEXIONS.

The idea of ladies having that delicate rose color which is the desire of all tattooed into their cheeks is not new, but it is only lately that a permanent tint has been secured, says the Chicago Chronicle. Formerly there was the horrible possibility of the beautiful pink cheeks gradually assuming a purple tinge.

The new method of ordinary tatooing is by means of an electric needle. The instrument is wielded just like a pencil, the little needle darting in and out so quickly as to be almost imperceptible and forming a very fine line, which for pattern-making is a great advantage. For the face, however, the old-fashioned hand needle is often used, as it gives a soft, blurry effect. It is another proof of the readiness of woman to suffer in the cause of vanity. They are not, however, called upon to suffer any sensation of pain, as cccaine is mixed with the paint. Many clients indifferently read a book during the process. The color is a harmless vegetable dye and varies in tone to harmonize with different complexions. It is put on in a patch in the middle of each cheek, and then gradually shaded off round the edges.

A pair of rosy cheeks complete take two sittings of about two hours each to tattoo, and the sitter generally gives her face aweek's rest between them. When the operation is over the face is covered first with cream, and then with a dusting of powder. For a couple of days the color is somewhat too vivid, but after that the upper skin, which has, of course, been honeycombed by the needle, comes off in flakes, and underneath is the rose petal complexion.

COLOR OF GOLD.

All gold is not alike when refined. Australian gold is distinctly redder than that taken in California, says the Kansas City Journal. Moreover, placer gold is more yellow than that which is taken from quartz. This is one of the mysteries of metallurgy, because gold in placers comes from that which is in quartz. Gold taken from different placers will vary in color. The gold in the Ural mountains is the reddest in the world.

ENUMERATOR CHARGED WITH PADDING CENSUS.

St. Paul, June 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—The first case of census padding was brought to the attention of the state bureau, when an inspector was hurried to one of the northern counties to check an enumerator accused of crediting traveling men and a number of Wisconsin residents to his district.

Whether local pride, or the money to be realized was his object is not known, but the enumerator is likely to feel the heavy hand of the law if the complaint proves to be correct.

SHIPS WILL REMAIN

No Indications of Departure of Russian Vessels From Manila.

United States Will Be Responsible For Them to Japan.

Manila, June 8, 1 a. m.—There are no indications of the departure of the Russian warships from Manila bay. Admiral Enquist has not heard from St. Petersburg since his arrival, although he has filed many lengthy dispatches. The Russians show the keen disappointment at the inaction of the St. Petersburg officials.

The signal station at Corregidor reports that the German steamer Gaardine is passing in with coal for the Russians.

Washington, June 7.— Governor Wright cables the war department from Manila today acknowledging receipt of his instructions of yesterday relative to the Russian ships. Admiral Train has been instructed by Governor Wright to take charge of the Russian vessels in the event that they do not leave Manila within the twenty-four hour limit which period it is estimated, will expire at 6 o'clock this evening, Washington time, and as the Russian admiral says that his ships are unable to go to sea, their internment by that time will be an accomplished fact. The United States will consequently from now on be responsible to the Japanese government for the detention of the Russian ships in Manila until the end of the war.

Meanwhile under the president's ruling, such repairs may be made as are necessary to keep the ships afloat but nothing will be done to restore the fighting portions of the ships to their normal condition.

So far no protest has come to the state department from the Russian government against the application of the rule laid down by the president restricting the use of American ports by belligerents and the only communication that has passed within the past twenty-four hours on this matter was a request from Russia to be informed of the names of the killed and wounded among the Russian crews which was promptly granted.

NO PROCLAMATION

From Czar on the Birthday of Empress.

St. Petersburg, June 7.—The city is decorated and beflagged today in honor of the empress' birthday. Those who expected the day to be signalized by an imperial proclamation were disappointed.

The first act of Count Von Vorontzoff Daskoff, as viceroy of the Caucasus, has been the introduction of a regular police regime modeled on the Russian system for the preservation of order. The Tartars are continuing their assaults on the Armenians, whose revolutionary committee is very active.

FROM JAP HEADQUARTERS.

Tokio, June 7, 4:30 p. m.—A dispatch from the headquarters of the Japanese army in the field made public today, says:

The enemy's infantry, strength not mentioned, attacked Maccatun, two miles north of Weiyuampao early in the morning of June 5, but were repulsed.

The same day our force which had advanced to Safoang dislodged the enemy, heading for that vicinity and occupied a neighboring eminence. A portion of our cavalry drove the enemy northward toward Chichiatzu, fifteen miles north of Kwangping and Macdittun, seven miles east of Chipatun and our troops occupied their vicinities.

ITALIAN AMBASSADOR CALLS ON PRESIDENT.

Washington, June 7.—Mayor Desplanches, ambassador of Italy to the United States, had a conference with President Roosevelt this afternoon. The interview was held in the parlors of the White House. While no details concerning the conference were made public, it is known that the situation in the East was the principal matter under consideration. With every ambassador representing an European sovereign the president now has discussed the matter of peace between Russia and Japan and there is ground for the statement that the powers are acting in concert to bring about a cessation of hostilities in the Orient. That Italy has thrown the weight of her influence for peace there can be no doubt.

LITTLE BUSINESS TALKS.

The following is an extract from an address made by a prominent Eastern advertising man before the New England Dry Goods association at its annual dinner in Boston:

"Business-doing without advertising is as impossible as advertising without business, for advertising is as much a part of advertising. The successful man is an advertiser, whether he thinks he is or not.

"Without depreciating the value of any of the good advertising mediums, for there are many, I wish to state emphatically, and without qualification, that the newspaper is the best and cheapest advertising medium for the retail advertiser, and is the only local medium worthy of being called indispensable. I cannot too forcibly impress upon you the intrinsic value of newspaper advertising space. I base my opinion upon twenty-five years of actual experience in weighing advertising values."

ENTHUSIASM.

The Word Itself Comes From "Theost," Meaning Good.

It May Be Called the Most God-Like Quality of Human Nature.

There is genuine enthusiasm back of every great personality and back of every great achievement. It implies the capacity to believe and to try. Enthusiasm took Christopher Columbus across the ocean, Napoleon over the Alps and John Brown to his death. Every great discovery that adds to our wealth and comfort now is the effect of some man's enthusiasm. To enthusiasm we owe sewing machines, steam boats, locomotives, electrical inventions, spinning machinery, X-Ray, radium, chemistry and medicine. It is enthusiasm that continues to perfect these inventions. Enthusiasm is a quality of the mind. Its essence is mental vitality. In some it is naturally abundant and in others it is apparently abundant. Good health is a great essential. Enthusiasm, like all other good qualities, depends on health principally. It depends on the way we control our minds, our thoughts and our mental attitudes. We can not all be statesmen, orators, great inventors or liberators of the people or pioneers in the scientific world. The lack of enthusiasm explains the lack of success in thousand and millions of us. No wonder the hospitals and asylums for homeless children are filled with thousands and thousands of poor, hopeless, sad-eyed, languid, sickly children, men and women. In these cases, their lack, the parents' lack are enthusiasm, enthusiasm of preserverance. Perseverence means to succeed. To succeed means to rid one's surroundings of that disagreeable element. It means to the sick, to the languid, to the aenemic, a cure; to the poor, to the wandering and to the homeless, it means a home. Be hopeful, be optimistic, be determined to succeed and success will come. It comes often times to those who least expect it. It does not come to those who are easily guided by disinterested parties. It does not come to those who do not persevere. Every great discoverer is the all-important. Individual localities have individual enthusiasts. The people of Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Wisconsin and the middle west have in themselves an enthusiast in the person of Dr. Rea, a specialist of unusual ability, a specialist who is an enthusiast, who has added to the discoveries of scientific treatments, who has added to the world with its cures the names of thousands of people and who is not lacking in a sypathetic ear. His cures are wonderful. His greatest discovery is his hypodermic injection cure for cancer. His next most important cure is that for consumption, his next, but not least, is his cure by absorption for blindness. Other important ones are his cure for rheumatism, diseases of women and men and chronic diseases. H. C. Pierson of Fort Madison, writes: "Dr. Rea, you cured my wife, eight years ago, of asthma. She has not had a sign of it since until a week ago, she caught a bad cold and it affects her lungs. Now send her something for this."

W. C. Hurd, Dominion City, Canada, writes: "My varicocele is gone, only a little of the other trouble yet. A little more treatment will fix me."

Ernest Moore, Gladstone, N. D., writes: "Dr. Rea, it is with pleasure that I write you that I am entirely cured. I doctored with different doctors. They all said nothing but an operation would cure me. I spent many dark days doctoring. My disease was appendicitis, as you know. Publish my name and ask others to write to me and I will answer."

W. F. Hathaway, 85 Nesbert street, Newark, N. J., says: "Dr. Rea, after suffering for thirty years, I have found no treatment equal to yours. I write you these few lines to speak of the excellency of your treatment and I think it but due you."

Dr. O. Caldwell, Bee Bldg., Omaha, Neb.: "Dr. Rea, I have cured three patients already with your hypodermic injection cure for cancer."

Dr. J. E. Doran, Minneapolis, Minn., uses and endorses Dr. Rea's wonderful cure for cancer.

Rasmussen Paulson, Baldwin, Wis., says Dr. Rea cured him of a cancer of the stomach in three injections.

Miss Ella M. Wood, a trained nurse, Grand avenue, Chicago, writes: "Dr. Rea, when are you coming to Chicago? I have three patients that I want you to treat for cancer."

Mrs. Christ Wethal, 3321 Halifax St., West Duluth, Minn., cured of cross eyes in five minutes.

Mrs. Alexander Swanson, Oakes, N. D., cured of bad cancer of the face. Had had it cut out and it came back. Three of Dr. Rea's injection treatments cured her.

S. M. Moore, Gladstone, N. D., writes: "Dr. Rea, you cured my son over a year ago. I have another sick boy and want you to doctor him."

Fred L. Dicker, Gilby, N. D., cured of disease of the kidney. Was very bad. A few months' treatment completely cured him.

Mrs. Maurice Miller, Beaver, Minn., cured of epilepsy.

Mrs. N. C. Olson, East Grand Forks, Minn., cured of big knee, varicose vein and rheumatism.

O. H. Larson, Bue, N. D., cured of chronic rheumatism.

Miss Emma Geving, McIntosh, Minn., cured of consumption.

W. H. Nulph, Wyndmere, N. D., cured of cancer of the face in two treatments.

Martha Wilhelm, Rt. No. 5, Minneapolis, Minn., cured of long standing epilepsy.

Joe McGowan, St. Anthony Park, Minn., cured of gall stones of the liver. Doctors said he would die. Dr. Rea cured him in three months.

Charles Grondysee, Slayton, Minn., cured of consumption by Dr. Doran with Dr. Rea's celebrated cure for consumption.

Mrs. Nels Carlson, Buffalo, Minn., cured of large cancer of the breast. Cured by the hypodermic injection plan discovered by Dr. Rea. There is no failing with this treatment.

Special to The Herald.—Dr. Rea announces that he will make his next regular professional visit to Duluth, at the Spalding Hotel, Saturday, June 10th, from 9 a. m. until Sunday noon. Minneapolis office 329 Boston Block.

NORTHWESTERN MARKETS BREAK

Heavy Decline In July Price In Duluth and Minneapolis.

St. Louis Started the Break—Cash Offerings Are Increasing.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 7.—Wheat in the Duluth market had a severe break today, the July showing a loss of 5c at its lowest point and 4⅞c at the close. The Minneapolis market fell an even 4c. Wheat offerings from the country are said to be getting larger and the demand for the grain not so stiff as to maintain prices and thus bring the wheat this way, which would be the result. In the Chicago market the decline in July was 2c, in New York 1⅝c, in St. Louis 2c and Kansas City 1¾c. The September option fell 2⅛c in Duluth, 1¾c in Chicago, 2c in Minneapolis, 1c in New York, 1⅝-⅜c in St. Louis and 1¾-⅜c in Kansas City. The decline of the day seemed to begin at St. Louis, that being the first market to weaken seriously.

Duluth shippers reported the Eastern demand to be better than the course of the market would indicate. One shipper sold some No. 2 wheat at the best price he has obtained thus far. Crop prospects are bright and there is nothing in the situation in that respect for bulls to take courage on.

The Liverpool market closed unchanged to ½d higher, Paris unchanged to ¼c lower and Budapest and Berlin ¼c higher.

Car receipts at Duluth were 3, against 44 last year and at Minneapolis 145, against 73 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 218, against 117 last year. Chicago received 9, against 20 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 199,326 bus., last year 268,821 bus. Shipments 207,302 bus., last year 226,562 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 60,184 bus.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed ⅝d higher. In the Chicago market July corn closed ⅝c lower, July oats closed ½-⅝c lower. Primary receipts of corn were 623,760 bus., last year 945,551 bus. Shipments 624,845 bus., last year 276,884 bus. Clearances were 70,189 bus.

In the Duluth market trading in wheat was very dull. The July option opened unchanged at $1.16 asked, sold at $1.15¾ at 10:20, rallied to $1.16 at 10:50 and then fell to $1.14⅜ at 12:06. Following that there was a heavy slump and the market fell to $1.11 at 1:10. The close was at $1.11⅛. This was a loss of 4⅞c. The new September option opened at 81½c, unchanged from yesterday and fell to 79c, closing there, a loss of 2½c. The old September opened unchanged at 86½c, and fell to 84⅝ where it closed, 1⅞ lower than yesterday.

Durum wheat lost 1c. The cash wheat market was slow.

Flax was stronger and the market dull. The October option opened ⅝c lower at $1.25, and advanced to $1.26½, closing at $1.26, a gain of ¼c. The September option gained ½c, closing at $1.25. July fell 3c to $1.45.

Oats fell 1c.

Following are the closing prices:

Flax—To arrive, $1.46; on track, $1.46; July, $1.45; September, $1.28; October, $1.26. Oats—To arrive, 31c; on track, 31c. Rye—To arrive, 78c; on track, 78c. Barley—Feed, 29½@31c.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Excellent Weather Inclines Wheat to Bearishness.

Chicago, June 7.—As a result of generally excellent weather conditions in the United States, sentiment in the wheat pit here today was inclined tobearishness. There was considerable profit taking by many of yesterday's buyers. July opened a shade to ¼c lower at 87⅝c to 88⅛c. After touching 86¾@⅞c, the price reacted to 87⅝c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 148 cars, against 536 cars last week and 137 cars a year ago.

Later a severe slump in prices occurred, July declining to 86c. Weakness of the cash market at Kansas City was an important factor in the situation. A decline of 2 to 3 cents at Minneapolis was another bearish influence. The market closed practically at the lowest point with July down precisely 2c at 86½c.

In addition to weakness of wheat, larger receipts than expected had a depressing influence on corn, completely offsetting the effect of a sharp bulge in prices at Liverpool. July opened ⅛c lower at 50⅞c. After selling at 51c, that option declined to 50⅜c. Local receipts 195 cars, with 43 of contract grade.

For a time the market was extremely weak, demand being light. After July had declined to 50¼@⅜c, an improved tone developed, shorts being fairly active buyers. The market, however, closed easy with July off ⅜c at 50⅝c.

Weakness of other grain caused an easier tone in oats. July opened unchanged to a shade higher at 31⅝c to 31¾@⅞c and then eased off to 31⅜c. Local receipts were 167 cars.

Provisions were a trifle easier as a result of a decline of 5c in the price of live hogs, following liberal receipts. September pork was off 5c at $13.05. Lard was unchanged to a shade lower at $7.60@7.62½ to $7.62½. Ribs were off 2½@5c at $7.67½.

Close: Wheat—June, 86½c; July, 86¾c; Sept., 80@⅝c; Dec., 83c. Corn—July, 50¾c; old, 51⅛c; Sept., 49½c; old, 49⅝@50c; Dec., 46⅝c; old, 47⅝c; May, 46¾c. Oats—June, 30¾@⅞c; July, 31@⅛c; Sept., 28¾c; Dec., 29⅜c; May, 31½c. Pork—July, $12.67½; Sept., $12.55@12.57½. Lard—July, $7.35@7.37½; Sept., $7.55; Oct., $7.57½. Ribs—July, $7.37½@7.40; eSpt., $7.65; Oct., $7.70. Rye—July, 66c; Sept, 62c. Flax—Cash, northwestern, $1.47; southwestern, $1.30. Timothy—June, $2.85; Sept., $4.10. Barley—Cash, 45@50c. Clover—June, $11.75@12.25. Cash wheat—2 red, $1.02@1.04; 3 red, 97c@$1.00; 2 hard, $1.02; 3 hard, 90@95c; 1 northern, $1.12@1.14; 2 northern, $1.09@1.11; 3 spring, $1.03@1.06. Oats—2, 29½@⅝c; 3, 30¼@½c. Corn—2, 52¾@53c; 3, 52¼@52¾c.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—Easier cash markets and more sunshine through the belt took the starch out of the bull side of the market today. Wheat was distinctly under pressure. Snows report undoubtedly contributed to much of the selling and the decline all through the cover uncovered stop orders. Snow estimates the condition a bit but little more than two points decline from a month ago. Considering the damage reperts we have been getting from all over the Southwest this report is quite a shock to the bullish element. Weather conditions are in the main favorable and barring unexpected disaster a good round crop is expected to be harvested. The action of the market today would indicate that the trade is inclined to run away from the new crop. Much liquidation deeveloped in today's market with the closing quite sick. On further declines we feel the market can be bought for a speculative rally.

Corn—Considering the decline in the wheat market and favorable weather for the growing crop it must be confessed that the corn market holds very steady and what little decline developed, all things considered was really insignificant. Sentiment is still mostly bullish, but we still feel that the legitimate situation scarcely warrants present prices for corn. Trade is fairly broad, with the cash demand not very urgent.

Oats—This market eased off in sympathy with weakness in other pits. It is still slow and the most that can be expected is a narrow scalping market.

Provisions—This market was easier from the start due to increased offerings and as the day advanced pressure increased somewhat from long holders. Trade conditions seem to us unchanged. The market looks like a scalping affair.

• • •

Edwards, Wood & Co.: Wheat—Sentiment was bearish in all markets this morning, and the tendency toward lower prices was evident from the start. A clear weather map and a similar forecast for tomorrow. Favorable reports continue from the winter wheat section and wheat cutting has started in California. Valentine is reported as saying that it will be hard to maintain present prices in the face of a big crop prospect, and that the United States does not need a surplus, as Europe has run along eighteen months with our wheat. We cannot entirely indorse the above statement but nevertheless the bear side certainly had an inning today. We see nothing to change our opinion and we believe that on any hardening of prices above this level would make short sales which should yield good returns.

• • •

Chicago Tribune: King of Toledo predicts the Kentucky June report will show a decline from the May condition of 9 per cent, and quotes a good authority who has been traveling over the state as saying "I have just spent a week in the western end of the state and am now in the central part. Will next visit the eastern part. The wheat in the west end, the best wheat growing, part of the state is badly rusted and does not promise more than one-half crop. The central counties promise some better, but not a full crop. There is little wheat grown in the East end. On the whole the crop for the whole state promises about two-thirds of an average crop. Rye, oats, and other crops, including clover, a full crop."

• • •

Chicago Inter Ocean: "The winter wheat crop is almost made," said C. H. Spencer of St. Louis, today. "It looks like a record one. I will know more about spring wheat as I start Saturday on my annual tour of inspection. I think prices will have to decline to an export basis but how low they will have to go I am not prepared to say. With a good harvest, Minneapolis is likely to get over 500 cars a day of new Kansas wheat if they continue to hold prices up there."

• • •

Chicago Inter Ocean: "The question which will immediately arise in the minds of Europeans interested in assuming the lowest estimate to be approximately correct, what quantity will America be able to export to Europe, and what is the earliest period at which this will be available for any quantity?" says F. Leudoers & Co. of London. "It could appear that the quantity of wheat raised in the United States is about stationary, while the demands are increasing rapidly through the natural increase in population and immigration. So far as the latter is concerned, it is no doubt true that a large number of immigrants increase the consumption of maize rather than wheat, but at the same time the number of bread eaters is a factor that must be taken into account."

DYING OF FAMINE

Is, in its torments, like dying of consumption. The progress of consumption, from the beginning to the very end, is a long torture, both to victim and friends. "When I had consumption in its first stage," writes Wm. Myers of Cearfoss, Md., "after trying different medicines and a good doctor, in vain, I at last took Dr. King's New Discovery, which quickly and perfectly cured me." Prompt relief and sure cure for coughs, colds, sore throat, bronchitis, etc. Positively prevents pneumonia. Guaranteed at all drug stores. Price 50c and $1.00 a bottle. Trial bottle free.

DULLNESS RULED

In Stock Market and the Close Was Heavy.

Gains Were Made From Low Point of the Day.

New York, June 7.—Amalgamated Copper was the feature of the opening trading in the stock market today, 2,300 shares selling at 79½ and 79, compared with 78 last night. The price then ran off to 78⅝. Trading generally was languid and many important stocks opened unchanged. None of the market leaders varied more than ¼ from last night.

The general list was making good headway upwards when a fresh collapse in the price of copper drove it down to 77½, and the other stocks about all their gains. Northern Pacific had sold 2 points above the previous close and St. Paul, Reading, and the second preferred, St. Louis & San Francisco second preferred, United States Steel preferred, Steel Foundries preferred, Metropolitan Street Railway and Brooklyn Transit 1 to 1½. Wiscon Central yielded 1.

The whole market showed close sympathy with Amalgamated Copper and when that stock rebounded to near 79, prices elsewhere recovered to about the former top level. Louisville & Nashville rose 1⅜ and Southern railway 1⅛. United States Steel, Tennessee Coal and Manhattan gained 1 to 1⅜. International Power sold at an advance of 10. Great Northern preferred dropped 4½ and United Railway Investment preferred 1¾. The demand died out at the higher levl and prices sagged. Bonds were heavy at noon.

Occasional trade transactions in the less active stocks provided the only material price fluctuation in the early afternoon. A gradual hardening movement was perceptible. Atlantic Coast Line improved a point. Central of Jersey declined 2¼.

Stock values crept gradually higher on a scant demand until they averaged above the best prices of the forenoon. Copper got back to its opening figure 79½ and St. Paul was carried up to 173. Other gains of 1 to 1⅜ included Union Pacific, Atchison, Kansas & Texas and Colorado Fuel. Kansas & Texas preferred stiffened 2 and Philadelphia Transit 4½.

The motive power of the market practically disappeared in the stagnation of the final hour, which checked the belated gains of 1 in Northwestern and Sugar. Corn Products preferred fell 3½ and Linseed preferred 6⅞. Prices for the most part showed no change at all. There was some shading just at the last and the close was heavy.

Quotations furnished by Edwards-Wood Co., room A, Torrey building.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: Market is closing strong and higher, in most cases only fractional but the tone of the market shows improvement. From the low point this morning the market showed steady improvement and while gains were not fully sustained, the market closes with a better feeling. A ray of sunshine in the dark clueds overhanging the market would do much to scare the confident short interest into covering their short lines. The dull market we are witnessing clearly indicates the market is pretty well sold out. The short side has been too popular and the market could have a sharp speculative rally with very little encouragement.

• • •

Dick Bros. to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market has been very dull and sluggish today, but has shown encouraging firmness. The general list rallied well and shows net gains for the day. The apparently better prospect for peace in the Far East was favorable, although it induced no important buying. What was most satisfactory about the market was the absence of pressure which allowed stocks to rally easily. The general list closed uncertain in tone.

• • •

Walker Brothers to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market today was very dull and steady at the opening, but soon there was a raid on Amalgamated and it broke sharply. Later there was a recovery and in the afternoon the market showed some little strength. There was not much trading and the close was without feature. We look for a dull market for the rest of the week.

TREASURY BALANCES.

Washington, June 7.—Today's statement of the treasury balances in the general fund, exclusive of the $150,000,000 gold reserve in the division of redemption, shows: Available cash balance, $132,409,402; gold, $70,338,801; silver, $28,564,452.

LONDON COMMERCE.

London, June 7.—The May statement of the board of trade shows increases of $10,204,500 in imports and $14,602,000 in exports. The chief items of increase in imports are foodstuffs, $3,569,960; cotton, $2,850,685; while wool decreased $2,033,205. The increase in exports were mainly cotton goods, $5,773,085.

Good to choice wethers, shorn, $4.50@5; fair to choice mixed, shorn, $3.50@4.40; western sheep, shorn, $4@5; native lambs, shorn, $4.50@6.25; western lambs, shorn, $5@6.00.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, June 7.—The cotton market opened steady, unchanged to 5 points lower, July leading the decline under scattering liquidation following lower cables. The weather was good aside from rains in Northwest belt, but there was a fair demand for the near months attributed to spot houses and with considerable covering in progress, prices soon recovered to about yesterday's finals, following which they sold off again and in the middle of the morning were about 6 to 8 points lower under continued bear pressure.

Spot closed dull; middling uplands, 8.40; ditto gulf, 8.65. Sales, 4,253 bales. Futures closed very steady; June, 7.84; July, 7.92; August, 7.95; September, 8.02; October, 8.07; November, 8.11; December, 8.18; January, 8.23; February, 8.26; March, 8.31.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: Market dull and without interest all day. Stocks seem to be a purchase for small gains on declines from this level, but should be sold again on small rallies. Peace seems to be a little nearer in the Russian-Jap matter, and if announced, might start a good market; but until something of importance comes, either peace or a settlement in the Equitable matter or maturity of the crops, do not look for much change. Amalgamated has too many friends to advance much.

NEW YORK MONEY.

New York, June 7.—Money on call easy 2@2½ per cent; closing bid and offered 2¼. Time loans, steady; 60 and 90 days, 3 per cent; 6 months, 3½@3¾. Prime mercantile paper, 3¾@4 per cent. Sterling exchange steady with actual business in bankers' bills at $4.87@4.87.05 for demand and at $4.85.10@4.85.15 for 60 days; posted rates, $4.86 and $4.88; commercial bills at $4.84. aBr silver 58¾c; Mexican dollars, 46½c. Government bonds, steady; railroad bonds, easy.

MARKET IS VERY DULL

Stagnation In Copper Stocks—North Butte Very Rich.

The market for copper stocks was very slow today. North Butte closed at $25.50 bid, but there was very little trading in it. About 20 shares of Calumet and Pittsburg changed hands at $28. In the other stocks there was practically nothing doing.

Black Mountain stock was in best demand and $3.15 was bid for 500 and 1,000 share lots.

The Anaconda Standard of Monday said of the North Butte property:

"The North Butte is now and has been for years a heavy producer, but its output will probably be doubled within a year. It is now giving up a total daily tonnage of between 600 and 700 tons, enough to create a stamped in any other mine. Light: Barth, Panay, George Gould, Superior.

Reports from its mines are to the effect that the Edith May, bought by the Speculator company recently for $150,000 and afterwards sold by that company to the North Butte, along with all other property belonging to the Speculator, is one of the greatest copper mines in the district. The vein in it has been tapped at a depth sufficient to determine its value."

BREAK IN RATE

Vessel Rate on Wheat Falls Quarter of a Cent.

Line Boats Follow the Lead Taken By Wild Ones.

An agreement to hold the vessel rate on wheat at 1¾c has been observed by the line boats up to shortly after noon today, and then it broke to 1½c. Wild boats were offering room for wheat at 1½c and the line boats saw them getting the business and concluded to take it themselves rather than lose it.

Yesterday a charter of 100,000 bushels was made at 1½c and more was offered at the same figure, all wild boats. With the line boats now taking 1½c the rate is established at that figure.

Nothing for several days has gone at any higher figure, except possibly some small lots.

DUMB HERMIT
Has Been Struck By Trains Three Times.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., June 7.—Although he has been struck by a train three times and has had a dozen narrow escapes from death on the railroad, "Dummy" Albertson, a deaf and dumb hermit living along the line of the Bloomingburg & Sullivan railroad, continues to make the railroaders nervous by walking the tracks, insensible to whistle or bell, and keeping them on the constant outlook to avoid killing him. He seems more afraid of the railroaders than of the trains, and recently, when he had a narrow escape from injury, he dashed away at full speed to the woods to escape rough treatment from the railroaders.

He was struck the first time by a passenger engine and hurled into a pile of bushes, but was neither much flustered nor hurt. On another occasion he was struck by a train and pilot of the engine took a large piece of his trousers, which he did not return to claim. The third time he was knocked down by the cylinder of an engine just as he sprang aside to escape it, and again miraculously escaped with slight injuries. This time he hid for a couple of days in a farm house in fear that the railroaders were after him.

The engineers are now talking of having him arrested for trespassing upon the company's property if they can catch him.

Fine Lessons In Cooking.

The lessons in cookery which are being given this week at the appliance room of the Zenith Furnace company, on West First street, by Mrs. Marion C. Fisher, are spoken of most enthusiastically by the women who have attended. Mrs. Fisher is practical in her work and her recipes are most delicious. This afternoon she spoke on "Salads" and the lessons will be continued at 2 o'clock every day this week. Mrs. Fisher makes a baking powder bread of wheat flour and nuts which is most delicious and very popular in every city which she visits, and is attracting much attention here. It is hoped that a large number of women will avail themselves of this valuable opportunity of hearing these lessons.

UNION LEADERS ALLEGED To Have Compacts With "Sluggers" In Chicago.

Chicago, June 7.—Evidence tending to prove that other labor union leaders besides those of the Carriage and Wagon Workers' union, local No. 4, who were indicted a month ago for conspiracy, assault with intent to kill and murder in connection with the death of Christian J. Carlstrom, have compacts with organized gangs of "sluggers," it is said, has been placed in the hands of State's Attorney Healy, and a thorough investigation of the "educational plan" of putting non-union men "out of the way" is likely to be made by the June grand jury.

Ole Oleson, the prizefighter, sometimes known as "The Terrible Swede," who is held for an assault with intent to kill, is declared to have been implicated in slugging cases in connection with the teamsters' strike.

It is claimed there is an organized gang of sluggers on the West side, and that they are hired and paid for such service. The state's atorney's office is endeavoring to get information as to who hires these men.

ARE POOR BLOCKS

Material For First Street Pavement Is Below Grade.

Shipments Are Ordered Stopped Until Inspector Reaches Factory.

Owing to the fact that the creosote blocks which have been received from Sandstone to be laid on First street, are not up to the mark, the city engineering department telegraphed to the factory at Sandstone, to stop further shipments until an inspector should arrive.

The only manner in which creosote blocks can be inspected, is while the work is being done. After the blocks are completed the only way to find out whether they are properly creosoted, is to split each block open, destroying it for paving purposes.

The engineering department discovered yesterday, when the first load of blocks had been received, that some of them are not up to the mark. A number of the blocks were split open, and in some there was but a thin layer of creosote around the outside, with the greater part of the block untouched by the preservative.

On others the work had been well done, and the blocks were fully up to the standard of the Indianapolis blocks, according to the statement of the engineers.

Axel Wilson, the acting city engineer, in the illness of City Engineer McGilvray, yesterday telegraphed the Minneapolis engineer, asking him to recommend an inspector who was thoroughly familiar with the work of inspecting creosote blocks. F. J. Longworth was recommended by the Minneapolis official, and he was communicated with by telephone and requested to go to Sandstone and inspect all the creosote blocks which are manufactured for shipment to Duluth. The factory was also notified to cease shipping until Mr. Longworth arrived.

Only one car load of the blocks has been received, and this will furnish but a very small percentage of the total number of blocks required. Some of them can probably be used, but others will have to be thrown out entirely.

The engineers have expressed their satisfaction with the manner in which the concrete base for the pavement is being laid, and if good blocks are secured, it will be a first class sample of the creosoted block pavement.

The Sandstone factory has been but recently completed and it is possible that some of the machinery is not yet in good working order.

West Duluth

The Sunday School association met last evening at Merritt Memorial church in West Duluth, and one of the principal speakers was B. N. Wheeler, who spoke of the first Sunday school in Duluth, established many years ago. Only four members of that first Sunday school were present last night, namely, H. W. Wheeler, Leonidas Merritt, A. R. Merritt and Mrs. J. E. Merritt.

J. L. Thwing of the Endion Methodist Sunday school spoke in opposition to the use of Sunday school papers. Most of those present agreed on this, but it was said that at present there is nothing to fill the place of such papers. S. S. Williamson spoke on "Sunday School Libraries." There was a short musical program during the evening, and before the meeting lunch was served by the women.

FELL UNDER TRAIN.
George Asher's Death Probably Instantaneous.

Friends of George Asher of West Duluth, who was accidentally killed at the ore dock Monday night, say that he was a switchman, employed by the Duluth, Missabe & Northern company, and was engaged in his work at the time. It is claimed that Asher had just thrown a switch, and in attempting to get on a passing car missed his footing and went under, death probably ensuing instantly.

The funeral will be held from 219 Fifty-first avenue, tomorrow afternoon. Interment will be in Oneota cemetery.

Use Heath & Milligan Paint!

A little of it goes a long way; it won't cost you much to make your house look like a new one. It don't pay to use a cheap paint, because you have to use more of it, and use it oftener than a first-class one. HEATH & MILLIGAN paint is $1.65 per gallon—and is worth the money.

We carry a full line of oils, lead, brushes and painters' material.

HUGE TASK.

It was a huge task to undertake the cure of such a bad case of kidney disease, as that of C. F. Collier of Cherokee, Ia., but Electric Bitters did it. He writes: "My kidneys were so far gone, I could not sit on a chair without a cushion; and suffered from dreadful backache, headache and depression. In Electric Bitters, however, I found cure, and by them was restored to perfect health. I recommend this great tonic medicine to all with weak kidneys, liver or stomach." Guaranteed by all druggists. CITIZEN'S DUTIES

Discussed By Postmaster General Cortelyou at Illinois University.

"Education and Citizenship" the Subject of His Address.

Urban, Ill., June 7.—The exercises connected with the thirty-fourth annual commencement of the University of Illinois today were attended by a large crowd. Postmaster General Cortelyou, who delivered the commencement address, was accompanied from Chicago by a delegation of prominent men of that city. Introduced by President James, Postmaster General Cortelyou was warmly greeted, and his address was frequently applauded.

Postmaster General Cortelyou spoke of "Education and Citizenship." He said in part:

Our modern educational system is becoming more rational. It takes account of actual needs; it deals less with theoretical and more with the practical. It looks to the development of character as well as to the acquisition of knowledge. It makes the experience of the past serve the purposes of the present. It aims to educate the student, not alone as an individual, but as an integral part of the body politic. It anticipates his responsibilities to the state, and prepares him to meet them.

The educational institutions of the land contribute to an enlightened citizenship, and the nation demands much of the men and women of education. Their opportunities have been great; their contributions to the public weal should be proportionately great. They must make their opportunities serve not only their own, but the general good.

The domestic questions that confront us, having to do with our new possessions, the treatment of great commercial and industrial combinations, the regulation of immigration, improvement in political methods, the necessity for greater honesty and efficiency in government, whether municipal, state or national, and the international question of our relations with the other powers of earth, are problems with which the representatives of the people are now dealing, and in which every citizen has directly and indirectly a concern.

Some features of our attitude toward these problems are unfortunate. Deplorable as are certain tendencies—in our commercial and industrial affairs, in educational methods, in moral and ethical teaching—they furnish no warrent for sweeping deductions that distort the facts. We magnify and exaggerate, and in our hurry and excitement we miss the true perspectives of life. We deal too much in the superlative of denunciation and blind our eyes to the good that is all about us. Deep down under all hastily formed public opinion are the sound judgment and sober common sense of millions of sturdy and reasonable and far-seeing Americans who believe in the strength of our institutions, in our ability to work out our problems, and always, in the last analysis, in our capacities for self-government, and that splendid citizenship can be made an irresistible force in the battle of civic righteousness.

There should be more conservatism in our consideration of public questions, not the conservatism of inertness or indecision—but the conservatism that is open-minded to suggestios and insists upon hearing both sides of a question. We need to cultivate the calmness that typifies strength of purpose, depth of thought, and soundness of judgment. We shall then substitute energy for exaggeration and sanity for sensationalism. There will be more consideration and less clamor. In this spirit we shall be better able to deal with the questions before us, justly and fearlessly. We shall encourage those policies which recognize the fact that material prosperity is but a poor and empty thing if accomplished through any sacrifice of the moral sense of the people; and we shall see back of all and over all, as the commanding necessity of our times, insistence upon obedience to law, from the highest to the humblest.

The representatives of the people can do their best work only when encouraged and supported in their efforts to approach these questions in the right spirit. The burden of responsibility is not all with them. The people must do their part. If we are to have cleaner political methods, the beginning must be made in the primary and the town meeting, and the citizen must contribute his share in his own sphere, however humble it may be, if he is to be consistent when he demands a high standard of those who represent him in the various grades of official life. And so it is with the citizen's relation to these other problems. Wherever he touches them, even in their smaller aspects, he must do the duty that lies at his hand. The firmer we fix these facts in our midst the healthier will be our public sentiment.

Human nature is weak at times and likes the way of least resistance. It is easy and often seems expedient to yield to the outcry of the hour, but what the thoughtful people of America demand of an official is that he shall set his face like flint against it if his conscience or his experience convince him that it is a mistkaen cry.

It has become popular in some quarters to characterize the leaders of commerce and the leadrs of industry as sordid and selfish and grasping, but there are men today in the ranks of business and in the ranks of labor who illustrate the best types of American citizenship.

The demand of the hour is for unceasing warfare upon corruption in all its aspects, but we must always remember that reforms to be practical must be reasonable. There must be individual participation in every movement for civic betterment. The citizen must not shirk his duty. He must help to improve the agencies through which such betterment is to be secured. The influence of a free press must not be impaired nor must the great body of American newspapers—amongst the noblest agencies of enlightenment and civilization—be judged by a few which have prostituted their high calling to ignoble uses.

A higher standard for our judiciary; fewer laws and better enforcement of them; a wider public appreciation of the essentials of democracy and of the principles upon which this government was founded, will help us to the solution of the problems before us, and as the very basis and foundation of our national life we must conserve those forces which insure the efficiency of our schools and safeguard the purity of our homes.

Every village and hamlet, every municipality, every commonwealth, must assume its share and make its contribution to the general welfare.

In dealing with present-day problems we must have the faith that inspired Lincoln, the faith that sees in th past an earnest of the future, the faith that halts not even at failure, but that has in it the spirit

"To thrill with the joy of girded men,
To go on forever and fail, and go on again."

Reunited in the bonds of national fraternity, all sections of our beloved country now march shoulder to shoulder in the great forward movement of our people toward the achievement of their splendid destiny. God grant that the spirit of fraternity may grow deeper and ever deeper in this fair land of ours and that distinctions of class, unjust discriminations as between man and man, the exactions of greed, and the sophistries of the demagogue, may find no lodgment in the hearts of our people.

Among the greatest of the forces for progress in the struggle for a broader and juster national life will be the influence of the men and women of education.

INDIAN CITIZENSHIP.
Judge Searle Follows Ruling of Supreme Court.

Mahnomen, Minn., June 7.—The opinion of Judge Searle, as to the jurisdiction of state or federal law over citizens of the White Earth reservation, has just been handed down, and he grants the petition of the Roys habeas corpus case in favor of the defendants. This nullifies the authority of the Indian court of affairs and the Indian police to make arrests and confine prisoners in the agency jail at White Earth and places the citizens of the reservation subject to district court. As a result of Judge Searle's decision, steps will immediately be taken to organize White Earth agency into a townsite organization. Agent Michalet's authority is now severely restricted, and the lid may fly off the present regime any time. This decision puts a different phase on the question of saloons on the reservation. An application for government and county license will be made at once and the question tested.

E. T. Bennett, an attorney of Fosston, is a strong candidate for the position of Indian agent of this reservation, which is now held by Simon Michalet, whose term soon expires. Bennett's candidacy is not favored by Indian residents, though he has strong political backing in Northern Minnesota.

GAMBLING ALLEGED In Young Men's Christian Association Gymnasiums.

Philadelphia, June 7.—Ways and means of preventing gambling, which, they aver, is carried on in Young Men's Christian association gymnasiums, was the chief topic at the opening session of the Young Men's Christian association physical directors' conference, which opened here Monday, and which included Christian athletes from several cities. It was declared that gambling is carried on in the gymnasiums, and from the present system used in many Young Men's Christian associations leads young men into the habit of drinking intoxicants.

"Gambling is carried on right under the noses of the physical directors in many of our largest associations," said George T. Hepbron. "There is more gambling in bowling than in any other sport. The system so extensively in vogue of permitting the man with the lowest score to pay the cost of the game leads to gambling. This is the germ, and it soon takes a malignant form. There is a beaten path between the saloon and the Young Men's Christian association. We permit the professional bowler to play in our alleys, and when the Young Men's Christian association is closed at 10 o'clock the professional takes the young men to the saloon with him. We must beware of professionalism."

MILLS TENDERS RESIGNATION.

It's not mere whim or caprice—it's simply human nature to be

ALWAYS WANTING SOMETHING!

And it's a sign of good mental health—just as a vigorous appetite is a sign of good physical health

OF COURSE APPETITE WOULD BE AN EMBARRASSMENT IF WE COULD OBTAIN NO FOOD; AND THAT "WANT-SOMETHING FEELING" WOULD BE A CALAMITY IF WE COULD NEVER SATISFY IT.

But you may have noticed that Herald Want Advertisers are not only "always wanting something;" they are "always getting something."

KING OSCAR REFUSES TO RECEIVE A DEPUTATION FROM THE NORWEGIANS

Was Appointed By Storthing to Tell Ruler of Action.

King Does Not Recognize the Acts of Revolutionists.

Monarch Receives Many Telegrams of Sympathy From Swedes.

Stockholm, Sweden, June 8.—King Oscar has refused to receive the deputation appointed to present him the Norwegian storthing's address.

The request that the king receive the deputation was sent by the president of the storthing, M. Berner, who received a telegram from his reading as follows:

"As I do not recognize the revolutionary steps which the storthing in violation of the constitution and act of union and in revolt against its king has unfortunately taken, I decline to receive the deputation."

The king is receiving very many telegrams expressing sympathy and devotion from all parts of the kingdom.

Christiania, June 8.—The council of state, following the action of the storthing in dissolving the union of Norway and Sweden, proclaiming that King Oscar is no longer king of Norway and placing the reins of government in the hands of the council of state, is proceeding with the re-organization of the government in the manner indicated in the program which had been more or less prepared before the final step was taken by which yesterday's peaceful revolution was accomplished. The department of national defense has issued a decree to the army acquainting it with the resolution of the storthing and the assumption of the government by the council of state and intimating that the army must comply with the new conditions, rendering allegiance to those now conducting the government.

Minister of State Loevland has been appointed foreign minister and the council of state has decided to divorce the foreign office from the departments of commerce, navigation, etc., with which heretofore it has been amalgamated.

The council also resolved to eliminate the emblems of the union from the war flag of Norway.

THE SULTAN INDIFFERENT

Pays But Little Attention to New British Minister.

Tangier, Morocco, June 8.—Gerard A. Lowther, British minister to Morocco, presented his credentials to the sultan today. The ceremony was attended by the customary picturesque Moroccan display. Mr. Lowther in his speech assured the sultan of the sincerity of King Edward and of the British government in the desire for the welfare of Morocco and their "earnest wishes for the maintenance of the power and authority of the Sheriffian rules." The latter reciprocated the wish for a continuance of the traditional friendship between the two countries. Throughout the interview the sultan was almost indifferent.

The political situation remains befogged and will not be cleared up until Mr. Lowther has a private audience with the sultan.

It is reported that private offers have been made to the sultan, of a loan of $35,000,000 and it is alleged that the offer is supported by American capitalists but a suitable guarantee remains the difficulty since the customs are pledged to France for the next fifteen years.

GOING TO OBSERVE ECLIPSE OF THE SUN.

New York, June 8.—Rear Admiral Colby N. Chester, superintendent of the naval observatory, today hoists his flag on the cruiser Minneapolis, which, with the gunboat Dixie and the collier Caesar, will sail in a few days with the expedition which is to observe the eclipse of the sun on Aug. 29 and 30 for the government.

Stations will be established at Bona, Algeria, and Valencia, Spain. One of these will be in charge of Capt. John A. Morris and the other by Professor Bigelow of the weather bureau.

JAPS OFFER CARGO FOR SALE.

Nagasaki, June 8.—It is reported here that the Japanese are offering for sale the cargo of the British steamer Oldhamia, recaptured by them from the Russians.

FLOOD DAMAGE TO CROPS IN MICHIGAN WILL BE ENORMOUS

Grand River at Grand Rapids Is Still Steadily Rising.

Railroad Bridge North of La Crosse Washed Out By Floods.

Grand Rapids, Mich., June 8.—The Grand river is still steadily rising here. The only encouraging news comes from up-river points where the water is reported to be stationary or falling. The water here has now gone over Front street south of Bridge street. Many residences in the South end are completely surrounded by deep and swift currents. Workmen are strugling frantically to keep the North end dyke from going to pieces and it seems to be about an even chance whether they will succeed. A special to the Evening Press says that communications have been partially re-established with Whitehall, which has been isolated for sixty hours. The conditions on White river above the town are worse than had been expected. The damage to crops, bridges and dams will reach hundreds of thousands of dollars. Three large dams at White Cloud, Hesperia and Ferry were washed completely away.

La Crosse, Wis., June 8.—A bridge on the Chicago & Northwestern railroad between Lyttles and Trempeleau, ten miles north of La Crosse, has been washed out by an overflow of the Black and Mississippi rivers and no trains have been able to get through since Wednesday. A large section of the track is also under water and no Northwestern trains are running on the Wisconsin side of the river.

Traffic on the main line of the Green Bay & Western railroad has been abandoned today on account of a washout at Dexterville and the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul and the Burlington roads are operating under difficulties.

ELECTRICITY OF 500,000 VOLTS PASSES THROUGH MAN'S BODY

Lynn, Mass., June 8.—To demonstrate his claims that there is little danger in electrical force when properly handled, Prof. Elihu Thompson of this city has permitted a current said to have measured over half a million volts to pass through his body without displaying the slightest tremor or experiencing the slightest physical discomfort from the test. The demonstration was made for the benefit of the members of the Commercial club of Boston.

Prof. Thompson adjusted a special apparatus to his body and a high frequency current was used. Suddenly there was a flash from the finger tips, and great sparks flew into the air, illuminating two incandescent lights that were held two feet from the fingers.

BRITISH SUBMARINE BOAT LOST

Plymouth, Eng., June 8.—Submarine Boat A. 8 was lost off the berakwater here this morning. Three explosions are said to have occurred on board before she foundered. She had on board eighteen officers and men, including her regular crew and men, who were in training. Fourteen of the number were drowned. The others were picked up.

The disaster occurred while the A 8 was proceeding to sea for practice, accompanied by another submarine boat and a torpedo boat. Three explosions were seen from the shore to occur on board the A 8 which suddenly disappeared. Tugs and drivers immediately porceeded to the scene.

The submarine boat lies in eighteen fathoms of water. The first intimation of the disaster came from the boat herself signalling that she was submerged and could not come to the surface. A signal was received shortly before noon which said: "All right up to the present time."

Diving parties immediately proceeded to the scene. Those who were saved were standing in the vicinity of the conning tower at the time of the disaster and were picked up by a passing trawler. They were Lieut. Candy, commander of the boat; Lieut. Murdoch, a petty officer and a seaman.

The lost boat was of about 300 tons replacement and was launched in 1904.

BANK IS SMASHED BY DYNAMITE

Paris, Ill., June 8.—The Edgar County National bank on the North side of the public square was wrecked by dynamite early today. The charge also demolished Bradshaw's jewelry store and Wetzel's shoe store which are adjacent to the bank. The vault was wrecked but the smaller safe in which the bank funds were, was overturned but is still intact. A strange circumstance is that Walter Juntgen, the bookkeeper of the bank has a broken arm, which he says was caused by a brick flying into his window across the street from the explosion. The officers of the bank announce that they will resume business tomorrow.

MORTON INVESTIGATES NEW FIELD OF OPERATIONS.

New York, June 8.—Secretary of the Navy Morton, who is to retire from the cabinet July 1 to become the head of the Metropolitan subway system, has arrived here to make his first survey of the field of his future operations.

He will make au automobile tour over the routes of the underground lines which John B. McDonald, as chief contractor for the Metropolitan, expects to build. On his tour, he will be acompanied by Mr. McDonald and other men interested in the syndicate.

Besides driving over the entire routes through Manhattan, Mr. Morton will make a tour of the Bronx, looking over the territory there which the proposed lines expect to develop and will endeavor to get an idea of prospective connections with railroads and other lines. His investigations probably will consume several days.

TO TEST LAW

Requiring a Stamp on Transfer of Stock.

New York, June 8.—A test case agreed upon by District Attorney Jerome and legal counsel for the New York Stock exchange to determine the constitutionality of the new state stamp tax on transfer of stock was begun today by the technical arrest of Albert J. Heath, a broker of Stamford, Conn., for failure to comply with the provisions of the new law. The complainant in the case was Charles W. Maury, a broker and member of the stock exchange. Accompanied by Lawyer John J. Milburn of counsel for the stock exchange, Mr. Hatch went before Justice Clarke in the supreme court, where it had been planned that he would apply for a writ of habeas corpus and a writ of certeriorari which would be opposed by an assistant district attorney, but granted by the court in order to make the test speedy.

IF JAPAN'S DEMANDS ON THE RUSSIANS ARE REASONABLE, PEACE MAY BE NEAR AT HAND

Activity Among Diplomats at Washington and Other Capitals.

Belligerents Expected to Arrange Peace Terms Themselves.

An Armistice Will Be the First Indication of an Agreement.

St. Petersburg, June 8.—President Roosevelt's striving, with excellent prospects of success to end the bloody war, is now the central figure of the world's stage. One of the main obstacles, it seems, will be overcome once both Japan and Russia have agreed to accept his good offices for the arrangement for the preliminaries. The belligerents are expected to be able to arange the peace terms direct. The president is believed to share with Emperor William the view that the belligerents should be allowed to settle the actual terms without outside interference. Evidence also exists that President Roosevelt has secured the support of several continental powers and that at the proper time they will appear at his back. Exactly what is transpiring at Washington is being carefully guarded. The diplomats here are still greatly at sea, not being able to do more than venture a shrewd guess and indulge in speculation. The interest with which the moves on the Washington chessboard are being followed is evidenced by the manner in which the ambassadors and ministers who learned of Ambasador Meyer's audience with Emperor Nicholas yesterday flocked to the American embassy today in search of information. But the situation seems to be so delicate that the ambassador is compelled to display the most complete reserve. If Japan proves moderate in her demands peace seems at last to be close at hand. An armistics probably will be the first evidence the world will have that the two powers have agreed to shake hands.

St. Petersburg, June 8.—It now transpires that Ambassador Meyers' audience with Emperor Nicholas had been preceded by a family council at Tsarskoe-Selo at which it is understood the decision was reached that peace was entertainable if Japan's conditions were not too onerous.

Nevertheless, this cannot be officially confirmed, and doubt is cast upon it by a prominent official, who declares that on the contrary, the council consisted mainly of high army and naval officers, and that the discussion was devoted to the ways and means of prosecuting, instead of ending, the war.

OBSTACLES ARE MANY

To the Opening of Negotiations For Peace.

Paris, June 8.—It is definitely known that the Russian foreign minister, Count Lamsdorff, seconded by M. Witte, president of the committee of ministers, has initiated overtures through the Russian representatives abroad to learn Japan's disposition and terms of peace. These overtures, it is said here, began three days ago and were the basis of the decidedly more hopeful view which the officials began to have. At the same time it was then and still is recognized that Count Lamsdorff and M. Witte represent the peace element and it is not yet clear how far the movement is shared by the emperor. However, Count Lamsdorff's positon gives the overtures the force of coming from responsible quarters, whereas the previous movements lacked official origin. This clears the way for conversations between officials and diplomats here and at the other capitals which are now actively going on. These necessarily are circuitous, owing to Russia's inability to approach Japan directly. M. Neidloff, the Russian ambassador here, has already conversed with the French authorities who are fully aware of the desires of Count Lamsdorff and M. Witte. The change of the foreign office portfolio from M. Delcasse to Premier Rouvier caused a slight delay, but there is every indication that M. Rouvier will lend strong aid toward bringing the parties together. This is likely to occur both through the Japanese authorities here and indirectly with London as an intermediary of Japan. British and American influences are chiefly relied on to move Japan now that Count Lamsdorff and M. Witte have made the preliminary approaches. The sentiment here is strongly against over-optimism, as it is said that serious obstacles remain. One of the chief among them is the emperor's failure personally to approve Count Lamsdorff's initiative, which leaves doubt as to whether the movement has the silent acquiescence of the emperor. Diplomats here hold the view that Tokio would prefer to continue the war until Vladivostok is taken and all the territory up to Lake Baikal is under Japanese control. The diplomats also believe that Tokio will hesitate to lay down terms until it is clear that Emperor Nicholas is willing to treat for peace.

GERMAN VIEWS

On Peace the Same as United States.

Berlin, June 8.—The interview which Baron Speck Sternburg, the German ambassador at Washington, has had with President Roosevelt, and the cable correspondence between the ambassador and the foreign office here, resulted in the president and emperor finding that they had identical views on the subject of peace, and were nearly of the same opinion as to the method of drawing Russian and Japanese into negotiations.

The joint view appeared to be that others, including France and Great Britain, ought to be left out because to be sure of a community of views among all would be a slow and cumbersome business, and would impress Russia as taking on the character of outside pressure. This is precisely what, as the Associated Press is informed, President Roosevelt and Emperor William wish to avoid. They wanted the emperor of Russia to take the initiative, and sought only that he should avail himself of the American and German governments as instruments for making the first step toward peace easier. The Russian government was informed through the ambassador at Washington, Count Alvensteben, the German ambassador at St. Petersburg; through Mr. Meyer, the American ambassador at St. Petersburg, and through Count Von Osten-Saken, the Russian ambassador at Berlin, of what the United States and Germany were seeking—that Ambassador Meyer's audience of Emperor Nicholas was prepared for in t he fullest manner.

The understanding here is that Emperor Nicholas went so far as to say to Ambassador Meyer that he would like to know what Japan's terms would be. This inquiry was not to be construed as asking for peace, but only as telling friends that before taking so grave a step on their advice, the Russian government might properly and naturally desire to know through those friends how Japan regarded peace. Japan, it is believed, in government quarters here, will be reluctant to lay down specific peace conditions—far more reluctant than at any stage of the war—because preparation has been made to carry the campaign to Russian territory, take Vladivostok and Harbin, and then exclude Russia from the Pacific. Unless her high conditions are complied with, this is a crude expression of what is thought to be Japan's immediate policy.

IF JAPAN ASKS TOO MUCH

It Will Pay Russians to Prolong the War.

St. Petersburg, June 8.—There is a significant change in tone on the part of some of the Russian newspapers like the Novoe Vreyma which never heretofore have even admitted the possibility of the conclusion of hostilities until Russia had recovered her military prestige by a victory. Today the papers discuss calmly the advisability of ending the war if Japan's terms are reasonable. The payment of a big indemnity they declare would be too humiliating. The Novoe Vreyma says bluntly that if Japan asks too much it will pay Russia to prolong the contest indefinitely; while the Russ argues that if representatives of the Russian people are called together Japan will see herself confronted by the whole nation and she will readily agree to reasonable terms.

"Even the revolutionists," the Russ adds, "are not traitors. They are fighting the present rotten bureaucracy and not the mother country. They would not tolerate a disgraceful peace."

Universal regret is expressed in official circles at the retirement of M. Delcasse, until recently French minister for foreign affairs. He was regarded as a true friend of Russia, was a personal friend of Foreign Minister Count Lamsdorff, and was a sincere and equivocal supporter of the dual alliance. The Novoe Vreyma says:

"We know how to appreciate true friends. We have so few of them."

The Russ and the Slovo consider M. Delcasse to be the victim of trying to play the impossible role of a connecting link between two rivals—Russia and Great Britain. The Slovo says:

"M. Delcasse's policy was ever directed towards the isolation of Germany, but he forgot that an alliance

EQUITABLE PEOPLE MENTION MORTON

For Chairmanship of Society---Rumors of New Scandal Denied.

New York, June 8.—Alvin Krech, president of the Equitable Trust company and a director of the Equitable Life Assurance society, made a statement today with reference to a story printed to the effect that at yesterday's meeting of the directors of the Equitable, a member intimated that the report of the state superintendent of insurance would show a net impropriety involving $10,000,000. Mr. Krech said:

"There is absolutely no truth in the statement. No mention of an impropriety involving $10,000,000 was made at the meeting of the directors. I know absolutely nothing of a $10,000,000 scandal, or any other scandal in which the Equitable Trust company of New York has the slightest connection."

August Belmont, Senator Depew and David H. Moffatt, three of the five members of the committee appointed to name a chairman of the board of directors, were in conference in President Alexander's office today. It was said that Louis Fitzgerald and J. B. Forgan, the remaining members of the committee, probably will get to town later in the day.

President Alexander was before Superintendent of Insurance Hendricks today in the investigation which is being made by the state insurance department into the affairs of the Equitable society.

The nominating committee adjourned until tomorrow without definite action, except, it was learned, the final dismissal of Judge Gray's name from consideration in connection with the chairmanship. It is understood that the name of Paul Morton, secretary of the navy, was suggested, but that Mr. Morton had not been conferred with in regard to the matter.

A LOCKOUT OF 8,000 DRIVERS NEXT MOVE IN CHICAGO STRIKE

Team Owners' Association Will Deliver to Any and All Firms.

Drivers Will Probably Refuse and Then They Will Be Discharged.

Chicago, June 8.—Peace in the teamsters' strike seemed today to be as far away as ever. Settlement with cials that the employers' attorney by the unions that police be withdrawn from wagons, with the calling off of the strike, were apparently insuperable obstacles to an adjustment. President Cornelius P. Shea of the Teamsters' union took an active part in the latest conference with the employers, although he was responsible for blocking peace negotiations, several days ago, after he had been left out of a meeting between a committee of employers and teamsters. Shea would have been excluded from the new conference if the employers had agreed to the demand of the union officials that the employers' attorney, Levy Meyer, also should keep away. This demand was refused promptly, and Shea then was called in. He made a vigorous fight against altering the propositions of the teamsters to suit the demands of the employers.

With peace efforts again coming to naught, the prospective spread of the strike to 8,000 truck teamsters employed by members of the team owners' organization was today again a possibility. Many owners were in favor of forcing matters with the drivers, but it was generally hoped that the neutral element in the association would make a hard fight to keep from becoming involved in the strike.

A lockout of 8,000 drivers promises to be the next decisive development in the strike situation. W. P. Rend, chairman of the arbitration committee of the Team Owners' association, declared today that he favored delivery to any and all firms. He asserted he would urge such action at a special meeting of the association, tomorrow or next day, and also that he proposed to carry out this policy in his own business. This announcement is caused by the direct refusal by the truck drivers to submit to arbitration the question of dealing with struck firms. Such a move, it is said, would force employes of team owners into the ranks of the strikers. Up to the present time most of the team owners have held out against the lockout, and several avoided doing business with strike-bound houses as far as possible.

President Shea explained today that he opposed a settlement at yesterday's strike conference with the employers because he had been informed $22,000 was on the way here to aid the teamsters' cause, and he thought a fight of two or three weeks' longer could be waged. Now he intends to keep up the contest, asserting that trouble would follow an attempt by Mr. Rend to make deliveries, as proposed, to the strike affected firms.

CIGARETTE LAW IS PECULIAR

Man May Import the "Nails" and Then Smoke Them.

Indianapolis, June 8.—Judge James Leathers of the Marion county superior court, today, decided in the case of the state against W. W. Lowry, indicted for smoking a cigarette, that the anti-cigarette law passed by the last legislature is constitutional, except where in it may conflict with the interstate commerce law. Smokers may import cigarettes from other states and smoke them, but it is held unlawful to sell or give them away. Mr. Lowry is discharged. The state will take an appeal in order to test the law.

THE ROOSEVELT FAMILY

Secures a Summer Home on the Rapidan.

Washington, June 8.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Roosevelt family has, according to the best evidence, obtained a hold on Virginia real estate, but it goes in the name of Mrs. Roosevelt instead of the president. Mrs. Roosevelt has purchased about fifteen acres in Orange county on the Rapidan, a part of a place owned by W. N. Wilmer of New York, a friend of the Robsevelts. A house on the tract bought by Mrs. Roosevelt has been engaged and improved according to her plans. Mrs. Roosevelt left this morning on a preliminary visit to what will be one of the future summer homes of herself and young people of the family. She and the children will go there from time to time during the warm weather.

MOOSE IN CITY

Strange Delegate to Elks Convention Arrives From North.

Runs Through East End and Dies on London Road.

It was a queer delegate to the Elks' convention that came trotting down Fifteenth avenue east this morning.

Chased by a crowd of excited children, and several amateur photographers, a full grown bull moose, weighing nearly 1,200 pounds, ran down the avenue and found its way into an enclosure between a barn and a high board fence on London road, between Fifteenth and Sixteenth avenues east.

Here a crowd of East end citizens rapidly collected to view the strange sight.

The moose appeared perfectly oblivious to its surroundings and showed no signs of fear. It was completely exhausted, and was bleeding slightly at the mouth. The animal is believed to have been wounded internally by a bullet and, this combined with its long run, left it too weak to move.

Charles d'Autremont happened on the scene and he offered to supply the material for a high fence to complete the enclosure and secure the animal until the park board could make some arrangements to keep it in one of the city parks.

Preparations were being made to get the material and build the fence when the moose sank to the ground from exhaustion and died.

Deputy Game Warden Green had been summoned and reached the spot shortly before the animal died.

The moose was evidently about two or three years of age. It was a full grown male and weighed nearly 1,200 pounds.

The general opinion of those who saw it was that the animal had been wounded by a settler in the woods and, perhaps, chased by dogs, until it was frantic with fear and lost all sense of where it was running. It seemed to show no fear of the people about it, and, apparently, did not even see them.

Owing to the big convention of Elks which opens in the city today, many joking remarks have been heard concerning the incident, and the members of the society take it that the animal was a delegate from the northern part of the state who arrived a little ahead of time.

A number of the delegates went out this morning to see the strange sight.

HUNDREDS COME

Popular Excursions Fill City With Visitors From State.

Great Northern and Northern Pacific Companies Handle Crowds.

The second popular excursion of the season arrived in the city at 1:10 o'clock this afternoon over the Great Northern road from Willmar, Benson and other Southern Minnesota points. The train was run in one section of ten coaches and brought 500 visitors to the city.

The Duluth Commercial club's information bureau has been doing some very efficient service in connection with the excursions, Messrs. Thompson and Roycroft leaving for Sandstone this morning where they met the incoming excursionists, directing them to the information headquarters in the Manhattan building, and furnished all other information that was desired.

On this excursion came several hundred of the visiting Elks to attend the state convention here today and many others who have taken advantage of the low rates offered to see the Head of the Lakes country.

Possibly about half of the visitors are among those who came here on the excursion of about a year ago when the weather was not so favorable.

This afternoon the visitors are scattering out, some for the boat rides on the bay, some to take a trip out to the park and others to ride on the aerial bridge and down Park Point.

The aerial bridge is almost the first point of interest that the visitors wish to see and bespeaks something of the advertising that it has given the city throughout the state and country.

The Northern Pacific excursion which arrived from Morris yesterday brought about 500 visitors to Duluth. The train was comprised of eleven coaches. This train was met at Carlton by Messrs. Thompson, Roycroft and McNulty of the Commercial club information bureau, yesterday afternoon.

He went out this morning to look for his man, accompanied by Chief Troyer, and had no difficulty in locating him. He will be taken back to Houghton tonight.

JUDGE WINDOM IS COMMENDED

Judge Ensign Comments on His Treatment of Children.

In referring to a portion of his remarks before the board of county commissioners yesterday, relative to the work of the juvenile court, Judge J. D. Ensign says that one sentence stating that there had been too many children committed to jail, was rather too misleading as it might be taken as casting reflections on the practice of Judge Windom of the municipal court, who has disposed of the juvenile cases heretofore.

"I had no reference to the local courts," said Judge Ensign, "but intended that the meaning should refer to the ancient practice of putting children in with common criminals. Under the present laws this practice has been done away with.

"I have observed with interest the treatment of the young offenders by Judge Windom and have noted that he has always been very kind to them and has always sought to save the children instead of giving them over to severe punishment. I wish to state that I approve of his methods in every respect."

KILLED BY FLY WHEEL

Willow River Man Dies From a Sawmill Accident.

Ole Sieverson, aged 56 years, died at St. Mary's hospital at noon today, as the result of an accident sustained yesterday in his saw mill at Willow River.

Mr. Sieverson was part owner in a small mill at Willow River. Yesterday, while he was working in the mill one of the fly wheels broke, and a piece of the wheel struck him on the head, fracturing the skull.

He was brought to Duluth yesterday, and taken to St. Mary's hospital, where he died at noon today.

Mr. Sieverson leaves a wife and family in Willow River. The body will be shipped to his home town this afternoon, and the funeral services will be held there Sunday.

CRIMINAL CASES.

Two Men Are Still to Be Sentenced.

Frank Lenich and Frank Longar, convicted of manslaughter of the first degree for the killing of Peter Kracovitch at Eveleth last April, have yet to be sentenced. After their terms of imprisonment have been pronounced the criminal record at the court will end for this term.

There is a goodly number of prisoners at the county jail who will be compelled to stay within doors during the fine weather. Some are federal prisoners, while others will wait for a hearing in September at the district court. There are about sixty-five prisoners in the bastile at present, which is as nearly as large a number as there is during the cold weather.

STATE ELKS ARE GUESTS OF DULUTH

Several Hundred Come Here For Their Annual Convention.

Business Session Called Late In the Afternoon.

Duluth is in gala attire today in honor of the advent of the delegations of Elks who have been arriving ever since last evening to attend the state convention of the order here today. It is a pleasing coincidence that the best fellows on earth, and the best weather, came to town at the same time, and the people of Duluth are content to surmise that it is because of the Elks' visit that the propitious weather came trailing along.

Up to the noon hour about 100 Elks from various parts of the state had arrived, and many of them had registered at Elks' headquarters, in Parlor I, at the St. Louis hotel, where the state officers and the officers of the local lodge, No. 133, were in waiting to extend the glad hand and look after the accommodation of visitors.

The Elks commenced coming in numbers on the noon and early afternoon trains, and at 2 o'clock this afternoon the business session of the convention began at Elks' hall, on Superior street.

Aside from the business matters of particular interest to the organization alone, there was some speculation among the visitors as well as the local members this morning as to who the officers would be the ensuing year. Up to the meeting hour this afternoon it was declared from all quarters that so far as learned no slate had been made up, and that until the Elks were in session nobody could forecast the candidates. Neither did the Elks this morning have any idea of the selection of the next meeting place for the state convention, that matter being left to the executive board.

• • •

A very pleasing social affair of this afternoon was the large informal reception tendered the ladies of the visiting Elks, in the parlors of the Spalding hotel, from 3 to 5 o'clock, by the ladies of Duluth. The parlors were handsomely decorated with palms and potted plants, and punch was served. The reception was in the hands of a committee, comprised of Mesdames J. L. Fuller, Roderick J. Mooney, A. E. McManus, William Gorrie, W. A. Eden, R. M. Edwards, F. M. Anderson, J. H. McFadzean, A. W. Holmes, A. J. Lyle, J T Culbertson, I D. Burgh, J. T. Armstead, J. W. Kreitter and A. E. Tessman. At the lower end of the long corridor, also handsomely decorated with plants and the colors of the order, La Brosse's stringed orchestra discoursed music during the entertainment. The visiting ladies were each presented with a souvenir of Duluth, which comprised a handsomely illustrated view book of the city.

The plans for entertainment this evening include a social session and dance at the Armory for local and visiting Elks and their ladies, admission being by card.

Tomorrow morning, if the weather permits the visitors will be taken for a ride on the boulevard, starting at 9 o'clock and visiting some of the parks.

Tomorrow afternoon a boat ride will be had either on the lake to Two Harbors or up the St. Louis river to Fond du Lac.

The return from the boat ride will be made in time for dinner after which there will be a social session at the Armory including a minstrel show, speeches and a general jollification.

The visiting Elks, those who had arrived by the noon hour were more than delighted with Duluth and the cordial treatment accorded them, the local brothers of the order and their wives doing everything in their power to make the visit a pleasant one.

At the Elks' headquarters there was the best of fellowship apparent and, during the time that the officers and lay members were not busy with the register, the badges and their information bureau a social session ensued and anecdotes were passed.

• • •

President W. W. Koons, of the state association stated that the delegations would possibly number as high as 2,000 and that the attendance was likely to be quite large on account of the fact that this is the first convention in the state and because it is being held in Duluth. He expressed the belief that the present meeting will be successful and will stimulate much interest hereafter in annual state conventions.

The local lodge of Elks held a meeting last evening and entertained many visiting members. Satisfactory reports were had from the committees in charge of the arrangements for the convention, the principal committee being comprised of J. T. Armstead, J. T. Black and Charles Goodrich.

The noon trains from the southern part of the state brought several hundred more visiting Elks and their ladies to attend the convention and the attendant social events, and there was a very busy time about the Elks' headquarters during the early hours of the afternoon.

Owing to the lateness of the arrival of so many of the delegates, who proceeded to get their luncheon as soon as they arrived, and from the fact that the organization machinery is still rather new to work smoothly, the business session did not begin at 2 o'clock this afternoon, as scheduled. At 3 o'clock the meeting had not been called to order, but it was expected that the session would begin very shortly.

The election of the state officers for the coming year is not expected to take place until a late hour this afternoon.

NEARING THE END.

May Term of Court Is Almost Finished.

After the disposal of three civil cases and the sentencing of two prisoners the May term of the district court will end and the judges and clerks will enjoy a long rest until the opening of the fall term, which will be the first Wednesday in September.

One of the cases left on the calendar is that of Astry Steier against Theodore Nusbaum. The plaintiff sues for the damages to the extent of $1,041.38, of which $475.38 is claimed to be for a loan made, the rest being claimed to be for rent for a store building at 702 West Superior street. The second is a divorce suit, the plaintiff being Frank Gregorski against Mary Ann Gregorski. The plaintiff alleges that since he came here from Germany sixteen years ago, he sent $500 over to the fatherland to bring his wife and family to this land. His wife refuses to come, he alleges.

The third civil suit is that of Theodore Bruener, trustee in bankruptcy of Nehemiah P. Clarke, bankrupt, against Nehemiah P. Clarke, trustee, et al. The plaintiff alleges fraud in the transfer of certain lands, deeded to the defendant, as one of the heirs of the estate of his father.

WASHABLE GLOVES.

One of Necessities of the Summer Girl.

Washable gloves have become absolutely indispensable to the summer girl. Fabric gloves, whether in lisle or linen mesh, are so skilfully woven now that they have lost all of the scratchy feeling which has long been their objectionable feature. The girl who is peculiarly sensitive to this irritation will find lisle gloves lined with the most supple of China silk. Fashionable shades, such as old rose and old blue, are lined with check silk or silk embroidered with polka dots or tiny flowers, says the New York Globe.

Linen-mesh gloves, so popular during the warm months last year, will be more than ever in evidence this coming summer, and the stitchings on the back will show must elaborate handwork in self-tone or contrasting shade.

But it is the silk glove which has captured the affections of summer girls, purse-proud or economically inclined. Not one of the infinite variety of warm weather shades but can be perfectly matched in any length of silk weave. In imitation of kid gloves, the wrists are often lined with silk of contrasting shade, while the daintiest of pearl buttons effect the fastening. White gloves are lined with pale blue lining, and gray silk is faced with lavender. White silk will be stitched with black, and vice versa, while gloves with colored lining will be stitched in silk to match the linings. For street wear almond shades take the lead in popularity.

Hand embroidery has invaded the realm of silk gloves, as it has that of every other feminine accessory of dress. Most exquisite flower designs cover the back of the hands on short gloves or run the length of the arm on elbow and shoulder gloves. Scallops of buttonholing or flowers finish the edges, while one fantastic pair shows a gauntlet finish of leather in soft pastel shade.

In combination with embroidery, filmy lace medallions are inset into long silk glovs. Ruffls of Valenciennes also adorn the wrists. A stunning pair of black silk elbow-length gloves, long enough to give a mousquetaire effect on the arm, has a double ruffle of narrow black silk Valenciennes, alternating with an inch-wide lace insertion from elbow to wrist.

Filmy silk mitts refuse to be slighted. Each year they bob up serenely, and their persistency has finally won out. The summer girl of 1905 will undoubtedly have a goodly supply to match her evening frocks. Double ruffles of Valenciennes finish the edge of mitts, with sometimes the addition of lace insertions.

Not to be outdone by these successful rivals, the washable chamois glove is irresistible in its new-found suppleness and creamy white tints. A fashionable society girl who goes in extensively for athletics will wear no other kind of glove on her sporting trips, as the washable chamois is such a splendid protection from briars, etc., and has none of the clumsiness of a leather glove.

A FAIR LADY

By J. C. Plummer.

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

"Hi don't understand why my wife his so hinfernal jealous," remarked Capt. Hill of the schooner Whydah to his mate, who was busily putting a patch on the seat of a pair of of dungaree trousers. "She thinks every woman who drops her heyes on my bloomin' face falls dead in love with me."

"That shows the foolishness of women," replied the mate, flourishing his needle and speaking in an argumentative tone; "anybody with eyes could see no woman's goin' to fall in love with you."

"Hi'd 'ave you to hunderstand, Mr. Jenkins," began the skipper wrathfully, but his emotions choked him, and hastening on deck he said some words over the side which caused the cook, who had been attending Salvation Army meetings, to groan in his spirit.

The schooner was to sail that evening from Shoreham to London, and the skipper went home to bid his wife farewell.

When he came down to the quay he was carrying, with visible effort, a large portmanteau, while a boy followed with another. Behind the procession stalked a tall, angular woman.

"I didn't know Mrs. Hill was going with us," exclaimed the mate to the skipper, while Mrs. Hill exchanged some vigorous remarks with the boy concerning the dropping of the portmanteau he was carrying.

"Hi didn't know it myself until a 'alf hour ago," replied the captain, with intense gloom.

The mate looked at Mrs. Hill with visible perturbation, then his face brightened and he helped that lady aboard with deference.

Mrs. Hill declined going into the cabin, preferring to witness the getting of the vessel under way.

As the skipper stood on the break of the poop the mate made a slight motion of his hand inviting him farther forward, and when the two were out of earshot of Mrs. Hill the mate said in a whisper:

"There's a leddy aboard."

"Leddy," exclaimed the captain, "what sort of a leddy?"

"The way of it's this," said the mate, speaking very fast as if he didn't want any gap left for an interruption, "old Capt. Tomlinson brought his daughter around with him from Lunnon. She was to go back with 'im when he sailed at noon today, but the cranky old cuss got full o' spirits and sailed away without her. The poor girl had no money to go back by railroad and no friends in Shoreham, so she asked me if she couldn't go back on this hooker. I felt so bad about her trouble that I said she could. I told her to get into my cuddy and I'd fix it all right with you."

The skipper stared at the mate as if he was looking at a ghost.

"Tomlinson," he gasped, "Tomlinson's daughter; why, he isn't married."

"Oh, yes he is," retorted the mate confidently. "I was at the wedding. He married a red-haired woman. This daughter of his is a lovely gal; you jest ought to see her."

Capt. Hill's face was paled with horror.

"That gal in your cuddy in the cabin of the Whydah," he murmured. "George, hif my wife knows that gal is there it'll be 'ell aboard this schooner."

"Don't you worry about that," replied the mate. "I'm no man to get other people in trouble. I'll pass her the word to stay in the cuddy till we gets to Lunnon. We'll be there by noon tomorrow at the latest, and after your wife leaves she can go. I'll smuggle some grub into her."

"Hit'll never do, George," said the skipper nervously, "she must go hashore."

"Why," expostulated the mate, "it'd never do for her to go now. If Mrs. Hill was to see us a-putting a gal ashore jest as the vessel was sailin' she 'd think all kinds o' things, and I wouldn't blame her."

"Are you sure you can keep her in the cuddy?" asked the skipper.

"Certainly; she's promised to keep as still as a mouse."

When the Whydam pointed her nose up channel Mrs. Hill had her luggage carried below and followed it. The skipper kept casting alarmed looks at the mate's cuddy, but Mrs. Hill was busy arranging the captain's room and paid no attention to the cabin.

At supper, after Mrs. Hill had finished and gone on deck, the skipper encountered the mate on his way to the cuddy with an enormous pile of vituals on a plate.

"She must be a 'earty young leddy to eat hall that," he remarked, with an astonished glance at the plate.

"She's one of these hearty English girls you read of," replied the mate cheerfully.

Mrs. Hill retired early, but the skipper lingered on deck. His perturbed mind was soothed by the peace of the night. As he passed the sky-light he looked down and beheld the mate, carrying a full glass of spirits to the cuddy.

Capt. Hill rubbed his head.

"What's the women-of-Hengland a-comin' to," he muttered; "that was a dram for a coal-stoker."

The next morning Mrs. Hill announced at the breakfast table that she intended giving the captain's cuddy a complete renovation, and accordingly the cook carried down pails of water and several swabs. This work was finished in short order, and then she turned to Mr. Jenkins with a smile. "I'm going to clean up your room too," she called; "I'm sure it needs it."

The mate turned pale and so did the skipper.

"I've jest had my cuddy cleaned," he stammered, "the cook cleaned it while we were at Shoreham."

"Why didn't he clean the captain's too?" asked Mrs. Hill.

The mate thought for a moment and would doubtless have admirably explained the omission of the captain's cuddy from the renovation, but before he could open his lips a sneeze sounded from the closed cuddy.

"Smebody's in there," exclaimed Mrs. Hill, looking with a stony eye at the wretched skipper.

That gentleman's lips were too dry to articulate, but the mate said:

"It was the cook wot sneezed. He's an awful cold."

"The person who sneezed is in this room," said Mrs. Hill shortly. "Who is it?"

The mate and skipper looked at each other in affrighted silence.

"Who's in there, Henry?" demanded Mrs. Hill, with a rising inflection of voice.

Nobody spoke.

"Henry," said Mrs. Hill calmly, "open that door."

"Hit's the mate's room," murmured the skipper.

"Then tell him to open it; you are master of the ship."

"George," said the skipper feebly, "hopen that there door."

Mr. Jenkins, with an air of desperation, unlocked the door and opened it.

Mrs. Hill, quivering with righteous scorn, looked upon the bold-faced girl—or rather she loked upon a burly man lying in the mate's bunk—an ill-dressed man with a two days' growth of bristles on his chin. He stared sheepishly at his observers and said nothing.

"Who's that?" ejaculated the skipper, turning to the mate.

Mr. Jenkins closed the door and led the captain on deck.

"He's a pore fellow," said he, "who's in trouble with the perlice on account of desertin' from a ship. I agreed to smuggle him to Lunnon, and as I was afraid for the crew to see him, hid him in my cuddy. I thought I could get him to Lunnon without your knowin' it."

"What made you say it was a leddy?" demanded the skipper.

"'Cause I knew then with Mrs. Hill aboard you'd dare not run the risk o' puttin' him ashere."

The unshaved man had a passage to London, but when the schooner was at the wharf the skipper addressed the mate.

"George," said he, "is old Capt. Tomlinson married?"

"Naw," answered Mr. Jenkins, "I've known him for years. He's not married."

WINNING OF "BABE"

Cost Edson Babbitt a Fortune of $100,000.

Syracuse, N. Y., June 8.—Edson H. Babbitt, who inherited a large fortune from David Bibbitt, a former wealthy real estate broker of Auburn, went through $100,000 in his wooing of Miss Bessie May Seeker, one of the "Babes of Toyland" company, whom he married here last night. Miss Skeer is the daughter of Alonzo G. Skeer of Fort Wayne, Ind. Babbitt met Miss Skeer a year ago and was so infatuated that he followed the company around with a party of friends who did him the honor of borrowing large sums of money from him. When later they failed to pay it back, he brought suits against them which are still pending. All the time the money was going he never lost sight of the "Babe" he was following and was so persistent that he finally persuaded her to become his wife.

In reply to newspaper articles written about him, Babbitt said he was on an errand that had been honored since the world began. He was wooing a wife, and found her.

HE VISITS DULUTH

Congressman Bede Drops In For Day With Constituents.

To Confer Over Land Office Appointments—Coming Legislation.

Still wearing a healthy coat of tan acquired on the river and harbor committee's junket to the West Indies last spring and with several well developed blisters on his palms, caused from manual labor on his "farm" at Pine City, Congressman J. Adam Bede of the Eighth district dropped into Duluth this morning to spend the day.

Congressman Bede expects to get away this evening on the Twilight Limited to attend to matters needing his attention in the other end of the district, and will join Commander Guy A. Eaton of the local Naval Reserve early next week in a trip to the Norfolk navy yard, where the training ship Fern is to be ready to start for Duluth about the middle of the month. Congressman Bede suggested that he was going along with Commander Eaton for the reason that, both of them being on the ground before the boat leaves the yards, they might be able to secure from the navy department more equipment than the boat will receive if there is no one there to look after the interests of the reserves.

Speaking of his trip with the congressional committee to the West Indies, Congressman Bede said:

"The trip was a delightful one in every respect. We called at Cubt, Porto Rico, Jamaica and numerous other points and settled a few problems for them down at San Domingo.

"We visited Governor Winthrop in Porto Rico, President Palma in Cuba, President Morales in San Domingo and Minister Squires in Cuba.

"At one of the islands, I think it was San Domingo, the United States consul is a colored man, and one of the pictures that he had on the wall of the consulate was one of President Roosevelt sitting down at a dinner with Booker T. Washington.

"I was very much impressed with the island of Porto Rico. We landed at San Juan and then followed the old military road by stage clear across to Ponce. It seems to me that the country offers great opportunity for investment and I noticed that many American capitalists are getting there. It is a beautiful country and the soil is very productive.

"I came up to Duluth today to confer with some of the boys over the appointments to be made in the land office service. Some of them are getting unnecessarily anxious about the matter, for the appointments will not be made for seven or eight months to come.

"I rather expected that there would be an extra session of congress called in October, but I see that we are to meet in November.

"I do not look for any radical legislation as regards tariff revision. In fact, if any action is taken, I am satisfied that it will be along conservative lines. When everything is moving along in a prosperous manner the people of the country object to much stirring up of tariff matters. The business men are afraid of the result of any agitation along that line. There are some obsolete schedules that will probably be changed, and the chief aim is likely to be some provision for increased revenue for the government to meet the increased expenses. We need more money for our navy, for the pensions and for the rural mail delivery systems that are being established over the country, as well as many other governmental expenses.

"I look for some action to be taken in railroad matters. The senate committee, which has been investigating the subject of rates, will probably present several reports. They will likely be agreed on the question of rebates and private car lines, but the Republicans may be expected to present one or two reports in other railroad matters, and the Democrats another, according to the different political aspects taken."

Asked about the provision of the rivers and harbors bill providing for a survey of Keweenaw Point, with a view of establishing a harbor of refuge, Congressman Bede stated that the provision was put into the bill by Congressman Bishop, who represents the northern district of Michigan, and whom he believes was asked to insert the clause by the lake vessel interests. It was explained by Mr. Bede that the step is a merely preliminary one, and will incur no expense. The government engineers are to examine into the matter and see if the project is an advisable and a feasible one.

The Stage

COMING ATTRACTIONS.

LYCEUM—Friday and Saturday, Grace Van Studdiford in "Red Feather."

"RED FEATHER."

"Red Feather," with its star, Grace Van Studdiford, and the original production will return to the Lyceum theater next Friday for two evenings and Saturday matinee. Those who delight in an evening's entertainment have expressed themselves highly in its praise. Reginald De Koven composed the score of "Red Feather;" the book is by Charles Klein and the lyrics by Charles Emerson Cook. There is no doubt that "Red Feather" set the pace in comic opera productions. The ladies' gowns in the ball room scene are wonderful creations. The military uniforms, the court attaches and the costumes of the ballet are revelations in their design and contrast. The prima donna has no peer in this country in light opera. With the Bostonians she proved her right to star, and as the prima donna of the Metropolitan English Grand Opera company she fascinated the lovers of the higher order of music. In "The Merry Cavalier" and "The Garden of Dreams" he has two numbers that surpass anything De Koven has ever written, so a rich musical treat may be anticipated.

CHAUNCEY OLCOTT.

Chauncey Olcott will close his season in Duluth this year. Will J. Tilton, business manager for Mr. Olcott, is in the city making arrangements for the last engagement of the year which will take place at the Lyceum, Saturday matinee and evening, June 17. Mr. Olcott will disband his company here and ship his scenery and effects to the New York storehouse. He will go to Europe to spend a few weeks and the company will leave on the Northwestern railway for their various Eastern homes.

Mr. Tilton says that Mr. Olcott has had a very successful season. "The Romance of Athlone" is the bill for Duluth this time.

OVERTAXED

Hundreds of Duluth Readers Know What It Means.

The kidneys are overtaxed;
Have too much to do.
They tell about it in many aches and pains—
Backache, sideache, headache,
Early symptoms of kidney ills,
Urinary troubles, diabetes, Bright's disease follow.

A Duluth lady tells here a certain cure.

Mrs. Letitie Cole of 467 Mesaba avenue, Duluth, Minn., says: "I am pleased to repeat what I have said again and again recommending Doan's Kidney Pills. Five or six years ago, when suffering from disorders of the kidneys, which had become aggravated by overtaxation and severe colds, I looked about in vain for a long time for relief, trying many different remedies which were recommended to me, but not until I got Doan's Kidney Pills did I find the long-sought for benefit. The heavy aching through my back and kidneys was gone, and the kidney secretions had become natural. The treatment improved my health in every way, and the results have been permanent."

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Armour Bankers Are Made Defendants In Libel Suit.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Armour—Circuit court will convene here on the 27th. The only case of importance is the libel suit of K. G. Foster against Johnson Brothers of this city. An effort is being made by Mr. Foster's attorneys to have the case go over, but the Johnsons are insisting that it come to trial, and will probably have their way.

In their answer to the complaint they contend that Mr. Foster was a candidate for office at the time the article was published in the Armour Herald, which caused the suit, and that according to the rulings of the supreme court of this state they had a right to inform the voters of the county as to the character of the man who was asking for their suffrages. To this Mr. Foster's attorneys demurred, and Judge Smith held that their answer was according to the statutes and the fact that Mr. Foster was a candidate for office could enter into the case.

In the campaign last fall E. S. Johnson, national Democratic committeeman from this state, and his brother, ex-State Senator H. W. Johnson, caused to be published a letter giving what they believed a true history of the business transactions of K. G. Foster, who was a candidate for the legislature. To this Foster took exceptions and brought suit against the Johnsons for $25,000.

It seems that Mr. Foster was a director in a bank which failed here years ago, and the day before it failed he purchased a draft for $600 at the Johnson bank and left for Chicago. The Johnsons produced a copy of this draft and commented upon it extensively.

It was the only business ever transacted by Foster with Johnson Brothers, and for that reason they contended that he knew the bank was insolvent.

Mr. Foster was defeated by one vote, but later contested for the seat of his Democratic opponent and was given the place by the legislature. The county, however, gave Roosevelt a majority of 333 votes.

The little child of Joe Smith and wife of this city drank out of a cup containing kerosene. Prompt medical attendance is all that saved her, and the physician in attendance says it will take a year for the kerosene to leave her system.

Hill City—The little stamp mill which has been built by E. C. Johnson and his associates, is ready to start. The Gertie shaft is being unwatered and within a few days tin ore will be taken out from the lower working and run through the mill. This is the first genuine effort ever made in the southern mills to mine and mill tin ore. The property was formerly owned by the Harney Peak Mining company. There is a five-foot vein of tin and gold ore which has been thoroughly developed.

Yankton—After a delay of over two years in which time Yankton has been without street lights, the city council Tuesday night granted to Sanford G. Donaldson the right to maintain and operate an electric lighting plant for twenty years. The action taken by the council is the close of a long and a hotly contested fight between two factions for the coveted franchise. The final vote on the franchise was unanimous, though the council had been evenly divided for months. The franchise requires the operators of the plant to install thirty-five enclosed arc lights within twenty-five days.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Williston—The dead body of Charles Smith was found in the timber ten miles from town Wednesday. It is in a badly decomposed condition. It is evidently a case of suicide, as Smith's mind had been unbalanced for some time, and he left town two weeks ago in a dazed condition.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Man In Iron County Holds Dam With Ugly Gun.

Crystal Falls—Iron county has a Dietz case. The scene of the affray is above Atkinson, on the Paint river, and about eight miles from Elmwood. A man named Grimes is the principal on the one hand, and the Menominee River Boom comapny, through William Moss, who has the contract to drive the logs on the Paint river, is playing the principal role on the other. The bone of contention is a reservoir dam, and one of the chief understudies is a man with a gun, whom Grimes has stationed on the dam with instructions to shoot any person who attemps to open the gates. The details are meager as yet, but it has been reported to the sheriff that boom company men, sent to open the gates, have been frightened away at the point of a gun, and the officer has gone to the scene to investigate. It is not clear whether Grimes owns the land on which the dam is situated, in which case he is within his rights, or whether, as also reported, he has logs of is own to drive and means to hold the water for that purpose. If the latter he is clearly a trespasser, as the boom company has a charter permitting it to drive the river. It is the contention of Superintendent Moss that the land involved is the property of the Kirby-Carpenter Lumber company, a stockholder in the boom company, and that Grimes has no authority in the premises. The boom company is in great need of the water to finish out its drive, and if it cannot get it it will be seriously handicapped and will sustain considerable financial loss.

Sault Ste. Marie—At the twenty-fifth annual meeting of the Sault Ste. Marie association of Congregational churches, comprising the greater part of the Upper Peninsula of Michigan, the following officers were elected: Moderator, Rev. William Etheridge of Brimley; registrar and treasurer, Rev. B. B. Winter, Sault Ste. Marie; scribe, Miss Eliza Knowles, Pine Grove. The reports from the local churches show prosperous conditions. The membership is increasing.

Amasa—Chicago advices state that Dominick Dallafoir of Amasa, Iron county, had been overcome by escaping gas in a hotel and that his life is despaired of. Dallafoir blew out the gas and then went to bed, but whether he contemplated suicide is not known. At latest accounts his condition was precarious.

Ironwood—A fierce fire burned all day in the woods surrounding the fair grounds at Ironwood and for a time considerable destruction of property was threatened. The flames at one time reached within about fifty feet of the grandstand, but the fire department, by the formation of a bucket briged, succeeded in preventing the threatened loss.

Escanaba—The paving of Ludington street at Escanaba is held up on account of objections of property holders; which will be heard at a council session called for June 20. It is not expected that the objections will be serious or that the construction of the pavement will be tied up for over two weeks. The Barber Asphalt company has the contract.

WILL TOTE FAIR

Kettle River Company Will Furnish Good Creosote Blocks.

Superintendent Says It Is Good Business to Do So.

"Even from a selfish business standpoint it would be clearly a foolish move for the Kettle River company to give the Duluth people anything but the best material for the First street pavement," said Walter Booler, the superintendent of the company's plant at Sandstone, who arrived in the city this morning to investigate the trouble concerning the blocks which have been received and which the city engineer claims are not up to the mark. "We have just put in a $20,000 plant down there at Sandstone, and we are looking for our trade in this part of the country. It would be the height of folly for us to furnish poor material to Duluth just when we are getting started in business.

"The same kind of trouble was experienced in Minneapolis last year, but we are having no trouble this summer, and pavement is in every way satisfactory down there. But last year the property owners would come along and pick up a block, split it open and find streaks of white wood. They would then condemn the block and say it wasn't properly treated.

"Now anybody who knows anything about creosoting knows that there must be streaks of white wood seen. Wood is made up of fibres and cells. It is the sap in the cells that makes the wood rot. In creosoting this sap is extracted from the cells by means of a large retort into which the blocks are put. The oil is then forced into the cells from which the sap is taken. The oil does not penetrate the fibre of the wood and is not meant to. It simply fills the cells and acts as a preservative for the fibre. If you get the cells in a piece of wood filled with oil you have got a good job, whether it required six pounds of oil per cubic foot or twenty. The quantity all depends on the kind of wood.

"If you will examine those blocks you will see that the cells are all filled, and the streaks of white wood are simply the fibres. But our company is willing and anxious to do the right thing and we will give the inspector every opportunity to watch the process.

"In regard to the statement that we are using some fir blocks, that is absolutely false. We haven't a stick of fir in our yards, and all the blocks are either pine or tamarack, as called for in the specifications."

P. J. Longworth, the inspector secured from Minneapolis, was also in the city this morning, and will go from here to Sandstone to inspect all the blocks manufactured for shipment to Duluth.

"I am not prepared to say as yet whether the blocks are up to the standard or not," he said this morning, "and will not be in a position to do so until I have inspected the plant and watch the process of manufacture. But I am satisfied that the company means to do the right thing by the city, especailly as its own interests lie that way.

"Every assistance has been offered in the work of inspecting the blocks, and every part of the plant has been thrown open to me. I have made a special study of the inspection of creosote blocks for several years, and when the company opens all the avenues of information in this way, I can assure you that the city will get good material for its pavement."

WOMEN STATION AGENTS

Are Tried By a Railroad In Indiana.

Indianapolis, Ind., June 8.—The Lake Erie & Western railroad is making some significant changes of station agents, and it is predicted that the day is not distant when all the smaller stations will be in charge of women. Four stations are now in charge of women, and it is said that their work is very satisfactory.

The first woman station agent was appointed at Summit something more than a year ago, and it was her work that first suggested to the company's officials the policy of appointing women as station agents. Her monthly reports were models of neatness and exactness, and she had hardly entered upon her duties when she made some valuable suggestions as to how to make the road popular with the people along the line.

But it was not till the general officers made a trip of inspection over the line that the full results of her administration became known. The station at Summit was found to be the best kept in Indiana.

A little inquiry resulted in the information that the station had ceased to be a lounging place; that there had been no rowdyism since Miss Catharine Dicks had taken charge; that the doors and benches were always clean and that the station had become as orderly and well kept as any private house in the town.

Prior to that time trips of inspection had consisted of a scurrying along the line with stops only at the large cities, and it was at the suggestion of one of the Indiana officials that the general officers stopped at Summit. Miss Dicks was not expecting them, and had not made preparations to receive them, but the station floors were free from stains, the stove glistened with new polish, not a particle of dust was on the benches, and the private office of the agent was homelike and inviting.

The other women agents have been appointed since then, and the officials have found that the good results of the change have been the same in every case. They have also learned that the women have greater tact in handling people than their male predecessors displayed, and fewer complaints have come from their stations.

It is also said that passenger traffic has greatly increased from these four points, and especially during the summer season, when excursion trains are run, the women taking more pains and showing more energy in working up crowds than did the men.

The salary of the woman station agent is from $40 to $50 a month. Miss Dicks is now learning telegraphy, and will soon get an increase in salary as a telegraph operator.

RIOTING AT BAY CITY.

Bay City, Mich., June 8.—For the first time since the street car employes of this city, together with those of Saginaw and the interurban line between the two cities went on strike Sunday morning to enforce a demand for an increase in wages and a shortening of their hours, serious rioting broke out yesterday and at times the police were unable to cope with the unruly element. Five persons were hurt during the day.

A MIGHTY HUNTER

Of Colorado Bears Is Little Black and Tan Dog.

The President Brought "Skip" to Washington From West.

Washington, June 8.—The Roosevelt children have a new pet, brought from the Rocky mountains by their father. It is a little black and tan terrier, Skip by name, the star bear hunter of old Jake Borah's pack, which is one of the wonders of the big game section of Colorado.

Skip was born and bred in the higher altitudes, and to him the mountain country was a happy hunting ground. If he had chosen he would have stayed with Jake and earned his living chasing the grizzly rather than have come East, even with a president.

Roosevelt, the hunter, made such a hit with the people of Colorado that they offered him everything in the state except the mountains and the climate. Borah wanted him to accept as a souvenir of his sojourn there the big white stallion he used in the chase.

When he refused the best animal in Borah's train, the president was told to look over the pack and name his choice. He didn't hesitate a minute. He picked out affectionate little Skip, the liveliest and most persevering and enthusiastic dog that ever struck the trail of a bear. The president intended Skip as a gift to his son Archie, but the dog has worked himself into the affections of all the children, and each and every one claims him as his or her own.

Mr. Roosevelt loves animals, and all sorts have been presented to him, from the snarling and untamed mountain lion to the gentle, brown-eyed deer. If he had kept all the quadrupeds, both wild and domesticated, that have been forced upon him he would have the largest as well as one of the finest of the private menageries of the world.

He has done his part in the building up of the National Zoological Garden in Washington and has made contributions to other like institutions throughout the country. From his various hunts in the South and West he has frequently brought back live trophies, but has always turned them over to public zoos, not caring to start one of his own, either in the spacious grounds surrounding the White House or at his sixty-acre farm near Oyster Bay.

The president had a chance while in the mountains to get a live bear, but refused it, explaining that he was after pelts, and pets from the bear he had pulled down himself. Skip is the only live specimen of the animal kingdom that he brought back from the hunt.

The fact was announced from one end of the country to the other when President Roosevelt started East that he had with him a bear hunting dog. A great many good people thought that the animal must be one of the most ferocious of it kind, as big as a small grizzly and as strong as an ox, and that for the safety of those traveling on the presidential special train he had to be either chained or muzzled in steel and carefully watched by armed attendants.

At several stops on the return journey toward the capital anxious inquiries were made by the curious as to the whereabouts of the monster.

"He must be a bad 'un," said a farmer in Nebraska.

"Oh, no, he isn't," said a secret service man. "I'll show him to you."

Skip was then led out of the car wagging his tail and giving every other canine manifestation of friendship and joy.

"That ain't no bear hunter," said the farmer. "He's just a measley little cur."

Skip is not an awe inspiring animal, but when it comes to chasing bears he is simply a marvel. He was the pet of the Borah pack, not only because of his affectionate disposition, but also on account of his stick-to-itiveness in the chase.

He was never so happy as when the pack gave tongue for the start. He was in the bunch through all the going, and when the big hounds were winded and ready to quit Skip cried for more. He never seemed to tire out.

There were times, however, when Skip preferred to be with the hunters rather than with his own kind. On such occasions he would spring to the saddle of the president, and would hold his place there without any help from the rider. And then, out of pure joy, as the hunters slowly ascended mountain trails, or slid down the sides of the gulches, or galloped across level stretches, he would jump from saddle to saddle, making a visit to every man in the cavalcade.

"He was just a wonder at this," said Dr. Alexander Lambert of New York, who accompanied President Roosevelt on his hunt in the mountains. "Skippie was in for the fun, and he was always a dead game sport."

Ten bears and four bob cats were slain on the presidential expedition into the Rockies. Skip was in at the death of nearly all of the deceased.

The first bear made what is known in Mississippi as a walking bay, refusing for some reason or other to tree. There was an ugly fight between his bearship and the pack.

This was not Skip's idea of hunting, and he discreetly kept out of trouble. The president made a crack shot at this animal, being compelled to shoot between him and the pack. Skip didn't get a chance to distinguish himself on the first day's hunt. His time came later.

The members of the presidential party had a lively chase one day after a bear that was long on wind and speed. They were in the saddle at least ten hours, over hills, down gulches and through snow that touched the horses' bellies, and they had to cut their way through maddening mountain thickets. The pack was far in advance of the hunters, and finally bayed "Treed."

This bear was brought down by a shot from the president, but was not put out of business at once. He had a good deal of fight left in him. This was Skip's game.

The pack went for bruin with a will, the hub hounds engaging his fighting end, the head. Skip busied himself with either a hind leg or a claw, digging his teeth into one or the other, but ever ready to beat a recreat in case the bear found time to turn to fight.

After the pack had been driven off and the bear dispatched Skip was found growling furiously and rolling his eyes, at the same time nipping at or hanging on to the hind quarters of the beast. When he released his hold and got the applause which was always given he ran to the president for the approbation which he felt was due him.

He seemed to know by instinct that the president was the big chief of the party, for Skip would ride to the home camp on the saddle of Mr. Roosevelt and sit in his lap in the evenings while Jack Borah, a fact and action artist of great imaginative powers, told stories that excited the wonder and admiration of the pilgrims from the effete East.

Dr. Lambert is authority for the statement that Skip can climb a tree with the agility, if not the speed, of a wildcat.

"I do not mean to assert," said the doctor, "that Skip would go up every tree, but he had no trouble climbing a short, thick pinon pine."

The bobcat is a shifty animal, but he hasn't any sense, and when once sighted Skip's pelt is generally secured. He will sometimes cover twenty miles or more, but the run is usually shorter.

The presidential party chased one of them into a gulch one day and played tag with him up and down it for a couple of hours. He finally got into a tree and stood on a limb spitting and snarling at the hunters and the dogs below him. To show his contempt for his enemies he walked out on a rotten branch and fell in the midst of the pack, but in some unaccountable manner eluded the dogs.

He was treed for the second time in a pinon. Skip shinned up after him and the bob had to jump. He failed to make the landing and his demise followed.

In the mantime Skip was having his troubles. He was fastened in the fork of the tree and could neither get back nor go upward, and he whined piteously for help.

Dr. Lambert went to the rescue, but discovered that it was not so easy as it looked. He got hold of Skip all right, but the branches were so thick that he could not carry him down in his arms. Then a happy thought struck him.

Amid the applause of the hunters and the baying of the dogs, the New York physician took a firm hold of Skip by the neck with his teeth and descended to the ground. Phil Stewart, of Colorado Springs, another hunting companion of the president, took a snapshot of Dr. Lambert with the dog in his teeth and he said he would not take a mint for it.

On one occasion Skip showed a peevish temper. It was caused by the excitement of the hunt. This was the day that Dr. Lambert bagged four bears while the president was compelled to remain in camp on account of a slight indisposition.

The party found the tracks of an old bear and three cubs shortly after noon. The mother and one cub were sighted after a short run, and a little later they were treed and shot.

Two little black balls could be seen going up the mountain side, standing out in bold relief on the freshly fallen snow. After an hour or two of travel, the pack's tongue said "treed," and soon the hunters were up with the quarry.

In the excitement of the chase the party had divided into two bands, and Dr. Lambert, Borah and two or three mountaineers who had followed the two cubs decided to wait until the rest of the sportsmen put in an appearance. But Skip was anxious for a killing and could not understand why the function was postponed.

He stood the wait for a little, but finally broke loose. He ran round and round the tree, barking with great heat at the bears above him, and became so infuriated at the failure of the hunters to dispatch the cubs that he began tearing up with his teeth pieces of bark lying on the ground and then he snapped at the trunk of the tree savagely.

By this time the sun was sinking over the hills and it was decided to bring down the cubs without further delay. One of the yearlings reached the ground very much alive and began to fight with the dogs, and in the scrimmage Skip, with a discretion born of long experience, kept away from the head and snapped and bit at the hind quarters.

From now on Skip will lead a life of luxury and ease, spending his winters at the White House in Washington and summers on the shores of Long Island sound. The grizzly and the bobcat will be better off for his migration eastward.

It was a lonesome little black and tan that traveled from Glenwood Springs to Washington. It was his first trip on the cars and he didn't like it at all. He was homesick through and through, and absolutely unhappy unless seated in the lap of some member of the party.

From time to time the president sent for him and then Skip seemed to brace up. When put in the baggage car at night he howled as dogs will howl when they are lonesome, and he made things miserable for those sleeping in the car adjoining.

By the time he reached Washington Skip had become used to his surroundings. He has shoved aside every pet of the president's household, and the Roosevelt children would not exchange him for worlds.

HOW PEOPLE GROW.

Peculiarities of Food Processes In Human Beings.

Starch, which serves in the nutrition of almost all living creatures, is not directly assimilable, and in the higher organisms it undergoes various transformations before it can be absorbed. It first meets the enzymes—chiefly ptyalin—in the saliva, and then other ferments in the pancreatic juice, and is thus changed into Maltose, a food directly and immediately suitable for the building up of the human system. "Malta-Vita" contains from eight to ten per cent of pure Maltose, ready to be assimilated without taxing either the ptyalin of pancreatin, which are thus free to exert their digestive action upon the other food taken at the same time as "Malta-Vita." Furnished with its own natural sweetness—maltose—"Malta-Vita" is not only convenient to use, but is also delicious to the taste.

Now for many years the medical profession have prescribed semi-solid Malt Extracts which contain a large percentage of "Maltose," but which cost from fifty cents to seventy-five cents per pound. "Malta-Vita" contains from eight to ten per cent of this wonderful blood-maker and costs but ten cents per package.

The malt extracts are also valuable on account of their containing the great digestive ferment—"Diatase." In the manufacture of Malta-Vita a malt extract is used, one that has been prepared in all its original purity in our own factory, which has a diastasic equivalent of over seventy degrees by the Lintner method of analysis. This diastase acts upon the wheat and converts part of the already gelatinized starch into "Maltose"—the blood-making and therefore life-giving Malt Sugar.

Physicians have another good reason for their championship of syrupy Malt Extracts. It is that they are valuable aperients, that—in addition to their food value—they give a healthy tone to the bowels and have been found very valuable in cases of severe constipation. "Malta-Vita," with over eight per cent of maltose—this wonderful aperient—presents therefore a reason for its supremacy above all other breakfast foods, which cannot be gainsaid.

Malta-Vita is now 10 cents per package, the same big package you used to buy for 15 cents.

LAND CASES BADLY MIXED

Oregon Politicians Scheme to Prevent Punishment of Leaders.

Washington, June 8.—The government is having trouble in bringing to trial the politicians who are mixed up in the land fraud cases. A remarkable state of affairs exists out in Oregon, where Senator John A. Mitchell and a member of the house from that state have been indicted for conspiracy to defraud the government in land deals.

President Roosevelt became so concerned a couple of weeks ago over the peculiar maneuvers of influential politicians out in Portland, who were working with the evident purpose of preventing a fair trial of Mitchell and the others, that Attorney General Moody sent Assistant Attorney General Robb out there to take a look at the lay of things.

The United States judge for the Portland district, John Bellinger, recently died and there are a number of candidates for his place.

Owing to the badly mixed state of politics in Oregon, the president did not know whose recommendation to take in filling the vacancy. One of Mr. Robb's duties on his Western trip was to size up the various candidates for the federal judgeship and make a report to the Washton authorities of what he thought of them.

As the new judge will try Senator Mitchell and other conspirators, it is highly important that a man be appointed who will see that the ends of justice are not deefated. Judge de Haven of San Francisco, is now on the bench at Portland, but it is not at all certain that he will be retained there through the approaching trials. These are set for July and the president will doubtless name a man to succeed Judge Bellinger during the next two or three weeks.

It has been necassary for President Roosevelt to take extreme measures with several federal office holders in Oregon as a result of their attempts to prevent the punishment of the indicted land grafters. Former United States District Attorney Hall was pre-emptorily removed by order of the president because he showed no disposition to bring Mitchell to trial. Hall was succeeded by Francis J. Heney, who used to be a special agent, but who won his spurs by relentless tracking of the suspected men and the unearthing of the information on which the indictments were returned. A few weeks ago United States Marshal Matthews of Portland had his head chopped off by order of the president. The reason given was that Matthews was hindering the prosecution of Mitchell, whose campaign manager he used to be.

Senator Mitchell will make a desperate attempt to free himself from the charges of wrong-doing. He has engaged Ex-Senator John M. Thurston of Nebraska to defend him. Thurston is one of the best men in the country at this business. Local feeling runs high in Portland. Mitchell has many strong friends who are standing stanchly by him in his resent difficulty. Public sentiment is divided on the question of his guilt.

ERROR OF CLERK

May Help the Agricultural School at Crookston.

Crookston, Minn., June 8.—If the error of a recording clerk in the legislature last winter is not corrected, the Crookston Agricultural school, created by the Bennett bill, will receive this year $15,000 for the erection of buildings and the acquisition of property, whereas the intention of the appropriation committee of the house and senate was to make the money available in the following year, or that ending July 31, 1907.

When the bill was recorded for the supplement by the clerk, it was placed in the 1906 column, and so far no steps have been taken to correct the error, but the supplement, as printed, gives the amounts available for the Crookston school this year as $15,000. Representative B. N. Bennett of Fosston, who introduced the bill, says that as he drew it up it carried an appropriation of $15,000, not available until next year. His attention was called to the printed statement in the supplement, and he could offer no explanation other than that either the bill had been changed since leaving his hands or had been confused by the clerk.

Should the $15,000 be available this summer, work will likely be started at once. The expense of professors and current bills of the school will be met from the annual appropriation allowed by the state, according to present plans. The school, if built this summer, would draw a large amount of patronage from the farms of the northern section of the state this winter.

SEVEN MEN KILLED

Wisconsin Central Train Plunges Into Red Cedar River.

High Water Undermined Center Pier of Steel Bridge.

St. Paul, June 7.—A Pioneer Press special from Menomonie, Wis., says: Number one passenger train on the Wisconsin Central, west bound, plunged into Red Cedar river from the high steel bridge one mile west of Colfax today. Engineer Geo. Phillips, Fireman Severns, and five tramps, who were riding on the blind baggage, are missing, and are believed to be drowned. The engine, tender, baggage and mail cars went down with the bridge and are buried in the flood. The baggageman climbed out of a window and the mail clerk crawled through a ventilator as the cars plunged into the water and both had narrow escapes. The smoker stands on one end in the river. The passengers were badly bruised and shaken up, but none was fatally hurt. All climbed to the top of the cars and got out. The rest of the train remained on the track and was returned to St. Paul. The center pier of the bridge had been undermined by high water and as the train reached the middle of the bridge, it gave way and precipitated the front end of the train twenty-five feet into the river.

At the local office of the Wisconsin Central company, this morning, it was stated that no further particulars of the wreck had been ascertained, other than the information contained in the press dispatches. It was also stated that late advices from Fond Du Lac show that the water is rapidly subsiding, having dropped from five feet to only one foot in depth over the submerged district, which includes the yards and shops of the railway company. The company has not been using its own tracks to Fond Du Lac for several days, but expects that by tonight or tomorrow morning its lines will be fully opened up for use again with the exception of the locality of the wreck yesterday. The track or bridge where the wreck has occurred had not until yesterday been used for several days on account of the flood and, it is understood, the wrecked train was the first over it. The Wisconsin Central company also had an obstructed track near Medford, Wis., on account of a landslide, but a steam shovel has been in operation and the track is expected to be cleared by this evening. The landslide occurred on the Ashland division.

PASSENGER MEN COMING.

Social Session to Be Held Here June 12.

Besides the annual convention of the Western Passenger association, which occurs in Duluth in July, the city is to be visited June 12 by about forty-five of the traveling passenger agents who make this territory regularly and who are styled members of the G. A. M. B. A. Y. C. association, the full import of which is "Get As Much Business As You Can association."

The gathering will be of a social nature and will result from the invitation extended the passenger agents by W. S. Chadwick, union depot ticket agent, some time ago.

The program of entertainment will include a boulevard drive, a boat ride to Fond du Lac, and an elaborate lunch, to be followed by a b anquet in the evening at the Spalding hotel.

The Northern Pacific is just now replacing 66-pound rails with 85-pound stuff on a 12-mile stretch of track between Hinckley and White Bear. The road has 85-pound rails most of the way between here and St. Paul, but there are a number of pieces of track still fitted with the 66-pound rails. As this wears it is replaced with the heavier steel.

GOING TO MEET

High School Athletes to Leave Friday For Ironwood.

School Is Placing High Hope on Her Representatives.

The seven men who will represent the local school in the five-cornered track meet that is to be held at Ironwood next Saturday will leave for that place tomorrow afternoon.

They are, together with the events into which they will enter: Robert Smith, 100-yard, 220-yard and 440-yard dashes, half-mile run; Nelson, hammer throw, shot put, discus throw, high jump, mile and half-mile runs; Whittle, pole vault, 220-yard dash; Maginnis, high and low hurdles, high jump, broad jump, 100-yard and 220-yard dashes; Parks, hammer throw, shut put, discus throw, 220-yard dash; Clausen, mile and half-mile runs, 220-yard and 440-yard dashes; Jaques, half-mile run, 440 and 250-yard dashes.

The schools who will compete in the meet are from Ironwood, Duluth, Superior, Ashland and Bessemer. The association was formed some time ago for the purpose of furthering the interest in track athletics in the various schools, and has been of great assistance in getting the men out to train, as well as attracting the attention of the school towards the track work.

The local boys have been training steadily and consistently during the past several weeks and are in first-class shape. They have high hopes of carrying away a large share of the honors next Saturday at Ironwood.

* * *

The afternoon sessions of the high school were sadly interrupted today because of the large church fire on the corner Fourth avenue east and Third street. The first broke out during the luncheon period, and as many of the students were out to lunch, they took advantage of the opportunity to visit the scene of the fire. They were followed by a large number of those still in school, and as but very few of them returned immediately, the result was a general depletion in the recitations of the fifth and sixth periods, particularly the former.

REMOVAL OF FLAGS

To New State House Will Occur Next Wednesday.

St. Paul, June 8.—(Special to The Herald.)—The committee in charge of the exercises attendant upon the removal of the war flags from the old to the new capitol June 14, met today in the G. A. R. offices in the new building and considered the program for the day.

Between the regulars at Fort Snelling, the National guard of St. Paul and Minneapolis, the members of the G. A. R. of the state, the veterans of the Spanish war in the two cities and the school children of St. Paul, it is confidently expected that there will be 10,000 persons in the parade.

The parade will be divided into three divisions, the regulars and National guard in the first and the civil and Spanish war veterans in the second and the children an civic associations in the third.

Archbishop Ireland will receive the flags and turn them over to Governor Johnson, the custodian. The archbishop will accompany the presentation with an address which the governor will respond to.

Word has been received from many points throughout the state of G. A. R. posts which will attend the ceremonies.

"PETE" BROWNING INSANE

Louisville, June 8.—Louis Browning, known fifteen years ago under the familiar name of "Pete" Browning, as one of the greatest ball players in America, was today committed to the asylum at Lakeland, a suburb of Louisville. Some time during the latter part of his baseball career he was struck on the head with a pitched ball and to this injury is attributed his insanity.

COMMENCEMENT IV AT THE NORMAL

Graduates of Class of 1905 Presented With Their Diplomas.

Conway MacMillan of State University Delivers the Address.

This morning at 10 o'clock, the annual commencement day program of the state normal school at Duluth was given at the assembly hall of the school before a large number of the friends of the graduates. The exercises are the third in the history of the school and nineteen young women formed the class of graduates. They are:

ADVANCED GRADUATE COURSE.
Emma C. Anderson, Alice Hix Conklin, Adelaide M. Eaton, Nanna Einarson, Hilda J. Jorstad, Irene Emily Reau, Gertrude M. Schiller, Gladys Shaw, Bessie Ellen Sturges.
ADVANCED ENGLISH COURSE.
Eva Bell Dysslin.
ELEMENTARY GRADUATE COURSE.
Olive Russell Colbrath Ida Doran, Esther Harris, Minnie Perttula, Myrtle M. Stark, Eva Blanche Stevenson.
ELEMENTARY COURSE.
Mrs. Bessie Giddings, Maude A. Talboys, Eliza J. Remfry.

The platform of the hall was decorated with palms, and emblems of the classes of '05, '06, '07 and '08 were hung at the front of the hall. Upon the platform during the exercises were Prof. Conway MacMillan of Minneapolis, who delivered the commencement day address; Hon. Ell Torrance of Minneapolis of the state normal board, who presented the diplomas to the class; Resident Director J. L. Washburn, President E. W. Bohannan, Dr. Alexander Milne and Frank B. Smith of the board of education of Duluth.

The program opened with a chorus "Rise Again, O Glorious Morn," by Leslie, sung under the direction of Miss Mason. The invocation was asked by Rev. Alexander Milne, who read for the Scriptural lesson the 55th chapter of Isaiah. Another selection by the chorus "Ebb and Flow," by King, was sung. The address of the day was by Prof. MacMillan, who is of the faculty of the state university. His subject was "Some Educational Ideals," and his address, thoughtful and helpful, was listened to with interest and pleasure by his audience. He said in part:

"There is something in the atmosphere of thought that influences all who come in contact with it and although this morning someone said to me she hoped I had some good message to bring to you graduates, I hope you will believe me when I say in all seriousness that this opportunity of coming in contact with you young ladies of this class, full of enthusiasm and sure of the reality of accomplishment, will be of more value to me than to you. It is hardly fair, either, for forty to preach at twenty. I know that in my first speech given 20 years ago when I was twenty, I was so sure of the truth of what I was saying, so sure of my audience, that no doubt of my reception assailed me. Since that I have shifted into a different plane and inevitably my ideas of education have changed. Education is not easy to define.

"We all have what we call our ideals. But has it ever occurred to you that they are not in a sense our own? The thought has been expressed most beautifully by one of the French philosophers this way: 'Ideals are the sealed orders of humanity.' Our day, generation and place in the world gives us our ideals of life. Truth to one may not necessarily be truth to another and right to one need not necessarily be right to another. The ideals of one ags may differ from the ideals of another age. At times military ideals may be right to a people and again the ideals of peace be those which command their conduct. No course of action can be said to be exactly and entirely right. In noble things there may be and almost invariably is some trace of evil and in low and commonplace things something right is found.

"In the dilemma of life, man stands in two positions, as an individual, and his duty as an individual and as a member of society and his duty as a member of socity. An individual needs food, radiation and liberty. A child on a desert island fed and protected from dangers would survive and would be recognized at any time as of the genus homo. He would know, however, nothing of society, he would be one with the trees and animals regarding the latter as his brothers and sisters. As a member of society he would need more than food and protection. Man needs education to bring him to the highest degree of social success and happiness. Happiness and success are two words that we hear often. They are conditions or attainments for which many are striving. But a happy man is not necessarily a successful man nor a successful man necessarily a happy man. Happiness is an adaptation of your life to yourself and success is the adaptation of your life to your surroundings.

"In education as in life there is this fundamental and necessary dilemma; the choice mayhap between pleasure and duty. The government is seen as a factor in education, the state normal school as an example of what the state is doing in education. The church is doing work in the educational line and has accomplished much; the world of commerce is an educational factor and has accomplished much and many other things that are not usually regarded as educational factors are accomplished much in education that is of great value to men. The schools have not by any means all the ideals of education. How then are we to decide what belongs to the education as that of an individual and the education belonging to a member of society. If we mold our lives on what we think propriety demands or if we follow the method of power and strength we will miss much. But it is a hard thing to decide when to stand for one's self and when to stand for society.

"A man educated to the highest culture cuts himself off from much of life. If he is a musician he can enjoy only the masterpieces performed by masters, anything less grates upon him. If he is inclined to art, only the great galleries of the world will satisfy him. He must visit the Louvre, Naples, Florence and Milan. If he is nice in his demands of manners he will be uncomfortable many times. To know life we must come into contact with much of the coarseness and brutality. We may be advised many times to avoid every thing of evil, but this will not bring the highest ideal of conduct. Evils of the world were never cured nor made to disappear by a blind ignorance. Knowledge is power, they say, and although there is some knowledge which will never do one any good, and is not put to good use if one is to have a high ideal of conduct, he must know life from more than the standpoint of the culturist. He who ignores the common people and the wants of the common people should remember Christ in Galilee, who took them by the hand and knew completely what human life was. One has a right to know all the best that has been said and thought and written, but it should not end in only knowing, but in doing.

"Then there is the ideal of capability. Much fault is found often with the school system which devotes time to studying stars, drawing, making maps or baskets. The plaint of the business man comes here, 'Your graduates cannot spell correctly, nor add a column of figures. Cut out the star study and baskets, we don't want that, we want accountants.' This, however, is not the world of the business man. To the dreamer, the poet, the inventor, the professional man, it belongs as much as to the business man, and he has no right to insist upon simply the development of the material or capable side of life. We cannot make the culture ideal sufficient to cover all demands, and the capability ideal is equally deficient. We cannot sacrifice the individual to the social order. There never was a man or a woman like any of us before, nor will there ever be again. Each of us represents an age long evolution, and it is not a man's duty to suppress himself into some prescribed mould. We have a right to our personality. Both ideals are faulty. Neither gives the broad basis which we desire. And this brings us to the question, what is the solution? And as in many other things we must strive for the golden mean. That will offer us the great secret of life and endeavor.

"In giving the four fundamentals of education, I may surprise many of you. I would say they are physical culture, manual training, nature study and religion. By physical culture I do not merely mean calasthenics, but the training of the body so that it truly becomes the temple of the mind. The training in manner, courtesy and the adjustment of one's self with one's fellow men. This will bring skill in many ways, and skill in most any line is admirable. Although as the result of skill there remains no product, the achievement thrills us. At the end of the football contest nothing remains but the game, after a symphony is sung, nothing remains but the song, but the skill that made either one possible appeals to us. There is something personal about skill. It realizes to one's self, one's ideal.

"In manual training the result is different. In the latter we move something about. Man's hand has moved upon nature and a product results. Skill is for man alone and manual training is man moving upon nature for his fellowmen.

"In nature study, I do not mean simply the watching of a bean growing nor observing the rabbits and pussy willows, but in allowing nature to act upon us. Man is the star seeing animal. There is nothing more valuable in education to man or woman than to see the stars in the broad sense.

"In speaking of religion as a fundamental of education, I speak as a layman. If man must develop by phyical culture, by moving nature, by developing art, by looking out and letting the truth of nature come to him, he must look out upon his fellowman and his God. It is not easy to distinguish between the true and the false religion, the full and tolerant and the bigoted and narrow, but to all people religion means the sense of one's responsibilities to one's fellowmen and to one's generation. It is an essential part of every man's education. We err in not giving full and free scope to the religious instincts of people. There is no contradiction between true science and true religion.

"I hope I have been successful in making you realize that life is a complex and difficult matter, that there is a great deal more in life, in heaven and and earth than is dreamed of in any one's philosophy; that we are making the most of our lives by acquiring skill in spreading over many paths; that we may well open our eyes to the glories and beauties of nature, looking at the forest and plains, the sky and sea and the mountains and keeping close to the infinite scurce of power which alone gives life any significance."

A violin solo by Miss Spring was given before the class of graduates was presented to the Hon. Ell Torrance of the state normal board, by President Bohannan of the school. Mr. Torrance spoke very briefly to the graduates, asking simply to be remembered as the man who gave them their diplomas and gave them no advice. A selection from the "Wishing Stone" by Abt by the chorus closed the program.

KING VIEWS THE TROOPS

Alfonso Accompanies Edward and Family to Aldershot Review.

London, June 8.—For the first time since his arrival in England, King Alfonso this morning saw the sun, a bright summer day being provided for the most important function of his visit, the military review at Aldershot. The young king, wearing the uniform of a British general and King Edward in a field marshal's uniform accompanied by Queen Alexandria, the Prince of Wales, the Duke of Connaught and the princess drove to Waterloo station through brightly decorated streets, closely guarded by soldiers, and formed police and detectives and lined by cheering crowd. The two kings, the prince of Wales and the duke were accompanied by their full suites, forming a most brilliant procession.

The two kings on arriving at the camp drove to Lafans plain, where they mounted chargers and accompanied by their staffs, the members of the army council and the foreign military attaches, including Major Beacom of the American embassy, proceeded to the parade grounds. They inspected troops, followed by the whole cavalcade except the queen's carriage.

NO ATTEMPT MADE TO RUN CARS AT SAGINAW.

Saginaw, Mich., June 8.—Following the violence which yesterday marked the fourth day of the street railway employes' strike in the Saginaw valley, the street railway company made no effort to run cars today either here or in Bay City. There was no renewal of the excitement in either city today, conditions being quiet. The three men who were wounded here by a deputy sheriff yesterday are doing well today. Conferences looking to the settlement of the strike are in progress today between a citizens' committee and officials of the company and the men.

FIRE IN TUNNEL TIES UP TRAFFIC.

Denver, June 8.—Word has been received at the general offices of the Denver & Rio Grande that a fire has broken out among the timbers in the tunnel at Ruby, twenty-four miles west of Grand Junction, and has temporarily tied up traffic between Denver and Salt Lake City. The tunnel is only 580 feet in length, and arrangements have been made for transferring passengers from one side to the other. The origin of the fire is unknown, and it is fast burning itself out. It will be several days before traffic through the tunnel will be resumed.

FAVORABLE TO PEACE

Is the Present Outlook Regarding Far Eastern Situation.

Terms of Japan Likely to Be Known In Short Time.

Washington, June 8.—Pending negotiations for the promotion of peace in the Far East havo assumed within a few hours an unexpectedly favorable phase. While it might be too much to say at this moment that peace is in sight, in view of the delicacy of the exchanges now in progress, it is certain that there is greater hope now for a successful termination of the present negotiations than there has been at any time. It can be said that the result of Ambassador Meyers' audience with the czar yesterday was distinctly favorable. It has been the effort of President Roosevelt throughout the exchanges which have taken place between the United States and European powers since the battle of the Korean straits to bring Russia and Japan into such touch as would enable the two belligerents to reach a basis of common understanding. In this effort he has been supported by several of the important powers, whose influence carries weight with both the warring governments.

No details of the report made by Ambassador Meyers of his conference with the czar are obtainable at this time. The situation, however, in view of the ambassador's report, is described today as "most favorable." While the situation is "more hopeful," it can be said that, so far as is knwon here, Russia has not formally asked yet for the terms on which Japan would be willing to conclude peace, although it is not denied that she may have expressed an interest in their character, thus indicating a receptive mood. Even had such a request been made, it is certain that this government at least is not at this moment in position to state what those terms may be.

It is regarded as not unlikely, that in a general way the terms of the Japanese government may be known to the president in a few hours.

Later in the day the president is to have conferences with Minister Takahira of Japan and Sir Mortimer Durand, the British ambassador. It is possible that Minister Takahira may have information to impart to the president, received by him from Tokio in response to a cablegram which he sent to Tokio last night. At that time too, the president will communicate to Minister Takahira such part of the reported result of Ambassador Meyers' audience with the czar, as he may deem expedient.

It is quite sure that in a cablegram received by the state department from Ambassador Reid at London, the British government, however, it is realized, occupies a peculiarly declicate position, as an ally of Japan. No doubt is expressed in official and diplomatic circles, however, that King Edward's government will co-operate heartily to the extent of its power in the promotion of peace negotiations.

FIFTEEN THOUSAND

Lost or Taken Prisoner In Sea Battle.

Bunshu Pass, Manchuria, July 8.—According to reports received by Gen. Linevitch from naval officers who have arrived at Vladivostok the losses of Admiral Rojestvensky's fleet were from 9,000 to 10,000 officers and men killed or drowned, and about 5,000 prisoners.

Gen. Batjanoff, commander of the Third Manchurian army, addressing the troops, yesterday, on the occasion of the empress' birthday told them he hoped soon to be able to telegraph the news of a Russian victory to her majesty. Later in conversation with the correspondent of the Associated Press, the general declared that the defeat of the fleet was a sad and hard blow, but it would not affect the morale of the troops who with the doggedness of Russian soldiers were prepared to fight on as long as the emperor gave the word.

"If the sea is lost," he added, "Russia can still be victorious on land. Peace unless Japan is reasonable is impossible."

AGAIN DISAPPOINTED.

St. Petersburg, June 8.—Ascension day, one of the most important of Russian religious holidays, was not marked by the appearance of the expected imperial manifesto on the subject of the projected national assembly.

COL. SANDERS DYING.

Former Montana Senator In a Critical State.

Helena, Mont., June 8.—Wilbur F. Sanders, perhaps the best known resident of Montana, is reported to be lying at death's door at his residence in this city, suffering from paralysis and other afflictions.

Col. Sanders, who is department commander of the Grand Army of Montana, came to this state from Ohio, after being incapacitated during the Civil war, and has been prominently connected with its affairs ever since. He achieved first distinction as a fearless exponent of law and order, and was elected chairman of the vigilantes, which body summarily dealt with many desperadoes and murderers, both in Virginia City and Helena.

He was elected United States senator in 1889, and later was the first Republican of prominence to advocate the gold standard. He ranks among the leading lawyers of the state.

TRAIN GOES THROUGH BRIDGE NEAR BARRON.

Milwaukee, June 8.—An Evening Wisconsin special from Cumberland, Wis., says: A special freight train on the Soo road, in charge of Conductor Sperry, broke through a bridge west of Barron. Two brakemen and a fireman were injured. All the wagon bridges i nthe vicinity are washed out. There are many dangerous washouts on the Soo road.

Ridgeland, Wis., reports that Assemblyman Scott's flour mill has been washed away by the flood. Loss, $15,000.

LOWTHER IS ELECTED SPEAKER OF COMMONS.

London, June 8.—James William Lowther (Conservative) deputy-speaker and chairman of the committee on ways and means, was unanimously elected speaker of the house of commons today in succession to William Court-Gully, who recently resigned. This is the first time since 1823 that the Conservative party has been able to put one of their party in the chair. After the election the house adjourned until June 20.

THE CENSUS WORK.

A large number of Duluth people are employed elsewhere during the summer, some of them outside the state, and unless a systematic effort is made to see that all of these people are enumerated they are likely to be missed.

This would seem to be a proper line of work for the Commercial club, as an organization interested in the city's welfare, to take up and follow out. The census officers will do all they can, of course, but without something definite to work upon they can hardly do much. It will probably be necessary for somebody to make it his business to find out about such matters, and give the superintendent of the census hints upon which to work. Unless some such organization as the Commercial club takes the matter up, therefore, it is not likely to be touched, as there are few citizens likely to start out of their own accord on such an errand as this.

It is highly important that Duluth should have a full count, and that not a single resident of the city escapes enumeration. While some estimates are undoubtedly too high, it is known that the city has grown very materially since the census of 1900, when it was shown to have a population of 53,000. If the census is not thorough, and no substantial increase is shown, it would be a bitter disappointment to every citizen, and would affect the plans of people that might be thinking of locating here.

The Duluth Real Estate Exchange Tuesday took notice of the matter, and appointed a committee of two of its members to take the matter up with the Commercial club to do whatever may be possible toward ensuring a complete count. No efforts along this line will be wasted if anything at all is accomplished, for the work is highly important and necessary.

"GET WELL—KEEP WELL."

Saturday evening The Herald will begin the publication of a series of articles under the above title, which will be continued weekly for some months. The author is Edward B. Warman, A. M., who has had for many years a national reputation as a sane expert on hygiene and physical culture. He is the author of a number of health works and was formerly editor of the health department of the Ladies' Home Journal.

The Herald has just made arrangements by which it will exclusively publish these articles, and it is quite sure that those who read them will be struck by their common sense tone and by their practical value. There is nothing of the "crank" nature about them, and in every one is something that everybody ought to know; those who are ill in order to get well, and those who are well that they may keep well. The series will not be devoted to physical exercises. In fact, only three very simple exercises will be given.

Saturday the first and introductory article will be published, and on each succeeding Saturday until the end of the series, others will follow. Something of an idea of the nature of the series may be obtained from the following partial list of subjects:

Correct position and how to obtain it.
My three pet exercises.
Eating for health.
Drinking for health.
Bathing for health.
Breathing for health.
Bicycling for health.
Color of clothing as affecting health.
Underwear as affecting health.
Insulation as affecting health.
Stair-climbing as a health exercise.
How to avoid catching cold.
How to woo and win sleep in two minutes.

The Herald offers these articles believing that their practical, sensible hints will be of value to all its readers, and that they will benefit everybody who reads and observes them.

IMMIGRATION THEORIES.

The most radical of the various solutions proposed for the immigration problem is that an educational test be imposed. It would certainly be effective in keeping out a large proportion of the undesirable immigrants, for in the flood that is coming today from Austria, Russia and Italy there are comparatively few that are able to read or write their own languages. In the older days when Germany, the Scandinavian peninsula and the United Kingdom were furnishing most of the immigrants, conditions were very different, and a finer comb than an educational test would have had to be used to keep out many of them.

One theory is that common laborers are needed in this country while skilled laborers are not, and if this be accepted it is inconsistent with the educational test, which would admit the skilled laborers while keeping out the unskilled.

The proposal to increase the head tax from $2 to $25 is another remedy that would be effectual in keeping out many, if it should be adjudged to be a proper course.

But while paupers are distinctly not wanted, the mere ability to pay a head tax of $25 does not conclusively argue desirability in the immigrant, nor does inability to pay prove undesirability as an absolute rule.

One advantage in the advanced head tax, suggested by the Brooklyn Eagle, is that the receipts could be used in forming a new department of the immigration bureau, the purpose of which would be to see that the immigrants go to the places where they are needed and keep away from the places where their presence simply means an increase in poverty and distress. The suggestion is a good one, and in view of the fact that most of the immigrants now go to the wrong place, it is one that might well be followed whether an increased head tax provided funds for it or not. The South today is standing with open arms, anxious that thousands of laborers should come its way, while the North, with a superfluity already, is willing they should go to help the upbuilding of the South. But for want of proper direction, and following the trails blazed for them by their fore-runners, they still flock to the cities and mining regions of the North.

To first keep the helpless immigrants away from the cities and then to direct them to places where they could find plenty of work and where they would be welcome, is a useful function, and one that should be made a part of the duties of the bureau of immigration as soon as may be. It will do more toward solving the problem than any one other suggestion that has been made.

WELCOME, B. P. O. E.!

The B. P. O. E.—which being interpreted is Best People on Earth—are warmly welcome to the B. T. O. E.—which being interpreted is Best Town on Earth.

The Herald takes special pleasure in welcoming to the city the delegates from the Elk lodges of the state, who are gathered here today in state convention. Outside of the esoteric intricacies that prevail "upon the inside" of the lodge room, which the public knows nothing about, there are things about the B. P. O. E. that do come to the public knowledge, and they are creditable. The Elks are known for good fellowship, for the warm hand-clasp of friendship, for the helping hand in distress, and for a thousand quiet deeds of charity of which the world may learn, but not for the tens of thousands of kindly deeds of which it never hears.

For the charity of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks is of the order laid down by Him who said: "Let not thy right hand know what thy left hand doeth." The Elk does his charitable acts with much of the stealth of the man that commits a depredation, and apparently with almost as much fear of detection. Every year thousand of widows and orphans have their lots in life softened by the charity of the Elks. They are the unknown benefactors of the needy in every city. And it is all done with an unostentatiousness that robs it of all suspicion of a desire for effect, leaving nothing but the true nobility of the order and its membership to account for it.

Of them we might say with Dryden: "Their tribe are God Almighty's gentlemen," and to them we do say with the psalmist: "Peace be within thy walls, and prosperity within thy palaces."

THE YELLOW PERIL.

There is a good deal of tommyrot talked about the yellow peril, it seems to The Herald. As near as can be ascertained by a cautious analysis of the arguments of those who fear it, they imagine that if the Japs win in their fight with Russia—as they seem almost certain to do—it will convert Japan into a world power to be reckoned with, that the Japs will stir up the Chinese, and that between them, with their countless millions of fighting men, they may overrun the world as the Goths and Vandals did in an earlier day, and crush out the white man.

If they do, it will be because they ought to. If the white man cannot withstand the yellow man, it will be because the white man is not fit to survive. The doctrine of the survival of the fittest is as applicable to races as it is to anything. The fittest race will survive, and the weaklings among races will always go to the wall to make way for the progress of races more fit to lead. If the white man cannot hold the yellow man, with his new-found civilization, in check, it will be because he has deteriorated while the yellow man has progressed.

To argue a danger in the "yellow peril" is to argue a lack of confidence in the stamina of the white man. That lack of confidence, if it exists, is not justified by the facts. All that the Jap has acquired in the way of civilization he has acquired from the white man. If he has, in taking in civilization, had sense enough to reject civilized vices, that is to his credit, and it may be necessary for the white man to take some lessons from him in that respect.

If the yellow races take the lead in the world, and push the white races into a subordinate position, it will be a survival of the fittest. But The Herald does not believe that the yellow races are the "fittest," and it still has confidence in the stability and superiority of the white man. True, it might result that the white man would have to fight for his supremacy, but the result would not be in doubt, and even the chances of there being such an issue are extremely remote.

There is no yellow peril.

Hotel Gossip.

"The Norwegians certainly severed their connection with Sweden and dethroned the king in the coolest manner possible," said C. D. O'Brien of St. Paul at the Spalding last night. "It was something out of the usual for so important an action.

"The action of the Norwegians is reflex; those in the old country have become imbued with the spirit of those on this continent. Thousands and thousands of Norwegians emigrate to this country every year, but they continue to hold communication with their relatives and friends in the native land. Those here soon acquire Republican ideas, and they communicate them to their friends across the seas. Then a large number of Norwegians become well-to-do here, and some even wealthy and attain positions of honor and dignity. They are able to take occasional trips to the land of their birth and there transport their republican ideas. Of course, this reflex theory of mine is a guess. I wouldn't possibly swear that is the prime cause of the present separation.

"Norway has been turbelent for some time. There has been no display of arms, but the Norwegians have never felt cohesive to Sweden. While the two people are nearly the same race there are individual characteristics which keep them apart. One thing we may expect, is that both Swedes and Norwegians in this country will take active part in the solution of the problem in Scandinavia. The Scandivnavians here will act in an advisory capacity. They are very clannish, those on this side keeping in close touch with the other Ide.

"I do not think that Sweden and Norway will come to arms. They will settle the matter in an orderly and quiet manner. It is not in them to rush to arms. History does not show that they have engaged in many wars. Of course, the Norsemen were of the fighting spirit, but the descendents do not have the same motives to impell them to battle. I do not think that there is any likelihood of their coming to war. Even if they did, the other European countries would not permit it."

Mr. O'Brien, while being engaged in the practice of law and a leading Democratic spirit in the state, is also a student of history. He likes to read the "History of Nations," and is particularly interested in the history of the Celt.

"I always like to come to Duluth," he added. "The Head of the Lakes is a soft spot with me. I visited Superior in 1857, and settled at Bayfield. Mr. McGilvray is city engineer here, isn't he? The governor made him a colonel on his staff. They met on a fishing trip in my party and the governor fell in love with the Duluth engineer."

"The strike is doing incalculable harm to Chicago," said Walter W. Isaacs of Chicago, at the St. Louis last night. "The loss will aggregate in the millions of dollars before the trouble is ended.

"I have not been in Chicago myself for the past month. It is the only strike of any consequence which has happened there that I have not been present to witness. But I can tell how it affects Chicago by traveling through the country. The trouble is having a harmful effect on the merchants. They express the fear that if they give an order to a Chicago salesman the goods will not be delivered on time. Representatives of competitive houses in other cities are not slow to take advantage of the opportunity by asserting that goods cannot be delivered from Chicago while the present trouble is on. There is no truth in that statement for Chicago firms are able to deliver their goods to the depots with the usual dispatch and promptness. At the start the express packages were delayed somewhat, but they are moving along in the usual manner now.

"The strike is also keeping many merchants away from Chicago. The time is now approaching when they go into the cities and purchase their stock. While they do not expect that they will fall into the hands of the strikers, they are not exceedingly anxious to run any risks. They keep away so that there should not be the slightest possibility of getting into trouble. The strike is also producing a bad effect on the retail houses. Women do not care particularly to go out shopping when they know they might run into a band of disgruntled strikers. There is no trouble there now, from what I see in the papers, and conditions are gradually improving. But until the trouble is quashed absolutely there will be no safety from possible outbreak.

"This is my first visit to Duluth. I am waiting between trains, having survived some washouts on the Wisconsin Central and living in the hope of getting some mail. Duluth gives me the impression of being a hummer. I have not been able to go around much yet, but from what I have gathered it is a prosperous town. It is bound to thrive and have a future. It has every chance to do so. With the excellent harbor and the resources in the contiguous territory it cannot help but develop."

"I feel exceedingly sorry for that girl, Nan Patterson," remarked B. F. Mason of Chicago, at the Lenox last night. "I am not aware that I ever saw her, but from the accounts I have read, her's seems to be a hard fate.

"Some people decry the fact that she had a great deal of nerve in going back to the stage and exhibit herself to the public. What was the poor girl going to do? A manager comes along and offers her a large salary. The expense of the trial was not slight, and in order to pay she eagerly accepts the manager's offer.

"The public was opposed to her at Reading and an injunction was made preventing her from appearing. They give the hard, cold shoulder at New York, and she is compelled to forsake the stage. She goes back to her father at Washington, as she always said she would do."

"This has crtainly been a stunning fine day," he continued. "It reminds me of the balminess of the climate at Chicago, I don't think. We had only two such days all last summer at the Windy City. Chicago should not hold a menopoly on that title, however. I notice you have some wind here occasionaly. Well, it is the same with all the lake cities. They are bound to have an occasional inspiration in the nature of a ripping nor'easter."

The Weather.

The Elks from other places in Minnesota who are visiting Duluth today, and the other strangers within our gates, should not think because this is such a delightful day that it was arranged especially for their benefit. This is the kind of weather Duluth has most of the time, with an occasional change merely to prevent monotony. Of course this does not mean that the same type of day prevails in December, as there is a special brand for the winter months, no less lovely in its own peculiar way.

That northeast wind feared yesterday did not show up, but no great regrets have been expressed about it. This morning, with a delightful breeze from the southwest, the day broke as clear and dainty as a cameo wrought by the hand of a master. It was the kind of day when nothing else but just being alive was necessary to pure enjoyment. It was such a day as only Minnesota can produce and of the variety that can only be found in the lake country. The sun shone pleasantly, the breezes blew gently, the birds sang joyously and there seemed to be nothing evil or troublesome anywhere.

The northeast winds are due tonight and tomorrow, however, according to the weather man, and they will be accompanied by cooler weather and showers.

It was cool in the New England states and in Nevada this morning, but warm elsewhere. Low pressure areas overlie Montana and the Florida coast.

Following were the highest temperatures recorded during the twenty-four hours ending at 7 o'clock this morning, as reported by the weather bureau:

PASSING PLEASATRIES.

Philadelphia Ledger: "I suppose you have already picked out a profession for your little boy."

"Oh, yes; he's to be either a great piano player or a football player. He's got the liveliest head of hair."

Judge: Casey—An' Kelly's lasht wurds wuz, "Oi wish Oi cud live two days longer."

Riley—An' for what?

Casey—So he could see how many hacks wud be at his funeral.

Washington Star: "It costs much more than it used to," said the pessimist, "for the average man to live."

"Yes," answered the optimist, "but he lives much better."

New York Press: Husband (breathlessly)—I must rush off on very short notice for an extended trip and I can take you along if you can get ready. Do you think you can do it in two hours and a quarter?

Wife—Easily. I can pack the trunk in five minutes and that will leave me two hours and ten minutes to dress.

Chicago Tribune: Stranger—You seem to be always having some kind of trouble here.

Citizen—My dear sir, we make a specialty here of having all the kinds of trouble there are.

Philadelphia Press: Caller—Isn't your mother in, Ethel?

Ethel—No, ma'am; she's down town.

Caller—Shopping?

Ethel—Oh, no, I don't think she had time for that. She just said she was going to get some things she needed.

Is No Such War.

Kansas City Times: The recent decline in stocks is explained by the Commercial and Financial Chronicle as due to the "undisguised war against capital in all its various forms."

Very likely this reasoning is consoling to the financiers who have been bulling the market. They would dislike to think that overspeculation has had anything to do with the decline. Besides, it is comforting to regard such events as the recent happenings in Philadelphia as a "war against capital." Some persons might attribute the decline in United Gas Improvement stock from 118 to 92 within a fortnight to the frustrating of the proposed grab. It is much pleasanter for men in the deal to treat it as simply due to the hostility of capital.

Only an inconsiderable number of Americans have any grudge against capital. The "undisguised war" is not against capital, but against abuses sometimes connected with it—against corrupt and unjust practices. It is curious that so many financiers should be blind to so obvious a fact.

How Crocker Stopped Spellbinders.

New York Sun: "Talking of some long speeches at public dinners," said a Tammany sachem, "reminds me of Richard Croker. Ex-Tax Commissioner Shea was complaining at the Democratic club one night that William Sulzer had wrecked the program of one of his meetings by talking for an hour when he had asked for only five minutes.

Croker asked Shea: "Why did you let him?"

To Shea's reply that nobody could stop Sulzer, Croker said:

"We had an effective method in the old days. The front row of seats was occupied by men who were armed with sponges. Within reach of them was a pail filled with water. When they thought the speaker had said enough or hadn't made good, in their opinion, they dipped the sponges in the pail and at the word fired them at the speaker like so many shells. I never knew it to fail in bringing a speaker to a full stop. The knowledge that the sponges were there and the sight of the pail of water was usually enough to keep the speakers within bounds."

A very pleasant sociable was given by the ladies of the Methodist church at the residence of L. A. Barber on Wednesday evening.

A lodge of Odd Fellows is to be instituted at Tower, and a delegation from the Duluth lodge will conduct the ceremonies of institution.

John Miller has begun work on Second street between First and Second avenues west on a dwelling house to be 24 by 40 feet in ground size.

W. L. Huntington spent a day in the wilds of Wisconsin this week and shot a bear weighing about 390 pounds. His glossy black skin alone weighed thirty-four pounds.

Dr. Collins has been sued for $10,000 by Tom Whittaker for malpractice. Whittaker's attorneys are White & Reynolds, and the doctor is to be defended by Allen & Parkhurst. Nearly a year ago Whittaker had some trouble which resulted in a broken leg and he claims that Dr. Collins in treating it did him great and unnecessary injury. Dr. Collins styles the prosecution a malicious piece of nonsense.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Red Wing Republican: Fairmont wants a Koch trial before they are all gone. Don't worry. There will probably be enough to go around.

Mankato Free Press: The day you neglected to read the want ads you "dropped a stitch"—probably the stitch that would have "saved nine."

St. Cloud Times: It was probably "enlightened self-interest" which made the protected hogs put "their feet in the trough."

Eveleth Mining News: Creamery butter has come down to 28 cents and we are in hopes of purchasing some of that desirable commodity if we live long enough.

Walker Pilot: We don't wish to "knock" Walker as a summer resort, but we can't help make mention of the fact that two mosquitoes were seen sharpening their bills on a grindstone the other day, getting ready for the summer boarder.

Park Rapids Clipper: Five million boys of each generation are needed by the saloons each generation to keep the business going. Is your boy one of the many?

Red Lake Falls Gazette: Breathes there one with soul so dead who never to himself hath said, "I'll pay, before I go to bed, the debt I owe the printer?" There are some, we know full well, who never such a tale can tell; but they, we fear, will go to, well, the place where there's no winter.

Fairmont Sentinel: There is a remarkable absence of complaint and criticism of Gov. Johnson, and instead the press and the people are almost unanimously commending and praising almost everything he does. The truth is, there are no grounds for criticism. Gov. Johnson is giving the state an administration that is able, judicious, strong, clean and above reproach, and we doubht if a man exists that voted for him but is glad he did so.

Red Lake Courier: National politics is quiet this week. Jim Tawney hasn't given the president a piece of his mind recently.

Owatonna Chronicle: Party organization is a good thing. Some men, however, seem to confound the term with party dictation.

Milaca Times: Canadian lands have taken a big drop, and many a settler there is wishing he was back in Minnesota.

Is It Worth While?

Is it worth while that we jostle a brother
Bearing his load on the rough road of life?
Is it worth while that we jeer at each other,
In blackness of heart, that we war to the knife?
God pity us all in our pitiful strife!

God pity us all as we jostle each other;
God pardon us all for the triumphs we feel
When a fellow goes down with his load on the heather,
Pierced to the heart; words are keener than steel,
And mightier far for woe or for weal.

Were it not well in this brief little journey
On over the isthmus, down into the tide,
We give him a fish instead of a serpent,
Ere folding the hands to be and abide
Forever and aye in dust at his side?

Look at the roses saluting each other!
Look at the herds all at peace on the plain!
Man, and man only, makes war on his brother,
And laughs in his heart at his peril and pain,
Shamed by the beasts that go down on the plain.

Is it worth while that we battle to humble
Some poor fellow soldier down in the dust?
God pity us all! Time left soon will tumble
All of us together, like leaves in a gust,
Humbled, indeed, down in the dust.

—Joaquin Miller.

How It Works.

New York Evening Post: In the window of a Broadway jeweler there is displayed a line of American-made watches tagged with the price, and this price is more than $2 cheaper than that at which these watches may be purchased at wholesale from the manufacturers. The line of watches is a commentary upon the vagaries of the tariff system, because the fact is the watches have been bought in England, at probably a small advance upon the export price, which is much lower than the domestic price, and brought back to New York duty free, as an American product. Therefore they can still be sold at the low figure and yield a profit.

Right Sort of Start.

St. Cloud Journal-Press: There is a great deal in getting the right sort of a start. Minnesota was most fortunate in the character of her pioneer settlers. They represented the best blood of New England, Ireland, France, Germany and Scandinavia. They came to the North Star state possessed with a determination to make themselves homes, and they had the courage and energy that subdued the frontier, eliminated the Indians, and made this one of the great and prosperous states of the Union. For these conditions we are indebted to the first settlers in an utmost unmeasurable degree. It is an inspiring sight to see these pioneers meet in convention and tell of their early struggles and recall the events that are now historic. It must be real satisfaction to these men and women who came to Minnesota forty-five and fifty years ago to see the wonderful development that has taken place in these few years, knowing that they were important factors in what has been accomplished.

THE LAND OF JUNE.

Now the ships are coming homeward in the day's end
And the sunset sheen is red upon their sails,
As they swiftly dip and fill, while the scuppers flush and spill,
And the aumgry foam is scattered on the rails.
They are laden with the cargoes of the Winter—
Gold and silver, silken tapestries of worth—
For the pleasant land of June and her shining silver moon,
They have brought the fairest treasures of the earth.

They shall anchor in her harbors of desire,
And their weary crews shall land upon her soil;
They shall take their well-earned rest at the ending of the quest,
Cry a truce to all the sullen days of toil.
They shall give us well, with all the joy of giving,
Of their bounty to the country of their birth;
For the pleasant land of June and her shining silver moon,
They have brought the fairest treasures of the earth.

—J. O. TRYON, in New York Times.

His Fervent Wish.

There was a man in Poughkeepsie who, according to Marshall P. Wilder, enjoyed the reputation of being one of the hardest drinkers in that vicinity.

Bill's propensity to overindulge was the source of a great deal of anxiety and trouble to his wife. After many attempts she finally induced him to sign the pledge. He got along well for some days, not touching a drop. In course of this period of abstinence he chanced to meet an old friend, who proposed a "smile."

"I've sworn off," said Bill, with a visible effort.

"You're a liar!" was the response of the friend.

Whereupon Bill smiled grimly. "God knows I hope you're right!" he muttered fervently.

Stumped.

Kansas City Times: A diminutive newsboy came running down Eleventh street from Grand avenue towards Walnut, yelling "Extry!"

"Hey, Billy," called another newsboy across the street, "tell 'em what it's about."

The little fellow heard him and considered the advice good.

"Extry!" he yelled as he hastened away. "All about Togo whippin' Roj—Roj—Roj—whippin' the feller who wus fightin' him!"

The Race of Man.

Like leaves on trees the race of man is found,
Now green in youth, now withering on the ground;
Another race the following spring supplies;
They fall successive, and successive rise.
—HOMER, Trans. of Pope.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: A girl likes to be bossed before marriage and a man not to be afterward.

A woman's idea of aiding a charity is to give a dollar for a chance to play bridge, that she is crazy to play anyway, and to win a $20 prize.

If the owner of an automobile had to run it like a trolley car motorman, to make a living, he would want to go on strike and quit just like him.

A poor man can have a much better time thinking how much fun he could have if he were rich than a rich man has thinking how much he had when he was poor.

Japanese National Anthem.

Until this grain of sand,
Tossed by each wavelet's freak,
Grow to a cloud-girt peak,
Towering above the land;
Until the dewy flake,
Beading this blossom's gold
Swell to a mighty lake—
Age upon age unfold,
Joy to joy manifold,
Add for our Sov-reign's sake.
—Translated for the Japan Weekly Mail.

Both Did the "Savab."

From the Persian: One day a traveler came to a well, where he diamounted, fastened his animal to a pin and satisfied his thirst. As he returned to his animal it occurred to him that would be a "savab" (work of merit) to leave the pin behind for other travelers who might wish to tether their beasts. The next to arrive was a man on foot, who, being very thirsty and in a hurry, fell over the pin. This man threw the pin down the well, so as to prevent anyone else from having a similar accident. A learned man in the district was asked which of the two did the "savab." He answered: "Both for their intentions were equally good."

Lucky Dog!

An astronomer does not hail the discovery of a new star with any more enthusiasm than the average physician displays over a new or rare disease. It was in this spirit that Sir Frederick Treves received the account of ailments which a distinguished patient gave him. "Let me congratulate you," he is reported as saying; "you have, you lucky dog, a disease which was thought to be extinct."

MONEY WITH NO CLAIMANT

Neither Side to a Damage Case Will Take It.

Grand Forks, June 8.—Some place between St. Paul, Cass Lake and Grand Forks a package containing $500 in greenbacks is being buffeted about.

The package was sent from the Great Northern offices in St. Paul to Mrs. J. B. Walsh at Cass Lake. She returned it after consulting with her attorney, and the package was promptly refunded to her. She then sent the package to her attorney in this city, and he forwarded it to the Great Northern officials, and it is understood or expected that it is on its way back to Mrs. Walsh at Cass Lake.

The amount is supposed to be a full payment to Mrs. Walsh for the loss of a husband. J. B. Walsh was killed in the Great Northern yards at Larimores several months ago. He stepped upon the footboard of an engine, and owing to the absence of the footboard, or back of the footboard, he stepped through under the wheels and was crushed to death. Mrs. Walsh started an action against the Great Northern company to recover $25,000, retaining George A. Bangs of this city to look after her interests. The action was on motion of the company transferred from the district court to the federal court.

Mrs. Walsh lives at Cass Lake and she was at once the subject of much solicitude on the part of strange men who visited her at her home and gave her advice. Finally one was more persuasive than the others had been, and before she realized what she had done she accepted $500 and signed a document releasing the Great Northern company from any liability for the death of her husband.

Then she notified her attorney, and told him of the transaction, with the result that the money was returned and the package of bank notes has since spent most of the time on the road between St. Paul, Cass Lake and Grand Forks. Mrs. Walsh's attorney says the representatives of the railroad company by false statements induced her to accept the money and sign the release.

When the case is called for trial in the federal court the first fight will be on the release which Mrs. Walsh claims to have signed under a misapprehension.

Milwaukee, Wis., June 8.—The brief containing official notification of his appointment as bishop of the new diocese of Superior reached Vicar General A. F. Shinner through the mails yesterday morning. The notification is written in black ink on parchment, is signed by Cardinal Macchi, secretary of briefs, and bears the seal of the fisherman. The arrangements will now be put under way for the consecration of Father Shinner.

ARREST FOR MURDER

Of Ole Martinson, Squatter Living Near Hallock.

Hallock, Minn., June 8.—Ole Martinson, a squatter living about thirty miles northeast of here, was brought in by the sheriff yesterday afternoon, charged with murder.

One day last week Mary Olsen was shot, eighteen double-B shots entering her head. Dr. Shaleen of this place was called and has been in attendance ever since. On Friday he made a call and found the patient doing well, but yesterday word was brought that death had ensued, and Coroner Lockwood left at once. Circumstances warranted an inquest and the jury brought in a verdict of murder.

The person in charge of Mrs. Olson says that he left her very comfortable, and was gone but a few hours, and on his return found her dead. The neighbors have been suspicious of Martinson from the first, and developments have been looked for from the date of the shooting.

Martinson says the shooting was purely accidental. His case will come up in district court, which convenes next week.

SUICIDE AT MANKATO.

Outhoudt of Winnebago City Kills Himself.

Mankato, Minn., June 8.—Walter Outhoudt drew a revolver while standing on the sidewalk on Cherry street, in the business district, at 11:45 yesterday forenoon, and shot himself in the forehead, dying in about an hour. He was 55 and had a wife and three children at Winnebago City. His father is a wealthy resident of Randall, this state. Questioned as to his motive for shooting himself, he said, he did it for his family. No reason for the suicide is known here.

COMMISSIONERS TO IGNORE LAW

May Pay No Attention to Courthouse Commission Act.

See a Technicality Which Will Defeat Its Purpose.

Yesterday afternoon the county attorney was instructed by the county board to begin condemnation proceedings for the site on the upper side of Second street and Third avnue west.

The commissioners intend to go right ahead and build the new courthouse without taking the steps necessary under the new law to provide for the appointment of a special courthouse commission.

In doing this the commissioners, so far as can be learned from their expressed opinions, believe that they are acting entirely within their rights, powers and privileges and "under the old law instead of the new one," as one of the members of the board stated yesterday afternoon.

That the act of legislature providing for a special courthouse commission was distasteful to the members of the St. Louis county board is no secret. The commissioners opposed the bill by resolution before it was passed and criticized it with some resentment afterdward, with some exceptions, one or two of the county board members expressing themselves as indifferent as to whether the board or a special commission built the new courthouse.

The position of the county commissioners is this: They do not consider the new law providing for a special courthouse commission operative until the board passes a resolution declaring the necessity for a new building and fixing the amount that may be expended for the purpose. If the board never passes that resolution it is figured that the special commission need never be appointed and the members of the county board feel that they are acting entirely within the law in going ahead and condemning and purchasing a site for the new building and superintending its construction.

When the new law was framed its originators neglected to state that the board must pass a resolution stating the need of a new building or to fix a date when a commission should be appointed. It was simply stated that whenever the board, in its judgment decided that a new courthouse and jail building were necessary it may pass a resolution to that effect to be followed by the appointment of a special commission.

The resolution introduced by Commissioner McInnis and adopted, with Commissioner Kugler casting the single dissenting vote, declares that it is necessary to acquire for St. Louis county as a site for a new courthouse and jail building the West Second street lots, and that as the board is unable to purchase the land at a reasonable price the county auditor shall deliver a certified copy of the resolution to the county attorney, whose duty it shall be to go ahead with condemnation proceedings to acquire the desired site.

Another important measure passed on by the county board yesterday afternoon was a resolution accepting the proposition of some forty delinquent taxpayers for assessments and levies made prior to 1899, under a law passed by the last legislature and applicable to this county.

The amount involved in the compromise proposed and accepted is between $6,000 and $7,000, and means that a large amount of "dead" property in this city and some in other parts of the county will again go on the tax-paying list.

The law has been effective but a short time, and the manner in which the delinquent owners are coming in and offering to pay up a compromise basis is regarded as a most favorable sign by the county's legal and auditing department. The measure is especially effective as regards a large amount of lands in the western end of the city that have not been paying any taxes for years past, and which hereafter may be considered live property on the assessment roll.

Under the provisions of the new law the delinquent taxpayers file written proposals. It is provided that all lands secured for taxes levied prior to 1899 and not sold or assigned to the actual purchasers before the passage of the act may be redeemed upon the payment of the taxes on the basis of the taxes for 1904 multiplied by the number of years delinquent. Delinquent taxes levied prior to 1898 are settled on a basis of one-half the assessment or taxes for 1904 multiplied by the number of years delinquent plus the full tax for 1898 and subsequent years, in full, and 20 per cent of all assessments prior to 1898, without interest.

The basis of settlement exceeds 20 per cent of the selling value of the properties and when approved by the county auditor and the payments have been accepted by the county treasurer absolute deeds will be issued to the owners of the property.

In explaining the matter to the board, Assistant County Attorney Crosby stated that the idea is to get the owner to pay up and keep the property on a taxpaying basis hereafter. He said he would not recommend the settlement in cases where the applicant is not the owner or is not interested in the property but is merely a tax title purchaser, that his latter class ought not to be favored on this basis.

The period during which the delinquent owners can come in and compromise under the new law only lasts six months.

An echo of the Mox incident was noted yesterday, when Commissioner Kugler presented the name of Frank Mox among others for confirmation as road foreman in his district. In the discussion which followed several members expressed their disapproval of the idea of reappointing Mr. Mox and Mr. Kugler stoutly maintained that he was entitled to the confidence of his colleagues, and that, at all events, he was responsible for the road matters in his own district. Mr. Kugler further maintained that the jury had acquitted Mox, and that the latter was one of the best foremen he ever had.

When the vote was taken, Commissioner Kugler's appointments were turned down by a vote of 5 to 2. At the suggestion of Commissioner Ryan, Commissioner Kugler then struck Mox's name from the list and the other appointees were confirmed. These were M. Martinson, Thomas Stock, Charles Berg and J. M. Carlson.

Commissioner Kugler was also given $5,700 out of the special road fund for his district, the money to be spent as follows in improving the roads: Rice Lake, $500; Lakewood, $500; Normanna, $1,000; Tischer, $500; Vermilion, $1,000; East Duluth and Lester River, $1,200; West Knife River, $500; Fish Lake, $500.

• • •

Commissioner Morcom secured from the special road fund for improvement of the roads in his district an appropriation of $1,700 to be spent as follows: Pike River road, in 15-16, $300; Tower and Ely, $800; Miller Trunk, $600.

• • •

The board confirmed Commissioner Kauppi's road foremen appointments, as follows: Seville, John Peterson; Swan Lake at Floodwood, William Gustafson; Payne and Whiteface, D. O. Anderson; Swan Lake, west of Alborn, William Schram; Albert Miller and Joe Bristow; New Duluth and Fond du Lac, Ole Miller.

• • •

Commissioner Ryan's appropriation from the special road fund was $800, to be spent on the roads as follows: Eveleth and Iron Junction, $500; Cory, $100; town line extension, $200. The road foremen confirmed were in the order of roads named, Louis Oust, William Dougherty and Andrew Quahl.

• • •

Commissioner McInnis' share of the special road fund for the improvement of the highways in his district was $6,650, to be divided as follows: Embarass and Pike River west, $500; same road east, $400; McKinley and Virginia, $700; Virginia and Pike River, $1,500; McInnis, $600; Miller trunk, $200; Virginia and International, $1,400; old Vermilion south, $300; same road north, $350; Grant, $700.

The road foremen confirmed were Alex Polo, W. G. Dundas, C. Bestrom, Ed Edholm, J. Shea, F. J. Lowens, S. J. Benneson, Albert Lax and W. H. Haenke.

Ten applications were filed with the board for the newly created position of mine inspector. W. H. Harvey of Eveleth was elected on the second ballot, the other candidates being Thomas J. Nichols, A. H. Bawden, Herman Antonelli, Claude McKenzie, A. S. Penna, W. J. Bosanko, Richard Cudlipp, Thomas J. Murphy and William Redmond. All of the applicants stated they had had considerable experience in mining work both in this state and elsewhere.

The salary of Mr. Harvey was fixed at $2,000 per year and he is to be allowed traveling expenses not to exceed $300 per year.

• • •

W. A. Anderson, who for some time past has been employed in the register of deeds' office was, on recommendation of Register of Deeds M. C. Palmer, appointed deputy registrar of titles, the appointment falling under the provision of a new law. Mr. Anderson's salary was fixed at $100 per month. The necessity of a deputy to attend especially to the registrations under the Torrens system has been made necessary by the large increase in that class of business. The last legislature increased the fees of the office of registrar and the receipts now show a corresponding increase, the business of last month amounting to over $100.

• • •

Before the adjournment yesterday afternoon Commissioner Kugler made a vigorous speech in which he claimed that there had been a large number of things purchased for the court house or the jail of which he as one of the committee on purchasing and supplies knew nothing about. He protested vigorously against that method of doing business.

The next meeting of the board will be held July 7.

DIES FROM LOCKJAW

Death Caused By Wound Received From Rusty Nail.

Lockjaw or tetanus, caused by stepping on a rusty nail, caused the death of Charles, the 6-year-old son of Henry Dworschak of 914 East Sixth street, foreman of The Herald, at St. Mary's hospital about 10:15 o'clock last evening.

One day last week the boy was playing about his home with a number of companions, when he stepped on a rusty nail which was projecting from an old shingle which had been torn off the house, preparations being made to put on a new roof.

The little fellow was carried into the house and the wound dressed. It was apparently healing up on Saturday, but on Monday alarming symptoms began to develop and Dr. McCuen was summoned.

Anti-tetanus serum was administered, and for a time the child apparently rallied, but last evening there was a decided change for the worse, and he was taken to St. Mary's hospital. Shortly after arriving there the child's jaws locked rigidly, and he died in great agony about an hour and fifteen minutes later.

The physician stated last evening that the serum had been administered too late to save the child's life.

The funeral will be held Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the home and interment will be at Forest Hill cemetery.

CURTAILMENT OF EXPENSES

Of a Sweeping Nature Voted By Directors of Equitable.

New York, June 8.—Resolutions suggesting radical reforms in the management of the Equitable Life Assurance society were adopted at yesterday's meeting of the directors. These affect all the high officials and presage a sweeping curtailment of the society's general expenses. The resolutions also imply many important changes in the financial policy of the society.

Last week's nominating committee of seven which had been reduced to two by reason of the resignations of D. O. Mills, John A. Stewart, A. J. Cassatt, T. Jefferson Coolidge and Robert T. Lincoln, was reconstructed as follows: August Belmont, Louis Fitzgerald, Chauncey M. Depew, New York; James B. Forgan of Chicago, and David H. Moffat of Denver.

This committee was requested to submit a candidate for chairman of the board at an adjourned meeting of the directors called for Friday afternoon next.

Yesterday's session was attended by twenty-eight of the remaining thirty-eight directors, the resignations of Joseph T. Low and Marvin Hughitt, the latter of Chicago, having been submitted during the meeting and making a total of twelve resignations since last Friday.

A majority of those present have from the ountset been on the side of Vice President Hyde. Among the so-called neutrals or conservatives present were Brayton Ives, the only remaining member of the defeated Frick committee and Charles Stewart Smith.

From all accounts there was complete harmony of action between the Alexander and Hyde forces, all the resolutions being unanimously adopted. It was again denied, however, that any "coalition" of these factions had been affected.

JOCKEY HILDERBRAND WILL BE REINSTATED.

New York, June 8.—Jockey Eugene Hilderbrand, who established last season a new record for winning mounts, will be allowed, it is understood, to resume riding when the meeting at Sheepshead bay opens, one week from today. Hildebrand was suspended recently for the remainder of the Gravesend meeting by the stewards presiding, because of his handling of H. P. Whitney's Duenna in a race won by a heavily backed filly named Last Cherry.

Thorough investigation followed reference of the case to the Jockey club, and it is now said the lad has been practically exonerated of any wrongdoing. He claimed at the time that one of his stirrups broke, preventing him from riding out the Whitney horse.

LIVELY RACE

Is on In the Building of Battleships.

New York, June 8.—In the race between the government and private contractors in the building of battleships the government has taken the lead and, if it can keep it up, many of the ships of the new navy will be built in navy yards.

Naval Constructor Baxter, in charge of the construction of the battleship Connecticut at the Brooklyn navy yard, announces that the vessel is 77.73 per cent completed, while her sister ship, the Louisiana, being built by the Newport News Shipbuilding company, is but 77.50 per cent completed.

The workmen of the Brooklyn navy yard took the lead yesterday, and are extremely proud of .., as work was started on the Louisiana one month before that on the Connecticut.

COUNCIL POWERLESS

To Legislate Against the Childless Flat.

Chicago, June 8.—The childless flat is legal, even if it is cheerless and noiseless. The landlord who insists on barring the Rooseveltian family may bring down on his selfish head the opprobium of the anti-race suicide clubs, but he has the law with him.

The judiciary committee of the city council, following auvice from Corporation Counsel Talman, has decided that the aldermen cannot intervene in behalf of the man with the big family, and the ordinance introduced by Alderman Jonathan Ruxton, of the Thirty-fourth ward, was shelved and never will reach the council.

No one was present at the committee meeting to champion the cause of the large family in its fight against discriminating landlords, and there was not even a murmur of protest when the ordinance was placed in the archives of the council. The corporation counsel's opinion declares that the Ruxton ordinance is an ideal regulation which the city has not the power to pass.

ENJOYED RUM PUNCH.

Guests at W. C. T. U. Supper Have Great Time.

Northampton, Mass., June 8.—The people of the Methodist church in the little town of Pelham gave a bean supper in the church several nights ago, at which in addition to the advertised bill of fare of beans and coffee, there was served a most excellent punch made of milk and good old cherry rum.

There was a larger company present than was expected, and the first supply of milk for the coffee soon ran out. But one good sister said she had plenty at home, which she would be pleased to donate if anybody would go after it.

This, the supplying pastor, who is an Amherst college student, volunteered to do. Armed with directions as to where to find the milk and a large jug to bring it in the embroy divine started on his errand.

Now, it seems the man of the house was preparing to celebrate his birthday, and for that purpose had laid in a supply of choice cherry rum.

The student by mistake, or otherwise, took the jug that was nearly half full of rum, filled it up with milk, and returned to the supper.

After the first whiff of the new supply of milk got out no one cared for coffee. All asked for just a cup of milk, please.

The Pelham cows received unstinted praise. The bean supper was a decided success and all reported a most enjoyable time. The members of the W. C. T. U. did not learn of the terrible mistake until next day.

BEWARE THE AGENT

Who Nullifies Explosive Qualities of Gasoline.

La Crosse, Wis., June 8.—A very clever agent, having for sale a process whereby gasoline and kerosene were made non-explosive and perfectly harmless to handle, even to the point of dropping fire into into them, was the indirect cause of setting fire to the store of J. Grasby, the leading storekeeper of Houston, Minn., seriously burning Mr. Grasby, and, in fact, all but taking his life.

The smooth agent appeared and exhibited for sale a preparation which he claimed would render kerosene, benzine, gasoline and other explosive liquids harmless, and, to demonstrate, placed a quantity of gasoline in a pail, added a small quantity of his secret chemical and dropped a burning stick into the combination. There seemed to be no effect wrought by the fire at all. Grasby was delighted, and bought.

When the agent had gone, Mr. Grasby wished to demonstrate the power of his new chemical to friends, and lighted a stick, went through the same performance as the agent. Bang went the combination, and fire and burning fluid were scattered over Mr. Grasby and his store set afire.

The agent was found by the sheriff at Rochester, and taken back to Houston, but released, as he claimed Mr. Grasby had not followed directions.

"I can bear it now, Spike. Tell me what happened."

The speaker was Mr. James Converse, who lay wrapped in blankets and with his head swathed in bandages, in the Lenox hotel last evening, while "Spike" Anderson and the Tigers from Grand Forks doped him with brandy and other stimulants.

"Are you feeling better, old man?"

"Yes. Tell me what happened in that terrible eighth inning. The last thing I remember was when the ——, yellow pup ran out and grabbed the ball. Then everything went black and when I woke up I was lying here, with you fellows pouring the dope into me."

"Well Erickson had struck out," said Spike, as he kept his hand on the patient's pulse to watch for developments, "and that big raw-boned catcher of theirs was up. He slammed a two-bagger away out past me in center field. Then McShane came to bat. He hit a little single and McAleese went to third. Then Potts punched out a little bunt and that big lobster of a catcher headed for home. Leach dropped the throw and everybody was safe. Then Spanton had to muff a throw that would have got Bennett out, and Weller kept up that bunting game, sending a little one down to you. Potts started for home and you caught him. Then that big, long-legged cannibal that plays left field for them had to come up and slam out a clean single. You began to get groggy about this time, and O'Dea hit you for two bases, scoring Bennett. Then you went daffy and threw the ball at Mueller on third to catch Weiler. That —— yellow pup grabbed the ball when Mueller dropped it, and Weller came home.

"They had you woozy by this time, and Neighbors found you for a two-sacker, letting Artie come in. Erickson got out for the second time some way, and we carried you to the bench."

And now let Crookston and the Twins take as many as they want to. They can have three out of four if they can get them, since the Tigers was all that was wanted. With three new men signed for the express purpose of beating Duluth, Spike Anderson's bunch came to town Monday bent on getting two out of three. Yesterday's game was the only one played, and thanks to the eighth inning, the Tigers left town without their looked-for meal.

It was a fast, snappy exhibition up to the eighth. Potts and the whole Duluth team suffered from a bad case of the rattles in the first and third, and before they knew what had happened the Tigers had sneaked in five runs. Two came in the first on Weller's error, a single and a stolen base by Anderson, and a single by Hanrahan.

Three more in the third on hits by Varco, Hanrahan and Leach, and McShane's error.

After that the whole team came out of its trance and played pennant-winning ball. Potts only allowed two hits in the remaining six innings, and in the sixth, seventh and eighth only nine men faced him.

The White Sox got one in the second on a dropped third strike, which let McAleese get his base, and a two-bagger by Potts.

In the fourth, after Erickson was out, McAleese slammed out a single. McShane hit out a corking two-bagger, scoring the big Duluth catcher. He went to third on Bennett's sacrifice and scored on Spanton's first error.

Another came in the fifth on a two-bagger by Neighbors, a sacrifice by Erickson and a single by McAleese.

Then came the calm before the storm, and the sixth and seventh passed uneventfully, with the score standing 5 to 4 in favor of the Forkers, and apparently good prospects of it remaining that way. Then came the hair raising finish, that brought the 800 fans to their feet, and even "Emil the Barber," the Superior rooter, who feels in duty bound to help out the visiting teams, was silent and abashed.

Spike Anderson has protested the game on account of the yellow pup, but it was lost before the canine ever wandered on to the field.

The details of the slaughter are about as follows:

WIN THREE STRAIGHT.

Maroons Make Clean Sweep of Fargo Series.

Fargo, N. D., June 8.—Winnipeg took the game from Fargo yesterday afternoon, making it three straight. In the three games Fargo got two scores, neither earned. Winnipeg made Fargo look like a lost cause by batting like fiends. Hanson started in the box for Fargo and retired at the end of the fifth after five scores and ten hits had been made off him. Berrigan was sent in when the sixth opened up and looked like the real article for three innings and then exploded. Sporer was up for the visitors. He had absolute control and allowed only four hits.

Winnipeg got busy in the first when Howell's hit, swiped second, reached third on a wild pitch and scored on Tucker's single. Fargo was a blank in the first.

In the second for Winnipeg the first five men up singled and the sixth walked, netting the Peggers a trio of scores. There were four stolen bases mixed up in the disaster, as there was a man on third every time any one wanted to go down from first. In Fargo's half Traeger singled and Tucker let it get away, the batsman reaching third, scoring after two were out on Gatewood's best of French's grounder. That was all the scores Fargo cared for.

In the ninth, Peterson singled, stole second and scored on Sporer's single and Traeger's juggle. Howell's walked and Green rolled a little one which Berrigan held a while and finally threw to second a week late, filling the bases. Two men raced home on Tucker's safe drive, and finally the side was retired.

The features of the game were Sporer's attack on the umps after being called out on a double in the fourth. He shook the decision dispenser, but long stood for it and let the twirler finish the game. Alberts made a circus catch in the eighth on Clayton's fly, turning a somersault and bounding up with the ball in his mitt.

THE ORPHANS WIN.

Defeat Crookston Team By Superior Base Running.

St. Cloud, June 8.—(Special to The Herald.)—The St. Cloud-Brainerd baseball team yesterday duplicated its victory of Tuesday over the Crookston club, winning by the same identical score—3 to 2—in spite of the fact that Crookston outbatted St. Cloud, making ten safeties to four for the locals. Dorn for Crookston allowed but one pass and struck out five, while Rees struck out four and allowed seven passes. The latter was assisted out of several bad holes by double plays. The real cause for the defeat of the Norsks, however, lay in their miserable base running. The fact that eleven of their batters died on bases to two for the Twins gives a fair idea of the kind of base running.

The local club will be strengthened tomorrow by the probable arrival of Harris, recently released by Duluth, and later by Kennelly of the same club. A dicker is also on for the purchase of Tripp from Winnipeg.

INCREASE IN POPULATION

Of Northern Minnesota Shown By the Census Returns.

St. Paul, June 8.—A decrease in the population of Southern Minnesota and a remarkable increase in the northern counties have been brought out by the first census returns received by the state census bureau.

Complete returns were received from nine enumeration districts, five in the northern part of Minnesota, one in the central portion and three in Southern Minnesota. The three latter districts showed a decrease in population since 1900, whereas the other six showed an increase from 10 to 15 per cent.

"I will venture the prediction that 75 per cent of the districts in Southern Minnesota will show a decrease in population from 1900," said George F. Wright, supervisor of the census. "The population of the state is shifting northward. Many of the old settled portions of Southern Minnesota are bound to show a falling off."

This does not mean, however, that the population in the entire state has decreased. The total increase in the nine districts reported today is 8 per cent, and if this increase is kept up all over the state the increase in population will be 120,111, making the total population 1,711,50. It is expected that the increase will be greater than this. Many of the new counties in Northern Minnesota will show 100 per cent increase, and heavy gains are expected in Duluth, St. Paul and Minneapolis. Partial reports show that the increase will be great in St. Louis, Itasca, Aitkin, Carlton and the northern territory of counties.

KILLED BY DYNAMITE.

Accidentally Discharged While Randall Carried It.

Hibbing, Minn., June 8.—While working with a prospecting crew on the Buffalo and Susquehanna property a short distance east of the city limits, R. G. Randall, 25 years of age, was instantly killed yesterday afternoon by the discharge of a small quantity of dynamite encased in gas pipe. He walked a few feet toward the drill after the explosion and fell over dead with a small iron projectile embedded in the flesh over the heart.

None of the crew of three men under the supervision of A. B. Sillman witnessed the accident, but Deputy Coroner Butchart, who was summoned, decided that the man came to his death by the accidental explosion of the dynamite which he carried in his hand.

The body will be forwarded to Elmira, Mich., for burial, where his parents reside.

ITALIAN ARRESTED

At Hibbing For Threatening to Shoot G. H. Thompson.

Hibbing, Minn., June 8.—Sam Mostrianna, an Italian laborer, who made threats to shoot Grier H. Thompson, superintendent of the Drake-Stratton company, has been placed under arrest. Two 38-caliber revolvers, fully loaded, and a long knife were found in his pockets. He was arrested at the company's office here after being denied admittance to Mr. Thompson's office. Mastrianna lost a foot while working for the Drake & Stratton company at Pittsburg, Pa., three years ago, and at that time Mr. Thompson was superintendent at that place. The man, it is said, made a settlement with the company, but later asked for additional indemnity. When Mr. Thompson came to the Mesaba range to take charge of the company's operations, Mastrianna followed. He was given work in 1904, but in the fall returned to Pittsburg, where he has a wife and two children. Early this spring he appeared again at Mr. Thompson's office, and was given a job of throwing switches on the Leonard mine. He was discharged by the foreman a few days ago and made threats of violence. Finally he started for Hibbing with the declared intention of shooting Mr. Thompson, but warning was telephoned from the mine and his arrest followed.

INCREASED TONNAGE

Of the Lake Boats Registered at Duluth.

St. Paul, June 8.—The tonnage of the boats registered at Duluth shows a big increase in 1905 over the previous year, according to reports received by State Auditor S. G. Iverson. These reports show that several new steamship companies have been organized in the last year and that several of the old companies have added new boats. The companies pay a tax of 3 cents per ton, so that the amount of the tax indicates the increase in tonnage.

The Duluth Dredge and Dock company this year will pay a tax of $110 16 as compared with $95.70 last year. The companies which did not appear on the tax list last year and the amount of tax follows: Duluth Steamship company, $190.59; Globe Steamship company, $268.05; Zenith Steamship company, $194.55; Superior Steamship company, $190.62. Other companies report taxes as follows: Northern Steamship company, $140.34; W. J. Jacques, $10.17; Clow & Nicholson, $3.36.

SHOCKING FATALITY.

Boy Dragged to Death By Frightened Pony.

Eveleth, Minn., June 8.—Earl, the 12-year-old son of Mayor Maxwell, was accidentally killed yesterday afternoon by being dragged through a field of stumps and boulders at the end of a rope attached to his pony "Dexter."

The lad with a companion, John Minto, 10 years old, had gone to the field about four miles distant from the village to catch his father's horse. This they failed to do but secured the pony by tempting it with oats. Young Maxwell tied the rope with which he had made the pony fast about his waist and then sat down declaring that he had one horse at least that could not get away.

The pony became frightened and started to run dragging the lad after him until the rope broke after he had gone 150 yards. When the boy was picked up life was extinct. He had a great triangular hole in the top of his head and suffered other injuries.

Young Maxwell had been repeatedly warned against tieing the rope attached to the pony around his waist but he persisted in doing it.

The funeral services will take place at the Methodist Episcopal church at 2 p. m. on Friday, and the schools will be closed to enable the children to attend the funeral.

MYSTERY UNSOLVED.

No Trace of the Missing Tower Boy.

Tower, Minn., June 8.—The disappearance of little Gus Werman, son of Matt Werman, is still a mystery, not the slightest trace has been found of the missing boy since he was last seen Saturday evening. Eighty men continued the search yesterday of the country surrounding Tower without any result, and it is now the general belief that the boy was kidnaped or killed and his body hidden.

Gus Puhaka, an employe of the Tower Lumber company, who is the last person known to have seen the boy, sticks stoutly to his story that the missing boy and his son were bothering a horse and that he punished the Wermen boy, who then started for home. The authorities have searched thoroughly the entire Puhaka premises. The man's house has been examined from garret to cellar and the barn and yards have been gone over.

REPLIES TO PULLIAM

President Brush of New York Nationals Makes Statement.

Pittsburg, June 8.—In relation to the controversy over the McGraw troubles and in reply to the statement of President Pulliam, John T. Brush, president of the New York National league club yesterday made the following announcement:

"In his statement to the public yesterday, Mr. Pulliam says that he is satisfied with Judge Sheldon's decision, but he regrets that I have seen fit to repudiate my own legislation and seek relief in the courts against the operation of my own law.

"In reply, I say that I did not apply to the courts for a repudiation of any law, but to restrain Mr. Pulliam from violating the constitution of the National league and the rule relative to the removal of players by the umpires.

"The rule says that any player removed by an umpire for a violation of the playing rules during the season of 1905 shall be fined $10 by the president of the league for each removal, and if in addition thereto the player so removed be suspended by the president of the league said suspension shall carry with it a fine of $10 for each subsequent day so suspended.

"Mr. McGraw was not removed from the game by the umpire on May 19, the day that he was charged with offending Dreyfuss and unless he was, Pulliam could not fine or suspend under the rule. We had a great many witnesses and affidavits to prove that what was charged on May 19 did not occur, but the president and board of directors absolutely refused to hear or consider them, declaring that the matter of penalizing McGraw to the extent of nearly $900 without a hearing, without even letting him know with what he was charged, was forever closed and beyond appeal. I personally begged the board to listen to a statement, but it refused to do so. The player is not the only individual for whom laws should be made."

UNEVENTFUL WEEK IN IRON

Only Activity In Market Is In the Chicago District.

New York, June 8.—This has been an uneventful week in nearly all directions says the Iron Age. What is almost a deadlock between buyers and sellers of pig iron continues, the only fair degree of activity being in the Chicago district. Virginia furnaces have sold there and in St. Louis basic pig to the extent of about 7,000 tons and inquiry for this class of iron is cropping up in other directions.

The Birmingham market is weaker, in spite of the fact that there is some uneasiness over the possibility of trouble with the coal miners.

The absence of a demand for pig iron by the large steel companies is causing pressure upon the market on the part of merchant furnaces, who usually supply them and who are now accumulating metal.

The market for steel is easier and some of the interests who have had little to offer in the past are now hunting for business. A moderate amount of additional tonnage has come up in plates and shapes. Among the larger orders placed is one lot of ten thousand tons for a large industrial plant in Milwaukee.

In the lighter lines the shading of prices continues and is becoming more general. Black sheets have sold below $2.25 for No. 28 and some business in iron bars has been secured only by concessions. In the wire trade there has been a slight improvement in some quarters.

Export sales are being more actively pushed in all directions and special efforts are being made to market more highly finished material. Thus quite a considerable business in sheets for export has been done lately.

FOR "OPEN DOOR"

Japanese Victory Thought to Insure Integrity of China.

Kaiser's High-Handed Policy Arouses Hatred of Chinese.

Pekin, June 8.—The questions of the "open door" continues the most important problem in China today. Of course there are many questions which will be determined in the light of the results of the Russo-Japanese war, but the "open door" conflict in China is growing more and more intricate and serious every day.

Here in China it is believed that the kaiser secretly sympathizes with the czar, because the czar stands for restriction of trade, for the partion of the trade of China, if not the actual partition of China, while on the other hand the Japanese are pledged to the open door. It would not surprise the high and mighty officials of China if the kaiser should join hands with the czar, ostensibly in opposition to the so-called Yellow Peril, but in reality in opposition to the so-called "open door."

When Mr. Hay, disturbed at the march of events in the Far East, inaugurated the "open door" series of dispatches, and printed them for the information of an admiring world, he said that the government of the United States would in no wise commit itself to any recognition of exclusive rights of any powers within or control over any portion of the Chinese empire, under such agreements as had been recently made. This drew from the foreign office at Berlin the following declaration:

"The imperial government has from the beginning not only asserted, but also practically carried out, to the fullest extent in its Chinese possessions, absolute equality of treatment to all nations with regard to trade, navigation and commerce. The imperial government entertains no thought of departing in the future from this principle, which at once excludes any prejudicial or disadvantageous commercial treatment, etc."

Nevertheless, at Kiao-chau, in this place of absolute equality developed by the German government as a free port of commerce, at enormous cost during the past six years, no British merchant has yet found a footing; English and American shipping and banking interests are represented there by German agents. True, a very considerable portion of the local trade with Chinese is handled by the Japanese, mostly of the peddler class, but the European merchant at Kiao-chau is conspicuous, as he was at Port Arthur, by his absence. At a Chinese treatey port of the same size British trade would long since have been represented.

Despite the "open door" assurance above quoted, it was not long before the world learned that the Chinese possessions did not include, so far as Germany was concerned, the Manchurian convention, the retention of the treaty port of Niu-chwang, and her practical annexation of territory occupied during the Boxer troubles, all direct causes of the war with Japan, were it is claimed supported by Germany.

Mr. Hay's policy, it is claimed here, affected the German policy very little. In October, 1902, France and Germany, while consolidating their own "spheres of influence," had seized the occasion of the evacuation of Shanghai to indicate clearly that Great Britain's claim to "influence" in the Yang-tse valley would no longer be recognized. Encouraged by the complete absence of any policy so far as Great Britain was concerned, Germany evidently proceeded to make the most of the situation. She openly stated as her condition for withdrawing her troops from the trade center of the Yang-tsze, that "China must agree not to grant to any other power any preferential advantage, political, military, maritime or economic in the Yang-tsze river, commanding the river, whether below or above Shanghai.

"If the British government had possessed the shadow of a policy, this frank repudiation of the existing understanding, this annulment of the Anglo-Russian convention of 1899 should immediately have been followed by Great Britain's denunciation, of Germany's "perferential advantages," in Shantung. No better opportunity could have been desired for uniting with America and Japan to insist upon strict and general observance of "the open door." But nothing was done; the humiliating conditions were tacitly accepted, and the evacuation of Shanghai by French and German troops was used to inflict almost irreparable injury on the prestige of Great Britain throughout Central China.

Germany's policy since 1898, identical with that of Russia and consistently opposed to the vested interests of Great Britain and Japan, become distinctly bolder when, after settlement of the Boxer troubles, Russia's grip tightened on the Manchurian provinces. The declaration of the alliance of Great Britain with Japan, in February, 1902, might have been expected to make Germany pause, since presumably it implied an end to the days of British vacillation. As a matter of results, however, Berlin apparently believed as little in British policy as in the possibility of Russia's defeat by Japan, and German agents became, therefore, more and more active as the probability of was increased. Not only was their activity displayed in extending German control in and around Shantung, but it manifested itself aggressively in matters "economic, political and military," on the Yanug-tse from from Shanghai to Changsha.

The object was clear—to peg out as many claims, to register as many accomplished facts as possible before the conclusion of the war brought about a general readjustment of the Far Eastern question, and new international "assurances." If this were not Germany's aim, then her overt refusal to recognize the British sphere of influence was gratuitous, but everything that has since occurred, and her present policy support this conclusion. True it is that since the irretrievable collapse of the Russian army at Mukden the kaiser has taken the first opportunity to disclaim his former ideas of "Welt-Politik," but there is no sign that the forward policy, either in the German sphere, or that which was once British, is likely to be abandoned or modified. No single opportunity is lost as the Tibetan treaty negotiations lately showed, for attacking Great Britain's position; the Yang-tse viceroys, one of whom has been provided with a confidential secretary from the German consular service, are continually warned against the danger of allowing any preferential position to England, while German subsidized native papers denounce British territorial ambitions to readers ready enough to believe the worst with the example of Shantung before them.

In that province Germany assumes something more than the rights of tenant—not only has she obtained and extended preferential advantages, political, military, maritime and economic, to the exclusion of the treaty rights of other nations, but she assumed last year the right to intervene in purely domestic affairs, and to limit the Chinese government's authority over its own officials throughout the province. Baron von Mumm's treatment of the new governor of Shantung in Peking in January last caused intense indignation in the North; yet such are the vagaries of the Chinese official mind and such the effect of international jealousies upon that mind that German agents were able at the same time to conduct successful negotiations of various kinds in the Yang-tse.

At the present moment the predominant influences from Shanghai to Ching-kiang are Japanese and German, and, as the question of field gun and arsenals recently showed, Germany comes off by no means second best. Governor Tuan-fang, at Nanking. Nevertheless, in all of the present doings of the kaiser's servants there are unmistakable signs of haste, of a desire to remove landmarks and to set up boundaries before the day of reckoning comes.

As for England—it apparently has no policy in China, or if it has it is spineless. England might accept Germany's conditions in the Yang-tsze, and withdraw all claims to "spheres of influence," if she would only insist upon Germany doing the same and abandoning forthwith here "preferential advantages" in Shan-tung. Japan is fighting for this principle, with the moral support of Great Britain, and has apparently driven back the power which chiefly menaced the integrity of China; Germany, by her own action, has given England an opportunity for insisting on a return to the status quo.

As things are lined up today, therefore, it is evident that Great Britain, the United States and Japan have interests which require the maintenance of the "open door," while Russia and Germany are opposed to "the open door." It is to be hoped that when peace is ultimately declared, not only will the principles of the "open door" be firmly fixed in the treaties, but that China's sovereign rights throughout the empire will be confirmed, no matter even if Germany does lose some of the possessions and the leases and other claims which she has been openly and secretly acquiring during the past two or three years.

Of course, much depends upon the results of the war by land or by sea, but it is safe to say that if Japan does win, so far as the Chinese empire is concerned, Japan will make a play for a return to the old order of things, and will argue for a restoration of conditions to a position somewhat similar to what they were before Russia commenced her Manchurian railroad and started on a career of Oriental conquest.

THE RECORD FOR FASTING

Shaw Tells How It Feels to Live on Air.

New York, June 8.—J. Austin Shaw of Borough park, Brooklyn, has beaten the famous fast of Dr. Tanner and many other self-starvation records. For forty-five days he ate, slept, worked from twelve to eighteen hours a day and was merry without touching food. But he trained hard at fasting before beginning his long abstinence. At the end of that period he emerged stronger and healthier and weighed only twenty-six pounds less.

Three years ago Mr. Shaw weighed 235 pounds and suffered from rheumatism. He read a book on "Perfect Health," which urged the gospel of abstinence, and became a convert.

This is how Mr. Shaw says he fasted:

"Fresh air is the secret," he said. "I lived during the last six weeks on air. I gave up coffee and meat and breakfast three years ago. I never take anything but a glass of water before noon. I never drink with my meals.

"As to my fasts, I began with three days' abstinence at a time with two weeks between each fast. Gradually I lengthened the time of going without food to ten days, until recently I found I could go forty-five days without eating without the least discomfort. I have no doubt I could have gone on for fifty days or more, but I thought I better not make the test hard.

"I mean to live to be 100 years old and think I am on the right track. There is no reason we should not all live to be 100.

"The first two days of my fast were a little hard, but after that it was easy. I sometimes drank a little weak lemonade and once in a week or so a glass of unfermented grape juice. The rest of my diet consisted of water, both hot and cold.

"Temptations to berak it? They did not amount to much. It wasn't the easiest thing in the world to carve for my family when we had a particularly good Sunday dinner, but I did not really feel the need of food.

"I took my usual exercise and cold bath in the morning, and worked each day in the city from twelve to eighteen hours. My work keeps me out of doors much of the time."

CONSPIRACY ALLEGED

In Suit Brought Against the Kimberly Estate.

Chicago, June 8.—The Great Western Gold company of California has brought suit against the estate of the late Peter L. Kimberly, the millionaire, who died suddenly in this city last Sunday morning.

In the declaration the assertion is made that by entering into a conspiracy with former officers of the gold company, Kimberly sold to the Great Western company for $2,000,000 property worth not more than $500,000. Prior to the sale of the mining property to the Great Western company, Kimberly is said to have aranged with E. F. Adams, at that time the president, and J. J. Chambers, then the vice-president of the Great Western company, to sell the property to the present stockholders for $2,000,000, and of this amount all over $750,000 was to be divided among the parties to the agreement. Besides the suit against Kimberly's estate the gold company has sued W. F. Snyder of Salt Lake City, Utah, who is alleged in the bill to have made the arrangements between Kimberly and the officers of the company.

The stockholders of the Great Western company live for the most part in St. Louis, Kansas City and Iowa. The affairs of the company are directed from Cedar Rapids, Iowa, where its chief officers reside.

MILLION'S WORTH

Of Automobiles Exported Since Beginning of Calendar Year.

Part of Autos In Commerce of the United States.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, June 8.—(Special to The Herald.)—The fact that practically a $1,000,000 worth of automobiles and parts thereof have been exported from the United States since the beginning of the present calendar year lends interest to the following complication prepared by the department of commerce and labor through its bureau of statistics, showing the imports and exports of automobiles in the commerce of the United States.

The first record of the importation of foreign-built automobiles into the United States was for the fiscal year 1901, when 26 automobiles, valued at $43,126, were imported into the country. Since that year, however, the imports have steadily increased, having grown from 26 in 1901 to 423 in 1904, while their value (including automobile parts) has increased from $47,471 in 1901 to $1,446,303 in the last fiscal year.

During the last fiscal year France supplied 86 per cent of the importations of automobiles into the United States, the value of the imports from that country being nearly seven times as much as the combined value of the imports from all other countries. From France 368 automobiles, valued at $1,117,494, were imported, while from all other countries the total number was 55, valued at $176,666. The relative rank of the various countries in the importation of automobiles into the United States during the last fiscal year will be seen from the following table:

Countries from which imported.

	Number.	Value.
France	368	$1,117,494
Germany	22	69,695
England	22	54,013
Italy	13	34,620
Ireland	1	2,733
Switzerland	3	7,501
Cuba	1	1,700
Total	423	$1,294,160

Note.—In addition, parts of automobiles were imported as follows: From France, $146,535; Italy, $2,462, and from England, $146.

A special compilation recently made by the bureau of statistics shows the ports through which foreign-built automobiles enter the country. New York, Boston, Chicago, Newport, R. I., and Philadelphia are, in the order named, the principal ports for the admission of foreign automobiles into the United States. The number and value imported at each port during the past year were as follows: At New York, 368, valued at $1,106,128; Boston, 41, valued at $121,252; Chicago, 10, valued at $19,597; Newport, R. I., 6, valued at $19,048; and Philadelphia, 4, valued at $17,167; while through the ports of Newark, St. Louis, Mobile, and San Francisco 4 automobiles, with a combined value of $10,668, entered the country.

The rate of duty assessed on importations of automobiles and parts of is 45 per cent ad valorem, and the aggregate amount of duties paid on the total imports thereof since 1901 is $1,373,835, having been $21,359 in 1901, $247,590 in 1902, $545,050 in 1903, and $850,836 in 1904.

The exportations of automobiles of domestic manufacture have been recorded only since 1902. In that year the total exportation of automobiles and parts thereof was $948,528; in 1903 the total had increased to $1,207,664, and by 1904 the total was $1,895,605; while for the ten months of the fiscal year 1905, for which figures are available, the total ie $1,876,063, thus indicating a record of over $2,200,000 for the complete year which ends with the present month.

The United Kingdom and Canada take about three-fourths of the automobiles and parts thereof that are exported from the United States. During the fiscal year 1904 automobiles and parts thereof of domestic manufacture were exported to the value of $1,895,605, of which $1,020,681 went to Europe, mainly to the United Kingdom, $498,799 to North America, principally to the Dominion of Canada, and $376,125 to other countries.

That the exportations of automobiles of domestic manufacture have more than offset the importations of foreign-built automobiles in every year for which a record has been kept, may be seen from an examination of the following table showing the imports and exports of automobiles and parts thereof in the commerce of the United States from 1901 to 1904

Fiscal year	Automobiles imported for consumption.* No.	Value	Domestic exports of automobiles and parts Value
1901	26	$43,126	Not stated
1902	224	630,876	$948,528
1903	317	963,998	1,207,065
1904	423	1,294,160	1,895,605

*Automobile parts were also imported for consumption as follows: 1901, $4,345; 1902, $19,323; 1903, $45,008; 1904, $152,143.

In view of the rapid increase in the use of automobiles in the United States and the large proportion of imported automobiles brought from France, the following extract from Consulaire Verslagen en Berichten, published at Amsterdam, will be or interest. From this statement it will be seen that France, as well as the United States, imports foreign-built automobiles in response to the demand for machines other than of domestic manufacture, and that she also exports far in excess of such importations. The statement is as follows:

According to a statement by the administration of direct taxes, the number of automobiles in France in 1903 was 19,886, or, in round numbers, 20,000. This is a marked increase over the preceding year. In 1899, when the first census of these vehicles was held, their number was 1,488; in 1900 it was 2,354; in 1901, 5,286; in 1902, 11,000, and in 1903, 19,886. The greatest number in any department is 4,510, in the department of Seine. As automobiles are an article of export and of great utility to the less wealthy class, it is hoped that a drop in price will popularize their use.

One incident of the industry is the decrease in the number of horses. From 1903 to 1904 the number of horses in Paris dropped from 91,016 to 90,147, a difference of 869. In 1901 there were 133,892, making a decrease in 1904 of 43,745 as compared with 1901. At Lyons the same thing was observed, although there the underground railway may have contributed. The 20,000 vehicles represent a value of about $40,000,000.

During the first two months of 1904 automobiles to the value of $388,316 were imported, as compared with $123,520 and $98,816 for the same period in 1902 and 1903. Although there has thus been an increase in the value of imports, still it bears no comparison with the value of exports, which for the same two months were $8,267,348 in 1904, $6,070,815 in 1903 and $3,462,613 in 1902.

UP-TO-DATE IDEAS

Are Being Introduced By the Pope at the Vatican.

Elevator, Water Facilities and Electricity For a Villa.

Rome, June 8.—Pius X has often indicated his fondness for modern conveniences since his election as head of the church, and recently two additional comforts have been added to the Vatican palace. One is a new electric elevator, which replaces the old hand lift, which ran only to the third floor, where are the pope's apartments. The new elevator has been installed by a Milan firm, and runs from the court of San Damaso to the top floor of the palace. It will be of much use to the families of prelates whose quarters are on the upper floor. A Vatican discomfort has been the lack of running water on the upper floors, all water used there having to be carried by hand or forced by hand pumps. The pressure was insufficient, as the court of San Damaso, which is practically level with the lowest floor of the Vatican hill, and to reach it from the street level one has to ascend four flights of stairs. Pius X has now remedied the difficulty by having placed a set of hydraulic turbines, which will distribute the water all over the Vatican, even to the top floor.

To the papal villa at Castel Gandolfo another improvement has been added. The town of Castel Gandolfo is in the Alban hills, thirty miles from Rome. Last year it was the residence of the cardinal secretary of state during part of the summer, and rumor has it that the pope is planning to spend several weeks there this year. The municipality has erected an electric light plant, and Pius X has ordered that connection be made with the papal villa, so that every room will now be lighted by electricity. As the palace was built during the seventeenth century by Pope Urban VIII, and has the appearance of a mediaeval castle, the electric lights seem out of keeping with the old edifice, but they will add greatly to the comfort of dwellers. Last year the government provided direct telegraphic and telephonic communication between the villa and the Vatican palace in Rome, so that the cardinal secretary of state was, during his vacation, able to keep in constant touch with the pope.

Something of a sensation has been caused here by the publication of a pamphlet, entitled "Fiat Lux," said to have been written by an American priest, Father Clancey. The work is in Latin, and suggests certain reforms which, in the writer's opinion, are much needed in the church. Among the suggestion is one to the effect that the pope shall renounce the prerogative of infallibility and that the several countries shall form so many national churches, absolutely independent of each other, so that the pope, as head of the church in Italy, would only rank first among equals. Useless to say, the pamphlet has been already denounced to the congregation of the index as heretical, and it will shortly be publicly condemned by that congregation.

The Vatican authorities and the congregation of bishops and regulars are now at work solving the problem of distributing among their houses in Italy the members of the religious orders who have now been expelled from Switzerland. The federal council at Berne has just passed a law of expulsion for all the members of the religious orders who have in recent years entered Switzerland without special authorization, and has given the orders and congregations ninety days' time to settle their affairs and leave the confederation. Many of these religieuse are French who had taken refuge in houses of their orders in Switzerland, and many hundreds are Italian nuns who had established industries among emigrant girls received in their institutions. It is alleged that the reason for the issuance of the decree is largely a commercial one, based on jealousies of the Swiss manufacturers, but the decree is final, and the religious orders will have to emigrate to other countries.

The bishop of Cremona, Monsignor Bonomelli, who is considered the most liberal among Italian prelates, has just issued a pastoral letter which has excited much criticism among the clerk, and even among the church authorities. The pastoral comments on the practical religious life of the Italian people, and points out the fact that many Italian Catholics attribute too much importance to the worship of the Virgin and the saints, to the detriment of their devotions to God. It also censures the attempts recently made to introduce new and useless practices of devotions, especially in Italy, and denounces those who take advantage of the piety of the people for their own financial or material gains. It is said that the bishop has been asked by the Vatican authorities to explain his meaning, and has been ordered hereafter to pay attention only to the abuses he may find in his own diocese.

In return for gifts sent a few months ago by Pius X, to the dowager empress of China on the occasion of her 70th birthday, there arrived in Rome lately special acknowledgments from the Chinese emperor, addressed to the pope. The message is written on a large silk ribbon, several yards in length, and beautifully embroidered. It assures the pope of the emperor's gratitude for the gifts received by his mother, and says that an adequate return gift will soon be sent to Rome from Pekin. Pius X. was greatly pleased at the receipt of the message, which was translated for him by an attache of the Chinese embassy here. This cordial exchange of courtesies has convinced every one here that the appointment of an apostolic delegate to Pekin is nearer at hand than was commonly supposed. The late pope had decided, so long ago as 1886, to send a representative of the vatican to the Chinese capital and the prelate for the position had been named. But his departure was prevented at the last moment by representations from the French government, which feared the loss of much influence in China if any one except its own ambassador took charge there of Catholic affairs. As diplomatic relations are at present broken with the French government and there are no longer special reasons why that government should be favored by the vatican in the matter, it is probable that a delegate to Pekin will soon be named.

EARLY LAW IN MONTANA

Knotty Case Was Decided By Game of Seven-Up.

Helena, Mont., June 8.—"Well do I remember the first lawsuit tried in Helena," said Judge Cornelius J. Hadges. "It was in the spring of 1865, and came with the appointment of the first justice of peace for the then thriving mining camp of Helena.

"The controversy was over a town lot, valued, as I remember, at about $75. A jury was duly summoned from among the miners, and the questioning of witnesses began. The witnesses were about evenly divided as to which of the contestants had first staked out the property.

"The examination of witnesses finally completed, the case was given to the jury. Of course, it being the first lawsuit in the camp, every one was interested in the result. It was plainly a case of hung jury, however, the members so announcing from time to time as their deliberations continued.

"Finally the thirst of the jurors became irresistible, and they were taken to a nearby saloon to quench their thirst, and it was at this place that a proposition was made which seemed to strike all as equitable and which was later carried out.

"This was what might be termed a compromise, and incidentally it was one which certainly proved agreeable to the counsel. I might add that my opponent in the case was our late eminent townsman, E. Warren Toole, a brother of the present chief executive of the state of Montana.

"The suggestion was that the lot be sold and the proceeds divided between the counsel. Although perhaps a little irregular, the decree was duly made, and the lot auctioned off by the sheriff. After paying the expenses of the trial, there was about $75 left, which was equally divided between Mr. Toole and myself.

"The theory upon which this division was made was that we had worked unusually hard in trying to win the first lawsuit in the camp, and were entitled to at least what would remain after paying the costs. A unique case, I judge."

Judge Hedges told another story relating to Mr. Toole, who died recently in Helena, and who was perhaps the most eminent lawyer of Montana.

"This suit," said Mr. Hedges, "was one involving a rich mining claim, located near Virginia City, in Alder Gulch, the scene of the first discovery of gold in Montana. Two men asserted ownership in the property, and as there was no chance of a settlement, amicably between the contending parties, it was decided to impanel a jury and let it determine.

"In those days law books were a scarce article in the territory of Montana, and indeed might made right in most instances. Mr. Toole was the attorney on one side, and made the most of his case.

"I do not remember the other lawyer's name, but at any rate he made an equally forceful presentation of his client's rights in the matter, and it was almost a foregone conclusion that the jury would have a hard time in determining the question in whom title to the property vested.

"Finally the cause was submitted to the jury along with the instructions of the court. Twenty-four hours passed, and no verdict. The body seemed to be hopelessly divided, six to six, as I remember it.

"At the end of forty-eight hours no verdict had been agreed upon, and the jury so reported to the justice and asked its discharge. An effort was made to induce the jury to try again, but this was abandoned as impracticable, it being plainly evident that some other method would have to be decided upon.

"Finally one of the jurors suggested that the opposing counsel play a game of seven-up to determine. Both clients agreed; as there was no other court to appeal to and a pack of cards being produced, the lawyers went at it.

"Mr. Toole won the game, which, as I remember, was very close and the interest in it intense. The final score was six to seven. The loser gracefully accepted his loss of property as determined by chance, as though the case had been decided by the highest courts."

THE LAXATIVE OF KNOWN QUALITY

There are two classes of remedies; those of known quality and which are permanently beneficial in effect, acting gently, in harmony with nature, when nature needs assistance; and another class, composed of preparations of unknown, uncertain and inferior character, acting temporarily, but injuriously, as a result of forcing the natural functions unnecessarily. One of the most exceptional of the remedies of known quality and excellence is the ever pleasant Syrup of Figs, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., which represents the active principles of plants, known to act most beneficially, in a pleasant syrup, in which the wholesome Californian blue figs are used to contribute their rich, yet delicate, fruity flavor. It is the remedy of all remedies to sweeten and refresh and cleanse the system gently and naturally, and to assist one in overcoming constipation and the many ills resulting therefrom. Its active principles and quality are known to physicians generally, and the remedy has therefore met with their approval, as well as with the favor of many millions of well informed persons who know of their own personal knowledge and from actual experience that it is a most excellent laxative remedy. We do not claim that it will cure all manner of ills, but recommend it for what it really represents, a laxative remedy of known quality and excellence, containing nothing of an objectionable or injurious character.

There are two classes of purchasers; those who are informed as to the quality of what they buy and the reasons for the excellence of articles of exceptional merit, and who do not lack courage to go elsewhere when a dealer offers an imitation of any well known article; but, unfortunately, there are some people who do not know, and who allow themselves to be imposed upon. They cannot expect its beneficial effects if they do not get the genuine remedy.

To the credit of the druggists of the United States be it said that nearly all of them value their reputation for professional integrity and the good will of their customers too highly to offer imitations of the

POLISH CATHOLIC CHURCH IS BURNED

Edifice on Fourth Avenue East and Third Street Destroyed.

Houses on Opposite Side of Avenue Considerably Damaged.

ST. MARY'S POLISH CATHOLIC CHURCH, CORNER OF FOURTH AVENUE EAST AND THIRD, IN FLAMES.

St. Mary's Polish Catholic church, corner Fourth avenue East and Third street, was destroyed by fire this noon. The wall on the west side and some charred framework is about all that remains of the structure.

The roof of a double dwelling across the avenue, owned by Captain Michael Norris, caught fire from the flying timbers which were wafted a distance of about seventy-five feet by a stiff westerly wind. The damage to the houses was confined largely to the roof and the attic, but the damage to the household goods of the tenants is considerable.

In attempting to climb to the roof of house No 103 to extinguish the blaze, Assistant Chief Joseph Randall slipped to the ground and sustained a severe injury to his back. No bones were broken but the muscles were badly strained. The injured man was taken to his home. The ladder was planted on the roof of the porch, but when Randall was half way up, the ladder slipped down and he fell heavily to the ground on his back.

Father J. Sroka, the pastor of the church, and Miss Anna Jaunszewiski, his housekeeper, were standing on the back of the porch of the parsonage, when they discovered smoke issuing from the back part of the roof of the church.

"Look, the church is on fire," cried the housekeeper, excitedly.

The priest immediately ran into the building and found the interior filled with a dense smoke. Joe Burg, who was working around the house, darted in after the priest, and the two managed to rescue some of the vestments of the priest. Two gold chalices were also taken out, but the remainder of the furnishings of the church could not be rescued. Burg had a hard time in attempting to reach the sacristy, and he was nearly suffocated by the smoke.

In the meantime Father Sroka had managed to give the alarm. Four carpenters were in the basement eating their noon meal, unconscious of the excitement above them. They were enjoying an interval at noon after working on the church, on which numerous improvements were to have been made. The carpenters dashed for buckets, and started up the ladders for the roof of the church. After throwing a few bucketsfull of water they saw the futility of the attempt.

The blaze is thought to have started in the rear end of the structure. The cause is unknown, but since the building is equipped with electric light it is thought that an exposed wire came in contact with some of the woodwork. The fire made speedy headway. The smoke issued thickly from the roof when first seen, and the roof was soon a mass of roaring flames. The westerly wind caused the fire to eat its way to the side near the avenue. When the fire department appeared on the scene the structure was a hopeless wreck, and the firemen, while plying the hose on the burning edifice, kept their eyes open on the adjoining buildings.

The parsonage is only about ten feet from the church and only the fact that the wind kept the flames away from that direction prevented the residence being destroyed. The roof of the house caugh fire, but a lavish supply of water prevented it from making any headway.

The church was erected in 1883, and workmen had commenced to rebuild it nearly throughout. They had started on the roof. The structure was of frame, and occupied a site of 135 by 38 feet. It was thirty feet high. It was not of any particular style of architecture, and was even without a stone basement. The interior equipment, however, was somewhat elaborate. The altars were expensive, while there were many stained glass windows. There were several valuable banners in the church belonging to the various societies. These were destroyed, but their loss is covered by insurance.

While the building was erected twenty-two years ago, it was in good condition. Father Sroka could not give the value of the structure, but stated that the sum of $25,000 would not replace the losses. The church was insured for $13,000 with the Home Insurance company of New York.

The first house on the avenue, 401 East Third street, is occupied by A. B. King, with C. D. Campbell, residing at 403 East Third street. Mr. King carries $1,000 insurance on his furniture, while Mr. Campbell has $2,000. Both claim that their losses will exceed the insurance. While the fire did not have an opportunity of attacking the furniture, it made enough of a hole into the roof to give the water poured on top of the building by the firemen a chance to fall into the rooms below. The carpets were thoroughly saturated, the water streaming through steadily.

Capt. Norris has $1,500 insurance on each of the houses, which he said will hardly be adequate to pay for the damage done to his building.

WARRANT OUT

For Isaac F. Litchfield Charged With Starting Forest Fire.

Charged With Starting Blaze Which Threatened Pumping Station.

Isaac F. Litchfield, owner of twenty acres of land near Lakewood, is to be arrested for setting fire to the woods around Lakewood which about a week ago threatened the Lakewood pumping station with destruction.

The warrant was issued by the city attorney of Duluth and Litchfield will be arrested when found, by a city officer, but the information and charge on which the warrant was issued came from Gen. Andrews of St. Paul, state fire warden.

It is charged that Litchfield, in clearing his acreage, which is about one mile from the Lakewood pumping station, assisted by two men, set fire to the brush and caused a bad fire which destroyed property and threatened more property and even lives.

It is believed by the fire warden that this is the same fire which threatened Two Harbors and destroyed about $35,000 worth of property.

WILL FIGHT NEW COURTHOUSE SITE

Michael Norris to Begin Action to Enjoin County Board.

Thinks Old Site Best For New County Building.

Michael Norris will ask the court to grant an injunction restraining the board of county commissioners from building a courthouse on the site on which they have agreed, between Second and Third avenues West on Second street. In fact Mr. Norris is determined to restrain the board from building a courthouse on any site other than that on which the present courthouse stands. He has retained Francis W. Sullivan as his attorney and hopes to interest a number of other taxpayers in the matter. He says he believes others will come into the move, but if they do not he alone will fight the board. Said Mr. Norris today:

"I have said very little about it, but I am determined that the courthouse will not be built on the site chosen by the county board. I don't want people to think I'm a crank, or contray, but I am a taxpayer who is going to suffer to a considerable extent if the county board goes to heedlessly throwing money away condemning property which is no better than, and not as good for, a courthouse site as the present location.

"There are several other reasons why I am against moving the courthouse. One is that the site chosen is not large enough, and that it is in no way fitted for the purpose for which it is chosen. The commissioners need a whole block for a new building, and the proposed site cannot give even a decent half block.

"The site on which the present courthouse stands is the best available site and the condemnation of the balance of the property in the block will not cost the county half as much as the condemnation of the half block proposed. There is only one other block in the city to my notion, all things considered, that is as good and that is the Mendenhall block between Lake avenue and First avenue east and between Third and Fourth streets. The old site, however, is good enough and there is no good reason why the commission should cast it aside or sell it for a mere song and spend a lot of money buying property down town.

"If I can prevent it, the courthouse will not be built on any other site during my lifetime, and I propose to see what the courts can do."

Mr. Norris was asked what steps he would take to prevent the county attorney from starting condemnation proceedings as ordered by the county board. He said that he would have to refer that to his lawyer, Mr. Sullivan, which he will do at once.

VON BUELOW WEALTHY.

Inherits $1,375,000 From Late Herr Godefrey.

Berlin, June 8.—Prince Von Buelow, German chancellor received notice June 5th that the amount of his inheritance under the will of the late Herr Godefrey, the Hamburg millionaire, is $1,375,000. This was the same day that Emperor William gave him his patent of prince. The prince was a comparatively poor man, relying almost solely on his salary as chancellor and the allowances attached to the position. Two reasons, it was formerly said why Von Buelow preferred not to be created a prince, was that the dignity of the rank required a large fortune properly to sustain it, and that he had no children to whom he could transmit the title. Herr Godefrey's entire property is valued by the executors at about $6,500,000 of which $2,500,000 goes to other heirs and $2,500,000 to charities.

INDICTMENTS BY THE FEDERAL GRAND JURY.

St. Paul, June 8.—(Special to The Herald.)—The federal grand jury today reported true bills against William T. Horsnell, of St. Paul, and Royal B. Stearns of Pierre, S. D., who are accused of conspiracy to defraud the United States out of about 18,000 acres of homestead lands in North Dakota, through fraudulent homestead entries.

Indictments were also returned against Paul Reynolds, accused of passing a counterfeit $10 gold piece, and John Leeb, and Matt Secette, charged with passing a counterfeit $10 note.

VISIT TO INDIA

Of Prince and Princess of Wales Planned.

Calcutta, June 8.—Much interest is being taken in the tour which the prince and princess of Wales are expected to make in this country next winter.

Their royal highnesses are understood to be bringing out a staff of only about eight persons, in place of the twenty-four who accompanied the king when the prince of Wales was on his tour.

The viceroy, with Lady Curzon and a number of the chiefs and princes of India, will receive [illegible] cess at Bombay, where the disembarkation will take place.

Their royal highnesses will proceed direct from Bombay to Pajputana, and thence to the northwest frontier. Amritaar the sacred city of the Sikhs, will be visited on the way to enable their highnesses to see the famous golden temple.

A halt will be made at Lajore, where the lieutenant governor of the Punjaub will entertain the party. Jaipur, Bikanir, Patiala and Jammu will all be visited, btu it is not yet settled whether Simla will see the future king and queen, the station being, at that time of the year, almost desrted and exceedingly cold.

A camp of exercise, probably at Delhi, will be another feature of the tour, Lord Kitchener's idea being to show a representative force of the fine army he commands, under conditions nearly approaching those of war.

Christmas will be spent at Calcutta, where races, a state ball, a drawing room and a levee will form part of the program.

ADRENALIN FROM COAL TAR

Is Active Principle of Supra-Renal Capsules.

London, June 8.—An important advance in medical science has just been made in the preparation of adrenalin—the natural "tonic" of the body—from coal tar products.

The credit for this interesting discovery is due H. D. Dakin of the Lister institute, who records the results of his researches in synthetic chemistry, as follows:

"Adrenalin is the active principle of the suprarenal capsules of the body. These little organs, like cocked hats in shape, are situated one just above each kidney. Twelve years ago their purpose was a mystery, though Dr. Addison, of Guy's hospital, had shown in 1849 that they were essential to life, for if they became diseased great muscular prostration would follow, and death would not be long delayed.

"In 1893 Professor Shafer and Dr. Oliver obtained from these glands a very active juice, which from its powerful effect upon all of the muscles, may be regarded as the natural tonic of the body. This tonic effect is more evident in the heart and blood vessels, which it braces up in an extraordinary way.

"The next step of obtaining the active principle of this juice in a pure crystalline state was accomplished in 1901 by Dr. Takemine, a Japanese scientist. Under the name of adrenalian, this preparation has been widely used. From its astringent power it is most valuable in the arrest of bleeding.

"But it must not be imagined that it is a suitable remedy for the general public to handle. Like all powerful drugs, it is a two-edged weapon, and its injection by unskilled hands may cause congestion of the lungs and diabetes.

Some little time ago an attempt was made in Germany to produce an artificial adrenalin, but the action of the substance is described as "insignificant." Indeed, the history of adrenalin has been throughout one of the Anglo-Japanese triumphs.

TO EXPLORE HELLN POT.

Weird Abyss 300 Feet Deep In Yorkshire.

London, June 8.—At the village of Horton-in-Ribblesdale, near Settle, Yorkshire, a number of Alpine climbers are arranging to descend and explore a famous abyss or hole in the limestone rock known as Hellh Pot, or "The Mouth of Hell."

Over and over again efforts have been made to explore this weird abyss, even during the early summer of this year, but up to the present time all efforts in this direction have proved unsatisfactory.

"The Mouth of Hell" is situated on the slopes of Ingleborough in the Pennine chain and is reported to be over 300 feet deep. Water rushes in at the top and falls in a long cascade, one of the largest waterfalls in the country. This water always incommodes the persons who make the efforts to explore.

Now that the two clubs, the Leeds Rambling club and the Kyndwr club of Derbyshire, have taken up the matter of a systematic and scientific exploration, it is believed that some of the problems connected with the abyss cannot long remain a mystery. The chief object of the expedition is to find the bottom of this awe-inspiring cavern and to follow a subterranean water-course which ends in a waterfall. These cannot be seen from the surface. Indeed, from above very little can be seen, as the temperature below, being lower than that outside, a mist havers continually over the mysteries below.

RECOVERS LOSS

Wheat Weak In First Half Hour and Then Strengthens.

Large Receipts In Northwest--Southwestern Reports Disturbing.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 8.—In the first half hour of the session today the wheat market was a pretty sick affair and declined heavily in the Northwestern markets especially, but after that there was a gradual recovery that carried prices back to yesterday's closing figures and in some cases higher. The car receipts at Minneapolis are very heavy and this with lower cables and a poor cash demand gave the bears the upper hand. Later on bullish crop news began to come in. A leading Kansas authority put the crop in that state at not to exceed 65,000,000 bus., and Nebraska reported the presence of Hessian fly to an alarming extent.

The Liverpool market closed ¼@⅝d lower, Paris 1¼c lower, Budapest ½c lower and Berlin ⅞c lower.

The July option in Duluth was unchanged, in Minneapolis ¼c higher, in Chicago ¼@¼c higher, in New York unchanged, in St. Louis ⅛c higher and in Kansas City ¼c higher. The September option gained ½c in Chicago, 1¾c in Duluth, ⅜c in Minneapolis, ⅜c in eNw York, ⅛-¼c in St. Louis and 1½⅝c in Kansas City.

Car receipts at Duluth were 6, against 22 last year and at Minneapolis 237, against 97 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 243, against 120 last year. Chicago received 6, against 25 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 294,000 bus., last year 235,000 bus. Shipments 218,000 bus., last year 285,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 149,000 bus.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed ½d lower. In the Chicago market July corn closed 1⅛c higher. July oats closed ¼c higher. Primary receipts of corn were 477,000 bus, last year 594,000 bus. Shipments 641,000 bus., last year 283,000 bus. Clearances were 183,000 bus.

Trading in the Duluth market was dull. The July option opened ½c lower at $1.11 asked and fell to $1.08⅝ at 9:57. After that a rally began that carried it to $1.11¼ just before the close and the closing price was that figure, unchanged from yesterday. The best trading of the day was in the new September options. It opened ½c lower at 78½c, and advanced with occasional reactions to 80¼c, at which price it closed, 1¼c higher than higher at 80½c.

Durum wheat declined 1c.

Flax was very dull. The July option was weak and the close was 5c lower at $1.46. That hardly represented the right price at the close, for while that was the best bid no offer was made. The October option opened ¾c higher at $1.26¼, fell to $1.25 and then advanced closing at $1.26½, a gain of ½c. The September option also gained ½c.

Oats advanced ¼c.

Following are the closing prices:

Wheat in arrive, No. 1 northern, $1.11¼; on track No. 1 northern, $1.11¼; No. 2 northern, $1.03¼. Durum, No. 1, 86c; No. 2, 85c; July, $1.11¼; September, 80¼c; September, old, 85½c. Flax to arrive, $1.40; on track, $1.48; July, $1.40; September, $1.28½; October, $1.26½. Oats to arrive, 31¼c; on track, 31¼c. Rye to arrive, 78c; on track, 78c. Barley: Feed, 39½@41c.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Break In Minneapolis Weakened Wheat In Chicago.

Chicago, June 8.—A break at Minneapolis of over 3c in the price of wheat for July delivery was, to a large extent, responsible for a weak undertone in the wheat market here today. Lower prices at Liverpool contributed additional weakness. A continuance of excellent weather throughout the United States was another bearish influence. Pit traders were the principal sellers. July opened ⅜c to 1c lower at 85⅝c to 85¾c and declined to 85¾c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 249 cars against 260 cars last week and 145 cars a year ago.

After July had sold off to 84⅞c the market suddenly turned strong. Shorts became active bidders causing a sharp upturn in prices. The main cause for the improved demand was the Kentucky crop report showing a decline of 17 points in the condition of winter wheat in that state during the past month. The market closed at the highest point of the day with July up 1⅜@1¾c at 86¼@⅞c.

Despite weakness of wheat, the corn market had a firm tone. Smaller receipts than estimated were mainly the reason for the firmness. The volume of trading was small. July opened unchanged to ⅛c lower at 50½c to 50⅝c and advanced to 50⅞c. Local receipts 261 cars, with 55 of contract grade.

As trading progressed the early firmness developed into decided strength. Several prominent commission houses were active buyers. Shorts also bought freely. For July the highest point of the day was reached at 52⅝c. The market closed strong with July up 1¼c, at 51⅞c.

Covering by shorts caused firmness in the oats market. The market was a trifle easier at the start, owing to bearish crop reports. July opened a shade to ⅛@¼c lower at 30⅝c to 31c and advanced to 31¼. Local receipts were 155 cars.

Provisions were barely steady owing to a 5c decline in the price of live hogs. September pork was off a shade at $12.95. Lard was unchanged to 2½c higher at $7.55 to $7.57½. Ribs were down 2½c at $7.62½.

Close: Wheat—June, 88c; July, 86¼@⅞c; Sept., 81⅛@⅜c; Dec., 81⅜@½c. Corn—July, 51⅞c; old, 52½c; Sept., 50⅛c; old, 50⅜@⅝c; Dec., 47¼c; old, 48¼c; May, 47½c. Oats—June, 31c; July, 31¼c; Sept., 28⅞@29c; Dec., 29⅜c; May, 31⅞c. Pork—July, $12.60; Sept., $12.90. Lard—July, $7.30; Sept., $7.50; Oct., $7.52½. Ribs—Sept., $7.65; Oct., $7.67½@7.70. Rye—July, 95c; Sept., 91@92c. Flax—Cash, northwestern, $1.45; southwestern, $1.29. Timothy—June, $2.85; Sept., $3.00@3.10. Barley—Cash, 42@50c. Clover—June, $11.75@12.25. Cash wheat—2 red, $1.00; 3 red, 95@99c; 2 hard, $1.00; 3 hard, 92c@$1.00; 1 northern, $1.11¼@1.12; 2 northern, $1.07½@1.09½; 3 spring, $1.05@1.07. Corn—3, 53c; 3, 52½@53c. Oats—2, 30¾c; 3, 29½c.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—Stop orders played an important part in the early decline as did also the bearish feeling existing in the pit. At the low point offerings apparently dried up, as the advance from this point, while slow, was nevertheless persistent, where wheat rallied sharply, caused extensive covering by the short interest. Reports of harvesting from the extreme southwestern country are somewhat conflicting, some reporting good yield, others fair to poor. Cash prices in the Southwest show a dragging tendency. While the weather conditions continue favorable we doubt if any advance can develop aside from a speculative rally when trade gets oversold. An urgent cash demand, however, would again stimulate the market. The much liquidation has taken place with the shorts being the best buyers. It is a trading market, price making to be determined by the weather and the cash demand.

Corn—Bulls in corn received help from the primary shipments today which were largely in excess of a year ago. Market at no time hesitated or shortened the disposition to stay its upward march.

Argentine shipments estimated as about a week ago had no influence on price making. Today's market was dominated by the spirit of the short interest which must have been largely reduced by the day's operations. The market acts strong, with the bull house who took in the May, forcing the issue against the shorts. We feel the price is high and do not like the buying side, but the market nevertheless clearly shows the strong hand of the bulls who apparently have the market under absolute control.

• • •

Logan & Bryan: Our Kansas City manager writes: "It is part cloudy all over Kansas, no rain reported, but weather man says possible showers tonight for Oklahoma and Kansas. As said before, should we run into a wet spell in the Southwest wheat fields, wheat might sell higher. It is the only hope I see for a bull, this or unexpected good cash demand for wheat."

• • •

Chicago Inter-Ocean: The government crop will be given out Saturday at the regular time. It will report on condition of winter and spring wheat, oats, barley and rye. It will also give acreage of spring wheat, oats, rye and barley as compared with last year.

The bull interest in corn which had a stock of almost 3,000,000 bus cash stuff on hand June 1, has not 1,500,000 bus left. They have sold 1,500,000 bu in a week and have boats chartered to load 900,000 bu. There was 250,00 bus loaded yesterday, and a similar quantity will load today. Charters yesterday were 160,000 bus and cash sales 425,000 bus, of which 325,000 bus were for domestic and 100,000 bus for direct export. The seaboard sold 128,000 bus.

Oklahoma millers estimate their wheat crop at 20,000,000 to 30,000,000 bus. The former, it is believed, is nearer to the crop.

• • •

Chicago Inter Ocean: Fifty-seven per cent of the wheat in the visible supply in the United States is of contract grade against 31 per cent last year. This is a most remarkable showing, considering the poor quality of last year's crop, and the claims made for the past year that good wheat was scarce. The seven leading markets have 7,488,000 bus. of contract, a decrease of 1,774,000 bus. in May, but an increase of 2,144,000 bus. over a year ago. These markets have in the aggregate 12,315,000 bus. of all kinds of wheat, out of a total of 15,721,000 bus. In the visible supply in the United States, a decrease of 5,074,000 bus. last month, and of 488,000 bus. from last year, showing a larger consumption of the low than of contract grades. The contract stocks at the seven points is 62.6 per cent of the aggregate this year, against 44.5 per cent last year. Minneapolis has 62 per cent of the present contract stocks. It is a most striking showing, indicating lighter supplies of low grades and a larger consumption of them than in other years, leaving the higher grades for speculative purposes and for consumption at the end of the season.

• • •

Cincinnati Price Current: General conditions somewhat improved. Some betterment in corn crop, but conditions irregular. Not better and possibly not equal to average of years. Oats indicate full average crop, wheat maintains previous promise.

• • •

Chicago Inter Ocean: "Farmers everywhere are bullish on corn and holding for 50c at home," says George H. Phillips. "a week or two of good weather will induce enough of them to take 45c to force the rest of them to take less. Foreign demand for corn is good and at good prices now, but the talk when the market sells off 2c or 3c will be that the demand is satisfied, that exporters and distributors are loaded with supplies at higher prices."

MANAGER FINED.

Louisville, June 8.—W. J. Clymer, manager of the Columbus tam of the the American association, was today fined $15 and put under a $300 peace bond for ninety days by Judge McCann in the police court. Clymer was arrested during yesterday's game for repeatedly disputing the decisions of Umpire King and was finally taken off the grounds by the police.

VERY DULL TRADING

On the Stock Market and the Closing Was Listless.

Closing Was Irregular and But Little Change Shown.

New York, June 8.—The London market was stirred with reports of a good outlook for peace and contributed to an opening on the stock market here that was higher all around. Advances ran to a point in Reading and Canadian Pacific, and Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, New York Central, O. & W., Brooklyn Transit and Smelting made large fractional gains. Business was on a moderate scale.

Stocks that came out on the opening advance were absorbed and prices made some progress above the opening level. Southern railroad stocks figured largely in the dealings, but there was not much doing in the specialties, outside of Copper. Among the advances of consequence were Atlantic Coast Line rose 2¼, L. & N. 1⅜ and Union Pacific, New York Central, Copper and Hide and Leather preferred 1. Biscuit sold a point lower, Republic Steel preferred 1⅜ and Corn Products preferred 2. The United States Steel stocks were heavy and prices were below the best all round at 11 o'clock.

The market fell into extreme dullness and only a few stocks made appreciable changes. Atlantic Coast Line rose 3¾. Wheeling and Lake Erie first preferred 1½, and Bag preferred 1. Steel Foundry preferred fell 4, the common 2½. St. Joseph & Grand Island second preferred 2 and Central of New Jersey 1¼. Bonds were steady at noon.

Stocks in which the speculative interest is small suffered proportionately more than the active favorites, when pressed for sale in dull and lifeless market like that of today. Central of Jersey continued to work downward, losing 3¼. Chicago Terminal preferred fell off 2½, while Tennessee Coal got up a point.

O. & W. crept up ⅛. There was no defined tendency in the market. Linseed preferred rose 1⅝.

Prices settled lower from inanlation and the average level got below last night. Colorado & Southern and Northwestern lost 1. Great Northern preferred rose 1¾, and Central railroad of Jersey rallied 2. The decline in Steel Foundries preferred extended to 6¼. The close was steady but lifeless.

Quotations furnished by Edwards-Wood Co., room A, Torrey building.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: Market closed irregular, but on the whole shows little change. The general conditions seem unchanged. The market is narrow and strength seems, considering the dullness, to attest the fact that the short interest is large, especially in the most active stocks. Meanwhile the crop situation offers encouragement to holders of good railroad issues and is one of the fears which investors should not overlook.

• • •

Walker Bros. to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market today was very dull and with little trading. There was no special news and traders did hardly anything. There was a slight decline from the best prices, but thec hanges were few. We look for a dull market until there is some news to give it an impetus. With any good news prices should go higher and short covering wil help largely.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: A very quiet, but fairly strong market was the story today. No feature in New York except a spurt in Louisville, which only lasted a few minutes but ran the price from 144 to 146¾. Utah and United States Mining were strong in the copper line and Copper Range held well considering the selling by one house of about 700 shares.

• • •

Paine, Webber & Co.: J. A. Pollock of Salt Lake wires: "I hear that control of Utah Copper has been sold to American Smelters on basis of $12,000,000 or $26.66 per share. Cannot verify it. We have it on excellent authority that Utah Consolidated will increase its semi-annual dividend in July from $1.50 to $2 and that the company will show net earnings of $6 per share this year."

• • •

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: Mathews of Mathews & McCormick is a big bull on North Butte; says it is good for 50.

BUOYANT IN LONDON.

London, June 8.—Trading on the stock exchange opened buoyant on the news of the peace negotiations. Prices advanced sharply in all departments led by consols. Americans shared in the general advance.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, June 8.—The cotton market opened quiet and steady at unchanged prices to an advance of one point and after advancing to a net gain of about 10@15 points on reports of cotton damaged by fire in local warehouses and board ship, New Orleans turned irregular and lost most of the advance under scattering liquidation and bear pressure. The weather was considered generally favorable and cables were about as expected.

STATE BREEDS BLOODHOUNDS

Mississippi Needs Better Dogs to Run Down Criminals.

New Orleans, June 8.—Several recent failures to run down escaping criminals with bloodhounds and some mistakes made by the hounds in tracking the wrong persons have convinced the Mississippi authorities of the necessity of improving the breed of hounds.

There are no state hounds and the authorities are compelled to depend upon such packs as the sheriffs or fanciers may offer. These are far from satisfactory, for the local business done by the hounds is not sufficient to justify any considerable expenditure in raising or maintaining them.

On the other hand, the greater freedom granted the convicts because of the system of state convict farms renders some better provision for their recapture necessary. The beginning of a state pack has been made by the purchase by the state of the bloodhound, Robin Hood, said to be the finest in Mississippi.

Robin Hood will be used in running down all escaped convicts from the state farm at Rankin county, under the direction of Sergeant Pancy. He will be used also to improve the breed of dogs at the several state farms.

Robin Hood came from a kennel at Lexington, Ky., and has made a fine record in tracking fugutives in Southern Mississippi, where the was owned by a man with a trusty convict. At Wiggins, in Harrison county, he took up the trail of a murderer twenty-four hours old, and ran the criminal to earth. At Picayune he was equally successful with a twelve-hour old trail, and so far he has made no mistake or failure.

He is a light brown, has a massive jaw that will bring the stoutest fugutive to earth and has the striking dull red eye of the thoroughbred bloodhound. He is so dreaded among the negro convicts that his very presence at the Rankin county farm will reduce the number of convicts who break for liberty.

It is calculated that the state will save money by using more bloodhounds and thus doing away with the large force of guards which it is necessary to employ on a convict farm covering several thousand acres, and where to secure good results it is necessary to allow the prisoners considerable freedom.

ARMY TOO EXPENSIVE.

Resignations Leave British Forces 4,000 Officers Short.

London, June 8.—The military forces of the crown are by the latest computation 4,000 officers short of the requirements as laid down in the army and auxiliary establishment for 1905-6.

This serious shortage combined with the fact that resignations are still as numerous as ever is causing considerable misgiving in the minds of the authorities, and conferences are now taking place at the war office under the direction of staff deputies and other officials, the object of which is to find a remedy for the situation.

The bankruptcy of an officer recently has shown the futility of subalterns attempting to meet their expenses out of pay. The decision of the army council that this officer should resign has spread alarm through the subaltern ranks, for numbers of young officers are heavily in debt to tradesmen or in the hands of money lenders.

In spite of the smallness of his pay, the officer is burdened on every hand with expenses for mess, band, regimental clubs, servants and social items.

The changes in uniform absorb an abnormal amount of his pay. First it is a new undress then a new full dress alternation, a change in head gear or an overcoat, a new pattern sword or field service dress.

At Sandhurst recently the cadets had changes of head dress involving the possession by each cadet of no fewer than five caps, none of which are of any use after passing to a regiment. The cost of altering cadet kits to regimental pattern involves an outlay of from $100 to $150.

A LONG TRIP.

Ashland Steamer to Sail to California.

Ashland, June 8.—(Special to The Herald.)—The steamer Chequemagon of Ashland, now running between Milwaukee and Whitefish bay, will leave for Los Angeles, Cal., the latter part of this month. Besides the owner, Louis Cartier, a few invited guests will take the trip. Coaling stations have been picked out on the South American coasts and the expenses of the trip are figured at $6,000. The Chequemagon was built at Manitowoc in 1892 for service between Ashland and the Apostle islands. She is 101 feet long and 22 feet beam, measuring 141 tons. The steamer has 500 horse-power engines, and carries a crew of six men. After reaching Southern California, the Chequemagon will run to the Cataline islands. Her long trip around Cape Horn will be watched with great interest.

NEW YORKERS SUNDAY ONLY

In Exile In New Jersey Six Days In Week.

New York, June 8.—A lawyer in arranging the other day a meeting between one of his clients and another person made an appointment for the following Sunday, explaining that Sunday, for a brief time, was the only day his client could come to New York, as he was a temporary members of the Jersey colony.

The third person did not at once grasp the meaning of the expression, and the legal man explained: While most people know that Jersey is the temporary home of many New Yorkers they do not understand always the causes or reasons of the exile.

Those who are in contempt of court, or are defendants in alimony cases, or are wanted as witnesses in cases, or for various other reasons can either aid their own ends or the ends of others by evading the service of court papers in New York, find New Jersey a convenient place of refuge. They cannot be arrested in New York state on Sunday. So they go to Jersey and stay there at least six days of the week till the matter has either blown over or been adjusted.

On Sunday they come over to New York to visit their families, friends or business acquaintances, but the wise ones take great precautions to catch the last ferry boat that leaves before midnight. There is often a rush of colonists to catch the last boat. Sometimes they arrive on a dead run and sometimes in cabs and hansoms.

It happens occasionally that a colonist misses the last boat by his own negligence or finds that the boat is late on account of ice or fog. Thus he has fallen into the clutches of a waiting deputy sheriff; for if the time is only one minute past midnight it is Monday and an arrest is legal.

About seven years ago a certain witness was particularly desirable in a pending case. He was living in Jersey, but came to New York on Sunday. Certain detectives who had a subpoena for him got into a quarrel with him. The quarrel did not last long, but when it was over it was Monday morning and he was promptly arrested for contempt of court.

During the Molineaux prosecution the district attorney desired the presence of a woman who lived in New Jersey, but all efforts to entice her over the line into the jurisdiction of New York failed. Finally two officers made the acquaintance of the woman and a woman friend.

After an evening of jollification an excursion to another town was proposed. As soon as the train was over the line into the state of New York the woman was arrested. She had avoided ferries as she would have avoided poison, but she had no thought of the danger line that separates Northern New Jersey and New York.

Jersey has been a resting place for many people who were witnesses of certain events and were sent there and maintained at the expense of the defense in an action either actually brought or intended to be brought. Here is one instance:

Not many years ago in the early hours of a September morning two clubmen, a broker and a lawyer, quarreled and came to blows near Madison square. The former was knocked down and suffered the loss of two teeth.

Aside from a friend who opposed the publicity of a legal action, the only witnesses were two lawyers, whose addresses were obtained by a friendly third party. The same day this worthy pair were ensconced in comfortable quarters in Newark and supplied with plenty of expense money.

For a while the broker threatened prosecution for assault, but was finally quieted, and a reconciliation between him and the lawyer resulted. During this time, nearly two months, the two witnesses had the time of their lives. They lived on the fat of the land, smoked imported cigars and drank, as they expressed it, "real 10-cent whisky."

When they finally appeared in their usual haunts they each had a roll of bills, and the richness and colors of their raiment moved their former companions to amazement and envy.

CURIOUS PLAN

To Lessen Smuggling and Illicit Liquor Selling.

Quebec, June 8.—The legislature of Quebec has hit upon a curious plan to lessen the smuggling and illicit liquor dealing upon the American frontier. Both the Canadian customs authorities and the officers of the inland revenue department have had to fight the illicit trade carried on by the occupants of houses, shops, hotels, etc., built exactly upon the international boundary line. Thirsty residents of the state of Maine find it very convenient to enter a building in their own state, walk to the Canada side of it and there buy and drink as much liquor as they please. Very few who sell the liquor have even a Canadian license to do so, but when the Canadian officials make a raid on the place it seldom happens that any liquor is to be found in the Canadian side of the line.

Then again, these border stores usually deal to a considerable extent in dutiable goods, those in command upon the south of the line being kept in stock on the other side until called for when the surroundings are clear.

The legislature has just adopted a law prohibiting the erection of any building in the future within two feet of the American border. It remains to be seen, however, whether this law will not be made practically useless by erecting buildings on each side of the line only two or three feet apart, and tunneling the space separating the two cellars. And in any case no means have yet been found to put a stop to the illicit trade conducted by the occupants of existing buildings.

IMPROVING PLANT

Missabe Northern Road Adding to Buildings At Proctor.

N. P. to Put In Steel Bridge on Jenswold Street.

The Duluth, Missabe & Northern road is making a great many improvements at Proctorknott this year, one of which—the power house—is already in operation. Under construction now is a steel water tank on a framework which is 100 feet high. The tank is of steel and is about twenty-eight feet in height.

Work is being started on a new machine shop as the beginning of a new car repair works. The machine shop is 175 feet by 100 feet and will be up-to-date in every particular. The car repairing plant which this starts will be modern and will handle all of the work of the road.

ANOTHER STEEL BRIDGE

To Be Put In By N. P. on Jenswold Street.

As soon as the city has fulfilled its agreement to put in a steel bridge over the Jenswold street subway for the Northern Pacific road, that company, according to the terms of the same agreement, will put a steel bridge over its tracks on Jenswold street just west of the subway, replacing the wooden bridge now serving there.

The Northern Pacific has at present a crew at work filling in a culvert just north of the Jenswold street bridge.

ESTIMATING TIMBER.

State Estimators Leave on Long Tour North.

Andrew Miles of West Duluth and four state timber estimators have gone on a lengthy timber estimating tour. They carried with them rations for thirty days and will not return until the last of August.

They will go up to Ely and from there will strike through the northern part of the county, and will go to the border, estimating state timber by the way. On reaching the internationaal border the cruise will continue along it, taking in the greater part of the state's holdings in that part of the commonwealth.

PLEASANT SURPRISE

By Young People of Presbyterian Church.

The young men and women of the Westminster Presbyterian church had a very pleasant time last evening at N. S. C. rooms in West Duluth. It was in the nature of a surprise party on Misses Erle and Althea Butters of Thomson, who are visiting with Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Downs. The chaperones of the affair were Rev. and Mrs. W. J. Lowrie, and Mesdames Charles Sliger, G. T. Govett and W. B. Hartley. Games and refreshments constituted the amusements of the evening.

Those present were: Misses Helen Hartley, Laura Govett, Ethel Jamieson, Ethel and Edna Colby, Ella Heiser, Myrtle Perry. Messrs. Gordon Brooks, Clarence Downs, Albert Johnson, Albert Nelson, Clarence Govett, George Govett, Charles Towner, Earl Freeman, Oliver Olson, Hary Olofson, Louis Sliger and Byron Brooks.

That Tainted Money.

The Young Men's Baraca league of the West Duluth Baptist church had an interesting meeting last night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Bishop. A musical and literary program was rendered, an important feature of which was a debate, on the much discussed Rockefeller gifts. Forest Kent lead the affirmative arguing for their acceptance and Donald Holmes took the negative side of the case. Both sides were well handled, but the judges decided in favor of the acceptance of the money.

WEST DULUTH BRIEFS.

Hazel, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Boyd of 227 North Fifty-sixth avenue West, has returned from the school for the deaf at Faribault, Minn., which she has been attending during the past year.

The social and dance given last evening at Gilley's hall by the West Duluth lodge of the A. O. U. W. was well attended and thoroughly enjoyed. The dancing was particularly good because of the excellent condition of the floor and the perfection of the music. Refreshments were served.

The Swedish Finnish Lutheran church ladies will have a musical and literary program at Victor hall soon. Further announcements will be made later.

Yesterday a son was born to Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Ketchinson 620 North Fifty-seventh avenue West.

with Great Britain would ruin any political system aimed against Germany. The British alliance has not helped France in Morocco but it has embroiled her with Germany. M. Delcasse pays the penalty by retiring as complications can be easier avoided with him out of the cabinet, and his retirement will not affect the dual alliance."

FRENCH AMBASSADOR

Has Half Hour's Interview With the President.

Washington, June 8.—M. Jusserand, the French ambassador, had a conference with the president soon after the latter's arrival at the executive office today. The ambassador was with the president for about half an hour. At the close of the interview Ambassador Jusserand said that he could not discuss the object of his call. Pressed for a statement as to whether peace negotiations were in progress, he replied that he could say nothing; that he had no news. He said that if anything at all were to be made public it would have to come necessarily from President Roosevelt. So far as his conference with the president was concerned he was at liberty to say nothing.

SITUATION DELICATE.

Loomis Declines to Talk About Peace Matters.

Washington, June 8.—Acting Secretary of State Loomis called on the president today immediately after the visit of Ambassador Jusserand. While he would admit nothing as to the nature of his visit, there is excellent reason for the statement that he presented to the president the deciphered cable dispatches from Ambassador Meyer at St. Petersburg and Ambassador Reid at London. The dispatch from Ambassador Meyer was received over night, but was not translated until today. The nature of its contents at this time is not known. Mr. Loomis, as he left the White House, said that he was not in a position to discuss the peace situation at all. He expressed the belief that nothing would be made public here in an official way today regarding the negotiations. He admitted that the situation was delicate, and indicated that as a reason for not making public any details concerning the negotiations in progress.

JESSEN IN IGNORANCE.

Not Informed of Course Taken By Rojestvensky.

Vladivostok, June 8.—The failure of the Vladivostok squadron to put to sea and effect a division in favor of Admiral Rojestvensky, at the time of the recent battle, is explained to have been due to the utter absence of knowledge on the part of Rear Admiral Jessen as to whether Rojestvensky intended to circle Japan, or attempt to force a passage through the straits of Korea. Jessen at no time was informed of the Russian commander's plans, and was unable to co-operate with him. The officers of the Russian cruiser Almaz, and the torpedo boat destroyers, which reached Vladivostok, say the Russian fleet was constantly under Japanese surveillance after it reached far Eastern waters, and whenever it was not at anchor, suspicious ships were seen on the horizon. It was only May 23 that Admiral Rojestvensky announced that he intended to break through to Vladivostok, but he gave no orders, and did not indicate the manner in which he proposed to accomplish his task, whether by the eastern or western channel of the straits of Korea. The Russian torpedo boat destroyer Bravi owes its escape to taking the western channel.

TIME FOR PEACE NOT COME.
Vienna, June 8.—It is learned here that the Russian government has informed its diplomatic representatives abroad, including Count Cassini, the ambassador at Washington, that the time for Russia to conclude peace has not yet come, and when it does arrive, Russia will open peace negotiations with Japan independent of foreign intervention.

SHIPS ORDERED TO REMAIN.
Manila, June 8.—Rear Admiral Enquist received, at 1 o'clock this morning, the following cable from St. Petersburg:

"Remain at Manila at the disposition of the American government. Effect repairs as much as possible.

"NICHOLAI."

Governor General Wright has requested Rear Admiral Train to arrange for the dispositions of the Russian warships and their officers and crews.

SUBMARINES NOT EFFECTIVE.
London, June 8.—The Tokio correspondent of the Daily Telegraph says he now learns that owing to the rough sea the Japanese submarine boats were not used effectively in the naval battle.

The same correspondent says that the captured Russian vessels have been renamed as follows:

From Orel to Iwami, from Imperator Nikolai I to Iki, from General Admiral Apraxine to Okinoshima, from Admiral Senaivin to Minoshima.

SLIGHT SKIRMISH REPORTED.
Tokio, June 8, 1 p. m.—Imperial army headquarters made the following announcement today:

"At 11:30 o'clock on the morning of June 7, a body of Russians, some 160 strong, advanced from the direction of Hunhiotsz, about a mile and a quarter east of Yinyipienmen, but were met and repulsed by us on an eminence lying north of that place. The enemy fled in confusion toward Nienyilling, seven miles northeast of Yinpipienmen.

"One soldier and two saddled horses were captured.

"With the exception of skirmishes between scouts on both sides there is no change to report elsewhere."

STUDENTS RUN CIRCUS.
Chicago, June 8.—Under the stimulus of a purple costume worn by a woman bareback rider and supposing it worn in honor of the university colors, more than 150 Northwestern students last night took possession of a circus in Evanston. After stopping the performance and giving a show of their own the collegians fought with the tent men and were dispersed by the police. Several persons were injured, but no arrests were made.

MILLERS HEAR VARIOUS PAPERS ON TRADE TOPICS.

Kansas City, June 8.—The Millers' National Federation meeting here in annual convention today listened to papers on various subjects. The program included the following:

"Extension of Contract Grades," Edgar H. Evans, Indianapolis; "Cost of Manufacture and Its Relation to Flour Values," H. M. Allen, Troy, Ohio; "A Campaign For White Flour," William E. Castle, Louisville; "Contracts Governing Sale of Mill Products; the Legal Phases of Their Enforcement," Frank F. Reed, Chicago; "Trade Mark Laws an dthe Value of an Official Registration Bureau," L. T. Jamme, Chicago.

A discussion of the gluten value of wheat flour was participated in by J. A. Wesener, P. H. C. M. D., Chicago, and others.

BOY DROWNED.
International Falls, Minn., June 8.—Francis Sullivan, a lad of 15, ventured out into the river in a canoe, with nothing but a board for a paddle, and in attempting to turn round and come back to the shore his craft was upset and he was drowned. The river was dragged for nearly twenty-four hours and several sticks of dynamite set off before his body was recovered.

It's not mere whim or caprice—it's simply human nature to be

ALWAYS WANTING SOMETHING!

And it's a sign of good mental health—just as a vigorous appetite is a sign of good physical health

OF COURSE APPETITE WOULD BE AN EMBARRASSMENT IF WE COULD OBTAIN NO FOOD; AND THAT "WANT-SOMETHING FEELING" WOULD BE A CALAMITY IF WE COULD NEVER SATISFY IT.

NORWEGIANS PULL DOWN FLAG OF UNION AND HOIST TRI-COLOR OF NORWAY

Dual Emblem Which Has Floated Since 1804 Is Displaced.

Over Thirty Thousand People Witness the Ceremonies.

King Oscar Calls the Rigsdag In Extra Session June 30.

Christiania, June 9.—The Norwegian tri-color was hoisted today over Akershus fort and throughout the country in place of the union flag. The substitution was attended by great ceremony at the fort, where the members of the storthing and 30,000 of the public were assembled. The garrison was paraded in front of the quarters of the commandant of the fort, and the commandant read the resolution of the storthing dissolving the union with Sweden.

As the clock in the tower of the fort chimed 10, the union flag, which had floated there since 1814, was hauled down, the troops presented arms, the band played the patriotic air, "Sons of Norway," and after only a momentary interim, the first gun of a national salute boomed, the new flag was broken out, and the troops again presented arms. The people then uncovered and cheered wildly, the band adding to the general enthusiasm by playing the popular air, "Yes, We Love This Country."

First one and then another took up the words of the song, until the whole crowd joined in, after which round after round of applause again greeted the flag. Three cheers were next given for the fatherland, and the singing of the national anthem concluded the ceremony.

Baron Von Wedel-Jarlsberg, who has been the minister of Sweden and Norway at Madrid, and who is a Norwegian, is leaving the Spanish capital today for Christiania. He has telegraphed asking to be immediately relieved of the post owing to the dissolution of the union. His example will be followed by the ministers at Washington and Rome, both of whom are Norwegians.

The government of Norway and the storthing continue to receive from all parts of the country expressions of gratitude for their action, and the communal authorities are voting addresses approving of the new regime.

A telegram from Bjornstjerne Bjornson, the Norwegian dramatist, published here today, sums up the popular feeling as follows:

"The address to the king is an expression of the will of the entire Norwegian people. The dissolution of the union is a blessing for the entire North."

RIKSDAG SUMMONED

To Meet In Extraordinary Session June 30.

Stockholm, June 9.—Crown Prince Gustave, on his return from Berlin, today, was met by the royal family, the ministers and a large crowd of people, who cheered him enthusiastically. The city is decorated with flags.

King Oscar decided at a meeting of the council, today, to summon the riksdag for an extraordinary session June 30. The crown prince was present at the sitting, which had before it the resolution of the Norwegian storthing which the premier denounced as revolutionary.

"By this revolutionary proceeding," said the premier, "the storthing has not only without the co-operation of the king, but without the least consideration of Sweden and on its own authority, determined upon the rupture of the union which existed by virtue of a mutual convention drawn up in accordance with the laws and which can in no way be broken without the assent of the two countries. Inasmuch as the resolution of the storthing is a profound violation of the rights of Sweden, it is indisputably necessary that the riksdag should be summoned in extraordinary session without delay to deliberate on the measure to be taken by Sweden in view of what has passed."

The resignations of the ministers of Sweden and Norway at Copenhagen, Rome and Madrid were tendered by telegraph and accepted.

GREAT DEMONSTRATION

Made By Swedes In Honor of King Oscar.

Stockholm, June 9.—Inhabitants of Stockholm to the number of several thousand assembled in front of Rosendal castle last evening and made a demonstration of their loyalty and affection for King Oscar. His majesty accompanied by Queen Sophia, Crown Prince Gustave and other members of the royal family appeared on a balcony of the castle and was greeted by the national anthem, which was sung by the enormous crowd accompanied by brass bands.

The king listened to a short address to which he replied in a voice loud and clear, but shaken by emotion. His majesty assured his subjects of his deep gratitude for their demonstrations of love, and in conclusion said:

"Long live our ancient, glorious and loyal country, so good and so dear. Long live Sweden."

Thunderous cheers for "our beloved grandson, Prince Gustavus Adolphus," (Who is to marry Princess Margaret of Connaught,) were heartily given.

The national anthem was repeated and a procession followed, which lasted for hours, the crowds loudly acclaiming King Oscar.

REPUBLIC FAVORED

By Many Norwegians In Place of Kingdom.

Copenhagen, June 9.—It is reported that the Norwegian government, in view of King Oscar's definite refusal to consider the offer of the storthing to place a prince of the house of Bernadotte on the throne, has privately approached the banished royal family to ascertain if an offer of the throne would be received by a member of it, preferably Prince Charles, son of Crown Prince Frederick. The general opinion expressed here is that such an offer would be refused.

According to reports from Stockholm King Oscar may be induced to reverse his decision and to favorably regard the offer of the throne for a member of his house.

Leading Swedish politicians are much divided over the question, which, it is understood, will not be decided prior to the extraordinary session of the riksdag.

Authoritative information received from Norwegian circles represents the majority of Norwegians as opposed to giving the throne to a prince of the house of Bernadotte. It is stated that if King Oscar should definitely refuse the throne for a member of his family, and that if the Danish royal family should likewise refuse to place one of its princes on it, Norway will become a republic, and that this is favored by the mass of the people.

The storthing believed that the offer of the throne to a prince of the house of Bernadotte would facilitate future negotiations with Sweden. It is understood that negotiations will be begun as soon as possible after special envoys have been sent to the powers requesting the recognition of the independence of Norway. Dr. Hagerup, former premier and now minister at Stockholm; Siguard Ibesen and Fridjof Nansen, the Arctic explorer, are now mentioned as envoys to the powers.

All those in the civil service of Norway have announced their adhesion to the new government, and all the generals have taken the oath of allegiance.

There is no excitement reported either in Norway or Sweden. Ovations in honor of King Oscar continue at Stockholm, where there is a firm determination not to recognize the action of the storthing as definitely achieving the disruption of the union.

Crown Prince Gustave passed through Copenhagen last night on his journey from Berlin. He was received by Crown Prince Frederick of Denmark and appears to be very much concerned over the situation. The two crown princes conversed at length in the station before the train left for Stockholm.

The Associated Press learns that Crown Prince Gustave had a long interview on the crisis with Emperor William before he left Berlin, and that it is understood the emperor is not unwilling to intervene in favor of the Swedish dynasty.

An authority intimately connected with the emperor confirms a rumor that he abandoned his trip to Norway at the request of Crown Prince Gustave.

The general opinion is that Crown Prince Gustave was more irreconcilable to Norway than was his father, and there is no doubt that he induced King Oscar to veto the consular bill.

Many English and American tourists who arrived here on their way to Norway have abandoned the trip, owing to the revolution.

THE FOSSICK CASE.

Attorney Raised Money to Conduct Savoy Theater.

London, June 9.—The further hearing of the charge against Alfred Fossick, a lawyer of Maidenhead, Berkshire, (charged with misappropriating $60,000 and who according to a statement in court by counsel for the plaintiff in the case informed plaintiff's counsel that he had lent the money to Mrs. James Brown Potter,) occurred today. Mrs. Potter testified that Fossick as her lawyer undertook to raise from his clients a $65,000 mortgage on her property at Maidenhead. The money was required to conduct the Savoy theater. Mrs. Potter never knew that Fossick personally was advancing the funds.

FOR AN EIGHT-HOUR DAY.

Chicago, June 9.—The eight-hour conference of the International Typographical union in the central district, which includes Michigan, Wisconsin, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska and Missouri opened here today. Where the book and job shops have been working a nine-hour day, the union asks an eight-hour day.

INAUGURATED SATURDAY.

Caracas, Vez., June 9.—President Castro will be formally inaugurated as president of Venezuela tomorrow.

NO INDICATIONS OF END TO THE STRIKE

Employers Positively Refuse to Make Further Concessions.

Thousands of Outside Drivers Ready If the Strike Extends.

President Shea Summoned to Wheaton on Legal Business.

Chicago, June 9.—That the teamsters must meet all of the conditions laid down by the employers or declare the strike off without making any settlement, now seems, from the employers' standpoint, to be the logical outcome of the struggle. Another attempt to arrange a new peace conference has resulted in a reiteration by the employers that they will make no further concessions. A general meeting of the Chicago Team Owners' association will be held tomorrow night to vote on the proposition to deliver to strike affected houses. An affirmative decision would precipitate a walkout of 8,000 teamsters.

Announcement was made today by the Employers' Teaming company that men were reporting daily to its agents in seven cities and that it would be possible to rush to Chicago 400 men a day in the event of a further extension of the strike.

The garment workers, the original cause of the present strike, have come to the conclusion that the teamsters have forgotten the "sympathy" which two months ago prompted them to strike in aid of the tailors. At a meeting of all the special order locals, the following resolution was adopted:

"Resolved, that in the event of the Teamsters' union calling off the strike, it be the sense of this organization that such action shall not terminate in anyway the struggle which the garment workers are carrying on against the National Wholesale Tailors' association, unless the teamsters' settlement carries with it a satisfactory settlement of the garment workers' question."

George Jackson, a tallyman employed by a lumber firm, has been attacked by three "sluggers" and probably fatally injured. His assailants, who escaped, accused him of being a strike breaker.

Disappointed by a sudden turn of affairs that resulted in President C. P. Shea being subpoenaed to Wheaton, Ill., today, leaders in the teamsters' strike paused in forcing definite peace moves. They feared some sort of a trick in the unexpected demand upon the chief executive of the Brotherhood of Teamsters. Mr. Shea had just reiterated his belief that a conference of strike leaders and employers might be brought about with some bright chances for a settlement, if both himself and Attorney Levy Meyer, attorney for the employers, were not included in the make-up of the conference. While still talking, Mr. Shea was served with a legal paper, demanding his presence in a court in the neighboring county in a "Pan-Handle railroad case," he said. The leader of the teamsters accepted service and started at once for Wheaton.

Previous to the departure of Shea, a committee of the Department Drivers' union had re-opened negotiations with department store employers, looking to another general conference with representatives of the Employers' association. Attorney Meyer had given his positive assurance that he was ready to meet a committee of teamsters any time it had a proposition to offer, so that when the strike shall have been ended no striker might say that the drivers were refused a conference.

Warlike reports continue to come from the team owners, but W. P. Rend is almost the only employer in the association who is definitely known to be disposed to break the period of neutrality and "go it alone." Tomorrow evening the Team Owners' association intends to discuss fully every phase of the situation. In a recent referendum canvass, wholly informal, it is said that only two of the employers were in favor of forcing the issue with drivers by demanding that deliveries be made anywhere. Other reports are that J. J. O'Hern, Mix & Jackson and Taft Brothers, team owners, entertain opinions similar to W. P. Rend.

The matter requiring the presence of President C. P. Shea at Wheaton had seemingly no bearing on the strike. He was said to have been asked to identify a document, signed by E. V. Debs, in connection with the American Railway union strike of 1894. Shea declared that he could not supply the required identification.

DIES FROM YELLOW FEVER.

New York, June 9.—Frank O'Leary of Buffalo died at the government hospital on Swineburne island today of yellow fever. He was taken ill on board the steamer Siguanca while en route from Colon to this city and was transferred to the hospital on the steamer's arrival. The Siguanca brought nearly 150 passengers, many of whom registered their positions in Panama because of the health conditions on the isthmus.

WILL HYDE SELL HIS EQUITABLE STOCK?

Rumor Says So, But He Denies That Statement Is True.

New York, June 9.—The following statement was given out today at the Equitable Life Assurance society offices, on behalf of James H. Hyde:

"Any statement to the effect that I intend to sell my stock in the Equitable is untrue."

The directors of the society prepared to meet at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Notwithstanding Mr. Hyde's denial, it is learned that negotiations for some form of transfer of the Hyde holdings are in progress.

New York, June 9.—A conference has been held, says the World, lasting until an early hour this morning, at which negotiations for the purchase of the stock control of the Equitable Life Assurance society, owned by James H. Hyde, were made by George J. Gould, on behalf of a syndicate of financiers and business men.

"When the conference ended," the World asserts, "satisfactory progress had been made, and it is expected that the sale of Mr. Hyde's stock will be ratified before the meeting of the Equitable directors, which will take place at 1 p. m. today.

"The greatest secrecy concerning the conference was maintained. It began early in the night in the home of one of Mr. Hyde's lawyers, and from there the conferees went to another place.

"Mr. Hyde, attended by his lawyers, Samuel Untermyer, Elihu Root and William C. Gulliver, was present.

"The price offered was a sum said to be in excess of $4,000,000 and less than $5,000,000 for the fifty-two shares, which have a par value of $50,200, and which were valued at the time of Henry B. Hyde's death, for the purpose of fixing the state inheritance tax, at $250 a share, or $125,500.

"Mr. Hyde is said to have expressed a willingness to sell on certain conditions. These included:

"First—That the stock should be trusted by the new owners and voted, so that the policyholders should elect twenty-eight directors and the stockholders twenty-four directors.

"Second—That he should be given his own time to retire as a director of the Equitable, but that, if the new owners so decided, he would surrender the office of first vice president.

"Third—That neither E. H. Harriman nor Henry C. Frick should have any direct or indirect connection with the purchase of the stock.

"Mr. Hyde is said to have remarked, in connection with the last stipulation, that rather than allow one of the men named to obtain control he would make a bonfire of his stock.

"Who is behind Mr. Gould in the reported negotiations could not be learned. It is believed that he is merely acting in the matter as an intermediary for others because of his friendship and influence with Mr. Hyde.

GERMANY'S NOTE CONCERNING MOROCCO AROUSES FRANCE

Paris, June 9.—Germany's note to the powers proposing an international conference on the subject of Morocco is regarded in the highest quarters as renewing the gravity of the situation almost to the point of making it menacing. France has received a copy of the note, showing that Germany acted openly in appealing to the powers, notwithstanding the official statement from Berlin that Morocco invites the conference. The officials here interpret the German note as showing that Germany is the real upholder of the conference. The text of the note shows that Germany relies mainly on article 17 of the treaty of Madrid, signed July 3, 1880, in which Gen. Lucius Fairchild, signed for the United States. Article 17 recites that Morocco recognizes the most favored nation treatment in the case of all the powers represented at the conference. The German note holds that this gives the powers equal rights to consider the affairs of Morocco.

It is desired that Washington and other capitals receiving the German note observe the limited application.

A cabinet council tomorrow will consider the note. The nature of France's official answer is still in doubt, owing to Premier Rouvier's desire to avoid widening the breach between Germany and France.

WORK RUSHED ON CHICAGO SUBWAY

Chicago, June 9.—By the last of August the Chicago Subway company will be handling freight to and from practically all the railroad terminals of Chicago. Work on the bore is being rushed day and night, an added impetus having been given by the teamsters' strike.

A remarkable record in tunnel construction has been made in the last two months, more than five miles of underground passages having been finished. The strike began just before this period of unusual activity. In the last two months 60,000 cubic yards of material have been excavated. The concrete hauled through the tunnels to finish the new workings amounted to 25,000 cubic yards.

The company now has nearly thirty-two miles of bore, interlacing the district bounded by Twelfth and Halsted streets, Chicago avenue and the lake. This is being equipped with trolley wires and laid with heavy rails for the use of the electric road on which the merchandise will be carried forty feet beneath the level of the city's streets.

PAUPER BAKERS STRIKE FOR PAY

New York, June 9.—Considerable merriment has been caused by a strike of paupers in a county alms house, just outside Jersey City. The men detailed to act as bakers organized and elected a walking delegate, who notified the county board in charge of the institution that his fellows would not knead the alms house dough until there names were put on the payroll with the attendants and other employes. The delegate explained to the committeeman that the bakers were entitled to pay because, unlike many other paupers, they do not desert the institution during the summer months to recuperate at the seashore and in the mountains, but remain at their duties in the bakeshop and work faithfully for the county. The committee rejected the demands, and informed the strikers that they would be put to work in the stone quarries if they do not return to work in the bake shop.

YOUNG KING FEEDS THE ANIMALS

London, June 9.—This was the last day of King Alfonso's stay in London. He leaves here early tomorrow morning for Spain. His majesty spent this morning in witnessing a drill of the fire brigade, inspecting the national gallery of pictures, and in seeing the zoological gardens, where he joined other youthful visitors in feeding the monkeys with nuts and the elephants with biscuits. Subsequently the young king, accompanied by King Edward, went to Windsor. A state ball at Buckingham palace tonight winds up the program for King Alfonso's entertainment.

RAILROAD GIVES $10,000 TO HARRISBURG HOSPITAL.

Harisburg, Pa., June 9.—In addition to a letter expressive of its appreciation of the aid and succor given to the injured and care bestowed upon the dead in the South Harrisburg wreck of May 11 by the people of Harrisburg, the Pennsylvania railroad has donated $10,000 to the Harrisburg hospital. The donation was given to the hospital without any restrictions as to its use, that being left entirely to its board of managers.

PEACE BETWEEN RUSSIA AND JAPAN IN A VERY SHORT TIME IS PRACTICALLY A CERTAINTY

Believed That Announcement Will Come From Washington.

Ambassador Meyer Very Busy With the Foreign Officials.

A Council of Russian Ministers Is Held at Tsarskoe-Selo.

St. Petersburg, June 9, 6:15 p. m.—Ambassador Meyer was in constant communication with Washington this morning. He received a long cipher dispatch, and soon afterward hurried to the foreign office, where he had half an hour's earnest conversation with Foreign Minister Lamsdorff concerning the information transmitted to him. Extreme reticence continues to be manifested, but it is apparent that the great announcement, for which the world is waiting, will not be made from here or from Tokio, but from Washington. It is not likely to be delayed beyond Monday at the latest. No hitch has occurred, and the outlook continues favorable to peace.

A council of ministers, presided over by the emperor in person, was held at Tsarskoe-Selo, this afternoon, to discuss the situation in regard to the developments. His majesty's brother, Grand Duke Michael, who has arrived here from Berlin, is believed to be the bearer of a personal message from Emperor William, advising the conclusion of peace.

PREPARING THE PUBLIC

For Announcement That Peace Is to Be Made.

St. Petersburg, June 9, 11:35 a. m.—The government is plainly preparing the public for the announcement that the emperor has decided to conclude peace, and that the negotiations have begun, by permitting the publication of all the foreign dispatches bearing on the matter. The newspapers and the Russian public, however, have until now only had a suspicion that important moves were going on behind the scenes.

In well informed circles it is believed that Japan already has instructed Field Marshal Oyama to stay his hand pending the result of the present tentative negotiations, and that Gen. Linevitch also has been confindentially advised of the situation. Nevertheless, the irreconcilable remnants of the war party are believed to be urging the Russian commander-in-chief to assume the offensive, in the hope of achieving a victory, and thus change the emperor's present disposition in favor of the conclusion of hostilities.

If such an intrigue is in progress it has no chance of success. It can be assumed that there will be no further bloodshed in Manchuria until the belligerents have decided whether it is now possible to agree on peace terms. The government in the present emergency is acting with great wisdom. It is preparing to time the proclamation of a national assembly with the announcement that peace negotiations have begun. The committee of ministers is hurrying through its examination of the Bouligan rescript commissions project for the Gosudarstvennai duma, "imperial duma," scheme, already outlines in these dispatches, its consideration having commenced yesterday and continuing today. Practically no alterations are being made in the text, and the Associated Press learns from a prominent Russian statesman conversant with the situation that the review of the Bouligan commissions project is purely formal, as a manifesto promulgating a law giving the Russian people a voice in legislation is already drafted. The informant of the Associated Press claims to have seen the original and he expects the law to be proclaimed early next week.

Evidence accumulates that President Roosevelt's efforts in behalf of peace have been supported by practically every European power by the transmission through their representatives and the belligerents' respective capitals that it is the solemn conviction of their respective governments that the time has arrived for the warring countries to conclude peace. The president's endeavors seem limited to bringing the plenipotentiaries of Russia and Japan together to arrange the preliminary terms for the conclusion of a limited armistice and the selection of a place for the future negotiations, and the plenipotentiaries, in the opinion of the diplomats, will make the next move, as it is not believed Japan will divulge her terms until the plenipotentiaries meet. The ambassador of one of the great European powers expressed the opinion to the Associated Press that the exchanges would not occur either at Washington or at any European capital, but upon the battlefield in Manchuria.

"Both Russia and Japan desire to conduct the negotiations direct," said the embassador. "Where is there a better place than Manchuria, which is beyond the sphere of outside influence, is practically neutral territory and is in direct communication with the respective capitals. Linevitch and Oyama confronting each other upon the field where they fought could arrange the preliminaries. Once the main principles as to the indemnity, the status of Sakhalin and Vladivostok and the question of the Russian ships in neutral waters in the Far East are adjusted, all other questions could easily be settled."

FRANCE WILL CO-OPERATE

With United States In Interest of Peace.

Paris, June 9, 1:10 p. m.—M. Bompard, the French ambassador to Russia returns to St. Petersburg tomorrow, after a lengthy conference with President Loubet at the foreign office, in which it is understood the peace situation was fully considered. This will place the ambassador in a position to co-operate strongly in the pacific efforts of the United States and it is intimated that he may carry an autograph letter from M. Loubet to Emperor Nicholas along lines similar to President Roosevelt's message. The general feeling here continues hopeful, the officials considering that the emperor's hesitation and Japan's military aims are the chief obstacles remaining.

APPARENT SUCCESS

Of President's Peace Efforts Pleases Great Britain.

London, June 9, 1:35 p. m.—Much satisfaction is expressed in official and diplomatic circles here at the apparent success of President Roosevelt in bringing Russia and Japan together for the purpose of ending the war. Since his arrival here Whitelaw Reid, the American ambassador, has been in close and frequent communication with the foreign office. The ambassador is not willing at the present juncture to disclose the result of his visits, but apparently he is well pleased with the progress of the negotiations as, after a busy week socially and officially, the ambassador and Mrs. and Miss Reid leave London tomorrow to spend the week end with Earl Egerton of Tatton and his wife, the duchess of Buckingham and Chandos, at Tatton park, Knutsford, Cheshire. The other embassies are without any information. Russian official circles now think that peace is probable, or at least that a cessation of hostilities is pending in an endeavor to bring about a meeting of representatives of the two powers. It is pointed out in these circles that from the first Russia declared her preference to negotiating with Japan direct, and President Roosevelt apparently is acting on that line in arranging the preliminaries for direct negotiations between Japan and Russia.

MORE SLIGHT SKIRMISHES.

Tokio, June 9, 9:30 a. m.—Army headquarters have given out the following:

"A detachment of our forces which advanced from Lianshuichnan, two miles east of Chenchengtsu, dislodging one company of foot and fifty horse of the enemy, holding the hills north of that place, at 3 o'clock on the morning of June 7, occupied an eminence east of Chapengan and four miles north of Chenchengtsu.

"At 6 o'clock on the same morning the enemy attempted an attack on Sou fauftae, ten miles north of Changtu and on Taaotun, five miles northwest of Changtu and on Shihtiuti, two miles north of Taaotun. All attacks were repulsed."

RED CROSS SCANDAL.

Kazan, European Russia, June 9.—Another Red Cross scandal has developed in the discovery that a donation of 5,000 pounds of tobacco intended for distribution among the soldiers in the field is now on sale at Harbin.

CARMAN SUCCEEDS BOYNTON.

Washington, June 9.—Secretary Taft has appointed Gen. Ezra A. Carman as chairman of the Chickamauga Military Park association, to succeed the late Gen. H. V. Boynton.

FORTY MEMBERS OF UNION IN JAIL FOR SHOOTING MEMBER

Philadelphia, June 9.—Forty members of the local branch of the Structural Iron Workers and Bridge Builders' union were today committed to prison without bail to await the result of the injuries of Edward Joyce, who is said to be dying in a hospital. Joyce's home is in Washington. He is a member of the local bridge builders' union and last night attended a meeting of the organization. He was shot during the meeting but has steadfastly refused to say who shot him or to make a statement as to the cause of the shooting. The forty other members of the union now under arrest were arraigned for a hearing before a magistrate and all refused to answer questions.

GENUINE WHISKY

Cannot Stand Test of the Minnesota Law.

St. Paul, June 9.—If a person is fond of good whisky wishes to buy an extra fine article, he should select something that is illegal within the meaning of the Minnesota pure whisky law.

This is the rather startling announcement made by the dairy and food commission at the conclusion of its investigation of alleged illegal whisky sold at Hibbing and other points on the iron range. The officials of the commission say that genuine whisky, the brand that costs the most, cannot stand the test of the Minnesota law, whereas the cheapest kind of knockout drops can get through with flying colors.

All the samples of whisky secured from the iron range have been found legal under the Minnesota law. The department has ruled that whisky having not more than 25 per cent of fusal oil is legal, and that having more than this amount is illegal. Cheap whisky seldom has this amount, whereas the best brands frequently have 30 per cent of fusel oil.

LACE HOSE AND FRENCH HEELS

Instead of Moccasins Surprised Easterner In Indian Territory.

Muskogee, I. T., June 9.—From Shawnee the Choctaw, Oklahoma and Gulf railroad reaches away to the south and hides itself in the timber of the Seminoles. The vast woods sweeping from the tracks over a sloping country have yielded little to the settler, for there are few houses and many miles separate the railroad stations.

Crooked, ugly streams which an almost tropical rainfall keeps swollen and yellow at this time of the year are the only openings through the dense growth of trees and vines. It is a wild country which the advance of civilization had spared for a little while that the Indian might know the seclusion of the forests, and in their depths preserve the hallowed traditions of his race.

So thought a man from the East in the smoking car as through the shadows the train raced against the falling eventide. He had never been in Indian Territory before, but had an idea of what it was like, based upon stories heard in the East. He knew that it had been penetrated in places by white men, persons accumstomed to taking long chances, who had succeeded in flim-flamming those Indians friendly enough to do business, and that there were in the territory five tribes, some of whose members were civilized. He was in the Indian country now—the brakeman had said so—and might be among the Indians soon, providing those along the Choctaw road knew enough to go to the station at train time.

The brakeman went through the car calling a station. It was Wewoka. The name rang true and the men from the East went out on the platform as the train slowed up and looked first about the station, then towards the woods. Not a brave was near; not a red blanket showed itself; not even a squaw was in sight. The man from the East went back to his seat.

He went back to Detroit and then came to Toledo, losing several positions because he says she would insist on going into the shop and raising a disturbance because a woman happened to pass by and some one in the shop would nod at her.

BREAD WOMEN OPPOSE

Election of Pretty Girl as Their Queen.

Paris, June 9.—Tremendous agitation has arisen between 2,000 of the women, young and old, employed as "porteuses de pain," or bread carriers, by the Paris bakers. A "queen" has had to be elected among these women for the fetes to be organized in connection with the forthcoming congress of millers and bakers. A meeting has been held, amid great uproar, between the whites and the blues. The bakers' shopgirls, who wear white aprons, only carry bread from the counter to the baskets and to the scales, and they are geenrally smart, spruce and good looking persons. On the other hand, the blue apron wearers, who ascend to top stories of houses, carrying bread to flats, are often elderly and plain. These were numerous at the meeting, and vehemently resented the election as "reine des porteuses de pain" of Mdlle. Mercier, a girl of 18, and one of the white-aproned band. She is employed in the shop of a Belleville baker. Four ladies-in-waiting were next elected, only one of them being a blue apron. This caused more uproar, and the committeemen, as well as the queen and her attendants, were pelted with corks, pelets of paper, and even potatoes. The blue-aproned "porteuses de pain" left the meeting in a very exasperated condition, and threaten reprisals when the coronation of Mdlle. Mercier takes place.

IRRIGATION IN INDIA.

Two Big Reclamation Projects to Be Undertaken.

London, June 9.—The secretary of state for India has sanctioned two important irrigation schemes in accordance with the policy recommended by Sir Colin Scott-Moncrieff's commission. The first of these schemes is the irrigation at a cost of 18½ laks of rupees of Divi Island at the mouth of the Kistna river, in the Madras presidency. Water is to be raised from the river by means of centrifugal pumps driven by Diesel oil engines. The area of land to be fertilized is 50,000 acres, and the net revenue anticipated will be equivalent to 9½ per cent on the total capital oulay. The other scheme sanctioned is of a "protective" rather than a "productive" character. At a cost of over 40 laks of rupees a canal is to be constructed from the Dassan river in the Hamipur district of the United Provinces, a distance of 20¼ miles, with branches to Jalapur and Mandha, 23½ and 14½ miles respectively in length, and with a system of tributaries whose total length is estimated at 210 miles. The canals will protect a huge tract of country very liable to drouth. Comanding a sufficient area of 326,000 acres they are expected to provide sufficient water to irrigate 57,000 acres in ordinary seasons and about 73,000 acres in years of deficient rainfall. The estimated net revenue will yield a return on the capital of from two to six per cent.

HAS HIS WIFE RESTRAINED

From Visiting His Barber Shop and Injuring Business.

Toledo, O., June 9.—Harry Hoffer at last has obtained relief from what he says is a pestering wife, for at his solicitation today Judge Tyler enjoined Bertha Hoffer from annoying her husband, going to his place of business and there interfering with his enjoyment of liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

It was decidely unique relief that Hoffer asked the court for in his divorce suit, as he says for years he has been so pestered by his wife as to lose position after position. They were married in November of 1900 in Detroit, where he had a barber shop with a fine trade.

After the marriage, however, he says business commenced to fall off greatly because she insisted on insulting patrons. He says she loafed about the shop, and that her intense jealousy and bad temper made life miserable for him, for he couldn't pass a woman without his wife calling him all kinds of names and making numerous charges. She threatened, he said, to make a tramp of him and then either shoot him or throw acid in his face.

Because of her actions he says he had to close up business and they went to New York, and at her solicitation went on the stage. He says he was a frost at this, however, as it wasn't to his liking, so he went back to barbering.

WILL ATTEMPT INNOVATION

Wireless Telegraphy to Be Established on Trains.

Chicago, June 9.—As a further protection to their train service, the Chicago & Alton railway has announced that the company had made all arrangements for the establishment of a wireless telegraph system on all trains running between Chicago and St. Louis and that eventually the innovation would be extended to the entire system. That the wireless telegraph can be used on fast moving trains with entire satisfaction, was demonstrated today by the Alton road, when messages were sent from Chicago to the officials of the road traveling on the limited train running between Chicago and St. Louis. The observation car on the train was equipped with wireless apparatus and, while running at the rate of fifty miles an hour, messages were received from President Felton in the general offices in Chicago and replies sent back without the slightest hitch. So successful was the experiment that it was decided to equip at once all trains running on the lines between here and St. Louis with the wireless apparatus.

"This is the first time that the wireless system has ever been used to communicate with persons on a moving train," said President Felton.

The experiment was so successful that in a very short time we will be handling all our train orders over the wireless system. By this system the dispatcher will be able to reach any train on any part of his division whenever he pleases. Trains running in close proximity to each other will also be able to exchange messages, as we will have telegraph operators on all freight trains as well as passenger trains. With this system on our trains, we believe that it will be absolutely impossible to have a collision on our road, no matter what the weather conditions are, as the operators on every train will know the exact whereabouts of every train on the road and will keep the train crew notified at all times as to how close the trains are to each other. It is our intention, also to handle commercial messages for our patrons to and from moving trains. This will be an exceptional boon, particularly to those who are interested in the fluctuations of the stock market and matters of life and death."

ATTEMPTS SUICIDE.

Tenstrike Woman Takes Dose of Carbolic Acid.

Bemidji, Minn., June 9.—In the presence of several witnesses, Mrs. Charles Cleveland of Tenstrike, Tuesday afternoon, attempted suicide by taking a dose of carbolic acid. The act was committed about 3 o'clock in the afternoon and as soon as she had taken the dose those who witnessed the affair sent for a physician, who administered antidotes and succeeded in prolonging the life of the would-be suicide, whose condition is yet very serious. Mrs. Cleveland took the poison while standing on the street in front of her home in Tenstrike.

Domestic troubles are given as the cause for the rash act. It is claimed at Tenstrike that Mrs. Cleveland and her husband have had trouble on numerous occasions and that about a week ago he left home, taking with him one of their two children.

Mrs. Cleveland is the daughter of C. N. Nelson of Tenstrike and is well known.

AWARDS MADE

Contracts Given For Construction of Missabe Road's Extension.

New Line Will Extend From Alborn to Bovey.

Te contracts for the Duluth, Missabe & Northern Railway company's 55-mile extension from a point near Alborn to Bovey station, in Itasca county have been awarded and construction work is expected to begin right away, the road to be completed by next spring. The Herald a couple of weeks ago announced that the work had been decided on.

For convenience in railroad construction work the proposed new line has been divided into five sections. The first section leads from Alborn in a northwesterly direction for 15 miles, and the contract has been awarded the Drake & Stratton company. The second contract calls for 19 miles of road to be constructed by Runquist & Whittier, and the remaining three sections of 21 miles will be constructed by Winston Bros.' company, and C. Wurdenhoff.

The new railroad line will reach the Canisteo mines, located on the western extension of the Mesaba range, in 56-24 and will mean, practically, that Duluth is to have a new line in that territory.

Not only will the branch road afford railroad facilities to the west end of the Mesaba range, where exploration work has been pushed for the past several years, but it will also open up a considerable amount of new farming land in this county between the main line of the Mesaba road and the Great Northern line to Cass Lake. A portion of the new road will pass through muskeg or swampy country, but along the route there will be a large area of country with excellent soil and with hardwood timber.

The new road will cross the Great Northern line overhead at Alborn, according to the plans, and will have a grade crossing with that road on the line between Swan River and Hibbing at a short distance south of Stuart station.

During the exploration work conducted in 56-24, Itasca county's large deposit of iron ore has been shown and the Oliver Iron Mining company, a subsidiary company of the United States Steel corporation, now practically controls all the merchantable ore in the new district, with the exception of one or two properties now being explored.

The Oliver company first purchased the fee of what is known as the Diamond lands, comprising 1,000 acres upon which there is said to be some deposits, the most important being located about a mile west of Bovey. Later the same company acquired the lease of the Arcturus property, then the entire holdings of the Canisteo Mining company. The Oliver company also took exploring options on what is known as the Brown and Morrison lands, the Lewis claim, the Buckeye property, the Buckman and Lind property, several state leases and some individual properties, upon which exploring is going on for the United States Steel corporation through the Oliver Iron Mining company.

The ore in this new district is said to be more than half Bessemer and about a quarter of it is merchantable in its natural state. The balance is to be screened or washed and will, it is said, yield a product more desirable for furnace use.

The Oliver company is reported to be figuring on shipping over 2,000,00 tons per year from this district. The mining operations will be in charge of John C. Greenway, of the Oliver company.

The line will have a single track for the present, but it is said to be the intention to establish a double track system as soon as the conditions warrant it.

AFTER A DOCK.

Wisconsin Central Company Gets a Site.

The Wisconsin Central Railway company, through the name of the Lake Superior & Southeastern Railroad company, is seeking a suitable dock site on the Superior side of the bay, and negotiations are said to be now pending for one of the best locations still unoccupied.

The site is said to be located on St. Louis bay and includes the fractional government lots 2 and 3 of the fractional north half of section 16. The Terminal company's tracks run just south of the site, and those, with the old Eastern Minnesota docks, are used by the Jones & Adams company and the P. & R. company, cutting off an almost triangular piece of dock property which is to be taken for the new docks. Including the riparian rights, the location is said to include about 300 acres, half of which is under water, the dock line being nearly one-half mile from the shore.

The site is now owned by the Land & River company, and it is reported that the deal for a transfer to the railroad company is likely to be consummated within a few days' time.

RUMOR IS DENIED.

Story Connecting John C. Eden With Northern Pacific.

St. Paul, June 9.—A rumor was circulated in railroad circles in St. Paul yesterday that J. C. Eden, formerly assistant general traffic manager of the Great Northern, who resigned the position to take charge of his ore properties on the iron range, has been offered the position of assistant general traffic manager of the Northern Pacific, with headquarters at Seattle.

It has been reported for some time that the Northern Pacific intended to create such a position. It is said that the Northern Pacific's facilities for handling its business in the West are not equal to the Great Northern's. The work of traffic manager for the Northern Pacific in the West has been done by the assistant general freight and passenger agents.

J. G. Woodworth, traffic manager of the Northern Pacific, when seen, said that he had heard of no such appointment.

GEESE

Roam at Will In Streets of London.

London, June 9.—It is hardly to be believed that geese can be seen roaming the streets of London at large, yet this is actually the case. In the Goswell road and Aldersgate street a number of fine geese can be seen almost any day strutting about at their own free will to the astonishment of pedestrians passing through these thoroughfares. The abode of the birds is in a van yard in the Goswell road, and when they are not in their natural element their unrestrained liberty has become a familiar feature to the passer-by.

NO SECRET ABOUT IT.

It is no secret that for Cuts, Burns, Ulcers, Fever Sores, Sore Eyes, Boils, etc., nothing is so effective as Bucklen's Arnica Salve. "It didn't take long to cure a bad sore I had, and it is all O. K. for sore eyes," writes D. L. Gregory of Hope, Texas. 25c at all drug stores.

The reception in honor of the wives and daughters of the visiting Elks, which was held yesterday at the Spalding, was a most charming social affair. The parlors and hall of the hotel were lavishly decorated in palms rising from purple shrouded jardiniere. The parlor was particularly attractive with the palms and purple decoration, and an immense bouquet of shaded peonies added a touch of glowing color. La Brosse's orchestra played during the receiving hours, from 3 to 5 o'clock, and a large number of guests called.

Among the Duluth women who acted as hostesses were Mrs. J. L. Fuller, Mrs. J. W. Kreitter, Mrs. W. L. Gorrie, Mrs. J. T. Armstead, Mrs. A. E. McManus, Mrs. J. H. MacFadzean, Mrs. F. A. Berg, Mrs. R. M. Edwards, Mrs. F. M. Anderson, Mrs. A. J. Lyle, Mrs. A. W. Holmes, Mrs. W. A. Eden, and Mrs. R. J. Mooney. A large number of beautiful gowns were worn and the affair was most delightful. A small souvenir of Duluth views in color was presented each guest from the members of the local lodge, and the little books were beautiful examples of work. The first view was, of course, of the wonderful aerial bridge, and views of the piers during a storm, the harbor, the principal buildings of the city, and bits of the natural scenery, the parks, and some Indian views comprise the book, which is a most attarctive souvenir of the first annual meeting of the Minnesota State association, held at Duluth

The 1905 opening reception and dance of the Duluth Boat club was held last night at the club house, and was one of the most delightful affairs of the week. The weather was ideal for the affair, and in addition to the dancing in the reception hall, the guests took delightful little excursions on the bay in the canoes and other boats. The rooms and verandas were hung with Japanese lanterns, and La Brosse's orchestra played for the dancing. Nearly 200 of the members and their guests were present.

BELIEVES IN MARRIAGE.

Viola Allen Expresses Herself on Subject.

Viola Allen, regarded as one of the most reserved and uninterviewable women of the stage, once gave her opinion of the growing tendency away from marriage on the part of professional women, says the Dramatic Mirror. Miss Allen, herself unmarried, said:

"The future of all women, whether they are independent or not, includes wifehood and motherhood. The fact that a woman has marked out a career for herself need not in any way bar her from the great happiness which is her right. On the other hand, it should help to make her better fitted to take upon herself the great responsibilities of life.

"While she is struggling to win fame and a competence she is gaining experience, depth of character and strength of mind which will add to the brightness and beauty of her future, whatever that may be. It is a great blessing that women are no longer compelled to sit quietly at home and wait for that which the future has in store for them, but are able to put in their time to the very best advantage, mentally and physically.

"Women are beginning to look upon marriage more as men do—in the light of something to achieve at the right time—and this is an attitude they have only been able to assume within the last few years. A woman need not marry for a home, and, to my mind, there is no single phase of this question of her future so full of significance as that which is embodied in this one statement. The very fact that she is capable of taking care of herself, of providing for her own creature comforts, and possibly for others near and dear to her, makes her demand more of the world and of man than her sister before her demanded, with the result that when she does marry it is for the one and only one reason that should prompt a woman to take the step—for love.

"Not only will the future see more marriages of independent women, but these marriages will approach nearer the ideal one. Men and women stand upon an equal footing, they feel a sympathy and love for each other which have nothing of the dependent quality on the feminine side, nor the domineering one on the masculine, and the single woman will be proud and happy to make the lines of her life parallel with those of a man who appreciates her mental qualities, and to whom she can be a helpmate in the true sense of the word."

NADA

By F. H. Lancaster.

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

"Caramba!" And then the assistant manager having vented his only Spanish swear word fell back on English. "What the deuce is that din."

Under the window were three women. One raked riot from an instrument of torture, one sang in voice of brass-bound barrenness and one stood weeping.

"Shoot the syllabus," he exclaimed softly, "If you be the musical voices and sweet guitar of Spain, may the devil fly away with your prospectus. But why doth the fair one weep?"

As there was no one in the office to answer this question, and as he was quite new to Porto Rico, Pendleton set to work to piece out the song—if such it could be called—for himself. He knew Spanish—book Spanish—but the music and the voice were too much for his translating. He shouted impatiently to them to stop the music and go slow. The older women obeyed, delighted to have attracted the attention of the rich American; all Americans are rich in Porto Rico, and the younger woman pushed her face farther into her hands. Whether she wept or whether she just stood listening to that doleful song, Pendleton could not tell. But by littles he made out the meaning of it all. It was her tale of woe that the beggars were relating in their song. A true tale, he fancied, seeing how she seemed to bow beneath the shame of it. A sorry one, even for a native of Porto Rico if it was true. Pendleton hailing from a particularly prosperous section of the states was new to beggars and their wiles. Besides, he could not possibly work with that demon-like din going on under his window. He went out into the street and to the woman who was weeping—or pretending to.

"See here," he said in abrupt American fashion, "what is your name?"

"Nada," she told him.

"'Nada,' that means nothing."

"It is my name, senor."

"It suits you," reflected the young man grimly, for she did appear to be as near nothing as any human being could be; worn to the bone with privation, barely covered with the short supply of rags that did duty as clothing.

"Is it true, what they say?" he jerked a motion toward the musicians.

"It is true, senor."

"You and your children are at home starving while your dog of a husband gambles at Ponce?"

A flash of indignation lighted her very large eyes.

"Domingo is a good boy, senor. He cannot buy bread to feed so many mouths."

"But I'll bet he can buy dulce enough for his own mouth," Pendleton muttered. "Why don't you work, then?" he demanded.

"I can get no work, senor."

"Why, I'll give you 50 cents a day to clean my office—Oh, cut that. Here's a dollar. Go get some decent clothes and then get to work." Under the silver he had folded a five-dollar bill and as he retreated he saw Nada hurriedly hide the paper in her rags before her companions could sweep down for their thirds. They divided the dollar among them while Pendleton fled their blessings.

Nada was back in an hour quite clean and decent to sweep and dust the office. Pendleton went to the window to give her full swing and found himself confronted with a group of half-starved, wholly naked little natives that had followed their mother to his door. It was true. There was six of them; and the mother barely more than a girl—in years.

"I don't see what Uncle Sam is ever going to do with such a population as this," he muttered in disgust. "It is Nada all along the line." But for all that Pendleton got his money's worth. Each morning he fancied that the dark little faces of his family of proteges were less gaunt, the lean little ribs less in evidence. Even Nada's eyes grew less fearfully large and bright. "At any rate, there was one family in Porto Rico rescued from starvation."

Was there? A morning soon came when the children's eyes were wolfish with hunger, Nada again in rags.

"Where are your clothes," Pendleton demanded.

Nada hid her thin face in her thin hands.

"Has your—husband come home. Ah? And he has gambled away everything you had. Ah?" he insisted.

"It is his bad luck, senor, his bad luck. Domingo is a good boy. It is his bad luck."

"I'll bad luck him," Pendleton declared wrathfully. But chilling his ire came the tolling of the plantation bells. Solemn and slow, and at the sound, each man gripping his trusty machette, ran toward his captain.

"Fire in the cane fields!" Pendleton shouted to his chief, but the chief was already at the door of the inner office.

"It's that Domingo Delgarde," he said hotely. "I saw him around here yesterday. Gambling all night! Now he has gone to sleep in the field with a cigarette"—they ran from the office together.

Captains and their squads were either already on the scene of disaster or hurrying there. Swiftly the long line of fighters stretched itself across the path of the fire. Like light the keen bachettes flashed at their work. The lane opened through the thick-growing cane, acre after acre the well-trained workers swept onward and following them, came those appointed to fire against the fire. If any human being be caught now between those two lines of onrushing flame, may the Lord have mercy on his soul, for his body it doomed. It was Pendleton's first experience of a cane firo and his pulses leaped fircely to the fierce excitement of it, the wild hurry, the danger. And yet over the rear of the fire, the crackling boom of the burning cane, the monotonous tolling of the bells, the shouts of the men and the nearby hum and ring of the flying machetes, Pendleton heard like a never-ending echo that wail of woman's woe that had broken sharply upon the chief's impatient—"Gone to sleep in the cane field with a cigarette."

Well, if the gambling husband of Nada had been the first thing burned by the fire he had started, there would be one less brute to take his children's bread and throw it to the dogs.

"And yet I suppose if he did get caught in that hell over there she would be broken-hearted," Pendleton reflected impatiently. "He is such a 'good boy.' Not likely he was caught though. Not often anybody is caught in these fires. And," he shrugged shoulders that sweated, "naughts never in danger."

But some one was burned on the great hacienda of Santa Rita that day. Almost at the point of safety, within a stone's throw of the turning row that he had learned to call "callejon," Pendleton fould the body. One loyal little heart would beat no more with faithful throb, one worn little body would struggle no more against famine. Bruised by last night's beating, pitifully thin, the scorched body lay where the meeting fires had caught it.

"She leaves six children," Pendleton said to the chief.

"Orphan asylum will take them," the chief answered gruffly. He was a tender-hearted man. The thought that any one under his charge should have met such a death wrung him like anguish. "What in the deuce was she doing there," he demanded.

"Looking for her dog of a husband," Pendleton said, huskily, for that poor little burned body was all that was left of Nada.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Almost Successful Attempt to Assassinate a Claim-Holder.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Grand Forks—Word has reached here of an almost successful attempt to assassinate G. F. Belter, while he was sleeping in his claim shanty in the Turtle mountains, northwest of Dunseith. The shots were fired from a shotgun and the first one tore the pillow on which he was lying into shreds, but none of the shot struck his head or face.

The second charge passed a foot over his body as he lay on the bed. Mr. Belter investigated, but in the darkness was unable to find anyone. He is well liked by the settlers in the neighborhood and the attempt on his life is a mystery. A week ago an incendiary set fire to a supply of lumber which he had just brought to his claim to build a new home, and the attempt on his life is credited to the person who started the fire.

Fargo—It is not every Masonic body than can march to music made by a governor of a sovereign state, but that is what the shriners did last evening in commemoration of the twelfth anniversary of the big Fargo fire. The shrine band is one of the features of the parade. Governor Sarles was always an enthusiastic member of that organization, and was too democratic to drop out when he became the executive.

Washburn—The McLean county courthouse burned Thursday. It was entirely destroyed and most of the papers and records were lost.

Jamestown—Leo Noecker has been experimenting with winter rye with the most gratifying success. He has sixty acres coming on in fine shape, notwithstanding the fact that cattle browsed upon it all winter. He sowed the grain upon stubble land without plowing, and herein, he believes is the secret of his success. The stubble holds the snow, thus affording protection to the growing grain through the cold weather.

Programs are out for the seventeenth annual meeting of the Jamestown Association of Congregational Churches. This body includes all the Congregational ministers and their churches in that part of the state extending from Santborn, Cooperstown and McHenry to Jamestown, Dawson, Hurdsfield, Harvey, Esmond and Oberon. The meeting will be held at Melville on June 21 and 22.

Starkweather—An Indian camp meeting will be held on Fort Totten reservation beginning the first Wednesday in September and continuing five days, under direction of Frank Blackshield. It is expected that thirty to forty ministers, both Indian and white, will take part. The sum of $427 has been collected and fourteen head of cattle and forty sacks of flour purchased for the occasion.

At a meetiag of the directors of the Farmers' Elevator company here it was decided to build seven houses on the Farmers' road. The $10,000 capital stock is rapidly being subscribed by farmers.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Pierre—The commencement exercises at the Pierre Indian school will be held June 22 to 24. Under the management of Superintendent Levengood, the school has been building up rapidly. An excellent band has been organized among the pupils and will make a tour of the state.

Governor Elred has granted an extradition warrant for William Yokom, who was captured at Brookings, and who is wanted on a forgery charge at Norwood, Iowa.

Articles of incorporation have been filed for the Pierre Cement, Brick and Oil company with a capital of $500,000. The incorporators are J. L. Lockhart, H. D. Jennings, S. G. Trine, Ellen Jennings and John B. Lockhart, who own about two miles of the river front which contains large deposits of cement shale.

C. Louis Allen, stenographer in the office of the clerk of the supreme court, left this afternoon for Washington, to take a place in the government geological survey work.

The old settlers of Hughes, Sully and Stanley counties, at a meeting this week, decided to hold their picnic on June 15, at Oahe, about fifteen miles up the river, to which point the party will be taken by boat.

Sioux Falls—War to the knife, the knife to the hilt" appears to be the motto of some of the people of Valley Springs, east of Sioux Falls, so far as the saloon question at that place is concerned. After a bitter fight license carried by a small majority at an election some weeks ago, but since that time the anti-license people have waged an energetic fight to prevent saloon license being granted. The village authorities this week granted such a license. The anti-saloon people have engaged the services of a Sioux Falls attorney and will institute an action for the annulment of the election.

Several hundred Knights of Pythias are in the city attending the annual state meeting of the grand lodge. The grand lodge was called to order by J. H. J. Black of the executive committee. George W. Burnside, mayor of Sioux Falls, welcomed the visiting knights. A response was made by Sol Star of Deadwood. Chancellor Commander Christianson welcomed the visiting knights to the city on behalf of the local knights. Mr. Bis- bee made a response.

FRUIT IN MARKET

Season For California Fruit Opens Three Weeks Early.

Oregon Berries and Mexican Melons Received In Duluth.

Although it is nearly three weeks earlier than the season opened last year, California fruit is already on the Duluth market, and it can be bought from now until late in the fall.

The first carload lot was received on the street this week by several of the local houses buying together. The car contained apricots, peaches and plums, and they will be for sale at the local grocers tomorrow.

Last year the season for California fruit did not open until about July 1.

Considering the distance which the fruit has to travel, and the early season, the price asked for the shipment received this week is not unreasonable. The peaches are selling at $1.50 per box, the plums at $1.75 and the apricots at $1.05.

Another shipment is expected to arrive next week and after that car lots will be brought almost daily during the summer.

• • •

The first canteloupes of the season are on the market.

A carload of the famous Rocky Ford Melons was received during the week. The melons are grown by an American firm in Mexico and the shipment was brought all the way to Duluth from across the Rio Grande.

The present shipment is selling for $3 per case.

• • •

The famous Hood River strawberries from Oregon are on the market this week. These Oregon berries are always much higher priced than any others, which are received during the season, and are claimed to be of a much higher quality, being larger and of a better flavor. They are selling for $3 a case, or nearly double the price asked for the Missouri berries.

This will be the last week for the Missouri berries, and the dealers are advising all the housewives to buy their strawberries for preserving now, if they have not already done so. The Missouri berries are claimed to be the finest outside of the Hood River berries. The Wisconsin crop is claimed to be not as heavy as usual, and the dealers say the prices for the home grown stock will not be any lower than for the Missouri berries, while the quality is not expected to be quite as good.

The Missouri berries are selling at $1.75 per case of twenty-four quarts.

• • •

Another marked cut has taken place in the prices of green vegetables during the week. Green beans, radishes, cauliflower, peas, parsley, lettuce and spinnach are all lower than last week, and the demand for them is increasing as the price goes down.

• • •

Cheese prices fell off another point this week, and the market is now getting down to normal conditions. Throughout the winter and early spring, the prices were kept exceedingly high, either through speculation or through an insufficient supply, but about three weeks ago the decline commenced. It has been gradual but steady, and Wisconsin flats are now selling on the street for 13 cents, a decline of about 3 cents from the price a month ago.

• • •

Butter prices remain practically unchanged from last week, with creamery prints selling for 22 cents. The dealers are commencing to store the surplus receipts for use during the winter, and this will probably keep the price from going any lower.

• • •

Eggs continue firm with a very slight advance, the price being 16½ cents.

• • •

The first "broilers" or young spring chickens are on the market this week. The birds are very small as yet, and are looked upon as delicacies for the tables of epicures. They are selling on Michigan street for $4.50 to $5 per dozen, and can be purchased at retail for from 45 to 55 cents a piece.

With the receipt of the first spring chickens on the market, the receipts of hens have greatly increased, and the price has dropped from 16 to 14 cents per pound.

The week has been a fairly active one in the poultry business, after two or three months of almost complete stagnation, caused by lack of demand and light receipts.

There is little or no demand for ducks, geese and turkeys, except from restaurant keepers and hotels, and the trade in them is very small.

• • •

Prices on all kinds of meats are slightly lower than last week. Beef is selling at from 6 to 8 cents, muton at 9 cents, and pork loins at 9 cents.

Business is reported to be active, with many small orders for immediate delivery. This is caused by the warm weather which prevents the retailers from laying in large stocks.

STUDENTS OWN CIRCUS.

Take Possession of Show and Run It.

Chicago, June 9.—Under the stimulus of a purple costume worn by a woman bareback rider and supposing it worn in honor of the university colors, more than 150 Northwestern university students Wednesday night took possession of a circus in Evanston. After stopping the performance and giving a show of their own, the collegians fought with the tent men and were dispersed by the police. Several persons were injured, but no arrests were made.

"Bodkin's World Renowned Circus" opened for the evening's performance at Emerson street and Railroad avenue, with the general admission section packed and comparatively few persons in the reserved seats.

In the audience were several hundred of the Northwestern men.

As soon as the show started the students rushed into the roped-off section, refusing to pay the extra charge. Then the acts began and the students jeered the performers. Many persons in the audience left, and the management made a vain effort to preserve order. The climax came when Mme. Belesko appeared wearing purple tights. With wild howls the students rushed into the ring, cheering for the university color.

After a pause, the performance was resumed, and then the disturbers insisted on staying for the after-show, for which they refused to pay. They took possession of the stage and gave a show of their own, in which songs and high kicking formed the principal feature. Finally more police were called and dispersed the students.

Marquette Man Lives Five Years With a Broken Back.

Marquette—William Hornby, aged 34, died Wednesday evening at St. Mary's hospital as the result of injuries sustained five years ago, while working in the woods. His case was remarkable, he having lingered all this time with a broken back.

Bessemer—Ground was broken Thursday for a shaft of modern double cage steel construction on the Colby. It will be about eighteen months before ore is reached. The old Colby location is all stir and life again.

Crystal Falls—Crystal Falls advices report a shocking accident at the Dunn mine, resulting in the decapitation of Edward Larson, a single man. Larson had been sent down the shaft to do some repair work at a place not a great way from the surface. After completing the work and as he was about ready to ascend he heard the cage leave the bottom and knew from the signal that it was carrying men. Instead of going to the surface by means of the ladder, he concluded to wait and attempt to board the cage as it passed him. When the cage neared the spot the men aboard heard someone shout, "Look out, I'm going to jump on," but not knowing where the sound came from they paid no attention to it. The man must have changed his mind or else did not realize how close to him the cage was, for he kept his head out in the shaft-way and as the cage came along it severed the head from the body.

St. Ignace—The little schooner Red Cloud, owned by F. X. Charlewood and engaged in carrying wood from Jamieson & St. James' saw mill at Pine River to their dock at St. Ignace, sprung a leak and with difficulty made the mill slip. Next morning an attempt was made to tow her across the bay to the company's dock to unload wood. Hardly had the open bay been reached when the waterlogged craft rolled over. There was a smart northerly wind at the time and that helped the overturning. The wood distributed itself along the shore. The schooner was finally towed in close to the company's dock. She will be pumped out and again be in commission in a few days.

Escanaba—Anton Salo, a Finnish miner, fell off the trolley car as it was being lowered in A shaft of the Norrie mine at an early hour in the morning. He fell several hundred feet to the bottom of the shaft and was instantly killed. Salo and eight other men had boarded the car to return to work after eating lunch. None of his companions knew when or how Salo fell off. It is supposed that he went to sleep as the car was descending, as he had complained during the lunch hour that he was tired and sleepy, due to the fact he had not slept but had worked all the day before in moving his house. The deceased was 26 years old and leaves a wife and an infant child.

ADVENTIST PHYSICIAN

Says Eating of Meats Makes Drunkards.

Chicago, June 9.—In a health lecture delivered before the Seventh Day Adventists' camp meeting, Dr. David Paulson, of Hinsdale, Ill., declared that the eating of meats caused many a man to fill a drunkard's grave. He also dwelt upon the "strenuous life," which, he said, causes irritability, nervousness, and the consequent loss of health.

"The saloonkeeper is shrewd enough," said Dr. Paulson, "not to place upon the free lunch counter foods like nicely cooked grains, delicious fruits, cream toast and other delicate foods, for the reason that such a diet does not foster a desire for drink. Instead, he offers his patrons hot and stimulating foods, which compel a man to drink. Many a good woman, while out in the day lecturing upon temperance reform, is unconsciously arousing a thirst for drink in the throats of her own family by allowing the family cook to provide food which arouses the craving for drink."

He told of one man, his patient, who, after living exclusively on a vegetable diet, lost his craving for drink.

"This man confessed to me," he continued, "that before he could get his appetite for liquor back he had to get a big, thick, juicy beefsteak and eat that, and then his old desire for liquor returned as strong as ever."

HONORS FOR MOTT.

Paris, June 9.—Captain T. Bentley Mott, the retiring American military attache here, has received the cross of the Legion of Honor with a letter from Former Foreign Minister Delcasse under whom it was bestowed. Captain Mott's successor, Captain William S. Guignard, has arrived here and has taken up his duties but Captain Mott will remain in Paris until September when he will serve on the staff of Gen. Adna R. Chaffee, head of the American mission to the French army manuveres.

CHILEAN CABINET RESIGNS.

New York, June 9.—The Chilean cabinet has resigned, according to a Herald dispatch from Valparaiso. The cause is said to have been some trifling incident, the nature of which is not stated.

TO BE BIG EVENT

Women's Relief Corps Is Planning Flag Day Program.

Many Old Veterans Will Attend Ceremonies at St. Paul.

Eleborate arrangements have been made by the local branch of the Women's Relief corps for the observance of Flag day, which falls on next Wednesday, and all citizens of Duluth are being urged to assist in the celebration by decorating their homes and places of business with Old Glory on that day.

In view of the fact that so many of the Grand Army men desire to attend the special exercises at St. Paul on that day, the women have decided to hold their Flag day exercises next Tuesday evening in the old Masonic Temple building, beginning at 8 o'clock, and a cordial invitation is extended to the public to attend.

The program has been arranged by the Women's Relief corps of Joshua B. Culver post and will be especially appropriate and interesting.

Dr. C. M. Wilson of this city, who is a member of the department staff of the Grand Army of the Republic, has received from St. Paul a circular invitation extended to all the veterans of the Civil war and the Spanish-American war to attend the special Flag day exercises at St. Paul, and, it is likely that Duluth will send a large delegation, not only of the veterans mentioned, but of the Sons of Veterans and many members of the Women's Relief corps.

The committee selected at the last department encampment of the G. A. R. to arrange for the removal of the battle flags carried by the Minnesota regiments during the Civil war, from the old to the new capitol building at St. Paul, has announced that this notable event will occur June 14, Flag day, the exercises to commence at the old capital building at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, when the flags will be delivered to color guards previously selected by the respective organizations, that they may be transferred to the new building with appropriate ceremonies.

At the recently adjourned session of the legislature an adequate sum of money was appropriated to defray the ordinary expenses of the occasion, and Governor Johnson has issued a proclamation in which he calls special attention to this great patriotic event and celebration of Flag day. In the furtherance of the work of the committee, Governor Johnson has designated the eight members already selected as an executive board to take charge and fittingly arrange all the details of the removal.

The complete program is not yet ready for announcement, but it is claimed there will be an imposing parade in which will appear the artillery, cavalry and infantry now stationed at Fort Snelling, the governor and his staff, the state militia, the state officers, Minnesota soldiers, Civil and Spanish-American war veterans, members of the G. A. R., of the societies of the Army of the Philippines, of the Spanish-American War Veterans and of Sons of Veterans. A large number of school children will also participate, presenting the living marching American flag.

Feature of the parade will be the survivors of the Minnesota troops and what is left of the old flags they marched and fought under, the men are to be arranged in regular organizations as in old days, and the flags to be borne by the color guards at the head of the respective regiments to the new capitol building. There the flags will be deposited in four beautiful steel cases prepared by the capitol commission for their immediate reception and future preservation. Eloquent speakers who served as Minnesota soldiers will make addresses and Governor Johnson will receive the flags and respond to the addresses.

Several bands of music have been engaged for the occasion and the railroads have made a special round trip rate to St. Paul of one fare plus 50 cents, tickets being on sale June 13 and 14 to be used June 14 or 15 in returning.

All survivors of Minnesota regiments are being urged to make an effort to be present and, probably for the last time, march under their old colors.

Where it is possible to do so it has been planned to have the old color guards of the regiments, now surviving, to again bear the regimental flags to their final resting place.

Of the flags there are forty-six in number. Five of these were formerly carried by the First regiment, Minnesota Volunteer infantry; six by the Second; two by the Third; two by the Fourth; six by the Fifth; two by the Sixth; three by the Seventh; two by the Eighth; four by the Ninth; two by the Tenth; two by the Eleventh; one by the First battery of artillery and one by the Second cavalry in the Civil war. Two of the flags were carried by the Twelfth Minnesota; two by the Fourteenth; two by the Fifteenth in the Spanish-American war and two by the Thirteenth Minnesota in the war in the Philippines. There will also be five old war drums removed with the flags.

Gen. L. F. Hubbard has been designated chief marshal and will designate his own assistants.

The celebration of the day is expected to be followed by a big campfire to be held Wednesday evening in the new Armory building at St. Paul.

ME TOO

The "Tail Enders" That Follow Genuine Articles.

It is sometimes intresteing to watch the curves imitators make to get the public to buy imitations of genuine goods.

Every now and then some one will think there is a splendid opening to fix up something like Postum Coffee and advertise the same way and take some of the business.

An imitator is naturally ignorant of food values and how to skilfully make a cereal coffee, on scientific lines.

Such men first think of preparing something that looks and tastes like the original, with no knowledge of how the grains should be treated to prepare them so that the starchy part is transformed properly and the valuable nourishing elements made digestible.

Such imitations may be foisted on the public for a short time, but the people are critical and soon detect the attempt, then the imitators go out of business.

Something like 400 of these little factories have been started in various parts of this country in the past 9 years, and practically all of them have gone the "long journey." Just lately a new one has come to life, and evidently hopes to insert itself in public favor by copying the style of the Postum advertising in the papers.

This is a free country, and every man who makes an honest product and honestly labels it, has reason for some recognition, but the public has the right to know the facts.

Postum is the one original and genuine Cereal Coffee, made skilfully and for a definite purpose. It has stood through all the wars of the imitators, has won the approval of the Physicians and the people.

People who really seek to free themselves from the coffee habit, and at the same time to rebuild the soft gray matter in the nerve centers, and thus reconstruct the nervous system, broken down by coffee, can rely on Postum.

There's a reason.

EXCLUSION LAWS

Against Chinese Are Unreasonable, Say Merchants.

New York, June 9.—The board of directors of the Merchants' association has adopted a resolution favoring reciprocity treaties with the principal European nations and providing for the appointment of a committee to urge congress to adopt them and to solicit the co-operation of other commercial bodies in the movement. A resolution was adopted declaring "that as the most important foreign outlet for American manufacturers, particularly cotton goods, and the market which promises an immense expansion in the near future, is China, it is the sense of this association that existing laws of the United States excluding Chinese subjects of a class whose immigration is not subjected to restriction by the terms of the treaty, are harsh, unreasonable, wrongfully violative of the sacred obligations of a treaty, and detrimental to the best interests of the people of the United States and this association therefore earnestly urges on congress their repeal and the negotiation of a new treaty with China which, while providing for the proper regulation of undesirable Chinese immigration, shall likewise permit freedom of entry and of dimicile on the part of the Chinese not of the labring class and with whom the maintenance of friendly relations is of prime importance to the development of the business interests of this country."

WAS NEVER ENGAGED

To the Girl, But He Hated to Disappoint Her.

Permitted Her to Woo Him and Prepare For Wedding.

Milwaukee, Wis., June 9.—Charged with assaulting his fiancee, Charles Stark, arrested two days before the date set for the wedding, was fined $1 in the district court.

The wedding has been indefinitely postponed. Although Judge Bienski expressed the belief that the young couple will adjust their differences and marry, both Stark and Miss Ida Steffen, his fiancee, protest that they no longer cherish tender sentiments, and that if cupid knocks at their hearts again it will be in vain.

"Aren't you ashamed to have beaten your bride?" said Attorney Faber for the prosecution, to the phlegmatic prospective groom.

"No," said the groom defiantly. "I never was engaged to her. She kept worrying me until I sort of consented to the marriage—not that I wanted to marry her, but just because I didn't want to disappoint her after she had ordered her trousseau."

According to Stark, Miss Steffen's courtship tactics were of the aggressive variety. He says she did all the courting, and announced to him that she intended to marry him May 27. He acquiesced only because he did not want to disappoint her. The Steffen-Stark romance covered a period of three weeks only.

"We met at the home of Mrs. Anna Stegner, a mutual friend, three weeks before I was arrested," said Stark. "It was in the afternoon. When I wanted to go home to supper Ida wouldn't let me. So I had to remain at the Stegers. Ida came to Stegers to live that same day. I boarded there until we had the trouble.

"Shortly after she told me that she loved me. I didn't tell her anything. She asked me to suggest a day for our wedding. I didn't say anything.

"She said that May 27 would give her time to prepare her wedding gown. A few days later she told me that all arrangements had been made, and it wasn't necessary to delay the wedding that long.

"She said she would be ready to marry me on May 24. I didn't say anything. I hated awfully to disappoint the poor girl, you know, after she'd had her clothes made and had announced the engagement. So I just thought I'd let her go ahead and complete the preparations. But I never really consented to marry her. It was a case of silent acquiescence.

"Day or two later she came to me again, and said she had thought it over, and it wouldn't be necessary to wait till the 24th. She thought she could be ready by May 23. I didn't say anything.

"Next day she told me I'd better hire a hall, as she had invited a great many friends and had hired musicians. So I engaged Lemke's hall and paid a dollar on account. I didn't really want to, you see, but Ida seemed so pleased that I hated to disappoint her.

"I thought I'd go out and see one of my friends after supper on the evening of the trouble. I wanted to talk over old times before Ida married me. She met me at the front door as I was about to leave.

"'Where are you going?' said she.

"'To see a friend,' said I.

"'Well, you can't go,' said she. 'He'll try to coax you away from me.'

"She stood with her back against the door. Man has to draw the line somewhere, you know, so I took her by the arms and pushed her aside. Then she got hold of me and shook me from side to side just like that."

The burly Stark illustrated his slender fiancee's conduct by shaking his hands violently. "It isn't true that I batted her head against the wall, or tried to punch her in the eye. Those blue finger prints on her arms were due to my having squeezed her too hard when I compelled her to permit me to leave the house. I didn't go back to the Stegers that evening."

Miss Steffen alleges that Stark came into the room, and assaulted her, because his jealousy had been aroused by false statements of friends.

CHURCH BAR ON THE BANNS

Cost Edna Little an Estate Valued at $1,000,000.

New York, June 9.—The rules of the Episcopal church, forbidding the marriage of divorced persons, cost Miss Edna Allys Little $1,000,000.

She was the fiance of James Fitch Thomsen, who died of typhoid at Bellevue hospital.

Upon his deathbed the man whose fortune has just been made asked to be married to the beautiful young woman, but the Rev. Mr. Dyer, the Episcopal chaplain, refused to perform the ceremony because Thomsen had been divorced.

The man died single, and the woman he loved will have no share in his estate.

Miss Little was one of the mourners when funeral services over the remains of Thomsen were held at St. George's Episcopal church.

She sat by the side of Miss Lizzie Thomsen, sister of the deceased, who came here to take charge of the body, and accompanied it to Toronto.

Just before his last illness Mr. Thomsen, who had made and lost several fortunes, successfully organized the American Dry Yeast company, with a capital of $10,000,000. His profits from this venture approximated $1,000,000, but he died without receiving it. This money now goes to his estate.

Following the funeral services, Miss Little returned to her home.

"Mr. Thomsen and I were to have been married in June," she said. "Then when he believed his illness to be fatal, he requested that we be married at once.

"The report that Mr. Thomsen was delirious when Chaplain Dyer was requested to marry us is not true.

"It was Mr. Thomsen, and not I, who made the request.

"I met Mr. Thomsen eight years ago in Philadelphia. I accompanied him in one of his songs, and he became struck with my performance on the piano.

"'You have great talent,' he told me.

"Following that he helped me through my musical education and aided me to begin my work as a teacher, a concert pianist and accompanist.

"From the start we had a deep regard for each other, but he was married and had two children, of whom he was very fond.

"Last March his wife secured a divorce and the custody of the children, and on the same day became the wife of Harry Nealy, a Philadelphia newspaper man.

"When Mr. Thomsen was taken to Bellevue he was first put in the alcoholic ward. When it was found he had not been drinking, he was moved to the erysipelas ward, and finally the physician diagnosed his case as typhoid fever.

"Up to the very last had moments of consciousness, and, although it was his last request to marry me, the chaplain denied him the privilege to call me wife.

"The record of Mr. Thomsen's life is the record of continuous struggle, of hard knocks bravely borne, and of quick recovery from disaster of every kind.

"From the time I knew him he was never a well man, but his ill health was no check to his energy. He was born in a little Canadian town fifty years ago, going to Toronto as a boy, where he made much money in real estate.

"He was an able musician, and was at one time urged to go into grand opera. He promoted several musical enterprises.

"Dr. Leopold Damrosch went to Canada under his management, and so did Christine Nilsson. He lost money in these ventures. He was always making fortunes and losing them.

"It is true that his incessant labor finally accumulated for him a vast fortune, but there is the one sad feature that he did not live to enjoy the reward."

Mothers lose their dread for "that terrible second summer" when they have Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry in the house. Nature's specific for bowel complaints of every sort.

MUST PAY THE BONDS.

Decision Against a Red Lake County Township.

Crookston, Minn., June 9.—(Special to The Herald.)—Judge Watts has rendered a decision in the famous Northern Pacific railroad bond case entitled Asa Baine and Anna Smith versus the Township of Jarvis in Red Lake county, and by the terms of the decision the plaintiffs in the action win and Jarvis will have to pay all of the railroad bonds which were issued by the township officers in the year 1886 to the Northern Pacific railroad. The bonds were issued to secure the entry of the railroad into the township and were later sold to Smith and Paine by the road. When the interest coupons became due the present officials of the township refused to honor them, upon the ground that they had been illegally issued by officials who had no authority in the matter. They maintained that the bonded indebtedness had been exceeded and set up a formidable array of evidence in defense of their dispute of the bonds and coupons.

Judge Watts' ruling in the case holds that the township is liable for the action of its officers and makes the payment of the amount involved compulsory upon the township. The bonds aggregate $3,000 and were given to the Northern Pacific as a bonus when the road was run through the township. Feeling in regard to their payment was divided in the township and many held the debt a legal and just one, while others sought to defeat the holders by setting up claims of irregularity. The case has been in the courts for several years.

JAPS PAID WELL

But They Spend Little, Says South Omaha Merchant.

Does Not Like the Yellow Packing House Workers.

Omaha, Neb., June 9.—Japanese were imported from states farther West to take the place of strikers in the packing plants. They number 160 and they receive the same wages as other workmen. While they are quick to learn and very industrious, they are no match for the American in skill and capacity for work. They live in South Omaha.

A hostile view of this addition of the clever Orientals to the industrial population is thus stated by W. J. Nagle, a prominent member of the Retail Merchants' association:

"The Japanese are no good to the merchants of South Omaha. They buy nothing here and they are driving good men of families out of town. Many of our best laborers have been idle ever since the strike because of the importation of the Japs."

Kinya Okajima, a man of about 50 years of age, a graduate of Meijitkai college, Tokio, Japan, and Dartmouth college, is the general manager of all the Japanese living in South Omaha. He delivers five lectures a week to the colony. He said of his countrymen:

"There is not one among our number who does not bathe at least once a day. Many of them bathe twice each day. Not one would think of going to bed without first taking a bath."

"Every Japanese here has had at least a common school education in his own country," said Miaso Konda, who is next in importance to Okajima. "At least 50 per cent of them are graduates of high schools, and this takes eight years of study. Many of them have attended colleges where instruction include a course in English.

"We have no labor unions among our people. We receive the same wages that others are paid for performing the same kind of work."

"Would you permit the packers to cut your wages?" was asked.

"No, we would not," quickly replied Konda. "There would be no strike in our ranks. We would simply quit.

"I expect to become a naturalized citizen of this country. Many of our colony have wives in Japan, and while some will return home before many years, others will send for their wives and children. The Japanese like this country and the people."

Konda speaks and writes the English language. He is a graduate of the Imperial university at Tokio. He has the politeness and general bearing of a polished gentleman.

Konda looks after the interests of the Japs who work in the packing-houses. He acts as their timekeeper, to see that they are fully paid for their work. He is also their purchasing agent, to the extent that he buys large quantities of wearing apparel at wholesale when requested to do so, and gives it to the individual at the actual cost price.

A two-story brick, 40x75 feet, formerly used as a poultry slaughter house, is the building that ninety-five Japs use as a hotel. It is the north building of the Cudahy group, and sits far back in a yard that is totally barren of vegetation and most uninviting. It is bounded on three sides by a high board fence, and on the fourth by the walls of another building.

The ranges, dishes, tables and all kitchen furniture are the property of the Cudahy company. Okajaima and Konda pay the company $100 a month rent for the use of the building and contents. The meals range in price from 15 to 20 cents.

Sixty-five of the Japs live at the Japanese club. A few months ago the club-house was raided by the police and several Japanese were arrested for gambling. Some weeks later a crowd of Japs from the Cudahy camp went to the club house to enjoy an evening's sport with cards. It ended in a free-for-all fight in which knives and a gun was used. Only one Jap was badly injured and he recovered.

DYING OF FAMINE

Is, in its torments, like dying of consumption. The progress of consumption, from the beginning to the very end, is a long torture, both to victim and friends. "When I had consumption in its first stage," writes Wm. Myers of Cearfoss, Md., "after trying different medicines and a good doctor, in vain, I at last took Dr. King's New Discovery, which quickly and perfectly cured me." Prompt relief and sure cure for coughs, colds, sore throat, bronchitis, etc. Positively prevents pneumonia. Guaranteed at all drug stores. Price 50c and $1.00 a bottle. Trial bottle free.

TRIP ACROSS FIVE STATES

Fifteen-Room House Is Moved From Cleveland to Muskagee.

Cleveland, June 9.—Dr. C. E. Bryant, a local physician, has just completed a moving job that is perhaps without a parallel in this part of the country. He has moved a fifteen-room house from Cleveland to Indian Territory. His wife's mother was moving to his new home with him, and she wanted her old homstead to go with them. So it went.

This feat was accomplished quietly and successfully. There was no demonstration, no delaying of traffic and no creation of excitement. This task which seems so Herculean was performed so easily as to destroy the romance that one feels ought to belong to the picture.

The house that traveled from Ohio's metropolis to the Southwest stood in Harkness avenue in the East end. It belonged to Mrs. Austin Beckwith, widow of Wells Beckwith, and was her home for 25 years. She bought it when the original Harkness, now dead, laid out his farm in lots.

When it came to moving, the house was torn down with as much care as marks the moving of a piano out of a flat. Its fragments were indexed, classified, tied together and packed.

Only two men were employed on the work. They worked slowly, but with precision. Finally the "debris" stood about the premises ranged in neat bundles of boards, timbers, joists, frames, etc. These were bound with straps of metal, wire and in the conventional packing case methods. As each came out of the house it was numbered.

The lumber was hauled to the railroad and packed into a freight car. Then it started for its destination, accompanied by a car which was loaded with the household effects.

Mrs. Beckwith, at whose request this strange form of moving was adopted, explains it in this way:

"We liked the old house, of course, but it wasn't sentiment alone that made us move it. Dr. Bryant was moving to Indian Territory to live permanently and we wanted to dispose of the property on Harkness avenue. We sold the lot, and the people who bought it did not want the house. Of course they offered to buy it, but they would have had to tear it down and sell it for old lumber. They were not willing to pay for it what it was worth as a house.

"So we decided that we would take it with us. If it was only good for lumber anyway and had to be torn down by someboy and wethought we might as well be the ones to tear it down. The house will be rebuilt in Muskogee precisely as it stood in Cleveland. We will modernize it somewhat and add a few improvements, but otherwise it will not be changed."

It is stated by the Bryant family that their "new" home will have cost them less than they had bought new lumber and built a new house in their new home.

"When we are settled in our new home it will be some satisfaction to know that we are still in our old house," said Mrs. Beckwith.

'Tisn't safe to be a day without Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil in the house. Never can tell what moment an accident is going to happen.

FINE ENTERTAINMENT FOR VISITING ELKS

Social Events Are Many —Outdoor Plans Rendered Uncertain.

Officials Chosen and St. Cloud Gets the Next Meeting.

President—W. W. Koons, St. Cloud.
Vice president—L. French, Austin.
Secretary—N. A. Nelson, Stillwater.
Treasurer—J. T. Schulser, St. Paul.
Sergeant-at-arms—George R Seaton, Minneapolis.
Chaplain—Rev. Roderick J. Mooney, Duluth.

The above constitutes the personnel of the official board of the Elks of Minnesota for the ensuing year, and was the result of the election held at the annual convention in this city yesterday afternoon.

Next year the annual state convention will be held at St. Cloud, the date of the meeting to be announced by President W. W. Koons later.

The business session, which began at 3 o'clock, adjourned at 6 o'clock in the afternoon, the delegates present showing much enthusiasm in the work of the order in the discussion which was brought out over the by-laws.

The Elks received a communication from the Duluth Commercial club, extending to them during their stay here all the courtesies of the club. They also accepted an invitation extended to them to attend a reception at the Children's home, between the hours of 2 and 5:30 o'clock today.

Resolutions were passed thanking the local lodge for its splendid effort in providing entertainment.

The resolutions adopted were as follows:

"Resolved, That the Minnesota State Association of the B. P. O. E. do hereby return our utmost thanks and hearty appreciation of the magnificent efforts of Duluth lodge, No. 133, in furnishing the members of the order with so delightful and grand an entertainment.

"Be it further resolved, That we appreciate the kind invitation of the Commercial club in extending to us the courtesies of the club during our sojourn in the city, and the invitation is accepted in the spirit in which it was tendered.

"Resolved, That we are not forgetful of the neat invitation extended the association by the Children's home, and your chairman would suggest that a hat be placed upon the altar, and that every member so disposed walk up and contribute his mite to the institution."

As the resolution relative to the Children's home was adopted by a unanimous vote, the members present walked forward and dropped in the hat placed on the altar, for the purpose, a contribution. In the space of a very few minutes the sum of $23 was realized from the "best people on earth" for the benefit of the Children's home.

Reports were filed by the secretary and treasurer showing the affairs of the state association to be in excellent condition even though it were only organized about six months ago and is still young in organization.

The association is made up of the Elks' lodges of this state and the organization is for the purpose of bringing the members together at least once a year to help in the up-building of the order through the dissemination of its principles and to more closely cement the ties of brotherly love and friendship.

While the Elks were holding their business session their ladies were being entertained at a reception in the parlors of the Spalding hotel. The affair was a great success and was generally voted a delightful event by the visiting ladies.

The ball at the Armory last evening was one of the finest events of the sort ever given in the city. It was given by the local lodge of Elks in honor of the visiting Elks and their ladies and, until a late hour the big building presented a brilliant scene of gaiety. Music was furnished by Flaaten's Third regiment band, the members of which were practically hidden among the profusion of palms and potted plants on the platform. The other decorations were also handsome and appropriate. Pennants of purple and white hung overhead while the lights were shaded with purple paper with here and there an American flag. The attendance was very large.

The visiting Elks experienced their first disappointment this morning. The fine weather that had attended them since they came to the city suddenly disappeared during the night and the rain and fog put a damper on the boulevard drive that had been planned for this morning.

At noon the committee on arrangements was somewhat undecided as to whether the boat ride planned would be abandoned or pulled off according to schedule. The prospects were that it would be carried out as first arranged for the reason that so many of the visiting Elks and their ladies desired the ride on the lake to Two Harbors rain or shine. Many of them declared they would like to go if it were raining in torrents, and some of the ladies claimed they would have been willing to have sacrificed their best hats for a ride on the boulevard this morning.

Whether or not the boat ride plans are carried out the arrangements for this evening's entertainment will go ahead for the reason that the weather will have no bearing on them.

The entertainment includes a minstrel show and general social entertainment at the Armory. Local talent of the best class will supply the features, and speeches are to be made by local and visiting members.

The annual convention will come to a close with this evening's entertainment and the visitors or the trains tomorrow morning.

The attendance of Elks is said to be in the neighborhood of 200 and it is claimed that there would have been fully 500 more had they been able to secure satisfactory excursion rates.

FAIL TO GET BIDS FOR COAL

No Answer Received to Advertisements of the Board

This morning was the date set by the board of public works for the opening of bids for the coal used by the board during the year in its road machinery, but no bids were received.

Recently the city advertised for bids on coal to be used in its different departments and all of the five bids received were exactly alike. They were all rejected by the council, and the members of the board believe that as the result of this rejection the coal dealers have agreed not to submit any bids in response to future advertisements on the part of the city.

The amount of coal required by the board is about 200 tons.

TEST YOUR KIDNEYS

Thousands of Men and Women Die Every Year of Kidney Disease Because They Don't Know In Time They Have Got It.

The only way to keep watch of your health is to test your kidneys at least once a month. Just let a tumblerful of morning urine stand 24 hours, and if it becomes cloudy, or particles float about in it, or if a reddish-brown sediment forms, it is positive proof that your kidneys have been diseased for months and are utterly unable to do their work, and unless properly treated at once, Bright's disease, diabetes, uric acid and blood poisoning, with fatal results, will surely follow.

The only safe and positive cure for all diseases of the kidneys, bladder, liver and blood is

BANK CLERK SENTENCED.

Gibson Gets Two Years In the State Prison.

St. Paul, June 9.—(Special to The Herald.)—Arthur L. Gibson, the clerk in the Merchants National bank, who pleaded guilty of misappropriation of the bank's funds, was today sentenced to two years in the state prison by Judge Lewis of the district court.

Defendant's counsel pleaded for clemency, but the court remarked that it was a deliberate case of violation of trust, and that no clemency could be shown.

HOTEL IS RAIDED.

Boyle's Superior Street Resort Visited By Police.

In a raid on Boyle's restaurant and European hotel last night, Officer Wanvick arrested a man and a woman who gave their names as Marie St. Arnold and Thomas Hale. The man, at least, is believed to have given a fictitious name.

They were locked up at headquarters and later released on bail of $12 each.

They failed to put in an appearance when their names were called in court this morning, and the bail in each case was declared forfeited.

OIL KING A BANKER.

Rockefeller Acquires Interest In Cleveland Institution.

Cleveland, O., June 9.—John D. Rockefeller has become prominently identified with the banking interests of this city. He has just purchased a large interest in the Central National bank of this city. He has been identified with the Superior Savings and Trust company, a new trust company about to be launched here, and as the trust company will be closely allied with the Central National bank, Col. J. J. Sullivan being president of each institution, and these banks occupying the entire ground floor of the Rockefeller building, it is quite natural to suppose that Mr. Rockefeller would be interested also in the stock of the Central National bank. Col. Sullivan practically admits that Mr. Rockefeller has become identified with both the new banks.

TRAGEDY OF CHUM'S DEATH

Clouded Her Mind and Death Was Relief.

Marion, Ind., June 9.—Miss Artie Pierce died yesterday from the shock of a tragedy she witnessed nine years ago, when her girl chum, Tacie Mang, was shot down at her side by Noah Johnson, Miss Mang's lover.

One spring morning, as they walked along a country road to a school, Noah Johnson met them. Noah was insanely jealous of Miss Mang. They had quarreled the night before, and in the morning, when they met, she refused to speak to him. Johnson flashed a revolver and sent a bullet through the girl's head, and she sank down dead beside her friend.

Artie Pierce saw Johnson leap over a fence and disappear, and she was left with the dead body of her friend. The shock was so great that she never recovered. She was taken to private sanitariums and later to East Haven Asylum for insane. She seemed to improve at times, but when a gun was fired or she heard a peal of thunder she became restless and would leave her home during a storm and walk miles.

Miss Pierce was a beautiful girl. Her father is a man of wealth, and her future was one of excellent opportunities, but the deed of Noah Johnson changed her life to a fate worse than death.

CONDITIONING RECRUITS

Have Twelve Weeks' Course of Physical Training.

London, June 9.—An army order has been issued that all cavalry and artillery recruits shall undergo a twelve weeks' course of physical training. It is calculated that this training, combined with good food and rational recreation, will bring a recruit of ordinary physique into a condition in which he will be fit to begin his special training. The physical training course will consist of four drills daily of not more than an hour's duration, and a modified course of gymnastics. After the day's work is over the recruit can go where he pleases. There will be no drills on Saturdays, and passes from Friday afternoon until Sunday night will be given freely to men of good character. The recruit will be medically examined and remeasured at the end of twelve weeks. If he is found unfit, he will be discharged at once as not likely to become an efficient soldier. If, on the other hand, he is fit, he will be sent to the training school for ten months' training. He will then undergo training in the various duties of the cavalryman, and at the end of three years he will be one of the finished "eyes and ears of the army."

WARONGAS GANG

In Philadelphia Said to Have Reached a Crisis.

Machine's Surrender a Ruse to Quiet Public Resentment.

Philadelphia, Pa., June 9.—Students of American politics agree that the political gang now under fire in Philadelphia has established for itself the record of being the most audacious clique of municipal plunderers in America. Tammany hall never approached this brazen organization for systematized boodling of public funds.

Until Mayor John Weaver turned his back on Boss Durham and the gang, and precipitated the present moral revolution, there had seemingly been no limit to their daring exploits. Nothing was deemed impossible.

After the gang leaders and their confederates of the gas trust decided the public was really aroused to proclaim its virtuous purpose of declining to accept any stolen gas franchises, some optimists proclaimed as final the victory of the mayor and the people. But the great fight has really just begun.

Durham may retire as boss and a new machine leader will take his place. He will probably be hailed as a reformer. Some good people may believe it. Others will remember how Durham came into his great estate and will urge Mayor Weaver and his associates on for real reform and honest government.

The sober-minded men of honor who are standing at the back of the mayor realize that now is the crucial moment. They are working to keep alive that public interest which made possible the first victory, and they are standing ready to strike down the first new gang head which comes from cover.

The ramifications and wheels within wheels of this city's misgovernment under the gang rule have been one of the most remarkable examples of the wicked power of commercial politics that have ever been seen anywhere.

The small ward boodler preyed for revenue upon vice and crime, and had his pickings from all bones of patronage for delivering the votes when the gang called for them. The big bosses found their graft mainly in city contracts. Officeholders were the dumbest of dummies.

The present organization, under Israel W. Dunham, came into power as a reform party, paradoxical as that may seem. It set out, as the public thought, to rectify very serious faults with the city's government, under the management of the preceding gang. At that time the credulous public hailed it as the "dawning of a better day."

Getting his clutch on the city that way, Dunham, an apt pupil of Quay's, was busy for five years tightening the screws. There was much howling at times over obvious schemes for boodling and criminal election practices, but somehow the gang always came out on top.

City contracts were gobbled up by members of the gang. The city was forced so deeply into debt for vast improvements that there will be no chance for it to satisfy these claims, except by bonding or direct taxation, for many years. One of the pet theories of the gang was that "Today's the day and tomorrow will take care of itself; let the fathers contract for and receive city benefits for which the children can pay tomorrow."

Boss Durham put his machine workers, from smallest to heads of departments, on a bread and butter basis when he got into power. There are forty-two wards in the city. Each ward has a leader, or ward boss, who is directly responsible to Durham or one of his first lieutenants, Charles Seger and James P. MacNichol. Durham operated in close harmony with United States Senator Boies Penrose. It is very advantageous, Durham found after long experience with Quay, for a municipal boss to have his state, legislature and federal patronage in no way antagonistic to his plans.

The ward boss, usually a gutter-snipe individual advanced to the moral standard of diamond shirt studs, rules his district strictly upon orders. It is he who has informed the councilman how he should legislate. It was he who "tipped" the police as to what gambling hell to protect, what dive to shield, who to harass, and who to favor. The ward boss got his pickings direct. The more vicious his district the greater his revenue. All was easy for him, except, possibly, on election day. He had his "orders" from the boss. He must deliver so many votes or such a majority. He'd do it all right.

His henchmen, also working on the bread and butter basis, went out to the polling places. They put their operations on the bread and butter basis. Sometimes it was at the rate of $2 a vote. Sometimes it was gaining a vote from some citizen known to be unpurchasable, on a "line of talk" such as: "Vote this way, mister. You have nothing to gain or lose, and it means my job." Sometimes it was merely a question of ramming the necessary number of fraudulent ballots in the box and taking the small chance of going to the penitentiary.

The boss punished severely erring henchmen and rewarded fealty. The latter was on a sort of "merit system." Money prizes were sometimes offered to ward leaders who would bring out the biggest majorities when they were needed, and they, in turn, would give prizes to the district workers who would show the best results.

This was more of the bread and butter principle, and it was in this way that Durham and his fellows have held Philadelphia between the thumb and forefinger of their organization. Every district has been honeycombed with this sort of corruption, and the political moles have grown fat before the eyes of the people.

A couple of years ago a ward leader needed 137 votes in the ballot boxes of his district. He couldn't get them honestly, and he did not see fit to get them by feigning honesty. But when the count was made they were found in the box. So it happened that one of the judges at that election booth was the secret representative of a public-spirited Philadelphia newspaper.

The newspaper exposed the ward leader. Upon the affidavit of the election judge it was alleged that his leader put 100 fraudulent ballots in the box at one time, and later put in thirty-seven more—before the eyes of the men who were sent there to protect the sacred rights of the people. The ward leader and several others were arrested.

One of the conspirators turned state's evidence, and confessed the truth. He and several others went to state's prison.

The ward leader, however, was not convicted. Mayor Weaver was then district attorney, and it is said that he made a clear case against the man. But the ward leader went free, while the others who were weak enough to confess or did not have a pull went to prison.

The ward leader was rewarded by the machine with a municipal position. He is in the election bureau. One of his duties is to inspect ballot boxes. But this is only the peanut part of the great system.

Durham owes some of his "success," perhaps a good deal of it, to his good sense in keeping his own counsel. He has never put himself on record fifty words as standing for anything, good, bad, or indifferent. He has been the silent boss, like Murphy, the present Tammany boss, who is having great "success" also just now in the contracting business.

Quay was bold enough to contend that it is not robbery for a politician to take commercial advantage of knowledge gained in public office. Tweed boldly robbed in New York and made no secret of his methods. Croker defied the public and got out of the country after he made his pile. Other bosses have operated on the openly defiant basis, but none as "successfully" as the silent boss—the sly, cunning, illiterate, brutal boss of Philadelphia.

PINCHED NOSE OF PRINCIPAL

Mother Avenged Corporal Punishment Inflicted on Boy.

Los Angeles, June 9.—Upon learning that her son had been chastised at the Washington summer school for an infringement of the rules, Mrs. Mary Galatoire of 115 Prospect place, donned her sunbonnet and went to Principal T. H. McCarthy to learn the reason. It was in the morning about 11 o'clock when she found the principal busily engaged with his duties. Mrs. Galatoire is of the grenadier type.

The conversation had lasted for a very few minutes when Mrs. Galatoire with a right swing landed on the school teacher's nose with the skill of a professional.

The assault was in the presence of about sixty pupils, and in the excitement that followed Mrs. Galatoire beat a hasty retreat, seemingly satisfied with the result of her visit. As she was leaving, however, a few remarks were dropped about school teachers.

Notwithstanding the great provocation, Mr. McCarthy retained his dignity throughout the trying ordeal, but after consultation with his superiors it was deemed inadvisable to allow the incident to pass unnoticed. Later he swore to a complaint charging the woman with disturbing the peace and she will be tried by Police Judge Fritz.

Mr. McCarthy admits having chastised the Galatoire child. For some misconduct the child was given five slaps upon his hand, which did him no harm and seemingly very little good.

THEIR FRIENDS ARE SURPRISED

Music Teacher and Traveling Man Married Eighteen Months.

Lexington, Ky., June 9.—Married eighteen months, and the secret is just out. This is the case with Miss Katherine C. Naefz, who for two years has been a teacher at the Lexington Conservatory of Music, and F. N. Duffey, a traveling man from Cleveland, Ohio.

Miss Naez was married to Mr. Duffey in Virginia eighteen months ago.

Miss Naez is a graduate of the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music, and has a highly cultured soprano voice. Her work in the Lexington Conservatory of Music has been of a high order and she has been in active demand at local concerts.

The reason for keeping the union secret Mrs. Duffey said was that her mother, who is still in ignorance of the marriage, was opposed to it, but she was confident that she could now readily win over her mother.

None of Mrs. Duffey's closest acquaintances had the slightest intimation of the marriage until a few days ago.

Mrs. Duffey, during part of the past season, was with the "Sign of the Cross," and received a handsome salary. Mrs. Duffey returned to Lexington about three weeks ago and resumed her duties at the conservatory. Still every one except herself and Mr. Duffey were in ignorance of the union.

Resuming her work at the conservatory, Mrs. Duffey, known then to her acquaintances as Miss Naefz, seemed as deeply engrossed in her labors as usual.

About three weeks ago "Virginia Sweethearts" was given at the Opera house. "Miss Naefz" took the part of Inez Lopez, the leading character in the operetta.

About that time Mr. Duffey was in the city, and his attention to "Miss Naefz" led to the final discovery that she was Mrs. Duffey, and had been for eighteen months.

DREW COLOR LINE CLOSELY

Memphis Delivery Boys Resigned When Postmaster Name Negro.

Memphis, Tenn., June 9.—The color line bobbed up at the postoffice when six of the special messenger boys quit because Postmaster Dutro appointed a negro boy to be messenger.

The boy, Walter Searcy, was appointed and put to work the evening before, and next morning six of the white messengers got together and, selecting Ervin Battle as sopkesman, waited upon Mr. Dutro in his office. The postmaster was asked if the appointment of the negro boy was permanent, and replied that it was.

"Then we will quit," replied the spokesman, in the most emphatic manner.

"That's as you like," replied the postmaster, "if you do not care to work under present conditions, you have a perfect right to quit. Just turn in your books to the superintendent.

This was the end of the interview, and the boys marched out. They deposited their books with Superintendent Jones, and with their wheels and traps they left the office rather than work with the negro boy.

The boys who quit are from 12 to 15 years of age, and some of them have been employed for a long time. The office employs eight special messengers and six of them walked out. The positions pay well for boy's work. The boys get 8 cents for every letter they deliver, and in the course of a month they make a respectable sum. Last month one made $30.38 and another $31.45.

When asked about the apointment Mr. Dutro said that he did not anticipate trouble when the appointment was made.

"The government does not recognize any unions, and knows no color line," said he, "and I think the boys were very foolish for quitting under the circumstances. They did not have to associate with the colored boy, and their work was not with him. I have had the boy on my list for several weeks, and I needed a messenger and appointed him. He has been recommended to me, and is one of the best colored boys in the city. His father is a preacher of considerable standing and influence, and has always preached and talked good citizenship to his people."

WILL BE READY NEXT WEEK

Juvenile Court Will Then Be Prepared to Operate.

It is expected that the regulation juvenile court, the organiaztion of which was authorized by the passage of an act at the last session of the Minnesota legislature, will be in running order at the district court next week. The judges of the district court have been making arrangements for the establishment of the juvenile court for several days, but complete arrangements will not be made until the return of Judge Homer B. Dibell, who is at present in Two Harbors.

Judge J. D. Ensign has been hearing the few case that have needed attention since the jurisdiction was taken away from the municipal court.

"I think that arrangements will be complete within a few days," said Judge Ensign this morning. "There is a great deal to be done about the practice in a juvenile court; the law in this state does not cover it fully.

"I think that Illinois and Colorado have been the most successful states in dealing with this problem. Richard S. Tuthill, judge of the circuit court in Illinois, organized a juvenile court and administered most successfully for four or five years. The jurisdiction in Colorado was placed with the county court, similar to the probate court in this state. Judge Benjamin J. Lindsey administered very successfully there for five years. Judge Tuthill and he are the best exponents of the law, and the other courts follow them."

CAUSE REINSTATED.

Judgment Vacated and Trial Will Be Had.

Judge Homer B. Dibell of the district court, filed an order this morning that the judgment for $113.28 entered in favor of Peter Grams, who was defendant in a suit brought by John Ignasiak, be vacated and the cause reinstated.

The plaintiff made a motion that the judgment be vacated on the ground that the counter claims brought by the defendant were not valid and that no true verdict was awarded in the case.

In his suit the plaintiff claimed that the defendant had not accounted to him $600, which the latter had received from the Duluth Logging company for some lumber sold to the company. The plaintiff claimed that two-thirds of the sum was due him, according to an agreement made between him and the defendant.

IS NEARLY FINISHED

Citizens Are Requested to Turn In Assessment Blanks.

Citizens who have neglected to fill out the blanks left by the deputy city assessors, are requested by City Assessor Jackson to do so as soon as possible, and return the blank to the office in the city hall.

"The work of assessing the personal property is almost completed," said Mr. Jackson, this morning. "There are just a few scattering blanks to be received and we are trying to hurry them in as rapidly as possible."

The deputy assessors have been at work since May 1. Two of them have already completed their alloted share of the work and turned in their books. The others will probably finish up next week, and the books will then be made ready for the board of review, which will meet during the latter part of the month to consider kicks.

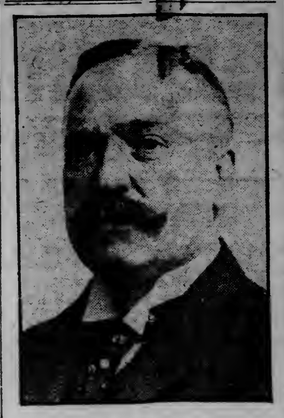
CARICATURE SKETCH OF JOHN WEAVER.
John Weaver, Mayor of Philadelphia, Who Has Become Prominent By Reason of His Fight Against the Great Gas Steal in His City.

GREAT EASTERN STORE IS SOLD

Nathan & Billstein of Superior Buy M. S. Burrows Business.

After Twenty-Two Years of Labor Mr. Burrows Will Rest.



M. S. BURROWS.

M. S. Burrows, proprietor of the Great Eastern clothing house, has sold his stock and good will to the Columbia Clothing company of Superior, Nathan & Billstein, proprietors. Among a few people it has been known that negotiations were going on for this transfer, but to the public in general the sale will come as a distinct surprise.

Negotiations between Mr. Burrows and Nathan & Billstein have been going on spasmodically for a year or more, but within the past month matters have come down to a more mutual basis, with the result that this morning the papers in the sale were signed by both parties to it, and as soon as inventory is taken the transfer will be made.

The store will be open for the last time under Mr. Burrows' proprietorship tomorrow, up to 10 o'clock at night. That will be the farewell to the Duluth public of Mr. Burrows as a clothing merchant.

On Monday the taking of inventory will begin, and the store will remain closed until this is finished. At the conclusion of that work the transfer of the stock, good will, book accounts, and the whole business to Nathan & Billstein will take place, and they will proceed to open the store for business.

Mr. Burrows has formed no positive plans for the future, but in retiring from the clothing merchandise business is not through with Duluth. His faith in the city has never wavered for a moment, but rather grows as he sees it develop. But for twenty-two years he has labored incessantly to build up his clothing business, and now, having crossed the threshold of success, and feeling the need of rest, he has decided to lay aside the cares of business for a time and enjoy life until he feels thoroughly rested in body and mind, after which he will enter on some business other than that of clothing, some business where the cares are not so pressing.

Said Mr. Burrows today, in speaking of his retirement:

"I have been anxious to get out of business and get a rest for five years and I welcomed the chance afforded me when Nathan & Billstein opened their negotiations for the purchase. I am thankful that for a time I can lay down the cares of business life, and rest; but on the other hand, when I have now come right up to the eve of my stepping out I feel the keenest regret at leaving the place I have struggled to build up since I first began business here in 1883.

"I must say that the greatest regret of all that I feel comes from the knowledge that I am leaving my help, my organization, than which no better exists anywhere in the country. I have, of course, formed friendships and associations with my help which have cemented us." Tears sprang to his eyes, but were quickly brushed aside. "Much of my success is due to my employes and to the press."

"I am not unmindful of the fact that I owe much of what success I have attained," he continued, "to the public of Duluth, and in stepping out, I wish to express through your columns my sincere and hearty thanks to that public for the patronage and friendship I have received at its hands. It has indeed been generous throughout my career here and I feel very grateful when I look back over the past. I bespeak for my successors the same kind, generous treatment that has always been accorded me and my business.

"During my merchandising career, I have carried nothing but the best goods from the best houses in the country and I think every customer who has ever dealt with me will agree that we have never sold him a piece of goods that was not first-class and as represented. I have tried to keep faith with my trade and I believe I have succeeded."

Mr. Burrows' winding up of his merchandising in Duluth closes a career in that line which has proven highly successful and the success of which is the result at times of business daring that would appall most business men. In fact, time after time, predictions were made that he would wreck his ship, but so good a pilot did he prove that he could take chances that other merchants would not dare attempt, and come through safely and with colors flying. It was this daring that has made Mr. Burrows the success he has proven and has brought him from a venturesome beginning through a stormy financial sea to the haven where he can retire and rest on his laurels.

Nathan & Billstein, the firm which buys out M. S. Burrows, is well known at the Head o fthe Lakes. They began business in Superior in their present location, corner of Winter and Tower during the last week of June, 1890, and are about to celebrate their fifteenth anniversary. The firm has excellent standing and has been highly successful. It will prove a valuable addition to the business interests of Duluth.

THREE ARE CAUGHT

Fugitives From Justice Are Captured By Duluth Police.

Are Wanted In Hurley, Houghton and Little Falls.

No less than three fugitives from justice were captured by the Duluth police yesterday and held to await the arrival of officers from their respective towns to take them in custody.

James Bagley was captured by Detective Frank Schuite and Officer Toewe. He is wanted in Hurley, Wis., for alleged participation in a burglary which was committed there recently. His description and photograph had been furnished the local department, and he was picked up on the streets.

He is being held in the city lock-up to await the arrival of the sheriff from Hurley, who is expected today.

Detective Schulte also assisted in the arrest of William Klinger. Klinger is wanted at Little Falls on a charge of adultery. He was arrested by Detective Schulte and his brother, Officer Tony Schulte, on Superior street, yesterday, and locked up. Sheriff Tanner of Little Falls was notified and came to Duluth after his man, taking him back to Little Falls last evening to stand trial there.

The third fugitive was Edward Thebo of Houghton, who is wanted in the Michigan city for non-support, on a warrant sworn out by his wife. Thebo was captured on First street by Chief Troyer and Sheriff Bell of Houghton county, who had come to Duluth on information that Thebo was working here. The sheriff and his prisoner will return to Houghton tomorrow.

The three fugitives from justice were doubtless attracted to Duluth by the cheap fares for the Elks' convention, and the prospect of being successfully concealed in the throng of excursionists which is in the city during the gathering. The police, however, have been making extra efforts to catch such characters, and also the transient thieves and grafters who are attracted to any city where a big convention is in progress. Up to the present time there have been no losses of any magnitude reported by visitors in the city, and the police hope it will pass without any of the guests or citizens suffering from the attentions of the denizens of the under world.

THEATER MANAGERS

Select One to Play the Scapegoat.

New York, June 9.—Thirteen of the twenty-two theater managers who are held for conspiracy against James S. Metcalfe, a critic, by Magistrate Pool, appeared before him at the West side court yesterday afternoon to give bonds for their appearance. The district attorney's office will make a test case against one man.

Charles Burnham of Wallack's theater, is selected to play the scapegoat. While he remains in durance, which, in this case, will be the magistrate's private room, counsel for the defendants will get out their writs and the case will be taken immediately to the supreme court. Whichever side wins, the case probably will be carried to the appellate court.

Oscar Hammerstein's name appeared on so many bonds that Magistrate Pool exclaimed: "How many Oscars are there?"

"I am the only Oscar," said Hammerstein.

"What are you, a bondsman or what?" asked the magistrate.

"I am both bondsman and criminal," replied Hammerstein.

THE IRON ORE TRADE.

Record For Shipments In May Was Broken.

Cleveland, June 9.—The Iron Trade Review says: In spite of heavy rains which curtailed mining operations, the shipments of ore from upper lake ports for May made a new record, the total being 4,619,431 tons, while the largest shipments ever before made were 4,104,711 tons in August, 1903. Last May only 7,243 tons were shipped, as the strike of lake captains was then in progress. The total for April and May this year is 5,814,694 tons. The May shipments were from the following ports:

Escanaba	702,793
Marquette	493,699
Ashland	511,061
Superior	713,265
Duluth	1,105,685
Two Harbors	1,694,928
	4,619,431

The movement this month will probably surpass that of May, although there has been some delay in loading at upper lake ports.

Vancouver, B. C., June 9.—The Italian cruiser Umbria, now visiting British Columbia waters has arrived here safely. While the Umbria was steaming between Esquimault and Vancouver, firing practice shells, which seemingly over carried, fell among the bluejackets from H. M. S. Egeria, camped ashore on South Pender island, and among the residences of the town, which has a population of 100 persons. No one was hurt and no damage done.

PARSIFAL STARTED

Chance Acquaintance and Divorce Suit Followed the Flirtation.

Wife Won, Charging Husband With Arranging the Affair.

Indianapolis, Ind., June 9.—With the dinner intermission between the first and second acts of "Parsifal" as its motif, the last act of the divorce proceedings instituted by Paul Skillman, an expert electrician, against his pretty wife, Edith, has been heard by Special Judge W. T. Brown of the circuit court.

As indignantly as she could deny her husband's accusations in connection with a chance acquaintance in a darkened theater and a wine supper at her home afterward, Mrs. Skillman cast the refutation back and followed it with a charge that he had arranged the whole affair simply to collect evidence to be used against her in court.

"Just explain to the court all about the 'Parsifal' incident," suggested her attorney as Mrs. Skillman swept to the witness stand.

"It was this way, your honr," declared the witness, speaking so that no syllable was lost to the crowd which thronged the court room. "I wished very much to witness a performance of 'Parsifal' while it was in Indianapolis and had spoken to my husband about it, expecting him to procure two seats.

"At the last moment, when I went downtown to met him, I found out that he had bought but one. He accompanied me to the theater, where I tried to persuade him to use the ticket, for I did not wish to be selfish. We argued the matter in the foyer until we were attracting attention and finally I gave up to him and he escorted me to the door.

"My seat was in the balcony, and, when I arrived there, the theater had been darkened for the first act. The usher indicated my seat, which was the second one from the aisle. As I approached it, a man who had been occupying the aisle seat, arose, and, murmuring that he had feared I was not coming, insisted upon my taking his seat. He moved to the seat which I should have taken. I did not understand the circumstances, but rather than cause a disturbance, I accepted his seat."

"But you held a conversation with him afterward," interrupted her husband's attorney.

"Yes," she returned, in no way disturbed. "You see, your honor, I was very much interested in the show and the young man at my side seemed also to be deeply impressed. At one time and another he made remarks and I suppose that I answered him. I did not wish to seem discourteous."

"And he told you his name?" asked the attorney.

"Yes, he told me his name was Lewis."

"And at the end of the first act, when everyone went out to dinner, you accompanied him to a restaurant on Illinois street, when your husband had provided you with money and you had intended to get a lunch on Washington street?"

"Yes, he asked me if I had arranged to go to dinner, and when I responded that I had, he said that he would go with me. We went together and returned to the theater together.

"Then, when the performance had concluded, he insisted on seeing me to the street car. At that point, he declared that he would ride out to the street where I lived and where I expected to be met by my husband. I could not prevent him from doing this, and, when we arrived at the street I had indicated, my husband was not there. Then I began to suspect something. Mr. Lewis accompanied me to my door and left me."

Lewis called at the Skillman home, notwithstanding the fact that he knew Mrs. Skillman to be a married woman, and this, she says, further aroused her suspicions that it was all a plot by her husband to compromise her.

Lewis' second call resulted in a domestic tragedy, which forever shattered the Skillman hearth.

"He came just as I was entering the house," said Mrs. Skillman, "and followed me into the parlor. I sat there talking with him, not drinking wine, as my husband alleges, when Mr. Skillman suddenly burst into the room. He took Lewis by the shoulder and the two went outside. They remained a few minutes and I noticed that Mr. Skillman did not handle Lewis very roughly. I forgot just what happened next, but my husband came back into the room and accused me of various things."

Immediately following the interview, two moving wagons were backed up to the front door and the household goods were carted away to a storage house where they now repose in Skillman's name. Taking his little 3-year-old daughter, he disappeared.

Mrs. Skillman contended that her husband and his attorney had procured the services of Lewis and that she was the victim of their wiles.

"I think I shall grant Mrs. Skillman the divorce," said Judge Brown after considering briefly, "and I shall give her custody of the child with an allowance."

"Thank you, thank you, judge," sobbed Mrs Skillman, burying her face in her hands.

STARTLING CHARGE

By Colored Attorney For Which He Apologized.

St. Paul, June 9.—"I have seen one of the members of the Ramsey county district court sitting on this bench drunk," said Fred. L. McGhee, the St. Paul colored attorney, yesterday afternoon during the trial of the state against George Mahan, colored, who was sentenced to life imprisonment on a charge of murder in the second degree.

The accusation of the colored attorney came like a thunderbolt. Judge Lewis, who was sitting on the bench, rebuked him and intimated that unless McGhee retracted his statement the judge would place the attorney in contempt of court. McGhee made an abject apology, stating that he did not refer to the court as at present constituted and also that he did not see the judge drunk on the bench.

GAMES TODAY.

Crookston at Duluth.
Fargo at Winnipeg.
Grand Forks at St. Cloud.

These death-bed rallies appear to have become chronic, and there is enough excitement in the games being played at Athletic Park these days, to give the average fan the nervous jim-jams.

Yesterday Crookston and Duluth appeared to be destined to have a pitchers' battle. Miller, a side-wheeler, who was caught in Van Praagh's net this spring, was in the box for Duluth, and he was serving up some shoots that kept the Crooks swinging like gates. Only one hit did they get off him until the eighth.

In the meantime the White Sox were finding Mr. Mullin at times, but not to an extent that would give him anxiety about holding his job.

The score stood 2 to 1 in Duluth's favor when three Crookston men had walked up to the plate and walked back again in the seventh inning.

Then the slaughter commenced. Weiler drew first blood with a clean single to right field. Menecie went out on a fly to third, and Weiler stole second. O'Dea hit safely and Weiler scored. Neighbors singled and O'Dea went to third allowing Neighbors to steal second a moment later. Then Erickson broke Mullin's heart with a smashing two-bagger to the right field fence, bringing in O'Dea and Neighbors. McAleese followed it up with another, scoring Erickson, and came in himself on McShane's single. Miller forced McShane at second and Bennett struck out, ending the trouble.

Any ordinary team would have been down and out with such treatment as this. When the Tigers were handed a package of six runs in one inning on the previous day, they lay down without a murmur and were so tame they would eat out of one's hand. But it was not so with the Crooks. They don't appear to realize that they were beaten, and started right after Miller in the eighth inning as if they had been batting such curves as his from childhood. Sperry and Mueller hit safely, and Mullin went out to third. Then Weiler chose this inning as the time for an error and let Olson's grounder through him, scoring Sperry. Livingstone hit safely, scoring Mueller. Fitzsimmons was an easy out, and then Leighty, Schlatter and Ludwig singled in quick succession. When the smoke had cleared away, Livingstone had also scored, making four tallies in, and the bases were as thickly populated as the canal piers on a summer evening. Then Schlatter had the opportunity of a lifetime to win a game, but he was not equal to the emergency. He already had one single to his credit in this inning, and the best he could do the second time up was a little grounder to the pitcher.

The Crooks made a desperate effort to get the required two runs in the ninth, but Miller had put up the bars again, and the best he would do was to give Dorn, who batted for Mullin, a base on balls.

A play that must not be allowed to go unmentioned was pulled off by Neighbors in the seventh. Leighty had reached first on an error by Miller, and Schlatter punched out a hit that appeared to be tagged for about two bases. Neighbors turned and sprinted under the ball, shoving his mit under it just before it touched the ground. In the meantime Leighty was headed for the plate and not losing any time about either. When the coach saw Neighbors catch the ball he made desperate signals to the runner to get back, but it was too late, and the center fielder made a beautiful throw to first completing the double.

The attendance was nearly if not quite as large as on the previous day, and the usual bunch of Superior fans was in evidence. It is pathetic to watch the ghoulish glee shown by the Bugville contingent whenever a visiting team gets a hit or scores a run, and when the Duluth players work in a misplay the envious ones from across in the suburbs fairly shivered with joy. Day after day they hike over to the park, hoping against hope to see the Duluth nine slaughtered, and night after night they hike back again, like lambs caught in a falling stock market, hoping that the morrow will bring forth better luck. This saddening sight might well be set to music, to be used as a funeral dirge, called "The March of the Bugville Fans," and played on some appropriate occasion in the Superior driving park to commemorate the passing of the Superior baseball club, which is "gone but not forgotten."

TIGERS WIN.

Bat Out Victory Over Twins In Eighth.

St. Cloud, June 9.—(Special to The Herald.)—St. Cloud-Brainerd ran out of oil in the eighth inning of yesterday's game, and before a fresh supply could be secured, the Forkers, with their lamps all trimmed and burning, left the park. The score stood: Grand Forks, 10; St. Cloud-Brainerd, 6.

At the beginning of the fatal eighth the home club had the game cinched with the score of 6 to 2 in its favor, but Harris, the new Twin third baseman, booted two easy outs, and with the bases full and no one out, Spanton, the Tiger first baseman, hoisted the ball over the fence for a home run. To add to the discomfort of the local fans, Gilchrist hit a couple of men and Smith singled, and before the brakes had been set, two more tallies rolled in, making a total of six for the Tigers.

The visitors made another pair of scores in the ninth, after two men were out. Howell's error gave Hanrahan a life, and the latter, after stealing second, was scored by Spanton's single. Spanton scored a minute later on Leach's hit.

The Twins were unable to do anything with the willow after the seventh inning.

ONLY ONE HIT.

Hanson Pitches Wonderful Game Against Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, June 9.—(Special to The Herald.)—Hanson allowed the Peggers but one hit yesterday. This came in the ninth inning, when Johnson drove out a two-bagger, scoring Tucker. Fargo won the game in the fourth on a pass, a hit batsman, and three singles.

In Rogers pulled on a sensational play, picking up a foul tip from the grand stand netting and completing a double by a long throw to second base, which caught the runner who had been trying to make that bag on the catch.

Both teams played snappy ball in spite of the muddy grounds.

SHOWS OLD TIME FORM.

Beldame Wins the Standard Stakes at Gravesend.

New York, June 9.—Beldame, the seven to ten favorite yesterday displayed her old time form and won the Standard stakes at Gravesend over a heavy track. Her victory makes her a strong contestant for the Suburban handicap which is to be run next Thursday at Sheepshead bay. Beldame ran the mile and a quarter in the excellent time of 2:07 3-5, considering the bad condition of the track. Cairngorm and the Belmont mare ran close together for nearly a mile and an eighth. In the run to the wire Beldame drew away and won under a hand ride, by a length. Cairagorm was ten lengths in front of Major Daingerfield.

Wizard, who finished second in the fifth race, was disqualified for a foul and Burns, his rider, was fined $100 for rough riding. Arsenal, who won the second race on Tuesday, June 6, was disqualified for being five pounds short of weight. Doyle, who rode him failed to get his apprentice papers and Arsenal was disqualified on that ground.

St. Louis, June 9.—Cataline, at odds of five to two, won the fourth race at the American Jockey club yesterday, a handicap at a mile and seventy yards. Miss McKenna, Attilla and Capamore were other winning favorites.

Red Leaf and Alamode were the only winning favorites at the fair grounds yesterday. Track fast.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

Gov. Wright has cabled Secretary Taft officially notifying him that the orders of the president regarding Russian ships in Manila bay have been carried out.

W. A. Plested, temporary receiver of the defunct American Savings bank at Trinidad, Colo., stated that the investigation up to this time showed a discrepancy of $30,000, which had not been satisfactorily explained to him; also that all of the officers of the bank except Mary Lynch, the president, withdrew their deposits on May 26. The bank closed its doors June 1.

Indian Inspector Wright has given the business men of the Creek nation until Friday evening to pay the tribal tax and it is believed that all will comply under protest.

The Knights of Columbus re-elected all the national officers, headed by Supreme Knight Edward L. Hearn, and selected New Haven, Conn., as the place for holding the next national convention.

A fight between boys in the gallery in the Academy of Music, a West side theater in Chicago, Thursday night, created a panic among the audience, and before it subsided several people had been bruised and one boy, Reuben Moses, so seriously hurt that it was found necessary to remove him to the hospital.

MAHAN GUILTY.

Colored Murderer Sentenced to Life Imprisonment.

St. Paul, June 9.—George Mahan, colored, on trial for the killing of his wife, has been found guilty of murder in the second degree and sentenced to life imprisonment. The jury retired shortly after 5 o'clock and reached a verdict at 8 last evening. Mahan shot and killed his wife at their home shortly after midnight, April 28, and also shot himself. He was thought to be fatally wounded, but later recovered. The motive for the crime was jealousy.

THE SAGE CASE IS AGAIN IN COURT.

St. Paul, June 9.—Another round in the fight of Russell Sage, assignee of the Hastings & Dakota Railway company, to secure possession of 70,000 acres of land in Western Minnesota, is being fought in the United States court of appeals.

Mr. Sage appealed from the decision of the circuit court sustaining the cancellation of a certificate of 120 acres of land in Swift county on the ground that the secretary of the interior had overlooked an application for a homestead made by Andrew C. Rockvog, Aug. 31, 1894.

Rockvog settled the land in April, 1[illegible]. The railroad made its first selection of the land in May, 1883, and ever since has been trying to get possession. The land was certified to the railroad company in 1897, and the certification set aside in 1900 in favor of the settler.

MATRIMONIAL EXPERIENCE

Of Ninety-Year-Old Man and a Young Bride.

Amherst, Mass., June 9.—Mrs. Oren Williams, 23 years old, widow of Oren Williams, who died at the age of 94, has already begun to enjoy the snug fortune which became hers when Williams ceased to breathe. The brief matrimonial experience of Mr. and Mrs. Williams is the subject of spicy gossip, which does not disturb the rest the exposure of Mrs. Williams. Mrs. Williams admits that she married Williams for his money. She buried him the day after he died, and she does not propose to wear mourning.

"Williams has lost his head completely," said neighbors when he married Miss Alice Baker last September. Others expressed themselves in more forcible and less complimentary language. "I think she will make me a good wife," said Williams.

It is said that some of the unkind remarks concerning Williams were inspired by persons who were trying to make a match between the nonagenarian and a widow of 50 odd years. Williams thought kindly of the opportunity until he met Miss Baker, whom he married within two weeks. When the promoters of the other match upbraided him, Williams replied with spirit: "I want an heir. I don't propose to have the name of Williams perish when I die."

Mrs. Williams did not accept her aged husband unconditionally. She required him to will his property to her, inspected the document critically and laid it away in a little tin trunk. Married life did not prove one grand, sweet song in the case of Mr. and Mrs. Williams. The nonagenarian spent much of his time in the town hall, where he expressed dissatisfaction with the domestic arrangements in the Williams household. With or without cause, he manifested every symptom of a much henpecked husband. Williams' first wife left a large property, of which he received the income, amounting to about $1,200 per year. The second Mrs. Williams saw that the money was spent in ways of her own devising. Williams would readily comply with his wife's requests, and then hasten to the town hall to grumble.

A few weeks prior to his death Williams assumed an unwonted cheerfulness. He had decided, he said, to apply for a divorce in June. The specific grounds on which the action was to be based were not clear. Williams averred that his wife insisted that they should live apart, though they occupied the same house.

Mrs. Williams is the daughter of Albert J. Baker, a wealthy Shutesbury farmer. She is a blonde of medium height, attractive in face and figure and of entertaining personality. She answered Mr. Williams' advertisement for a housekeeper and Williams professed to her in the second or third sentence he uttered.

One of her reasons for accepting Williams was that a chum of hers married a Hartford (Conn.) octogenarian and was living happily with him. Previous to her marriage Mrs. Williams was cashier in the restaurant of a Springfield hotel. She enjoyed few luxuries and there was nothing left of her wages above the bare cost of living.

Williams was estimated to be worth $10,000. The income from his wife's property was more than sufficient for him to live upon. If Williams lived five years his widow would receive compensation at the rate of $21,000 a year. If he lived a shorter period the return would be even larger. This was the basis on which Williams' bride made her calculations.

Mrs. Williams would like to break the will of her late husband's first wife. Relatives of Williams, it is said, propose to contest Williams' will. Williams' attorney is quoted as saying that he is unable to see how the imperturbable Mrs. Williams can be dispossessed.

NARROW ESCAPE

From Attack of Wild Geese In Washington.

Tacoma, Wash., June 9.—Aksel J. Jurgensen of Tacoma was attacked by thousands of wild geese in a nesting field in the upper Horse Heaven country last week, and had it not been for the timely appearance of a game warden it is doubtful whether he could have escaped alive. Jurgensen was making repairs on an irrigation ditch and had occasion to go down toward the Columbia river. Thousands of wild geese make a nesting place of the fields in the upper part of the Horse Heaven country, and this is the nesting season. Jurgensen stumbled into a field where there were thousands of the nests, and the birds set upon him. He carried no gun and was forced to run. He could not outstrip the geese and they beat him unmercifully with their wings. He was nearly exhausted when a game warden, attracted by the commotion in the field, drove up and took a hand in driving away the frantic birds. According to Jurgensen's friends, he was beaten black and blue by the wings of the big geese.

CONSTIPATION is caused primarily by lack of certain elements in the food which tend to more or less imperfect digestion, and to make the liver sluggish and torpid.

The bowels carry away and discharge the fecal matter—that is the refuse matter of the system. If the bowels are constipated, the fecal matter clogs and congests the natural passages, the poisonous excretions are retained in the body. They set back like a stream dammed up, and are absorbed into the system and carried all over the body in the blood.

That's the reason your head aches, your tongue is coated, your mouth tastes like a garbage can, black specks float before your eyes, and you are generally unhappy. It's constipation poisoning.

CALIFORNIA PRUNE WAFERS are positively guaranteed to cure the most obstinate case of Constipation, Biliousness, Torpid Liver or Indigestion. 100 Wafers, 25 cents. Sold by KUGLER, Your Druggist, 108 West Superior St., Duluth, Minn.

RAILROAD RATES

Their Regulation Discussed Before the Millers Convention.

Resolution Passed Directed Against Short Selling of Grain.

Kansas City, June 9.—Prof. Hugo R. Meyer of the university of Chicago addressed the National Confederation of Millers today on the question of governmental regulation of railroad rates, maintaining that "wherever the public regulation of railroad rates has sought to do more than to eliminate secret rebates, and to guarantee that rates shall be reasonable per se, it has arrested the decline of railway rates and has led to the adoption of the distant tariff."

"The conflicts of interest between rival producing regions, manufacturing centers and trading centers are so fierce," he said, "that no government that permits itself to be drawn into them can stand up under the sectional feelings thus aroused, unless the government shall settle these conflicts upon some hard and fast mechanical basis which permits of no exercise of judgment or discretion. The interstate commerce commission developed certain mechanical and hard and fast rules for settling these conflicts of localities and of interests, the doctrine that railway rates must be based on relative costs of transportation and that they may not be based on "commercial considerations," as well as the doctrine that no person may be deprived of the advantages accruing to him by virtue of his geographical position; or conversely, that no person may be relieved of the disabilities under which he labors by virtue of his geographical position. These doctrines result in rates made on the basis of distance. Therefore the important decisions of the commission have generally been made by means of the application of the distance tariff."

A resolution was offered calling on the grain exchanges of the United States to stop the practice of unlimited short selling, to change and broaden the rules of grading contract wheat and to insist on more rigid inspection in and out of elevators.

The resolution was offered by Edgar Evans of Indianapolis. It was referred to a committee and will be taken up for consideration later. Mr. Evans also spoke on "Spurious Speculation and Its Cure." He was applauded frequently as he assailed the men whom he declared were responsible for much of the millers' troubles and for fictitious prices whereby the public is made to suffer. Mr. Evans said in part:

"A decline in May wheat of 30 cents a bushel and an advance of 20 cents on unchanged condition demands explanation, especially when it happens within five weeks. Two or three men of great means and sportive tendencies have it in their power to turn the business into a stage where legitimate dealers, 'poor puppets of unseen wires,' after their little hour of stint and save are tossed pellmell together into their grave, the manipulators' pocketbook. Some astute bank president, acquainted as he thinks with the tricks of every trade, finds he did not know and his directors have to make good."

"They tell us this is business." Mr. Evans continued, "but is it business when the markets of a great nation are in a state of great unrest, tension and demoralization, such as has occurred in the past three months? Is it business when prices are made and broken at the nod of a man or the suggestion of a coterie? The remedy for the exchanges to consider and for us to demand, is, first, that no chance frenzied financier or opulent elevator owner sell for delivery beyond a limited time property to which he cannot show a title. This would stop dealing in wind."

WOMAN REAL BLACKMAILER

Man Persecuting the Tonkin Family Merely a Tool.

Oswego, N. Y., June 9.—Emboldened by his immunity from detection the mysterious letter writer who has terrorized the family of John Jay Tonkin for three years past, has mailed another kidnaping threat to the father of 12-year-old Rosamond Tonkin. The letter demands $100,000 and states that unless the amount is paid Rosamond will be kidnaped June 10.

Mrs. Tonkin is prostrated, and redoubled vigilance is being taken in guarding the child. The letter, which is dated Oswego, June 6, and addressed to "John Jay Tonkin, Oswego, N. Y." follows:

"Dear Sir: Unless we have $100,000 before June 10 at noon we will take your Rosamond. You had better call off your detectives. Remember, June 10 at 12 m.—The Three."

A second letter, dated Boston, June 6, and filled with sinister threats against the life of Rosamond Tonkin, also was received by the Tonkin family, Wednesday.

As a result, John J. Tonkin, who has just returned from a business trip West, has announced he will appeal to the United States postal authorities and ask for an investigation of the most stringent character.

"I now am determined," said Mr. Tonkin, "that this matter shall be sifted to the bottom. If I can discover who the dastardly scoundrel is who is persecuting my family, I will prosecute him to the fullest extent of the law, even if he be my own brother. I still am prepared to pay a large and substantial reward for the detection and arrest of the author of these sketches and threatening letters."

A remarkable feature of the case revealed is the positively expressed belief of a person intimately connected with the investigation that the man who has written the letters, possesses a dual personality.

"This man, who is as well known in New York as in Oswego, has been dominated in the last two years by a woman who bears a most intense enmity against the Tonkin family," he said. "Under ordinary circumstances this young man is possessed of charming manners and is the soul of honor and good fellowship, but the influence of this woman, who is also young and beautiful, is so pronounced that the man is as clay in the woman's hands."

At a secret conference between J. J. Tonkin and two detectives in his employ the name of the suspected mysterious letter writer was mentioned, and the millionaire was asked whether he desired to have the police make an arrest.

It is understood that Mr. Tomkin refused to believe the proofs offered by the detectives as to the identity of the blackmailer, and ordered them to continue their investigations on different lines. In a statement Mr. Tomkin said:

"I do not propose to cause an arrest in this case until irrefutable proof of the guilt of some person has been shown. If such proof were given me I would not hesitate to ask the police to make an arrest, no matter how near home it should strike.

"I have received letters in which the name of a certain man in Oswego is mentioned, but I have steadfastly refused to believe the man, under obligations to me as he is, could ever have perpetrated these threats."

MGR. FALCONIO IS INVITED

To Officiate at Consecration of Bishop of Superior.

Milwaukee, Wis., June 9.—Priests of Milwaukee have already begun arrangements for a farewell reception for Father Schinner at St. Francis seminary immediately after his consecration. The professors at the seminary, where Father Schinner is an instructor, will give him a pectoral cross. St. Mary's parish, of which he was a member, is also planning to make him a gift, and a similar movement is on foot among the Italians.

The bishop-elect has invited Mgr. Falconio, the apostolic delegate, to officiate at the consecration. The date will not be definitely settled until Mgr. Falconio is heard from. It will be either on June 29, the feast of St. Barnabas, or June 29, the feast of Saints Peter and Paul. Bishop James Schwebach of the La Crosse diocese, which furnished the greater part of the territory for the new diocese, and Bishop James McGolrick of Duluth will officiate as assistant consecrators.

SULTAN MORE CORDIAL

In His Reception of the British Minister.

Fez, Morocco, June 7, (Wednesday)—Gerard A. Lowther, the British minister to Morocco, had an hour's private audience with the sultan today, and the political situation was fully threshed out. The cordiality of the Sherifian ruler noticably differed from his attitude at the official reception of the British minister. It is still hoped here that an agreement will be reached directly between France and Germany, as otherwise a long diplomatic struggle disadvantageous to all is foreseen.

THE DEMANDS OF NORWAY

Should Be Granted, Says Former Minister Rasmus Anderson.

Madison, Wis., June 9.—Prof. Rasmus B. Anderson, many years professor of Scandinavian languages, history and literature in the University of Wisconsin and five years United States minister to Denmark, and the author of several substantial works relative to the Scandinavian North, now editor of America, when shown the telegram from Norway, said:

"I am surprised that King Oscar has not seen fit to yield to so just a demand as has been made upon him by the Norwegian nation, particularly as the parliament, press and people are an absolute unit in demanding a separate consular system. It is the first time in history that the Norwegians have presented an absolutely united front.

"As long as Norway and Sweden are united and have common interests there will always be friction. The one nation will be jealous of the other and will quickly suspect that his neighbor is asking and taking too much. With the dissolution of the union all cause of friction and jealousy will be gone. Then the Norwegians and Swedes will be the best of friends, ready to defend each other in times of peril.

"You and I are neighbors, our farms join each other. We live side by side for generations, and there never is the slightest indication of unfriendly feeling. On the other hand, if I had some right on your farm and you on mine, it is probable that we might quarrel most of the time.

"The union between Norway and Denmark was a constant source of irritation and ill-will, but since the two nations became separated, the Norwegians and Danes have been the very best of friends. So, in order to get away from petty bickerings and jealousies between Norway and Sweden, I have long wished that the political union between them might be dissolved. They would then be the two happiest nations in Europe, and nothing could poison their friendship.

"The Norwegians are a perfect unit in demanding separate consuls, and the demand is in accordance with the Norwegian constitution, and it is foolish for King Oscar and his advisers to refuse to approve what is unanimously asked. I hope this conflict on the other side of the Atlantic will not produce strained relations between our American cousins of Norwegian and Swedish birth or descent, but I am sure Norwegian citizens will unite in supporting the position taken by Norway.

"In case of war, which the good Lord forbid, many of Norway's sons in America will enlist under the flag, and thousands of others make substantial contributions to the sinews of war. There are many sons of Norway in this country and they represent much wealth.

"I notice by a telegram, Norway proposes as a compromise of the difficulty, accepting one of King Oscar's sons, presumably Prince Carl, as king of Norway. I am free to say that this doesn't please me. The people of Norway have long been able to govern themselves. Norway is no Russia. The country is too small to maintain a royal dynasty and compete with its neighbors.

"The people of Norway should now emancipate themselves and establish a republic similar to that of France or Switzerland, and manage its affairs on ecclomic and common-sense principles. Let us hope that a happy Norwegian republic will be secured without bloodshed. This is the best for the nations concerned."

PROVIDE FOR EMERGENCIES

Water Board Would Establish Homes For Special Crew.

At the meeting of the water and light board yesterday afternoon the commissioners decided to ask the city for permission to sell vacant property owned by the municipality and to use the proceeds to erect two double houses with barns at Seventh avenue east and First street, for the use of an emergency crew of four men, who will be expected to answer calls day and night in cases of broken mains and other contingencies that might arise. The idea is to have the force so equipped and drilled that it will be able to answer emergency calls as quickly as the fire department responds to an alarm of fire.

A formal request for permission to carry out the plan will be presented to the council next Monday evening.

Emil Engel was awarded the contract for laying water pipes on the bids called for at the last meeting. The department will furnish all the material, except the metal for the joints.

Manager Case reported that the guarantee for an income on the Duluth Heights auxillary water system has been supplied and he was directed to submit it to the city attorney.

ARCHDEACON APPLEBY

Protests Against Townsite Near Indian School.

Washington, June 9.—Archdeacon Appleby of the Duluth Episcopal diocese, has sent a long letter to President Roosevelt, in which he protests against allowing townsite entries on lands near Indian schools.

The archdeacon is making a strong effort to prevent the establishment of a new town at Bena on lands which he claims were promised him for mission purposes.

Whatever action is taken by the register at the Cass Lake land office will be appealed from, and the case will be fought in the general land office here.

SENATOR NELSON

Unprepared to Say What Outcome Will Be.

Alexandria, Minn., June 9.—When Senator Nelson was seen at his farm yesterday and asked for an expression of opinion in regard to the trouble between Norway and Sweden, he said:

"At this distance, owing to the lack of detailed information, it is difficult to form an opinion as to the true state of affairs. I do not care to make a public statement in regard to them.

The senator had just returned from the meeting of the Norwegian Society of America at Fargo and seemed to be of the opinion that the majority of the Norwegian-Americans were in sympathy with the action of Norway. He could not understand the press report that Norway would be satisfied with a kingdom headed by a member of the house of Bernadotte, but seemed inclined to the belief that as far as the future of Norway was concerned it would be immaterial whether it was a republic or a kingdom, for even a kingdom would be of the liberal type.

As to the outcome of the trouble he said he had no idea what it would be. He thinks there will be no fighting, unless Sweden refuses to grant the demands of Norway and seeks to force Norway back into the union.

YOUNG GIRL INSANE

As the Result of Studying Too Hard.

St. Peter, Minn., June 9.—Louisa L. Thompson, aged 18, was committed to the state hospital Wednesday under circumstances that were most pathetic and affecting.

Miss Thompson, whose home is in Owatonna, had been attending the high school at Huron, S. D., and was to have been graduated Friday night as the valedictorian of her class.

She was very popular and a brilliant scholar, but about a week before the commencement her mind gave way under the strain of overstudy and she went hopelessly insane.

Her relatives determined to take her to her home in Owatonna, but en route to that city she became violent and was brought direct to St. Peter. Her commitment followed, but the hospital authorities believe that it will be possible to restore her mental faculties.

HOME COMPOSERS

Heard at State Music Teachers' Meeting.

Winona, Minn., June 9.—One of the star features of the convention was the Minnesota composers' concert yesterday afternoon, showing the high grade of ability of Minnesota musicians. In many of the numbers the composer himself was heard. Those whose compositions made up the program included Gottfried H. Federlein, Gertrude Sans Souci, Claude Madden, Robert Gale, Willard Patten and Gustavus Johnson of Minneapolis; Arthur Koerner of St. Paul and Ernest Lachmund of Duluth.

In the morning an organ recital was given by H. S. Woodruff of Minneapolis, assisted by Miss Mildred Beyerstedt of Winona, the participants winning hearty applause. Two round-tables were conducted, one on the piano and one on strings by W. W. Nelson of St. Paul. A meeting of county vice presidents was presided over by Miss Caroline V. Smith of this city.

Problems in teaching music in the public schools were discussed at a meeting of the public school section yesterday afternoon with Miss Caroline V. Smith of Winona presiding. Those leading the discussions were Miss Nettie Doud of Winona and Mr. Wiley of Minneapolis.

Last evening there was an organ recital by G. H. Fairclough of St. Paul, assisted by H. E. Phillips of St. Paul. This was followed by a lecture by Dr. Henry G. Hanchett of New York on "The Interpretive Power of Music."

RED LAKE FALLS GLAD

Over Present Status of County Seat Fight.

Red Lake Falls, June 9.—The board of county commissioners, acting upon the petition for the removal of the county seat from Red Lake Falls to Thief River Falls, after due consideration, declared that the petition passed was illegal on its face, and by a resolution passed by a vote of three to two held it to be illegal on several counts, and refused to call a special election to vote on the proposition.

William Erb, a citizen of Equality, immediately secured a writ of mandamus from Judge Watts compelling the commissioners to meet again on the 20th to take definite action.

But the county seat matter is now on the shelf for several years to come, as Red Lake Falls will practically have both sides of the case in its hands, and until such time as the supreme court decides the matter the Thief River Falls petition is a dead issue.

Thief River Falls used every scheme in securing signers to their petition, but failed to figure on its legality. From present indications it will be several years before matters come to a head. They have made a considerable expense to the taxpayers in their moves so far, but have failed in every attempt.

LAUGHTER HEALTHY.

Physician Tells Why Laughter Is Beneficial.

"A Physician" writes in the London Chronicle:

If it were generally understood how salutary the act of laughing is to the bodily health, there might be more laughter than lamentation in the world, and farcical comedies prove more attractive to the invalid than physicians. The old adage, "Laugh and grow fat," is founded on a sound physiological basis. It is commonly observed that fat men laugh with considerable facility. But they do not laugh because they are fat. They are fat because they laugh, the act of cachinnation having a profound influence in promoting appetite, oxidation of the blood, digestion—indeed, the entire and complex process of nutrition. Good nourishment produces the contented mind, which is, we know on excellent authority, a perpetual feast.

The immediate physical results of indulgence in laughter are numerous. In the first place, the act of laughing involves the exercise of a large number of muscles, including many of those of the face, neck, chest and abdomen, which, if they are exercised sufficiently, often become correspondingly well developed, as do also all those glands blood vessels, nerves and other tissues in intimate connection with them. The facial muscles, for example, of the man who laughs often and easily are generally developed to a degree which gives him the facial rotundity of a contented child. But laughter accomplishes much more than the production of this mere outward appearance of well-being. It has a highly beneficial influence on those two vital organs, the heart and the lungs.

During what is called a "fit" of laughter the lungs may be almost completely emptied of their contained air. Fresh air is then drawn in to the fullest extent of their capacity, inflating, perhaps, those little used air cells which contained previously only stagnant air and bacilli—for in the shallow breathing we ordinarily practice comparatively large tracts of air cells are not used. During this process the general circulation is accelerated, impure air is hurried out of the system and fresh air hurried in. With the forcible ascent and descent of the diaphragm during inspiration and expiration the liver and other abdominal organs undergo a kind of kneading not unlike that undergone during massage, and this is of great benefit in rousing them from that torpor to which they are liable. The heart is also stimulated to more vigorous contraction during the active cachinnatory process. Persons who, so to speak, let themselves go, and laugh with a will, sometimes bring almost all the principal muscles of their body into play, twisting, turning and bending themselves almost double in sheer muscular exhilaration.

"Low spirits," or what is popularly termed "a fit of the blues," is a mental state often caused by a poisoning of the nervous system with one of those curious toxins which the body occasionally elaborates from the food supplied to it, and which perhaps a sluggish liver (whose duty it is to guard the portals of the system and prevent the entrance of hurtful matters from the alimentary canal) has allowed to pass unchallenged. Laughter alone has been known to dissipate this kind of mental depression, by mechanically rousing the system, increasing the rate of oxidation of the blood, indirectly stimulating the organs by which poisons are eliminated, and by its beneficial action on the liver, arresting the absorption into the system of any more poisons. To do this, of course, the laughter must be hearty and prolonged—of that kind evoked by the well-played farcical comedy. It is a matter of common knowledge that a man laughs more heartily when in company with others than he does by himself; this is because most of our emotional states are "catching;" hence, in a theater, an audience is easily seized with uncontrollable laughter, as it may be with equally uncontrollable panic. The most vigorous laughter, then, must be sought in company.

The spart, melancholy and miserable-looking man is this because he seldom or never gives way to healthy laughter. Mental worries, real or imaginary, will so prevent nutrition through the influence of mind on body, as to produce wasting of the muscular system and those other tissues which subserve it. If such a man would look on the lighter side of life and laugh a little more, his appetite and digestion would improve, and he would be able to acquire that minimum amount of fat which is necessary to the well-being of the body—fat being a necessary constituent of the healthy brain and nervous system. The laughing habit is one, therefore, that is worth cultivating. It is a matter of everyday experience that one feels the better for a good laugh, an explosion of laughter being, in truth, a nerve storm, comparable in its effect to a thunder storm in Nature (on a very small scale), doing good by dissipating those oppressive clouds of care which sometimes darken the mental horizon.

BIG RIVER RISING

Mississippi Coming Up More Rapidly Than Ever Before.

A Large Section of La Crosse Will Soon Be Flooded.

La Crosse, Wis., June 9.—Today the Mississippi river is rising more rapidly than ever known before. It is up two feet since last night and will show a further rise of two or three feet today. It is now only a foot below the danger point and a large section of La Crosse, particularly in the factory district, will be flooded tonight The weather observer has sent out warnings to look out for the highest water of the year and perishable property is being removed to places of safety.

The cities along the Wisconsin river are under more water today than since the high water began. At Grand Rapids, Wis., the river has risen two feet a day for three days and today is 2.6 feet above the danger line. All the factories at Grand Rapids and vicinity have been closed and conditions all portend a very dangerous flood at that point. The village of Kilbourn on the Wisconsin river, where a rise of one to twelve feet has occurred, is in danger of being entirely inundated.

Conditions on the Chippewa and Northern Wisconsin rivers have bettered considerably today, but along the Mississippi, Wisconsin and Black rivers, they are becoming worse.

Grand Rapids, Mich., June 9.—The crest of the Grand river flood has passed, and although the river remains practically stationary, a scarcely perceptible fall is reported by the weather bureau. The dyke at the north end still holds. A continually increasing proportion of the West side is being flooded by water, which is backing up from below. Hundreds of residences are surrounded which were high and dry yesterday. The prospect is that the flooded area will extend greatly today, even with the river receding.

NICHOLAS TO ROJESTVENSKY

Czar Sends a Message of Praise to Russian Admiral.

St. Petersburg, June 9, 4:20 p. m.—Emperor Nicholas has cabled the following message to Admiral Rojestvensky:

"From my heart I thank you and all the officers of the squadron who have honorably done their duty for your unselfish work for Russia and for me. By the will of the Almighty, success was not destined to crown your endeavors, but your boundless bravery will always be a source of pride to the country. I wish you a speedy recovery. May God console you all.

NICHOLAS."

The peculiar wording of the message is attracting attention. The restriction of the emperor's thanks to those honorably doing their duty is fanning the ugly talk regarding the surrender of ships and the conduct of some of the crews. The message of Admiral Enquist and Capt. Chagin of the Russian cruiser Almaz did not contain any intimation of misbehavior on the part of the officers or crew.

SHIPS ARE INTERNED.

Washington, June 9.—Rear Admiral Train has reported to the navy department that the Russian ships at Manila have been interned. In addition to the information conveyed in Governor Wright's cablegram, Rear Admiral Train said that the coal supply of the ships has been limited and the officers and men paroled, upon condition that they take no further part in the war.

REMARKABLE UPS AND DOWNS

C. d'Autremont Recalls Some of Those of P. L. Kimberly.

The death of Peter Kimberley recalls to the mind of C. d'Autremont the financial ups and downs the late financier experienced in Duluth. During his operations in this vicinity, Mr. Kimberley at one time found himself unable to pay his debts on call, but given a few days of grace he demonstrated he could meet his obligations in the most extraordinary manner.

"It was in '97 that Mr. Kimberley got quite hard up," said Mr. dAutremont. "James Sheridan held a note of Kimberley's for $20,000, which was long past due. Mr. Sheridan assigned it to me. The latter and I had been prospecting in the Vermillion range, and I went into a bank and offered Mr. Kimberley's note for $20,000 as collateral to secure $500. The bank officials laughed, and said that they would not give 10 cents for the note. Within ninety days, Mr. Kimberley sold his interest in some mining lands for $800,000, and the first check he made out was to pay the note.

"At the same time Mr. Kimberley owed a certain bank $40,000. This note was also long past due, and the bankers were about to outlaw him. The president asked him if he would renew his notes. Mr. Kimberley said that of course he would. He drew a new note for $50,000, which covered the original debt and the interest. At that time it was required by the government that a dollar stamp should be placed for every $1,000 on a note. Then the question came up who was going to pay for the stamps. The president of the bank said he would not pay for them, and Mr. Kimberley said he did not have the $50 on hand to do so. So the note was outlawed. But within four months the note was paid. Mr. Kimberley was released from his obligations in reality, but that did not cut any figure with him."

HEAVY RAIN DESTROYS MUCH PROPERTY.

Livingston, Mont., June 9.—In ten minutes today water destroyed $50,000 worth of property here. For three hours all the business district was flooded. Rain fell like water pouring from a bucket. A wall of water four feet high came down the narrow valley, tore up the track and when it reached the station the stream was 1,000 feet wide and 2 feet deep. The loss on perishable goods in basements is heavy, $10,000 representing the damage sustained by tobacconists and cigarmakers alone.

THE CODY TRAIL

New Route to the Yellowstone National Park Opened.

Laid Out By the Scout, Built at Great Cost.

Cody, Wyo., June 9.—Old "Buffalo Bill" Cody has lived long enough to see another of his dreams realized—the opening of his long-talked-of "Cody Trail Through Wonderland," the "trail" being a new route to the Yellowstone National park, a "trail" passing through what the famous scout and Indian fighter says is the finest 100 miles of scenery in the world.

It has been the dream of the last forty years of Col. Cody's life to establish a road running into the Yellowstone National park from the east and passing through the famous Yellowstone forest reservation, where Cody, as well as others who have passed over the route, say can be found sights and scenes superior to even the national park, which adjoins the reserve on the west and to which the "Cody Trail Through Wonderland" leads.

Col. Cody years ago laid out the route which he wanted to use. He did not have the assistance of an engineer in doing so, because it was not his object to make a short line or to avoid difficulties. The first object of the "trail" was to pass through the best scenery possible, and it didn't make much difference how much out of the way of an air line the trail went.

Eventually it would end at Lake hotel, in the Yellowstone National park, and its originating point was on the Shoshone river in the Big Horn basin, where later the colonel located his home and the town of Cody.

It is out on the "trail" that Col. Cody has established his two hunting lodges, Wapiti Wicklup and Pahaska Tepee. The first takes its name from the Wapiti branch of the Shoshone river, on which it is located, while the second is named directly for Buffalo Bill—Pahaska Tepee meaning "the home of the long-haired man" (Long Hair is an Indian name for Col. Cody). "White Beaver" Powell, Col. Cody's foster brother, says this about Pahaska Tepee: "The tepee is in the heart of the big-game country of the Rocky mountains. Purest water from the mountain springs and melting snows are filled with rainbow salmon, mountain and brook trout, and on every side huge mountains tower thousands of feet into the air. Some of these mountains are capped with snow all the year round."

The Pahaska tepee is the largest log cabin in the world and will accommodate something like 100 persons. Wapiti Wicklup, twenty-five miles nearer civilization than the tepee, will take care of fifty persons.

Out on this trail in one of its loneliest spots, Buffalo Bill has built for himself a splendid mausoleum, in which he will be buried. The mausoleum is on the apex of Rattlesnake mountain and is almost inaccessible, except to the experienced mountain climber. Cody has made provision in his will for the expense necessary to remove his body to the mountain, no matter in what country of the globe he shall die.

The road from Cody to the Yellowstone skirts mountains and rivers, dark ravines and appalling precipices. At one time half up the side of the mountain it goes; at another it winds its way along the bottom of some black canyon through which a mountain stream roars and plunges. Through Rattlesnake canyon to the Shoshone it has been found necessary to even cut several short tunnels, so difficult has the work been.

It was a source of the keenest regret to Buffalo Bill that he was unable to be present when the first coach load of tourists, with their tents and camp equipage, left Cody enroute to the Yellowstone park over the new trail, but he was absent in Paris. The opening of the trail took place last month, and a long message of congratulation was cabled to Paris to Col. Cody by his friends.

AFTER AN ESTATE.

Minnesotan Carries Claims to a Montana Court.

Butte, Mont., June 9.—A petition for the removal of Joheph P. Collins as administrator of the estate of Charles Colbert, deceased, has been filed in the district court. The action is taken in behalf of J. Cross Bush of Kent, Minn., who claims to be a cousin and heir of Colbert, the pioneer mining man of Montana, who left an estate valued at about $75,000. No heirs could be found for several years and none made any claim of relationship with the deceased until Bush put in his claim through the attorneys, Peter Breen and T. A. Morrin.

Objection is made to the account of the administrator because of claims against the estate which he has presented and which it is alleged are wasteful and tend to prove mismanagement. Proposed expenditures from the estate, objection to which is made, are the following: C. F. Kelly, for attorneys fees, $10,000; administrator's claim for services, $3,800; claim for the state of Montana for witnesses and other fees, $1,021.

WILL GO TO PANAMA

L. M. Lepper, Well Known Railroad Man, Gets Good Appointment.

Will Superintend Railroad Construction Work Along Big Canal.

L. M. Lepper, formerly a well-known railroad man on the range, was in the city today on a business trip and to bid his friends goodby preparatory to starting for Panama, where he has received an appointment as superintendent of railroad construction.

Mr. Lepper was for several years assistant roadmaster for the Great Northern Railway company on the ranges, and for four years afterwards was in charge of the stripping work in the same locality for the Richards-Lundeen company. For the past two years he has been roadmaster on the Illinois division of the Rock Island system, with headquarters at Rock Island, Ill., from which position he resigned to receive the appointment on the Panama canal work.

Mr. Lepper expects to leave New York for Panama with ten railroad foremen whom he has been authorized to engage, June 17.

His appointment comes from Chief Engineer Wallace, who has supervision of the canal work, and Chairman Shontz of the canal commission, to whom he some time ago made application for a position as superintendent of railroad construction. His salary will be $200 per month, and the salary of the road foremen whom he takes with him will be $1,200 per year.

Mr. Lepper says that the railroad construction work that he understands to be under way in connection with the canal will comprise eight four-track roads through the Culebra cut to facilitate the removal of the material, and the equipping and double-tracking of the Panama railroad, from the Atlantic to the Pacific. The railroad has now a five-foot gauge track, and it is the understanding that this is to be changed to standard guage.

"I have made a number of inquiries as to the climate and the sanitary conditions for appointees on the canal work," said Mr. Lepper, this noon, "and am pretty well satisfied that I shall like the situation down there very much. Of course I may be changed over to some other branch of railroad construction work down there, but I have the privilege, if I do not like the situation, of returning to this country.

"Lawrence Brennan of Superior, who some time ago went to Panama to accept the superintendency of railroad work, has written back that he is provided with comfortable quarters and a bed and is only required to furnish his own clothing.

"I have received instructions to start from New York about June 17 and will leave in a few days for that point, with the road foremen that I was authorized to take down there with me."

EQUITABLE LIFE

Founded By Henry Baldwin Hyde to Get Revenge.

Important Facts Behind Origin of the Great Company.

New York, June 9.—Just how Henry Baldwin Hyde came to be founder of the Equitable Life Assurance society is told below by William R. Moore, who was his chum at the time.

The Equitable Life company was founded out of spite. Mr. Hyde was 25 years old at the time and was a clerk in the employ of the Mutual Life Insurance company. He was receiving a salary at that time of $20 a week and was living in a boarding house. Mr. Moore, also a young bachelor at the time, was living in the same house.

Both young men attended the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church, of which the Rev. Dr. Alexander, the present president of the Equitable Life, was the pastor.

In March of 1859 a vacancy occurred in the Mutual Life. It was a better position than the humble clerkship held by Henry B. Hyde, and as he had worked industriously and given the best of his ability to the company, he believed that he should be promoted to the higher place.

The better position was given to another man. Young Hyde was incensed, and he promptly went to Frederick S. Winston, then president of the Mutual Life, and told him that he meant to start a company which would rival the Mutual Life.

This threat, coming from a young clerk without a dollar of capital, is said to have amused Mr. Winston greatly.

When Young Hyde returned to the boarding house that evening and confided to his chum, William R. Moore, his determination to start a life insurance company to compete with the Mutual, young Moore regarded the matter as rash and unattainable and tried to dissuade his companion from an undertaking which, he believed, could only result in humiliation and failure.

Mr. Moore is now president of the William R. Moore Dry Goods company of Memphis, Tenn. This is a large concern, with offices in this city at 255 Church street. In a letter to the New York World, written from Memphis, Mr. Moore says:

"Permit me to give your readers some inside history concerning the origin of the Equitable Life Assurance society of the United States.

"At the time of the society's formation, Henry B. Hyde and myself were boarders and lodgers with Mr. and Mrs. Hallet, at the corner of Sixteenth street and Irving place, New York. We were young bachelor chums, attendants of Rev. Dr. Alexander's church, located at that time on Fifth avenue, on the exact spot now occupied by the storehouse of Arnold, Constable & Co. Mr. Hyde and myself were warm personal friends, who in many cases had the same social friends and acquaintances.

"I distinctively remember when, one evening, he came home from his daily duties with another insurance company by which he had been employed, how he complained of that company for withholding from him a certain promotion to which he felt himself entitled; and also how determined and positive he was in his declared purpose to start and establish a competing company, which he said would ultimately rival that company which had refused to promote him.

"Knowing that Mr. Hyde had little or no capital, I discouraged any attempt on his part to undertake what then seemed to me to be a hopeless enterprise. But his mind had been thoroughly made up; and his great and tireless energy and self-confidence urged him on in the purpose which he had not the least doubt of accomplishing.

"Proceeding immediately to seek the aid and influence of friendly capital and acquaintances, he, in an incredibly short time, succeeded in organizing the Equitable, and at once began a career of success for the company perhaps unequalled in the history of life insurance companies in the world. This, in brief, was its beginning.

"Everybody knows of its later extraordinarily successful history. Mr. Hyde had then only one idea as to the company's policy, and that idea was always and only that it should be 'purely mutual.' If this idea should now or by anybody be at any time controverted, I have now in my possession (and lying before me while I write) his personal friendly correspondence of more than forty years ago, attesting to the assertions here made. He never then dreamed of a 'stockholders' company.

"Without here enlarging upon the question, I have thought—being perhaps now the only living intimate and personal friend cognizant of the inside details of the beginning of the Equitable—it might possibly interest the 600,000 policy-holders in that company to know precisely what Mr. Hyde thought at the time of its formation."

Mr. Moore's declaration that the original policy of the founder of the Equitable was that it should be "purely mutual," is of great interest at this particular time, with young James Hazen Hyde fighting with all the resources within his power to prevent the society from being mutualized.

Though it is not stated in Mr. Moore's letter, the Equitable Life was organized in July, 1859, only four months after Henry R. Hyde gave up his small clerkship in the Mutual Life and started the supposedly impossible task of raising the $100,000 necessary as capital.

He got this money chiefly from the Rev. Dr. Alexander and members of the latter's congregation, whom the minister induced to lend a helping hand to the young man.

WANTS HIS PRESENTS

Says They Were Loans But Girl Asserts Different.

Kansas City, Mo., Jnue 9.—Harry Bullard, a watchmaker, who brought suit to recover jewelry valued at $300 from Miss Irene Perkins, the articles being an engagement ring, a diamond brooch and a ring set with an opal and diamonds. Other articles bring the value of what Miss Perkins holds up to $500.

He says he only loaned the jewels to Miss Perkins, but she declares he asked her to be his wife, and gave them as presents for her to keep. Mr. Bullard and his wife live on Troost avenue. Miss Perkins is employed as an inspector for the Columbian Optical company, in the New Ridge building.

"Mr. Bullard gave me those jewels to keep, and I intend to keep them," said Miss Perkins. "I met him in July, 1902, at the Vickers hotel. I was visiting a young woman friend of mine, and she introduced me to him. He began paying attentions to me at once and called often at our home. We were engaged to be married, and he left here saying he would return and marry me; but when he came back from the West I learned he had married a young woman in Salt Lake City."

Miss Perkins says when she met Bullard he was introduced to her by the name of Harry Gee.

"After he had been coming to see me for a few months he told me his real name was Bullard," said Miss Perkins. "He said he had been in the jewelry business in the East and had gone into bankruptcy. He also told me he had a wife back East and was going to get a divorce, when he would marry me. He gave me a diamond ring as an engagement pledge, and had it made to fit my engagement finger, and here it is—you can see for yourself. At the same time he gave me this ring with the opal and diamonds, and a beautiful brooch set with diamonds. He left here in February, 1903, saying he would soon return and marry me. After he came back I did not see him for a long time, and when I met him on the street and asked why he had not been to see me, he evaded my question. Two months later I learned he had married a girl in Salt Lake City. He has never spoken to me about that and has offered no excuse for the awful treatment he gave me.

"Had he come to me like a man and asked for his jewelry back, I might have been foolish enough to return it. But instead of that he sent a lawyer to se me two weeks ago, and the attorney demanded the presents. I was so surprised I didn't know what to do at first, but after thinking over the matter and the treatment I have received, I believe it only fair for me to keep what has been given to me, and I will fight this case to the end."

NEW ELECTION

Expected By Tariff Reformers of Great Britain.

London, June 9.—Opinions vary as to whether the government will get through the session. Just now the tendency is to believe that there will be a general election in a few weeks, although no one seems to have any special reasons for this anticipation. It is understood that the remonstrance addressed to the premier by Mr. Chamberlain as vice president of the Tariff Reform League was conceived in somewhat strong terms, and the fact that Mr. Balfour has up to now not replied to it shows the difficulty that he has in so doing, for under ordinary circumstances an answer would have been sent before this. Mr. Chamberlain's tone in his last Birmingham speech was by no means conciliatory. He urged a speedy general election, on the ground of tactics, and, as a master of electoral procedure, he is far superior to Mr. Balfour in the opinion of the Unionists. He has not, it is true, just now a strong following in the House of Commons prepared to do battle with Mr. Balfour, but he is stronger than the latter in the party outside parliament, and he has most of the active electioneers with him. Were he to announce that he is prepared to revolt against the premier, and to insist on his fiscal program becoming that of the party, it is by no means certain that he would not carry the majority of the Unionist electors with him. To prevent this, Mr. Balfour is quite capable of consenting to some sort of transaction in regard to the period of the general election—all the more as almost all his colleagues are heart and soul with Mr. Chamberlain so far as fiscalities are concerned.

RUSSIA IS READY

To Fall on India Is the Assertion of the English.

She Must Do Something to Restore Her Prestige.

London, June 9.—If the London journals are to be believed, Russia, deeply humiliated as she has been by Japan, is still glorying in her dream of world conquest. Here is the manner in which the Express looks on the czar as a possible invader of India:

No one who has studied Russian ways can imagine for a moment that Russia will remain quiescent under the blows which have demonstrated the failure of Russian arms in the Far East. She must regain her lost prestige at any cost or cease to exist.

To avert disintegration, Russia will be compelled to strike another blow, and along the whole of her enormous frontier there is but one spot where this blow can be struck.

Every great military genius which Russia has produced during the last three-quarters of a century has organized, nursed, elaborated his plan for the conquest of India.

During the present generation—for Russia has hitherto been able to afford to advance slowly—one plan or another has been gradually pushed forward, military posts have been established, railways have been built, and though details may have varied, the objective has always remained constant.

The latest issue of the Times of India, received by the current mail, states in definite and emphatic terms that Russia has at the present moment 200,000 troops under arms in Central Asia, and a sufficient force within striking distance of Herat to take that city within a week.

Every one of her centers from Sarakhs to Osh is an armed camp. Her outposts confront those of the Ameer on the upper waters of the Oxus, and she is steadily accumulating supplies.

The trains that come across the steppes from Orenburg to Tashkend (the line of railway recently completed) bring soldiers, none of whom ever go back. This railway has brought Russia "weeks nearer" the Indian frontier.

Several fine military roads are being constructed from various points to the Afghan border, and it is now possible to drive comfortably in a carriage along a magnificent road from Osh, over the Alai plateau and the trans-Alai mountains, very nearly to Fort Murghabi on the Pamirs. And this is only one of the several such roads which follow the old caravan routes.

To the Indian foreign department officials it is thoroughly well known that, despite the heavy work entailed upon Russia by the operations in Manchuria, nothing has been allowed to interfere with her prepaartions along the Afghan frontier.

Since her intrigues with Tibet were rendered abortive by the success of the Younghusband expedition these Russian preparations have been pushed forward with constantly increasing energy.

From the Caspian to Merv every detail for an advance has been worked out. Kushk has been converted, since the completion of the Merv branch railway, from a barren village into an important military and engineering post, with huge granaries and stores, wel-fitted workshops and lines of barracks.

From Merv to Tashkend military communications have been established, new railroads have been built and military posts have been created throughout Bokhara, and along the whole line, from Chinese Turkestan on the east to the Persian border on the west, there has been a gradual, unobstrusive concentration of forces.

To all but the wilfully blind these preparations can have but one meaning. If Afghanistan first, and ultimately India, were not the objective, why should Russia keep this vast army in South Turkestan? Why extend her railways through regions which are practically barren till the fertile fields of Afghanistan are reached?

Russia has no interests of peace in this region; no agriculture, no commerce—none that is, to demand a military backing of such great force.

OLD MINES ARE BEING WORKED

Discovery of New Process For Treating Zinc Ores.

Wallace, Idaho, June 9.—By the use of a new process old mining properties in the Coeur d'Alenes that in former days have been numbered among the most prominent mines in the district, but which during the latter days have been practically idle, are now being worked to a greater extent than at any time during recent years.

In the Nine Mile district are three old producers—the California, the Granite and the Custer—which are being operated on a scale that will place a considerable output to their credit before the close of the year.

The California Consolidated has been acquired by a Pittsburg corporation, and a good sized force of men is employed at the mine and mill. Shipments are being made and development work done on an extensive scale.

The Granite mine has been taken over by the Success Mining company. During the early days of quartz mining in the Coeur d'Alenes this property was considered among the best. By reason of the prevalence of zinc the ores finally could not be profitably worked and the mine became idle. H. F. Samuels took an option on the property, experimented with the ores, learned that they could be worked by a new process and then organized the Success Mining company to take over the Granite properties. A crew of miners is now engaged in development work, and a mill is being erected. Unlike all other mills in the district, it will be constructed with the view of saving the zinc values, as well as the silver and lead.

W. R. Swiegood has a number of miners employed on the Custer, and the old mine appears to be in such an excellent condition that he is preparing to increase the force at an early date. A considerable quantity of ore has been jigged, and a shipment of concentrates will be made by the end of this month. A good body of undeveloped ore has recently been uncovered.

LOST TREASURE POT.

Butcher Unable to Find Spot of Burial.

Bellefontaine, O. T., June 9.—A pot of gold, a diamond stud and a gold watch were buried twenty years ago by Christopher Bose of this city, who has earned a competence in the butchering business. He was going to Kansas to rough it and did not desire to take all of his valuables with him, so he divided his funds among the banks and, having a little left, he decided to bury it. Securing a spot, he dug a hole six feet deep and placing his valuable is an iron kettle buried it.

Last week he came back and going to the place of hiding found that the marker he had set up had been displaced. For several days he has been digging for his buried treasure, but now has abandoned the search.

GAMBLING CAUSES CRIME.

Australian Politician Convicted of Misusing Funds.

Sydney, June 8.—The Hon. T. M. Slattery, member of the New South Wales parliament, has been sentenced to three and one-half years' imprisonment. He asked that full penalty be imposed, adding that he had asked for no mercy, and that he despised the recommendation of mercy from the jury.

It was claimed that he had converted to his own use about $35,000 belonging to Mrs. Mary Ellen Scanlon. As for Mrs. Scanlon, her own career had in it the elements of a romance. She had lived for many years in dire poverty, and was on the point of going to the poor house when it was discovered that she was one of the next of kin to James Tyson, the great Australian millionaire. From his enormous estate she inherited nearly $450,000. Some of this was entrusted to Slattery to invest, and he fraudulently appropriated a considerable portion of it to make good heavy betting losses.

Justice Pring, in passing sentence, said that betting was responsible for more crimes than any other vice that he knew of. He hoped that one of the results of the shock of the conviction would be to send such a feeling of indignation against betting throughout the entire community that anything of this sort would be checked in the future.

The trial created a great sensation throughout Australia for Slattery had been prominent in politics in New South Wales for over twenty-five years. He was on three different occasions minister of justice, was minister of mines in Sir George Dibbs' administration, and had served as chairman of the committees of the legislative assembly and acting speaker. He was also one of the thirteen centenary commissioners for the celebration of New South Wales.

TAILOR'S DOUBLE.

Clever Makeup Man Scared His Neighbor Sober.

Paris, June 8.—Noticing that his neighbor, M. Bouche, a tailor in the Boulevard de Belleville, was too much addicted to drink, M. Jolly, an artist, greatly skilled in the art of makeup, determined to give him a fright.

Mme. Bouche was alone in her house Wednesday last, when a man, apparently her husband, came in, fell into an armchair, and began to weep bitterly. The lady tried to soothe him, telling him that she freely forgave him for his excesses, and urged him to keep sober for the future.

Just then the door opened and the real M. Bouche walked in. He was deplorably drunk, and when his eyes fell on his double he hiccupped in amazement, "Who are you?"

"Yourself," replied the visitor in sepulchral tones.

"Help, help!" shouted the terrified drunkard. Mme. Bouche fainted, the police were fetched and the bibulous tailor laid a complaint against the practical joker, which, however, was dismissed by the magistrate.

STRANGER STRIPS

Wealthy Man's Home of All Its Belongings.

Norristown, Pa., June 9.—The police are hunting for a well-dressed man who swindled Theodore W. Dannehower, proprietor of a second-hand store here, out of several hundred dollars. The man said that he was the son of J. Bird Irish, who owns a handsome residence on West Main street.

He told Mr. Dannehower that his parents had taken rooms at an apartment house, and had decided to dispose of the furniture. He reeled off such a plausible story that Dannehower readily accompanied him to the Irish residence.

When they arrived the family was absent, having vacated the premises several weeks ago until improvements could be made. Dannehower looked over the furniture, gave an estimate on the goods, and a deal was consummated.

Dannehower was given to understand that the goods were to be removed immediately. He secured several large vans, and residents of the neighborhood were surprised to see Mr. Irish's handsome furniture being hauled away to a second-hand store.

A friend of Mr. Irish today asked why he was disposing of his furniture. At first Irish thought the question was a joke, but later, on visiting the house, realized the truth. The goods were traced to Dannehower's store, and the latter, when his surprise wore off, hauled the goods back to the Irish residence.

A SOCIETY PRISONER.

Alice Roosevelt Unable to Attend Baseball Game.

Cincinnati, June 9.—Miss Alice Roosevelt, who is noted for her enthusiasm over outdoor sports, like baseball and football, is virtually a society prisoner here, while all Cincinnati, from Price hill to Walnut hills, is ready to play ball for her benefit and entertainment.

Miss Roosevelt is the guest of the Longworths. Nicholas Longworth, member of congress and reputed to be an aspirant for Miss Roosevelt's hand, is keeping the crowd away.

"Nick" told Garry Herrman, his bosom friend, that Alice would attend the baseball game between the home team and Brooklyn on Thursday. Garr is president of the Cincinnatis, and, after promising not to tell, he told his press agent, and cautioned him not to tell.

In two hours the proposed visit of the president's daughter at the ball park was being discussed by everybody around Fountain square, and even in Sixth street market. It was said Miss Roosevelt would root for Brooklyn.

The treasurer of the ball park ran out of coupons, and still the populace clamored for more. People even from Springtown on the Pike came up and demanded tickets in advance.

Then the news reached the Longworth residence, and a bulletin was issued stating Miss Roosevelt would not attend the game. It is said she is deeply disappointed, for thus far there has been nothing more exciting in her visit than a series of pink teas and receptions by the select few the Longworths have allowed her to meet. A special guard has been established about her to keep camera fiends away. The guard has been so vigilant that only twenty-nine views of Miss Roosevelt have appeared in the newspapers.

MAY SPLIT ON DIVORCE ISSUE

English Church May Directly Conflict With the State.

London, June 9.—The decision of the London diocesan conference that no divorced person, whether guilty or innocent, shall be remarried in an Anglican church during the lifetime of the other party to the suit, threatens to bring the Church of England into direct conflict with the state.

It also threatens to be fruitful of dissensions within the church itself, and to be a powerful weapon in the hands of the party of disestablishment.

The position is clearly shown in the two following interviews. One is with a barrister well known for his intimate knowledge of church law; the other is with Prebendary Villiers of St. Paul's, Knightsbridge, one of the most uncompromising opponents of the remarriage of divorced persons in the church. The barrister said:

"It is clear that, although the act recognizes the conscientious views of the clergyman in the case of the remarriage of the guilty party, it does not recognize any such views in the case of the remarriage of the innocent party.

"In fact, the position of the innocent party is left by the divorce act on exactly the same level as that of any ordinary person. The rights of the innocent party are in no way impaired, and, therefore, the innocent party is legally justified in requiring his parish clergyman to marry him in the parish church.

"This raises another and most important point. For if a clergyman refuses to solemnize a marriage which is legal according to the law of the land, he is in no way protected by pleading that he would be breaking the canonical law of the church.

"If he refuses, in fact, to solemnize such a marriage, he is breaking the law of the land, and immediately becomes subject to pains and penalties which would include the possibility of a criminal prosecution.

"Lastly, I would ask you to point out the tremendous importance of the impending conflict between the law and the clergy, for it is quite certain that there are several thousands of the clergy who are ready to refuse to remarry the innocent party in a successful divorce suit during the lifetime of the other party, and are to this extent prepared to break the law of the land.

"Such a peg on which to hang a further argument for the disestablishment of the church will not be overlooked by the Liberation society and the party of disestablishment, and I should not be in the least surprised if this question does not also split the church itself in two."

"You ask me," said the Rev. Prebendary Villiers, "for my opinion as to the remarriage of divorced persons. The one question for churchmen is: What is the law of the Church of England?

"On this subject Sir W. Phillimore once gave expression to an important opinion to the English Church union in the following words: 'The law of the Church of England must be the law of the Church of the West. When did the Church of England part with the canon law of the Church of the West?'

"And there is no reason to doubt what that law is—namely, that marriage is indissoluble.

"As things are now, a second marriage is purchasable by divorce, and divorce is purchasable by misconduct, and thus a man is able to profit by his own wrong.

"On several occasions I have refused the use of this church for such a marriage. So long as I am vicar of St. Paul's, Knightsbridge, this church will never be used for the remarriage of either the guilty or the innocent party in a divorce suit."

SSS FOR THE BLOOD

"S. S. S. for the blood" has grown to be a household saying. When the blood is out of order, or needs treatment from any cause, this great remedy is the first thought of and used by thousands of people all over the country, because it is superior to all other blood purifiers. It is a purely vegetable remedy, and while it penetrates the circulation and forces out all poison and morbid matter, it also builds up the entire system by its fine tonic effect. During the winter months the natural avenues of bodily waste have become dull and weak and failed to perform their full duty, the blood has been sluggish and an extra amount of poisons and waste matters have accumulated in the system and been absorbed by it. With the coming of Spring and warm weather the blood is aroused and stirred to quicker action and in its effort to throw off these acids and poisons the skin suffers. Boils, pimples, blotches, rashes and eruptions break out and continue until the blood is cleansed and made pure. S. S. S. is the ideal remedy for this condition; it clears the blood of all impurities, makes it rich and strong and these skin troubles pass away. Rheumatism, Catarrh, Chronic Sores and Ulcers, Scrofula, Contagious Blood Poison and all other diseases of the blood are cured by S. S. S. Book on the blood and any advice desired, free of charge. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

I was suffering from impure blood and a general run-down condition of the system. I had no appetite, was losing flesh, and an all-gone tired feeling that made me miserable. I began the use of S. S. S. and my blood was restored to its normal, healthy condition. My appetite returned, I increased in weight, that "tired feeling" left and I was again myself.

Supreme Court Renders Decision on Minnesota Point Land.

District Court Upheld In the Owsley-Johnson Case.

St. Paul, June 9.—(Special to The Herald.)—The supreme court today decided the ownership of a valuable piece of Duluth lake front real estate, affirming the order of the St. Louis district court in the case of Maria M. Owsley, et al, respondents, vs. Nels Johnson et al, defendants, Michael Gallagher et al, respondents.

The land is what is known as Minnesota Point. In 1844 it was platted and disposed of to the defendants. Lying between the ends of the lots and the water line was an accretion, consisting of a strip varying in width from ten to 100 feet, and this was later sold to one James Egan.

Egan or his heirs never paid any taxes on the strip and when a suit was brought under the Torrens land system to quiet title, the defendants tried to have it included in their holdings. This the district court denied and the supreme court in upholding the lower court's stand tersely remarks:

The rule is that each party must recover upon the strength of his own and not upon the weakness of his adversary's title. Relative to the contention that the original owner forfeited his rights because of his failure to pay taxes on the strip, or even have it listed for assessment, Justice Brown, who writes the opinion, says:

"The mere fact that the land escaped taxation for years is of no importance. It was not the duty of the council to put it on the tax roll. Very few people exert themselves in that direction, but are quite willing to rest upon the failure of the taxing office to discover that lands owned by themselves are not on the tax assessment lists."

The court in considering the question further adds:

"All rates and principles of law applicable to rights in real property and rules of practice with reference to the trial of actions at law or in equity, in so far as clearly not inappropriate or otherwise provided for should be followed and applied in proceedings under the Torrens act for land transfer. Where issue is joined in such proceedings, findings of fact and conclusions of law should be made as in ordinary actions.

"The boundaries of land conveyed by well known descriptions, such as lots or blocks in a town plat, and according to such plat, are, as a general rule limited to those designated by the plat.

"The rule is subject to exceptions to specific calls of the conveyance and the plat will yield to a clearly shown intention of the parties at variance therewith.

"But the intent which is most certain will prevail over the one which is indefinite or left to conjecture or speculation."

MITCHELL IS NEEDED

To Bring Deserting Miners Back Into Union.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., June 9.—In explaining President John Mitchell's statement to the mine workers that he does not know how long he will be with them, the Rev. J. J. Curran of this city, his close friend and confidant, said:

"As long as the miners stand by John Mitchell, so long will they stand by themselves. If they disrupt their union, they will force him into involuntary retirement. If a respectable majority of both the bituminous and anthracite miners want John Mitchell to be their leader still, he will remain with them. But if desertions from the ranks become so numerous as to threaten the union, then he will retire.

"It has pained this unselfish man to see so many of his followers who were benefited so much by his wise counsel desert the cause of unionism. He is now making a supreme effort to recruit his scattered hosts. I believe that he will succeed, as he has in everything he has ever undertaken.

ELKS GO ON BOAT RIDE

Fog Does Not Deter the Visitors From Inland.

The fog which has hung over the lake and harbor ever since this morning had no terrors for the visiting Elks and their ladies and, in view of the urgent demands of the visitors that the boat ride be taken despite the threatening weather, the local committee on arrangements chartered the steamer Newsboy and a start was made from the Fifth avenue dock shortly after 2 o'clock. Just before boat left the dock it had not been decided whether a trip would would be taken to Two Harbors, the steamer would go around the horn or up the St. Louis river to ond du Lac. The excursionists declared that the selection of the route to be taken would be made after they got started.

The novelty of a boat ride appealed to many of the visitors from the inland towns and cities where it did not to the local Elks and the excursion was made up mostly from those residing out of town.

Shortly before noon today a large party of the visiting ladies who had been disappointed in the earlier ride planned on the boulevard, were provided with tallyhos and the trip was made despite the fog and occasional sprinkle.

Those of the visiting Elks who did not care to take a boat ride under so moist conditions decided to spend the afternoon in social sessions or in resting up for the closing festivities this evening.

Cement For Marquette.

Maj. C. L. Potter, corps of United States engineers, placed an order this noon for 500 barrels of quick setting Portland cement with the Illinois Steel company, Chicago, to be delivered at Marquette, where it will be used for repairs to be made to the concrete superstructure of the government breakwater. The breakwater was damaged by the storm last December.

Clarence Coleman, assistant engineer, and A. A. Sinclair, overseer, are now at Marquette, making preparations for the work.

Finnish Missions.

The Duluth branch of the Finnish Baptist Mission Union of America has arranged a gathering to be held in the interest of the mission among the Finns next Wednesday at the First Swedish Baptist church, Nineteenth avenue west and First street. The work among the people of that nationality, has, during the last five years, developed in more definite hope than formerly, and has been taken up with keen interest among the people. The program arranged is of special interest to friends of the movement. Several speakers are to be heard.

PHYSICIAN IS ASSASSINATED

Kentucky Young Man Killed as the Result of a Feud.

Falmouth, Ky., June 9.—Dr. Edward Courtney, a young physician and member of one of the best families in this section, was assassinated at midnight near Neave. Courtney formed a partnership with Dr. William Karney at Litchfield two years ago. During the partnership Dr. Karney was shot and killed. Since the occurrence there has been a feud in the neighborhood. Karney was a young man of great popularity, belonging to all the secret societies and when he was killed the young men took up his fight, and have been forcing the fight on the Courtneys.

Dr. Courtney is under a $10,000 bond in the Bracken criminal court on the charge of killing Karney. The sheriff of Bracken county and his deputies are hastening to the scene to prevent any furthr disturbance. The adherents of the two factions met in Falmouth last Monday and nearly created a riot.

The Courtneys claim to know who did the shooting last night.

HUSBAND IS LECTURED

Judge Windom Talks on Duty to Nervous Wife.

The story of marital infelicity caused by a nervous, over-worked wife, and a husband whose disposition, according to his own telling, is none too angelic, was related in the municipal court this afternoon before Judge Windom, when Edward Porter was arraigned for a hearing on the charge of assaulting his wife.

According to the story of both parties, a series of nagging quarrels ended this morning in Porter striking his wife, and she promptly swore out a warrant for his arrest.

Porter was given a lecture by the court, and finally released after promising to try to do better in the future.

"Your wife has four children to take care of," said the court. "She is not strong in the first place, and the work she has to do would try the nerves of any woman. It is your place to bear with her when she gets angry and irritable. Keep your mouth shut and get out of the house if you have to, but don't say mean things back that only makes matters ten times worse.

"And whatever the provocation may have been you had no right to strike her.

"Any fine I might impose on you would only come out of her and the family eventually, so I am going to let you go this time."

EXPECT FINE CROPS.

South Western Garin Men Are Optimistic.

Three grain men from the Southwest, were in the city today on their way to the Nipigon river to fish for trout, and they were callers at the Duluth Board of Trade. They were: J. Sydney Smith, R. J. Thresher and J. G. Goodwin of Kansas City, Mo., and W. H. Ferguson of Lincoln, Neb.

Mr. Thresher is very optimistic as to the outlook for the Kansas crop. He does not confirm the pessimistic reports that have been sent out in the past few days, predicting a crop of not to exceed 65,000,000 bushels for that state. He is very confident that the yield will be at least 80,000,000 bushels, and possibly 90,000,000 bushels.

Mr. Ferguson has a line of seventy-five elevators in Nebraska, and is equally enthusiastic over the outlook in Nebraska.

Prominent Visitors Here.

Among the visiting Elks who are in the city to attend the annual state convention closing today are Mayor J. G. Armson of Stillwater, who was appointed state surveyor general of logs by Governor Johnson; C. E. Vasaly, a prominent Little Falls, Minn., editor who, with Mr. Armson, was a delegate to the National Democratic convention, and Granville Pease, editor and publisher of the Anoka Union and active in political circles.

All three named gentlemen have been busy today greeting their friends in Duluth and were among those who joined the excursionists on the steamer Newsboy this afternoon.

Go to Conference.

Rev. A. Edstam of the First Baptist church, Rev. Hjolmar Henrickson of the Bethel Baptist church, and Rev. C. A. Aldeen of the Third Swedish Baptist church left Dednesday afternoon to attend the annual conference of the Swedish Baptist churches of the state of Minnesota, being held this week in Cambridge. Important matters regarding the work throughout the state are expected to come up for consideration.

THE COURTHOUSE SITE.

It is likely that those who are starting out to obstruct the move for a new down-town courthouse will find out, sooner or later, if they do not realize it now, that they are flying in the face of an almost solid public opinion, and that their efforts are doomed to failure.

As to the need of a new courthouse, there is not a soul in the county who would dispute it. The only question that has been raised is whether it should be built upon the present site, or upon a down-town site. This question has been decided by an overwhelming preponderance of public sentiment, expressed time after time, so that it is needless at this time to go into the arguments in favor of a change of site. It is sufficient that the board of county commissioners, recognizing this public demand, not only from Duluth but from the range country and other localities throughout the county, have proceeded with the selection of a site, and having selected it, have instructed the county attorney to begin proceedings to condemn it under the county's right of eminent domain, conferred by a law passed last winter.

Now comes a taxpayer, Michael Norris, and announces that he will ask the courts to enjoin further action on the part of the county commissioners looking toward the acquirement of a down-town site. What he can accomplish remains to be seen, but it is difficult to see what he can do beyond pursuing a campaign of obstruction that will simply mean delay. If he should, by some far-fetched crook of the law, succeed in preventing the acquirement of a down-town site, he could not force the county board, in the face of overwhelming public sentiment, to build on the old site. All that he can possibly hope for is delay, and it is hard to say what good that will do him or anybody else.

There are a few, doubtless, who agree with him. No such important move was ever approved by a community unanimously. But the graceful thing for a hopeless minority to do would be to yield to the inevitable, instead of throwing away their money in a futile campaign of obstruction. The obstructionist is never a popular member of a progressive community, and it is to be hoped that Mr. Norris will think it over again before he seeks to assume the role.

BOWERY WHISKY LEGAL.

If the report from the dairy and food commission at St. Paul to the effect that its chemists cannot find that "Bowery whisky" is illegal is true, there is something radically wrong with the Minnesota law.

According to the telegraphic report, the only thing that makes whisky illegal in Minnesota is to have it include more than 25 per cent of fusel oil. Samples of whisky that have been examined show that some whisky that is plainly not whisky contains less than 25 per cent of fusel oil, while well known brands that are supposed to be good contain as much as 30 per cent. Therefore nothing can be done, and the sale of adulterated whisky may go on unimpeded, in spite of the fact that the criminal authorities of this end of the state recognize in the brand of liquor known as "Bowery whisky" one of the most potent factors in the creation of crime.

According to this report, whisky may be made of anything, so long as it does not contain more than 25 per cent of fusel oil. The finding of kerosene, tobacco, leather, shingle nails or carbolic acid would not justify the department in proceeding against its sellers. If this is the law, the commission cannot be condemned for failure to prosecute, because the courts will not punish evils that are not prohibited by law. But if the law is in this shape, it wants looking after, and that without unnecessary delay.

Fusel oil is not wholesome stuff, but it is evident that if Bowery whisky does not contain more than 25 per cent of it there are other ingredients that are just as dangerous. It is known that whisky is made in Duluth for sale here and in surrounding towns that is no more whisky than the contents of 90 per cent of the bottles on a drug store shelf. A few drinks of it bring out all the evil in the consumer, and if enough of it is taken it produces delirium, oblivion, and sometimes death. If Minnesota has no law to reach the purveyors of such stuff, it should have one that will.

FRANCHISES ARE PROPERTY.

The final result of the fight in New York for the taxation of franchises is a matter of the deepest importance, not only in that state but all over the country. For the question whether franchises are taxable property has now been decided by the highest court in the land, after a legal fight of five years in which the corporations affected, mindful of the millions that were at stake, left nothing undone that could be done to delay and defeat the scheme.

The supreme court of the United States, in an opinion that is satisfactorily broad, has decided that franchises are property, and subject to taxation, and New York will get something over $24,000,000 in accrued taxes and an annual addition to her income of $5,000,000 or $6,000,000 more. This valuable result of her fight will be viewed with deepest interest by taxing authorities in other states, and this does not exclude Minnesota, by any means. The taxation of franchises, while it has not been successfully contested in the courts, has not amounted to a great deal as yet because of the weakness of the taxing authorities in permitting the public service corporations to deceive them about the value of their franchises. These franchises are highly valuable property, and as such should bear a fair share of the burdens of taxation.

The bill taxing franchises in New York was introduced while Theodore Roosevelt was governor, and it received his hearty indorsement. Backed by the irresistible influence of a decided public sentiment, the bill was passed in spite of the opposition of a strong and well-equipped lobby. The tax was first levied in 1900, and the corporations have been fighting it ever since, all the way through the courts up to the supreme court of the United States, delaying the payment as long as possible, and with a faint but vain hope that the tax might be defeated in the end. That the hope was not strong is shown by the fact that it is known that several of the corporations, if not all of them, carried on their books fixed charges under the head of "accrued taxes," large enough to meet the accumulated payments when by the final decision of the courts they became due.

The New York result is stimulating to efforts for fair taxation all over the country.

STATE HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

The receipt of the thirteenth biennial report of the Minnesota Historical society by its members calls attention to this quasi-public society and the valuable, interesting work it is doing. It is supported by state funds, and is given a home in the state capitol, so while its membership is made up like that of any other society, it is to all intents and purposes an official state body.

It was organized in 1849 by a few territorial pioneers, and was incorporated by an act of the first territorial legislature, approved October 20, 1849, thus being the first literary institution organized in the territory. Its library of a few volumes was the first established in Minnesota.

The first of this year that library had grown to 43,181 bound volumes and 34,503 unbound volumes, a total of 77,684, which is increasing at the rate of several hundreds yearly. It is worthy of note that in local history and American genealogy, this library is scarcely surpassed by any in the country.

These three objects of the society have been pursued diligently and effectively: 1.—The collection, preservation and publication of Minnesota historical material. 2.—The collection of a general historical library and books on all other valuable departments of knowledge. 3.—The diffusion of useful knowledge among the citizens of the state. Perhaps its most useful and notable monument is the eleven volumes of the historical collections of the society, which include a vast amount of invaluable material relating to the history of Minnesota and the Northwest.

Not the least valuable of its possession is its newspaper collection, which is the most complete in the state. In fact its library is the only place in the state where files of all Minnesota newspapers can be examined. Many files of defunct newspapers, and of newspapers whose own files have been lost or destroyed, are in the possession of the society. It now receives regularly 512 Minnesota newspapers and 45 from without the state, all of which are religiously preserved, forming an indispensable mass of historical material.

The society now has a total of 355 members, of whom twelve live in Duluth. President Roosevelt is an honorary member.

LOSING A MARKET.

The English people, according to the American consul at Bradford, Eng., are gradually consuming less American meat, and pork consumption especially is falling off at an alarming rate.

There are several reasons for this. In the first place, there are complaints of the quality of the meat furnished by the American packers. It seems that they have been led by the splendor of the returns from their European trade to believe that there was no end to it, and blinded by that stupid belief have been furnishing the folks on the other side with inferior goods. Stale and over-kept meats have gone over to England, and they have not tended to increase the delight of the British in American meats.

Then, too, the habit of speculation on provisions on this side has had much to do with the decrease. When pork is used to gamble with, and the buyer on the other side has to take a speculative risk in buying for his consumers, it lends an uncertainty and precariousness to the purchase of American pork that is not comfortable. A correspondent of the consul says: "When the American packer realizes that hog products are produced to be eaten, not to gamble with, it will be better for the American provision trade."

A third reason is that Canadian meat, shorn of these objectionable features, is coming into the English markets in increasing quantities. The Canadian packers are making regular weekly shipments of well-selected meats, and at prices not so much affected by market fluctuations as are the American products. Naturally, when a reasonable desire to help British producers is added to an appreciation that by doing so there is less risk both as to price and quality, the Canadian products are driving American products out of the English market.

When it is so obvious that the loss of this market is the fault of the meat barons, it is difficult for the American consumers who are oppressed by the exactions of the meat trust at home to squeeze out many tears about it. And this is radically wrong, because every American ought to be interested in the success of every American enterprise, both at home and abroad.

Hotel Gossip.

Lieut. Ingamar Pejerson of Olund, Sweden, who is making a three months' tour of the United States for the purpose of making a report to the Swedish government concerning the operation of railways in this country, is spending a few days in Duluth to learn the manner of loading ore at the docks. He arrived in this country six weeks ago, having been a delegate to the international railway congress which convened at Washington, D. C., the early part of May. The lieutenant, whose title, it may be mentioned, is not military, but simply designates his connection with the government, has already made a tour through Texas, and in a few days will head for the Pacific coast to return back to New York. He has a position with the government similar to that of a division superintendent.

"This is the busiest country I have ever seen," said Lieut. Peterson at the St. Louis last night. "I should be glad if the people of Sweden and other European countries would learn to work as hard. I do not know the reason why those in America should work so much harder than we do and accomplish so much more unless it be that you have a better system and give higher wages, which acts as a stimulant to greater endeavor. The more you give a man the more he will be worth, is it not so? Everything is on a larger scale and more complex in this country. Buildings are higher, for one thing.

"With me this is a study trip, and I came to Duluth for the purpose of seeing the manner in which coal is unloaded and ore is loaded. I also want to see about the treatment of ties, depots, handling of freight, and other things on the railroads here. I was much impressed with the electric automatic signal systems I have seen in this country, and I think some such system will be introduced in Sweden. They need some such thing there.

"I found some very nice things on the railroads, but I do not like the Pullman sleeping cars. They afford poor accommodation for making the toilet, and one must go through some muscle-breaking motions to dress. In Sweden they have compartments arranged for two or four passengers.

"The government is the pioneer railroad builder in Sweden. It owns all the main lines; private companies owning the branches. I think that government ownership of railroads is a good thing.

"I am making a study of the platforms here, and the arrangements of depots. A union depot is going to be built at Stockholm which will cost fifty million kron, or about $12,000,000 to $15,000,000. The site has already been selected and purchased. The drawing have been made, but are not yet adopted.

"I am astonished at Norway breaking away from Sweden," said the lieutenant, when the subject was mentioned to him. "When I left home, less than two months ago, there was no intimation that any trouble would occur. The Norwegians have always felt that they have held an inferior position in the union, a feeling for which there is no excuse. The Norwegians and Swedes have held the same privileges, except in the matter of foreign relations. There has always been some kind of trouble between the Swedes and Norwegians on account of the government.

"I do not think that there will be any danger that the two countries will resort to arms. The question will be solved amicably. How it will be solved I am unable to express an opinion until I learn the details of the affair. The dispatches have simply given a general account about it, but I think it is a part played by the politicians rather than any differences between the people."

"On my return to New York I shall call a special session of the legislature for the purpose of investigating the charges made against certain members of the state judiciary," said Governor Frank Higgins of New York, at the Spalding last night.

The governor refused to discuss the matter beyond making the above statement. He has some business matters to attend to in Minnesota, but as soon as he has disposed of them he will return to Albany, and make the call.

* * *

B. H. Ward, president of the John D. Young Lumber company of Fairmount, Minn., is in the city, and his occasional trips to the Zenith City has worked such a love for it that he has decided to bring his family to live here for the summer. He will take a flat in the East end.

Since Mr. Ward sent in his resignation to Governor Van Sant four years ago as a member of the fish and game commission he has not been holding any political jobs. He was only in the commission three months, when he informed the governor that he would not care to be identified with the work.

"While I have been and always will be a staunch Republican I am out of politics," said Mr. Ward, at the Lenox, last night. "There are three reasons why I have thought it wise to keep away: My honor will not permit; my family object, and there is nothing it it. While our politics differ, I am a warm, personal friend of Governor Johnson. Since he has been in office he has shown rare judgment and given general satisfaction.

"The price of lumber is bound to advance within the next month," he added. "It cannot help it. They are short in Minnesota and Wisconsin, and the demand is greater than it ever was.

No Danger of Going Broke.

Boston Transcript: A gap of more than $36,000,000 between revenue and expenditures is a regrettable fact, but the other fact that the treasury has a free balance of $130,000,000 is a comforting one and demonstrates the absurdity of the talk of the treasury "going broke." Of course a balance will not last forever, but it will be in existence long enough to give congress more than time to raise sufficient revenue to prevent a continuance of deficits.

The Weather.

Just so the visit of the Elks to Duluth would not be in danger of becoming monotonous, thought we'd have a little fog and mist and rain and northeast winds, by the way of the exception that proves the rule laid down by The Herald in this column yesterday, that Duluth has good weather all of the time. It does have good weather all of the time, but good weather is not all of one kind. This kind is good, too—good to make folks appreciate it when they get some other kind. The fog has not bothered Duluth much this spring, but it settled down over the lake this morning, crept up the alleys and streets into the town, and threw its vagueness over outlines everywhere. The wind was from the lake, but it was not cold, and the thing that caused more remark than anything else was the rain. This began in a sort of stealthy, dump mist, that crept through the clothing of the pedestrian; then came a modest, subdued drizzle, that turned at times into downright rain.

It is due to change for the better tomorrow. The showers will continue, though there ought to be a fine Sunday, and it will be cooler tonight with more fog. Saturday afternoon or evening it is likely to turn warmer, and the winds will shift from the northeast to the northwest.

Everywhere in the lake region the winds are southerly except on Western Superior, where it is northeast, it is hardly necessary to state. The Montana disturbance has moved its center to Eastern South Dakota and Nebraska. Rains have fallen throughtout the Northwest, the extreme Southwest and Florida. The lower Missouri Valley is warmer, and it is warmer from Lake Michigan east to and including the New England states. In the South Atlantic states and over Northern Minnesota, Western Canada and the Rocky Mountains, it is cooler.

JUNE.

The birds are singing in the trees—
Why shouldn't they? They like their ease,
They loaf about the woods all day,
And haven't any rent to pay.

The flowers bloom and gayly bow—
Why shouldn't they? Who'd make a row
If down below they had a root
Preparing food and drink to suit?

The trees are rustling all their leaves—
Why shouldn't they? Who is there grieves
When neatly dressed from top to toe
And not a cent to pay or owe?

The fishes dart about the sea—
Why shouldn't they? It seems to me
That men enjoy more rambling, too,
Provided there's no work to do.

The little lambs do skip and play—
Why shouldn't they? What's in their way?
They have no bric-a-brac to smash,
Or doctor's bills to pay in cash.

All Nature finds the world atune—
Why shouldn't they? The month is June,
The grass is green, the sky is blue,
How very trite that is, though true!

Roosevelt and the Machine.

Washington Post: The entire political career of Theodore Roosevelt has been a protest against and a defiance of what is known in American politics as "the machine." The preferment of such a man as Charles J. Bonaparte is a mortal afront to the machine. Mr. Bonaparte is a reformer, and the machine and reform cannot walk on the same side of the street. When Mr. Roosevelt was nominated last for president last summer the machine tendered its services and proposed to furnish him and the Republican party a chairman of the national committee, a chief of staff, to conduct the campaign. Mr. Roosevelt declined. He astonished the machine, and named for first place in the party organization that had been held by Marshall Jewell, Z. Chandler, B. F. Jones, Matthew S. Quay, Thomas H. Carter and Mark Hanna—the president named a clerk, a child of that most hateful of all innovations—civil service reform. That department clerk, already a cabinet minister by the evolution of civil service reform, ran the campaign, and did it very well. It is doubtful if he had ever been a delegate to a political convention. It is certain that he had never manipulated a primary. Had he been detailed to barter with the brethren of a Southern delegation, he would have been helpless. The machine was not only astonished—it was disgusted. Here was the head of the party selecting for his chief of staff a man who could not stock a hoe in a pawpaw grove, according to all the previously accepted ideas of practical politics; but the party, with Mr. Cortelyou as chairman, gained the greatest victory in its history.

A Little Fable.

F. L. Stanton in Altona Constitution: Once a man, sad of heart, started on the road to Happiness. On that road he met a traveler, of bright, and smiling countenance, who entreated him to linger amid the violets of the valleys. But the man of the sad heart pointed to the misty hills, and said: "No; my goal is yonder, where the hills are high, and wreathed in mist and lightning." And so they parted company. But when the man reached the misty summits, the Spirit of the Hills said to him: "The traveler you met on the way was Happiness, and his home is in the violets of the valleys. The stars of heaven shine on these heights, but they shine through a mist of tears!"

LINES TO A LAUGH.

Washington Star: "Public opinion counts for a great deal," said the earnest citizen.

"Not in a baseball game," answered the umpire.

Philadelphia Ledger: Weary Willie—Say, lady, I'm dat hungrey I don't know what to do. I—

Mrs. Goodart—Very well, poor man; walk around to the kitchen and we'll give you something.

Weary Willie—Dat's a purty long walk, lady; couldn't yer hand it out here jist as well?

Philadelphia Press: Knox—Why don't you cut that out? Tone your talk down a bit.

Kandor—Well, it's all right to call a spade a spade, isn't it?

Knox—Instead of calling it you might whisper it occasionally.

New York Sun: The Sphinx had just propounded her riddle.

With a heavy groan, she realized that the moderns had gone her one better.

Washington Star: "Does he occupy a position of trust and responsibility?"

"I should say he does. He is the man who weighs out the steak in the meat store."

Philadelphia Press: "W'at yer growlin' about?" asked the first boy in the neighborhood of the base ball grounds.

"Aw!" replied the other, disgustedly, "dey oughter pass a law ter make the lumber trust quit sellin' boards dat ain't got no holes in dem."

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Red Wing Republican: Now that a Milwaukee man has been employed to teach English to the king of Spain, Alfonso will learn to say "Zwei bier" with the proper accent.

Fergus Falls Journal: The Russian press does not appear to be very effectively "muzzled," judging from the attacks it is making on the government in connection with the recent naval defeat. Such comments would never be permitted by the rulers of Pennsylvania.

Wadena Tribune: Congressman Loren Fletcher takes no stock in the president's ideas of government rate control. Mr. Fletcher will not be governor next time.

Mankato Free Press: The fact that twenty-four men have been mentioned for the Republican nomination for governor need not lead anyone to suppose that the supply of excellent timber has been exhausted.

Prison Mirror: There are seventy-five life men in the Minnesota state prison. This is a large number, considering the smallness of the population. One of this number has been here a long time. He was received April 11, 1876. This is the longest time served by anyone since the prison was built. The next longest almost equals the foregoing one, there being only four years difference. He was received March 25, 1880.

Anoka Union: Dirt is still cheap in Minnesota, cheaper than it will ever be again.

Anoka Union: Wealth in Minnesota? A mighty lot of it, if the late bank statements are taken as a criterion.

Sandstone Courier: Wanted—A Republican who can defeat Johnson. References exchanged.

Sandstone Courier: Too many editors get their inspiration from the daily press, says the Rush City Post. And there are more of them that ought to, if they consider the interests of their readers.

Eveleth Star: Every man who is patriotic to his home will talk for Eveleth. It is upon such argument that the future of the city depends.

Wheelock's Weekly: Of course, give the president and his family free transportation, but do it in an open and aboveboard way. Don't make it a railroad favor to the chief executive, but let the people foot the bills through act of congress.

Anoka Union: You can get that 8-pound bass now without keeping one eye on the road that leads from town.

Long Prairie Argus: Admiral Rojestvensky's fleet is in about the same condition that Bill Lee's political armada was after the battle of Nov. 8 last.

Cannon Falls Beacon: Wanted—A Moses! No barnacles need apply. Address the Republican state central committee, Minnesota.

Preston Times: When two such "farmers" as Thomas Shevlin of Minneapolis and J. W. Cooper of St. Paul tell the senate committee that freight rates are all right, there is plenty of room for a great big smile, but if the committee acts on their advice there will be some senators who will not think it a laughing matter when they come up for re-election. The American people are getting in deadly earnest about this rate and rebate question, and it behooves the money-bag sympathizers in the American house of lords to step from under if they would not get hurt.

Perham Enterprise: The Breckenridge Gazette wants the next Republican state convention to be held in Duluth. Let it go to the Zenith City by all means. In all probability it will be a rather warm affair, and the Democrats set the pace last year.

Sauk Center Herald: Money talks, and that is the reason why it is always so quiet around a printing office.

Sauk Center Herald: The gubernatorial candidacy of Ray Jones of Minneapolis is receiving a lot of free advertising in the county press—such as it is.

He Ate His Boots.

Chicago News: Some extraordinary bets have been made on the Japanese-Russian war. A number of Japanese officers have bet that they would be killed in battle. The money was to go to their widows. One officer, on starting for the front, made the following wager: If he were killed within a month his heirs were to receive $500. After that date he was to pay his opponent 10 yen ($5) a day until he had survived 10 days, after which the bet was to cease. He undertook to expose himself to danger only when military conditions demanded it; in other words, he was not wilfully to let himself be killed.

In a moment of excitement Lomakin, a Moscow merchant, undertook to "eat his boots" if Japan were not forced to sue for peace by July 1 last. Against this his opponent bet 500 rubles. Lomakin ate the boots. But as no time limit was imposed he cut off and swallowed only a tiny strip each day, completing the achievement on Nov. 20. His opponent absolved him from eating the nails.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: Any man is very interesting to a woman till she marries him.

A girl is never afraid to learn to swim if you can see the reason she goes in swimming.

Tact is calling a man a liar in a tone of voice that makes him think you said the opposite.

No matter how badly an automobile cuts up it always seems to a married man to be acting fairly reasonably.

The way some of their summer shirt waists are made it hardly seems worth while for women to put them on.

Calcutta Englishman: Western education advances by strides in native India. After the earthquakes the following private telegram was dispatched from Dehra Dun bazaar to a down-country destination: "Here earth is quack. How there?"

Her Nightmare.

Senator Dubois was lamenting the decay of oratory among American statesmen. "With only a few exceptions," he said, "we have in Washington no orators worthy of name. On this account I had to accept in silence during the last session an acid criticism from a clever woman. 'I attended a meeting of the senate the other day,' she said, 'and that night I had a terrible dream.' 'What did you dream?' said I. The lady smiled. 'I dreamed,' she said, 'I went again.'"

Songs and Women.

Kindly stranger, do not worry

Songs and women in no hurry
Were created or begun;
And it might make quite a flurry
Should we date them—though in fun!

Because she Isabel, I know,

There's naught Ada lovelorn wight

Never Touched Him.

Tit-Bits: We turn to the solemn stranger at our side and read to him the gleeful jest about the Russian general whose name was shot all to pieces in one of the battles.

Observing his evident failure to comprehend the witticism, we go into details. "You see," we say, "his name was Sokrikotonskivtchieffobobolitsked o o c h y - wishoof, and when the battle began he was in an exposed position and his name wah shot into bits."

Still the stranger does not smile. Petulantly we go over the story again, dwelling with emphasis upon each point and ending with a hilarious outburst of laughter. Notwithstanding all this the stranger remains impassive.

"You are not familiar with humor?" we ask at last.

"No," he responds graciously. "I am merely a tourist here. I am from Llllwwnedddyyyfwyllyllcwdbrwywll, Wales, and my name is Gwyllwwllwyffdcwdbrwdwlsmwthfwlwwwwwfffffllllllrwltwn."

Niri's Compliment.

Washington Star: Kago Kazu Niri, the Japanese naval lieutenant who was killed by the sinking of his ship before Port Arthur, was educated at Annapolis. He became famous among his American friends for his characteristic speeches. One of Niri's sayings has almost passed into tradition among the naval academy contingent at Annapolis. It was intended as the highest possible compliment. He noticed the debutante daughter of a famous admiral at one of the hops at the academy, and he sought out one of his friends and asked to be introduced to the young lady, who was somewhat plump. "Introduce me," he said. "Pretty girl; looks like a nice little fat pig."

MYSTERIOUS BOMBARDMENT

Of a House By Stones Hurled By Unseen Hands.

Felicity, O., June 9.—The entire community in this neighborhood is worked up over the mysterious stoning of the home of A. G. Bartlett, a prominent farmer, who lives on the outskirts of the town. For several weeks the family has been startled at intervals by heavy stones rattling against their home, while of late the aim of their persecutors seems to have improved, and windows have been broken, while several of Mr. Bartlett's children have been struck and seriously injured by the missles.

Where the stones come from or who throws them is the mystery that has not as yet been solved, and seems to baffle detection. The Bartlett home stands in a clearing and is 250 yards from any woods or heavy undergrowth that might conceal the persons who throw the missles, and, as many of the stones weigh several pounds each, it is beyond possibility that they were thrown by hand from that distance.

The fact of the strange bombardment has become known for miles about, and hundreds of persons have visited the Bartlett home to inspect the work of the vandals.

The only conclusion that has been arrived at is that some sort of catapult or spring gun is being used to throw the stones from a great distance. This is considered the most plausible explanation from the fact that of late the stones have been striking th marks aimed at.

Since the stoning began, Bartlett and his family have made every effort to discover whence the missles come and by whom or what they are propelled, but all their efforts have been unavailing. The missles always fly in the daytime, and since last Thursday the house has been stoned daily. Yesterday a huge rock struck a kitchen window and carried sash and all into the room. The family at once made a search, assisted by neighbors, but were unable to locate the source of the bombardment. There were several neighbors in the yard at the time when the rock struck the window, and though all had been waiting and watching for just such an occurrence, no one saw where the stone started from, and the searchers were more mystified than ever.

Friday one of Bartlett's children was struck in the back of the head with a large stone and knocked unconscious, while the same day Miss Anna Olmstead, a neighbor, happened to be driving past the house when a huge stone just grazed her horse's head and then fell beside the roadway. She looked in the direction she supposed the stone come from, but could see no one, and the distance to shelter seemed entirely too great for the rock to have been hurled that far by human agency alone.

Bartlett is considered a good citizen and is not known to have an enemy. Many were of the opinion that some one who desired to secure his farm cheap was doing the stoning, but while Bartlett admits that a proposition has been made to him for the sale of his place, he declares that the prospective purchaser is a friend who would not resort to anything of that sort.

Residents of Felicity will organize a posse to watch the Bartlett home, in an effort to discover the mysterious source of the bombardment, while Bartlett declares that he will secures the services of detectives to unravel the mystery, if possible, and bring the culprits to justice.

FARMER IS TO BE A CHEMIST

In Future, Says Chief of the Bureau of Soils.

Washington, June 9.—"What is the object of the soil survey?" Prof. Milton Whitney, chief of the United States bureau of soils was asked.

"As the country becomes more thickly settled," said he, "it will be necessary to get the most out of the land in the way of food products. To do this we must know our soils so well that we can tell accurately what crop a given soil is adapted to.

Every plant has a particular kind or type of soil in which it reaches the higest development. It may grow in many other types than the ideal, but not so perfectly. For example, the sweet potato loves a sandy soil. It will grow in clay, but not with any such degree of luxuriance as it does in sand. So it is with all other farm crops.

"The idea of the bureau of soils is to survey and map all the arable land of the country; a sorting out and classifying process, and when done we can say accurately that this soil will produce tobacco of a certain kind, that soil is adapted to celery growing, and other soils to other crops.

"As a general proposition, it may be said that a type of soil that is suited to growing a crop in one section will produce the same crop successfully elsewhere, if climate, drainage and previous treatment have been similar. For example, the high-priced sumatra wrapper leaf tobacco is the product of a peculiar type of soil. In our survey of the Connecticut valley we found the same type. The difference in climate between the two locations was the only difference, and this was overcome by placing a light screen of cloth over the Connecticut fields. The result is that we can grow a product in that soil equal to the imported, thereby introducing a valuable new industry."

"Does the bureau of soils endeavor to point out to farmers in the surveyed areas how to make practical use of the various types of soil?"

"Only in a general way. That is not within our province. However, when we observe that a change of crops would be of great advantage to a section, we endeavor to induce such a change. We have established in many instances model farms where it is desirable to introduce some new crop, or a radical change in farm methods. We have introduced tobacco growing in several new sections in this way, and have pointed out a number of localities where trucking and fruit growing might become profitable. I expect to see much more specialization in farming in the future, when land owhers learn what crops are best adapted to their lands.

TWO LITTLE FINGERS

Of Lamartine's Left Hand Were Sold.

Paris, June 9.—Recently a man named Pays was arrested on the charge of selling sham relics to amateur collectors of curiosities, who had more money than wisdom. The spurious relics included twenty-seven left-legged breeches, alleged to have been worn by Victor Hugo in Paris, Brussels and Guernsey. The man is still awaiting trial, and he will probably be charged with palming off on other imprudent collectors the little finger of the left hand of the poet, Lamartine. The police official at the St. Gervais district recently received a person, who said that having read about the left-legged breeches of Victor Hugo in the newspapers, he thought the man who had sold them was the same person from whom he purchased Lamartine's little finger. Saying this, the visitor put down on the official's desk a phial with the finger inside, preserved in spirits. On the phial was a ticket with the inscription, "Here lies the little finger of Lamartine's left hand, on which the poet rested his brow, heavily laden with thought." Another collector of curiosities, stated to be English or American, called on the same official and produced a phial likewise containing Lamartine's little finger. The matter was referred to the parquet, and Pays will be examined relative to the phials which presupposes that Lamartino had two left hands.

LONGEST MUSH IN ONE WINTER

That Was Ever Taken By Any Man In Alaska.

Spokane, Wash., June 9.—Bishop P. T. Rowe, who has charge of all the Episcopal church work in Alaska, and who is at present in Seattle, holds the record for the longest "mush" ever taken in one winter by any man in Alaska. The bishop made his record a year ago last winter, and all told he mushed a trifle more than 2,000 miles.

Alaska is full of old sour doughs who think nothing of hiking out for a tramp across the snows of anything from 500 to 1,000 miles, but until Bishop Rowe performed his feat, no one had had the hardihood to mush into a new country and keep going until by the time the sun of spring had thawed the trail he had covered a bit more than 2,000 miles long.

And where other men take long tramps up in that frozen country in the hopes of getting gold, the bishop cheerfully underwent the hardships incident to his trip for the purpose of advancing the work of his church among the natives of Alaska. Sometimes he was alone and again he was accompanied by a companion, but no matter what the hardships were, he came through the winter in splendid condition, enjoyed himself thoroughly and the only misfortune he had was to freeze his fingers.

In discussing his work in Alaska, Bishop Rowe said:

"I first landed in Seattle nine years ago. I purchased my outfit here and eventually mushed into the interior over the Chilkoot Pass. Steamer accommodations in those days—before the big strike had been made—were very poor, and in getting inside I was compelled to live the life of the sourest old sour dogh in all that country.

"However, in the nine years that I have worked in Alaska we have founded seventeen central mission stations, and in seven places we have hospitals and schools as well, among the natives. No, I never had any trouble with the natives but once, and then I thought for a time that the Stick Indians would get me sure. That was the first year I was in the North. Dick Emmons was with me. We found an Indian hunter who had lost his way. He was nearly starved. We took him to his camp, and in doing so nearly lost our lives. The Indians wanted our outfit and we got away only by a good bluff with our rifles. Later some of those same Indians were hanged for killing white people, and it was only when the government sent a gunboat up there that they quieted down.

In discussing his long "mush," Bishop Rowe said:

"A year ago this past winter I froze in with my dog team and was on snowshoes all winter long, traveling a little more than 2,000 miles. I started from Nuhluhkayet, away in the interior on the Yukon, and about 100 miles from the Tanana. I crossed the Arctic circle and a year ago last January I pulled into Fairbanks. There were about 400 people there then, although the city now has a population of 10,000. I established a mission, a chapel and a hospital, and left two nurses and four workers in charge.

"I took that tramp to get thoroughly acquainted with that new country and to ascertain the work the church had to do there. It was pretty cold, of course, and one time when my dog team had a mix-up with one belonging to a small musher I froze my fingers and while they put me out of business for a short time, they did not suffer permanent injury.

"I left Australia last September and this winter I have spent in the East. The people there are all greatly interested in Alaska, and I was surprised to find out how much they know of that country. I am now on my way to Sitka with my family. I will build a house there and direct the work of the church in Alaska from that city."

KNIFE TOO OFTEN USED.

Views of Professor Schweninger Create Stir.

London, June 9.—The statements of Prof. Schweninger of Berlin, who was medical adviser to Prince Bismarck, that recourse is had to operations far too frequently nowadays, and that the physician is pushed to one side by the "surgical handicraftsman," have created considerable interest among members of the medical profession in London.

A noted physician told a Post-Dispatch representative that a revulsion of feeling is taking place in regard to the use of the knife.

"Some years ago," he said, "Sir Felix Semon created a stir by hinting that laryngologists were making too frequent use of the knife. As an example of the revulsion of feeling of which I have spoken, take adenoids—a very common complaint with children.

"It is admitted by many able surgeons that operations have been far too frequent in the past, and now there is a tendency to see what treatment, with change of conditions and air, can do for children suffering in this way.

"It is the same with all obstructions of the throat and nose. There has been too much indiscriminate cutting."

An equally well-known surgeon took Prof. Schweninger to task for saying that "because the functions of the appendix are unknown to us, the organ must be unnecessary, and we cut it out whenever anything is wrong with it."

"The medical man who does not cut out a diseased appendix is wronging his patient," he said.

"I am quite certain that there are not too many operations for the disease. When the appendix shows signs of creating trouble it should be removed while the trouble is not serious, otherwise it may be too late."

AN APPEAL FILED IN GAYNOR-GREENE CASE.

Montreal, June 9.—Mr. Taschereau of Quebec, counsel for Gaynor and Greene, arrived here last night and announced that he has filed the necessary notice of an appeal to the supreme court of Canada in the Greene and Gaynor cases. As the supreme court does not sit again until October, Gaynor and Greene will remain in the Montreal jail for some time.

The appeal is from the judgment rendered by Judge Davidson, holding that Judge Lafontaine had a right to sit as extradition commissioner. In the meantime an application will be made to a superior court for a writ of habeas corpus which also will act as a stay of proceedings and place another legal obstacle in the way of extrditing the two prisoners.

The decorations of the churches are being looked after and it is expected that the floral displays will be beautiful. Children's day is always an event that is looked forward to with a great deal of interest and preparations are made weeks in advance. A good many of the Sunday school teachers and musical directors will be glad when Children's day is over for it has put a lot of trying work upon them for a number of weeks, getting the children ready for the programs to be given.

A REED SHAKEN WITH THE WIND.

Without Will Power, Courage, Ambition, Energy or Hope, the Dyspeptic Is Willing to Give Up the Struggle.

The confirmed dyspeptic has as little interest in life as any human being. He is unfitted for its duties and is indifferent to its charms. He is unable to enjoy the business and social relations that constitute the life of the average man. All his hopes are absorbed by the one hope to get well and again be able to enjoy the good things of life. Until this is realized, he is sick at heart and feels himself to be of little use.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are the sufferer's tree of life. They will cure him and bring him health and happiness just as sure and certain as he takes them. They are sure because they are natural and no other cure but a natural one is sure. They act on the food and digest it just as well as a stomach would. They contain exactly the came chemical properties as the digestive fluids of the stomach.

By putting Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets in a bottle or jar with any kind of food; meats, eggs or vegetables, with sufficient amount of water, the process of digestion is carried out just as it is in a healthy human stomach and in the same time. There is consequently no unnatural disturbance of the digestive organs resulting from the use of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. They relieve the weak and worn-out stomach of its work and permit it to rest up and recuperate and regain its normal health and strength.

A well-known Buffalo physician says: "I prescribe Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets on all occasions as a relief for weakened and run-down stomachs. I find they contain all the ingredients necessary for the proper digestion of the food and will do more to give the stomach the needed rest than any medicine I could prescribe. They have never failed to give immediate relief in all my cases and I do not hesitate to recommend them to all sufferers from dyspepsia."

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are for sale by all druggists at 50 cents a box.

IMMEDIATE CONVOCATION

Of a National Assembly Is Demanded of the Czar.

St. Petersburg, June 9.—The voice of the delegates of the zemstvos and of the municipalities demanding in no uncertain tone the immediate convocation of a national assembly to pass upon the question of peace or war to heal internal strife and to unite the people for the rejuvenation of Russia will be heard in the address adopted by the all-Russia zemstvo congress at Moscow, which a deputation, headed by Count Hayden and M. Shipoff, is bringing to present to the emperor. The document bids fair to become historic. The customary phrases of respect at the opening and the closing are omitted and it is otherwise uncermonious, employing the direct personal pronoun.

The address arraigns the bureaucracy and reminds the emperor that his pledge to convoke a national assembly is slow of fulfilment. It says the country is on the verge of a civil war, and even ventures to criticize a royal measure, contrasting the increase of the police power by the ukase issued last Sunday with a weakening of the administrative process which the country had been led to expect.

The address urges the summoning of a national assembly, that the war may become national or cease, and concludes with a solemn reminder of the sovereign's duty to God and the fatherland and a prayer for action before it is too late.

There is intense interest to learn whether the emperor will receive the bearers of so bold a masure couchd in terms such as have never before been used to the emperor by his subjects.

The address is buttressed with a stream of petitions from individual zemstvos and municipalities.

The doumas of nearly all the principal cities have addressed the throne, praying that the representatives of the people be summoned at once.

HEAVY SUITS BROUGHT.

Denver, June 9.—Claims for damages amounting to $400,000 were filed yesterday with State Auditor Bent by Attorney John H. Murphy, counsel for the Western Federation of Miners, on behalf of sixty-seven men who were deported last year from the Cripple Creek, Telluride and Las Animas mining districts. Each claim is accompanied by an affidavit reciting the great suffering undergone by the men who were taken from their homes and run out of the state by troops under command of Adjt. Gen. Sherman Bell.

AUTO THIEF WAS CHASED

Twenty-Six Hours By Pursuers, Also In an Auto.

Indianapolis, Ind., June 9.—After twenty-six hours of continual riding, during which time they traveled more than 200 miles over country roads, Captain of Detectives Kinney and Officers Lowe and Lancaster reached Indianapolis with Walter Shively, who is charged with stealing the large touring car belonging to Dr. Henry Jameson. The machine was taken from the Newton Claypool building.

Shively was trapped by the officers, near Newton, Ind., after they had chased him all day and night. When the detectives found him he was asleep in a farm house, and Dr. Jameson's automobile was standing in a shed near the house.

About noon Thursday the detectives heard that a man was going west on the National road in the machine. Capt. Kinney, with Lowe and Lancaster, started in pursuit. In another machine, with a driver, Dr. Jameson followed. The trail led to Crawfordsville. At that place, while the officers were telephoning to surrounding towns, Shively got ahead of them and later the trail was lost.

The officers began scouring the country around Waynetown and Newtown, and late Thursday night they received word that the thief was at a farm house two miles from Newtown. Capt. Kinney and Detective Lowe were then at Crawfordsville, while Lancaster and Dr. Jameson were supposed to be near the house where Shively was hiding.

Starting from Crawfordsville at midnight, with the rain beating in their faces and without a light, the officers headed for Newtown, a distance of eighteen miles, over a rough country road. Although the traveling was extremely dangerous the officers set the levers of the big machine at the farthest notch, and for an hour they pounded over the hills through the inky darkness.

They reached the farm house at the same time that Lancaster and Jameson arrived and the prisoner was taken from his bed.

Shively says he is a salesman and has been in Indianapolis for nine weeks.

His home is in Chicago, he says, and as he was making no money he decided to steal an auto and go back home. He had noticed Dr. Jameson's machine in front of the Claypool building many nights, he said, and when he saw it Wednesday night there were no lights on it.

After making sure no one was near he lighted the lamps and, after starting the machine, jumped in. He took it to the west end of town and left it. Going back to the Imperial hotel, he collected his clothes, slept the rest of the night, and departed in the machine about noon Wednesday.

MARKET IS DULL

Wheat Closes Stronger After Decline During the Morning.

Foreign Markets Unchanged--Modern Miller Report Bearish.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 9.—The wheat market was quiet today and a lower opening and further decline were followed by a recovery that sent prices to about the closing level of yesterday and, in the case of the September option in most markets somewhat higher. The July in Duluth was unchanged, as it was also in Minneapolis and New York. In Chicago there was a gain of ⅛c, in St. Louis ⅝c and Kansas City ½-⅝c. In Duluth September advanced ½c, in Minneapolis ⅞-1c, in Chicago ¾c, in New York ⅝c, in St. Louis ⅝c and Kansas City ⅝c.

Duluth shippers are daily selling a little wheat to go East, but the amount is not large. Exporters this morning worked eight loads of new crop wheat to go abroad. The Liverpool market closed unchanged as did also London, while Paris was ¼c higher to ¼c lower.

The Modern Miller's report said: "The winter wheat crop has been favored by weather of a character to promote growth and complete the condition of the plant for harvest, the cutting of wheat has advanced northward into Kansas, Missouri and Illinois. Under present conditions the harvest will be well up to the average for the season of teh year. Crop average for the season of the year. No further deterioration of consequence to the crop has been reported although there is evidence of damage by rust in scattered localities and of hession fly in Nebraska."

Car receipts at Duluth were 17 against 22 last year and at Minneapolis 122 against 120 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 139 against 142 last year. Primary receipts of wheat were 163,286 bus, last year 256,242 bus. Shipments 165,-260 bus, last year 392,152 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 122,000 bus.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed ¾d hither. Primary receipts of corn were 450,420 bus, last year 766,105 bus. Shipments 463,598 bus, last year 674,460 bus. Clearances were 32,000 bus.

In the Duluth market trading in wheat was very dull. The July option stood nearly all morning at $1.11, which was ⅛c under yesterday's close, and not a trade was made. At the close it stiffened up to $1.11⅛ and closed there, unchanged from yesterday. The new September option had most of the trading. It opened ⅛c lower at 80c, fell to 79⅝c and then advanced to 80¾c where it closed, a gain of ⅛c. The old September advanced ¼c to 85¾c. Its low point was 85¼c.

Flax was dull, the only trading being in the July option. It advanced 5c to $1.45. September and October closed ½c lower, the former at $1.28 and the latter at $1.26. Stocks of flax at the Head of the Lakes are estimated to decrease 300,000 bus this week.

Following are the closing prices:

Wheat—To arrive, No. 1 northern, $1.11⅛; on track, No. 1 northern, $1.11⅛; No. 2 northern, $1.03¾; Durum, No. 1, 86c; No. 2, 85c; July, $1.11¼; September, new, 80¾c; September, old, 85¾c. Flax, to arrive, $1.45; on track, $1.45; July, $1.45; September, $1.28; October, $1.26. Oats, to arrive, 31¼c; on track, 31¼c. Rye, to arrive, 78c; on track 78c. Barley—Feed, 35½@41c.

Cars inspected: Wheat 17, last year 22, oats 10, barley 4, flax 1, last year 5.

Receipts: Wheat 4,986, oats 6,122, barley 4,490, rye 137, flax 2,066.

Shipments: Wheat 8,709; oats 2,500, rye 4,714.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Sentiment In the Wheat Pit Quite Bearish.

Chicago, June 9.—Sentiment in the wheat pit here today was bearish and declines of nearly ⅛c occurred on selling by pit traders. The principal influence was excellent weather. In the Northwest, where moisture was needed, rains were prevalent, while in the Southwest, where harvesting is in progress, bright skies prevailed. Higher prices at Liverpool were practically ignored. July opened ⅛@¼c to ⅛@⅜c lower at 86@86¼c and declined to 85¼c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 140 cars against 164 cars last week and 159 cars a year ago.

Later a firm tone developed, as a result of a fair demand from shorts. The market was affected by an improved demand for cash wheat and by the smallness of primary receipts. On the upturn July advanced to 86¾c. The market closed at practically the highest point of the day, with July up ⅛c at 86¾@⅛c.

Partly in sympathy with wheat, a weak undertone was manifested in the corn market. Longs were fairly active sellers. Larger receipts than expected caused part of the selling. July opened unchanged to ⅛c lower at 51¾@51⅝c and sold off to 51⅜c. Local receipts were 236 cars with 56 of contract grade.

The market was weak the entire session. Heavy acceptances in the country furnished the bears an additional reason for selling. The lowest point of the day for July was reached at 51¼@¼c. The market closed weak, with July down ⅜c at 51⅛c.

Considering the weakness of other grain, the oats market was remarkably steady. Commission houses were moderate purchasers. July opened unchanged at 31¼c, and held at 31⅛@¼c. Local receipts were 185 cars.

Provisions were easier on selling of pork and largely by packers. Liberal receipts of hogs had a depressing influence. September pork was off 5c at $12.85. Lard and ribs were each down 2½c at $7.47½ and $7.62½.

Close: Wheat—July, 86⅜@⅝c; September, 81¾@⅞c; December, 81¾c. Corn—July, 51⅛c; old, 52¼c; September, 50¼c; old, 50⅝c; December, 47¼c; old, 48¼c; May, 47⅝c. Oats—June, 31@⅛c; July, 31¼@⅜c; September, 29c; December, 29⅝c; May, 31¼c. Pork—July, $12.55; September, $12.85. Lard—July, $7.20@7.22½; September, $7.40; November, $7.10; December, $7. Ribs—July, $7.32½; September, $7.60; October, $7.62½@7.65. Rye—July, 66c; September, 61c. Flax—Cash northwestern, $1.43; southwestern, $1.27; June, $1.27. Timothy—June, $2.85; September, $3.05. Clover—June, $11.45. Barley—Cash, 42@50c. Cash wheat—No. 2 red, $1; No. 3 red, 95@98c; No. 2 hard, $1; No. 3 hard, 86@95c; No. 1 northern, $1.12@1.13; No. 2 northern, $1.09@1.11; No. 3 spring, $1.05@1.08. Oats—No. 2, 30½c; No. 3, 29¾c. Corn—No. 2, 53¼@53½c; No. 3, 53@53¼c.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—Aside from an early sinking spell the market, while nervous was very firm. The character of the news from all over the winter wheat belt, particularly Ohio and Indiana, was such as to bring caution to those bearishly inclined. The slow cash situation as reflected in the small decrease in the Northwest is estimated at 100,000 bus for this week, whereas two or three weeks ago the weekly decrease was in the neighborhood of a million. It will be hard to bring higher prices under favorable conditions, but on the other hand a wet harvest could bring another upward movement. Thus far we have received no confirmation of the reported damage and the immediate market will depend largely on the government figures tomorrow.

Corn—The market ruled nervous, at times quite weak, only to rally again with the net result unchanged to fractionally lower. Receipts and shipments were quite a little under a year ago, but had no effect in a market way. The action of the market seems to indicate that the urgent short covering of yesterday cleaned up at least a goodly portion of the short interest easily stamped. The cash situation is reported by the leading cash interests as entirely satisfactory to them. There is no doubt a good demand for corn which we feel must be increased to hold present prices. We would only buy corn on set-backs.

Oats—Aside from ruling very firm, nothing special developed in a market way. If we were to trade in oats at all, would prefer selling them.

Provisions—This has been another day of liquidation. Undoubtedly much of the selling came through sympathy with the weaker prices at the yards and brokers employed by the packers seemed unusually busy, at times being on both sides of the market.

• • •

Chicago Inter-Ocean: A bull view of wheat is that the bears are selling it on sunshine and will be deceived by the outturn of the crop. They think that conditions are not as good as reported. Some of the people in the Southwest who are evidently long on wheat stated that 65,-000,000 bus is the maximum for Kansas. Most of the reports coming from that section favor 75,000,000 to 85,000,000 bus. The fly is getting busy in Nebraska, but no one seems to have any definite reports as to the extent of its operations. Halliday of Cairo is credited with claiming that the crop from Cairo to Paducah would not be over 45 per cent, owing to fly damage.

• • •

Edwards, Wood & Co.: Wheat—The Northwestern Miller says existing milling conditions are unsatisfactory and mills are reducing their output on account of no export business and the domestic demand not being sufficient to take care of the flour ground. There are reports of a reduction in condition to 75 per cent for Kansas, and Expert Inglis is putting out bullish reports. On the whole, today's transactions were of an evening-up character, pending the report of the government tomorrow.

BLUE LAWS VOID.

New Jersey Court Refuses to Enforce Them.

Newark, N. J., June 9.—Judge Sweeney, in the first criminal court, dismissed the complaints made by Capt. Vogel against Charles B. Bloemcke, owner of the Vailsburg bicycle track, and four other bicycle racing men. These five were arrested Sunday, May 7, when an attempt was made to conduct a bicycle race meet, in defiance of a prohibitory mandate of the Newark board of police commissioners.

The complaint was based on the old blue law of New Jersey that prohibits games or manual labor of any description on the Sabbath. After Chief of Police Adams and Capt. Vogel testified to the events at the bicycle track that preceded and led up to the arrest of the men, the court announced that the complaint was dismissed.

In making this announcement Judge Sweeney said that he would refuse to entertain similar complaints in the future. In view of information that had come to him, he said that between 30,000 and 40,000 persons engaged last Sunday in outdoor amusements in the city, and he believed that if the police commissioners and the churches had a better view of how healthful and clean outdoor recreation proves, a more satisfactory adjustment of matters would be attained.

PAUL JONES' BODY MAY BE SHIPPED FROM HAVRE.

Paris, June 9.—The French government has indicted its willingness to assign a torpedo boat to carry the body of Paul Jones down the river Seine from Paris to Havre where a French squadron will deliver the body to the American squadron. This will necessitate a change in the rendezvous of the American fleet from Cherbourg to Havre, which is now under consideration.

DULLNESS RULED

In the Stock Market But Closing Was Firm.

Heavy During the Early Trading But Rallied Well.

New York, June 9.—A slight dropping tendency was perceptible in the nominal stock market opening. Dealings were of the smallest and changes were insignificant in all cases. A decline of ½ in New York Central marked the maximum amongst prominent stocks. Cotton Oil preferred rose a point.

Early indications gave promise of an even duller and more uninteresting market than on yesterday. The first hour's business today was of meager proportions. Copper, Reading and Union Pacific gradually eased off and then hardened. New York Central and Steel Foundries preferred declined 1 and Malting preferred 2¼.

A scarcely perceptible shading of prices resulted from the nominal dealings of the second hour. Steel Foundries preferred recovered its decline and the common rose 1. United States Steel preferred and Union Pacific declined ⅝, Reading ¾ and New York, Chicago & St. Louis 1. Bonds were steady.

Interest in the market waned gradually and there was long intervals without a transaction being reported. Northwestern fell off two points, while Smelting gained half as much.

Some little improvement occurred in the tone of the market late in the afternoon. Louisville & Nashville, Atlantic Coast Line and Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie moved up 1@1¼. The United States Rubber stocks lost 1.

The rise in Atlantic Coast Line reached 3½. Louisville & Nashville 1⅝, Smelting 2 and Missouri Pacific, Chicago & Alton and Lead 1. Northwestern recovered its loss. Prices in some cases moved up a fraction in sympathy. The market was very languid. The closing was steady but intensely dull.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: Market closed strong, but dull. The market closely gives evidence of being oversold. There are many favorable features in the situation, but whatever plans the bull leaders may have are at the moment held in abeyance. The general market acts well, particularly Union Pacific, St. Paul, Brooklyn Rapid Transit and Pennsylvania. The market to us seems in position to respond on very slight encouragement.

• • •

Dick Bros. to Paine, Webber & Co.: The general list was heavy during the early trading when the professionals took the long side, but became strong and rallied well later when there was covering. At the close Union Pacific and Amalgamated Copper were quite firm. There was a dearth of news. The close was firm.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, June 9.—The cotton market opened firm at an advance of 9@14 points, in response to the big gain in Liverpool and a renewal of active bull support chiefly from New Orleans sources. There was also active covering, and while the advance is nearly 40 points from the low level of the last week, naturally attracting profit-taking, the advance was not checked until it had carried prices 14 to 18 points over last night's finals. Following this the market reacted 3 to 4 points under realizing, but nervous, and showed a firm undertone. Liverpool will be closed from today until next Tuesday morning.

ENJOYS HIS CONSULATE

Col. C. H. Graves Says Nice Things About Stockholm.

In a letter written O. N. Lundberg of this city, under date of May 25, Col. C. H. Graves, United States consul to Sweden writes that he had a very pleasant trip and has been received in a hospitable manner.

The portion of Col. Graves' letter which may prove of interest to his many friends in Duluth, is as follows:

"It may interest you to know that we had a very pleasant voyage, smooth seas and good company on shipboard. We have been received here in a most hospitable and kindly manner. I think that the good 'send-off' that you and my other good friends in Duluth gave me has brought good luck in its train at every step.

"Stockholm is a fine city, one to be proud of, and has many features that would be a valuable object lesson for us of the eWst to study. They build things to last, here."

THE LIGHTING OF THE PIERS

Electric Lamps Will Be Turned on Next Week.

The electric lamps on the government piers, which have been dimmed since the close of navigation last fall, will be all aglow next week. The lights on the piers is one of the most attractive sights in Duluth, being the first thing that greets the eyes of visitors who see Duluth for the first time when arriving on a steamer at night.

Repairs are being made to the equipment under the direction of the local government engineers. The wiring is defective in places, and has to be repaired. Eight lamps have been broken since last fall. The waves have had a hand in tearing down some of the standards, while passing vessels have helped to break them down. The workmen on the aerial bridge tore one down, while a derrick in clearing off the false work on the piers ran foul of another.

GOES TO VIRGINIA.

President Will Be Away Until Next Monday.

Washington, June 9.—President Roosevelt left Washington at 11:16 a. m. today, on a brief trip to Rapidan, Va., where he will be the guest of Joseph Wilmer, an old friend of himself and Mrs. Roosevelt. Mrs. Roosevelt, who recently purchased a tract of nearly twenty acres of woodland adjoining Mr. Wilmer's farm, left here yesterday for the Wilmer home. The president and Mrs. Roosevelt will remain there probably until Sunday night or Monday morning, unless the president's presence in Washington should become, before that time, a matter of urgency.

The president traveled in a regular Pullman car instead of in a private car.

The small children of the president and Mrs. Roosevelt left for Connecticut on a brief visit to friends prior to going to Oyster Bay for the summer.

PROPELLER EXPENSIVE.

Kingston, June 9.—It has cost the steamer Dorothy, $700 extra, to get a new propeller wheel put on because the steamer has 900 tons of dynamite on board. The work was done by the Donnelly Wrecking company, after the vessel had been refused entrance into the dry dock on account of the dangerous cargo. The Dorothy is bound from Wilmington, Del., to Houghton, Mich., and lost her propeller in the St. Lawrence coming up.

BIDS WANTED.

STEAM HEATING, PLUMBING, ELECTRIC WORK AND FIXTURES—Sealed proposals will be received by the Board of Education of Public School District No. 12 up till two o'clock p. m., June 15th, 1905, for the steam heating and mechanical ventilation, plumbing, electric work and fixtures for the High school building now in course of erection at Ely, Minn.

Proposals to be made separately, as follows: First—Heating and ventilation; second, plumbing; third, electric work and fixtures.

Plans and specifications may be seen at the Builders' and Traders' Exchange, Minneapolis; Builders' Exchange, Duluth, Minn., office of Grant McMahon, school director, Ely, Minn., and the office of Frank L. Young & Co., architects, Duluth, Minn.

A certified check for 5 per cent of amount of the bid must accompany each bid, which will be returned to the bidders when the contract is awarded or bids rejected.

The envelope enclosing bid will be marked "Bid for heating, plumbing or electric work" as the case may be, and addressed to B. E. Tornlus, Winton, Minn.

The school board reserves the right to reject any or all bids.

B. E. TORINUS, Clerk.

RATE CUT AGAIN

Charter of Flax Made at Decline of Quarter Cent.

Makes Figure Now One and Quarter Cents—Cut By Liners.

The wheat and flax freight rate has suffered another break and it is felt that now it has about reached the bottom. The rate for the past two days has been 1½ cents, but during this morning it broke to 1¼ cents, the first indication thereof being a charter of flax at that figure. This charter is said to have been made by one of the line boats.

The break is attributed to the desire of the line boats to get some of the business. The wild boats have been getting the bulk of it and the liners have been carrying air or loating for a cargo.

ANOTHER STEAMER BUILDING.

Fort William, June 9.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Great Lakes Steamship company will put another steamer on the route between Montreal and Lake Superior in the general grain and, merchandise trade. The vessel, which will be named the Royal, is under construction at an English shipyard. She will be 256 feet long, 43 feet beam and 21 feet deep, and will carry 75,000 bushels of wheat through to Montreal.

WILL GIVE BOAT WIDE BERTH.

Kingston, June 9.—(Special to The Herald.)—When the steamer Dorothy, now getting a new wheel off this port, starts for the upper lakes, vessel masters are likely to give her a wide berth. The Dorothy has 900 tons of dynamite, and is bound for Houghton, Mich. If any boat collides with the craft, there will be none left to tell the tale. The steamer with her dangerous cargo has been off this port for some time, waiting for her repairs.

TOWERS FOR PORT ARTHUR.

Port Arthur, June 9.—(Special to The Herald.)—Contracts for two steel hoisting towers have been let to the Mead company of Cleveland, for delivery here by the end of August. The foundations will be completed by that time. The new facilities will be greatly appreciated by vesselmen hauling coal.

BURIED TREASURE.

Looking For Mexican Gold Down In Oklahoma.

There has been a generally circulated tradition among the old-timers that a large sum of gold was buried somewhere in this part of the territory, says the Cheyenne Star.

Some people claim the treasure is located in the Wichita Mountains and others say in this county. The story goes that a party of prospectors, mostly Mexicans, were on their way home, about forty-six years ago, carrying a large amount of wealth, when they were attacked by Indians and all but two or three of the party were killed. The gold was buried before the survivors made their escape and various maps and plats have been claimed to be in the possession of different parties showing where the treasure was buried, and several attempts have been made to locate the spot.

It now appears that the Rev. Mr. Davis, a well known and respected citizen of our county, has been in possession of a map, given by a Mexican who claimed to have been one of the survivors, showing the lay of the ground where the battle took place, trees with branches and holes certain distances from the ground; the spot designated where the gold was buried and a general outline of the county and immediate vicinity of the much sought for spot. Mr. Davis has been on a still hunt for several years and finally located what he believes to be the place, on the Sandstone, southeast of Cheyenne.

He began investigation, found the described tree, dug and found skeletons, located the spot where the gold was buried, dug and found indications of the dirt having been disturbed in the past, and what was believed to have been a portion of the canvas containing the gold. On account of the water filling the hole operations were discontinued until a pump could be secured. Last Saturday a traction engine left Elk City for the purpose of operating a big pump and digging will be resumed.

Disinterested parties who have been let on the inside and have seen the map say it is a "sure thing" and the oft told tradition of buried treasure will prove to be a fact.

TOLD BY SMELL.

Snakes have a very keen sense of smell, by which they are largely guided in the choice of their food, says the Kansas City Journal. A zoologist has discovered that the larger snakes at zoos often refuse to eat rats captured about the buildings, but quickly devour those caught out of doors. Rats taken indoors, were kept for a day or so in a cage with an earthen floor, after which they were readily eaten. A similar experience was had with smaller snakes, copperheads, these declining to eat house mice, letting them rush freely about the cage, or even over their bodies, with impunity, while field mice were quickly disposed of, even if they had been dead for some little time.

ATE GOVERNMENT SEEDS.

Even the thriftiest member of congress no longer sells his supply of seeds from the department of agriculture to dealers, says the Kansas City Journal, and once more the farmers and truck gardeners get a share and experiment with strange plantings. The city representative has no easy task in arranging for the distribution of his allowance, as he cannot take the trouble to learn who among his constituents has a garden. To a German supporter Representative Ryan of New York sent a supply of flower bulbs—tulip, crocus and the like—and the result was sudden sickness in the family. The recipient supposed the bulbs were Bermuda onions, and they served his table as soup, with nearly fatal results.

RUSSIA AND JAPAN ACCEPT SUGGESTION OF PEACE; WILL APPOINT REPRESENTATIVES TO DISCUSS TERMS

STRIKERS MUST NEGOTIATE WITH THE ASSOCIATION

Efforts With Individual Merchants Will Be of No Result.

Secretary Driscoll Who Was Missing Has Returned to City.

Chicago, June 10.—Peace negotiations between the teamsters and State street merchants, either individually or collectively, are at an end, and hereafter all meetings for the purpose of bringing the strike to a close must be arranged through John V. Farwell, Jr., chairman of the action committee of the Chicago Employers' association.

In view of the repeated declarations of the employers that no further concessions will be given, an acceptance in full of what terms may be made by the employers or a calling off of the strike were today, according to the employers, the only avenues by which the teamsters can get rid of the fight.

Declarations by President Shea and other strike leaders are to the effect that the demands of employers that union buttons must be discarded and that police protection shall continue, even if the strike is declared at an end, never will be accepted. With these obstacles remaining the strike hereafter, it is believed, will consist mainly of a test of endurance. Union officials assert that as long as sufficient funds are received there will be no breaks in the strikers.

Aroused by bitter speeches attacking the policy of paying one day's pay each week for the support of striking clothing cutters and garment workers, made at a special meeting of Clothing Cutters' union, local No. 12, 200 members of the local have held a "rump" meeting after the regular session had adjourned and declared off the strike that has been on since last October. The strike affects 600 cutters and 3,000 garment workers and the leaders of the "rump" meeting insist the struggle has been lost. It was sympathy for the idle men that precipitated the teamsters' strike.

The council finance committee has decided to give the additional policement employed for strike duty a higher salary than ordinarily is paid regular policemen in the first few months of their service. This is a recognition for the men's willingness to serve at the present time, and because they hold only temporary positions, with no opportunity for promotion.

The new men will be paid $2.50 a day instead of $2, which usually is given policemen in the first stage of their employment.

As there are about 1,600 additional police the city must pay $3,500 a day in salaries for the temporary force.

John C. Driscoll, former secretary of the Coal Team Owners' association, whose name has figured largely in charges attributed to Former President Al Young and President C. P. Shea of the teamsters, has returned to Chicago. Driscoll said today that he has not been evading service of subpoenaes, but had been attending to details of business in connection with some property in Idaho. Driscoll today denied the truth of the stories ascribed to Young and Shea. He has been mentioned as having knowledge of money transactions alleged to have been conducted by various employers to obtain or call off strikes. Immediately upon arrival in Chicago, Driscoll got into communication with the state's attorney and asked if it was desired to serve a subpoena to have Driscoll appear before the grand jury.

The state's attorney said it would waive the formality if Driscoll would come before the grand jury Monday and appear at state's attorney office today for a conference. Driscoll agreed to the two requests.

REMARKABLE FLOOD IN DES MOINES RIVER

Water Rises Seven Feet In Three Hours and Still Rising.

Keokuk, Iowa, June 10.—The Des Moines river here rose seven feet in 3 hours, today, and is still rising fast. There is almost equally remarkable flood in the Mississippi river here. The levee protecting the town of Alexandria, Mo., has been broken and water has started through the town. Never before has the Des Moines river made such a tremendous jump. The great volume of water from the Des Moines joining the flood in the Mississippi will sweep all lowlands in Illinois and Missouri from Keokuk to Hannibal. The Mississippi today showed a rise of six feet, breaking all records here. The government locks are flooded, and the danger line has been passed by over two feet. Two terrific rain storms during the night caused all creeks to become raging torrents. The Mississippi like the Des Moines is still rising at a rapid rate with prospects of doing damage. Railroads are delayed on account of washouts.

La Crosse, Wis., June 10.—The Mississippi at this point stands today the highest for three years, being 11.4 feet above low water mark, a rise of 1.2 feet during the night and of 3 feet in two days. The factories along the river, which have been operating with difficulty the past two days, were closed today. In the lumber yards water stands a foot deep and one residence district is under water. Heavy rains are expected to cause further rises and it is not expected that the height of the flood will be reached before Monday or Tuesday. Before that time the railroad tracks on the river front will be under water and shipments from the factories and wholesale houses in that district will be cut off.

The lower Wisconsin river is still rising. Kilbourne, Wis., reports a rise of four feet during the night.

CHARTER MAKERS

Cannot Recover For Their Services at Mankato.

Mankato, Minn., June 10.—District Judge Carey has made a decision that is of interest to municipalities to which the home rule charter law applies. The action was brought by W. E. Young, a member of the state railway and warehouse commission, and H. L. Schmitt against the city of Mankato to recover $3,506 for services in preparing the new charter that was voted down at the spring election.

The plaintiffs were members of the commission and were appointed a subcommittee to draft the form of the charter. They held that they were entitled to compensation under the law that allows cities to expend $500 for legal advice and stenographers' hire, etc., in preparing new charters, this being the desire of the commission.

They asked for what was left of the $500 after other expenses had been paid, but the city council disallowed the bill on the advice of the city attorney and Attorney General Young, on the ground that the law expressly provides that no member of the commission shall receive compensation. The attorneys sued the city.

Judge Carey held that the legislature clearly intended that no member should receive any pay but that where the commissioners are unable to prepare charters they may procure outside legal assistance.

MILWAUKEE CHURCHMAN LIVED A DOUBLE LIFE

Prominent Episcopalian Was the Father of Two Families.

Had One Wife In Massachusetts, Another In Wisconsin.

Deception Not Discovered Until the Death of the Miscreant.

Milwaukee, June 10.—The Journal today prints a story of the double life of Peter H. Deacon, who died in Chicago on April 13 last. According to the story, as told by John Keating, Deacon's son-in-law, Deacon lived a double life for twenty years, having at the same time families in Somerville, Mass., a suburb of Boston, and in Milwaukee.

Deacon came West twenty years ago and was married to Fannie Adeline Wilcox. He was known as the agent for a knitting manufacturing concern, and was associated with Henry Mills, and had an office on Wisconsin street. Deacon was a leading supporter of the St. James Episcopal church, and his son, Farrell, sang in the choir.

At the same time he had a wife and several children residing in Somerville. Mrs. Deacon, No. 1, living in the East, was Anna J. Tuite. The first marriage was performed in 1868, in Somerville, by the Rev. James Healy, and the second in the West, nearly twenty years later.

The story of the double life leaked out when John Keating, a son-in-law of wife No. 1, came West for the purpose of securing proofs of death and adjusting two life insurance policies. According to Keating's story, Deacon for many years represented to wife No. 1 that he was a traveling man, and that his business kept him in the West most of the time. His visits to his Eastern home were limited to about two each year. The only Western address known to his Eastern family was the Hotel Wellington, Chicago. For a long time Deacon supported the Somerville family, but of late years his contributions became fewer, until finally his support ceased altogether.

Mrs. Deacon No. 2 left Milwaukee two weeks ago, and is said to be now living with Mrs. Wilcox at 29 Forty-second place, Chicago.

Mrs. Deacon No. 1 is 61 years old, and Mrs. Deacon No. 2 about twenty years younger. Deacon, at the time of his death, was 59 years old.

STREET RIOT

At Minsk Results In Killing of One Jew.

Minsk, Western Russia, June 10.—The report published in a London newspaper that 100 persons were shot during rioting here recently is incorrect. There was a street riot here Thursday on Cathedral square between soldiers and Jews. It was provoked according to the official version by theft of a purse from a soldier off duty. His comrades beat a Jew whereupon a crowd of about 600 of the latter's co-religionists gathered to rescue him. The Jews used stones and revolvers and the troops were summoned. They fired into and dispersed the crowd with the result that one Jew was killed and twenty were wounded and a soldier was shot. The chief of police sustained a wound on the head by a flying missile and one policeman was severely wounded.

FRIEST IN JAIL.

Seventeen-Year-Old Girl Is His Accuser.

La Crosse, Wis., June 10.—Rev. James Hofer, for many years a priest in the Catholic church at Barre Mills, this county, was arrested in a monastery near Dubuque and arraigned before Judge Brindley yesterday, charged with the seduction of a 17-year-old girl. He pleaded not guilty and the case was adjourned, under bail of $1,500. The priest is in jail awaiting bonds.

NORWAY'S MESSAGE HANDED TO THE KING

Oscar Had Refused to Accept the Notice of Dissolution.

Christiana, Norway, June 10.—The address of the storthing to King Oscar announcing the dissolution of the union between Norway and Sweden which the king had previously refused to accept was handed to him yesterday afternoon, at Stockholm, by a representative of the president of the storthing.

Copenhagen, June 10.—All hope that King Oscar or Crown Prince Gustave will yield to the request of the Norwegian storthing to place a prince of the house of Bernadotte on the throne of Norway has now disappeared, according to a high authority.

The Danish royal family has also set the stamp of disapproval on the acceptance of the throne by a Danish prince.

It is understood that arrangements are actually being made for a national convention in Norway, and, this, it is believed, will inevitably result in the declaration of a republic. According to well informed persons here, Russia and Germany will refuse to recognize the Norwegian government until King Oscar consents to the disruption of the union. Strong efforts are being made to secure similar action by other governments, including that of Denmark and it is stated that these efforts are meeting with encouragement.

The Norwegian press and people according to advices received here remain singularly undemonstrative.

Premier Michelsen wants no demonstrations and refused to permit a large procession of Christianians in approval of the action of the storthing. In refusing the premier said:

"It is too early to claim a victory, which has not yet been definitely gained. Our most serious difficulties are probably ahead."

Thousands of telegrams from all parts of the world are pouring in on Premier Michelsen and the storthing, many of them coming from the United States and South Africa.

King Oscar is quoted as saying that he would avoid war at any cost. Officials here say that the king and the crown prince had been fully prepared for the action of the storthing by Premier Michelsen, who informed them prior to his majesty's veto of the consular bill as to what steps Norway intended to take.

MORTON TALKS OF REORGANIZATION

In Connection With Equitable Policy Holders to Be First.

New York, June 10.—Paul Morton, the newly-elected chairman of the board of directors of the Equitable Life Assurance society, said today that in his plans for the reorganization of the society he intends to consider first of all the interests of the policy holders.

"You can say for me," said Mr. Morton, "that my watchword in my connection with the Equitable Life Assurance society will be 'For the best interest of the policy holders.' I do not propose to reflect in anyway on the former management. I simply take matters as I find them and shall give all my efforts to carrying on the society in the proper way. The interests of the policy holders are the greatest interests and it would seem to me that no policy leaving this fact out of consideration, can succeed."

Mr. Morton was then asked whether Mr. Cleveland had agreed to act as a trustee.

"I really don't know as to that," said he. "In fact, I don't believe anyone knows what decision Mr. Cleveland has reached. I hope he will accept.

Continuing, Mr. Morton said: "I fully appreciate the honor that has been done me by the directors of the Equitable in selecting me to act as their chairman. I can only say that I shall do everything in my power to administer the affairs of the society in such a way as to preserve the fullest confidence of the policy holders and public generally."

Mr. Morton expects to leave for Washington tonight.

George Westinghouse announced today that he had accepted the trusteeship of Equitable stock offered him by Thomas F. Ryan. Justice Morgan J. O'Brien also has agreed to act as trustee.

KING LEAVES LONDON FOR SPAIN

London, June 10.—King Alfonso left London for Spain this morning. He apparently thoroughly enjoyed his visit and the character of the farewells testified to the cordiality of the feelings of the host and guest. King Edward, the prince of Wales and the duke of Connaught accompanied the Spanish king to the railway station, where he met the Spanish ambassador, Senor Polo De Bernabe, the rest of the Spanish embassy, Foreign Secretary Lansdowne and others. King Edward entered the royal car with his guest and engaged in a few minutes earnest conversation with him. As the train moved away King Alfonso stood at a window waving farewells to the members of the British royal family, who stood bareheaded until the Spanish king had disappeared from their sight.

PATRICK NOT DISTURBED

By the Decision of the Court of Appeals.

Ossining, N. Y., June 10.—Albert T. Patrick was informed today in his cell in Sing Sing prison of the decision of the New York state court of appeals sustaining a judgment of conviction of murder in the first degree in causing the death of William Marsh Rice, the aged millionaire in 1900. The warden said the news did not seem to have the slightest effect on Patrick's appetite or spirits. He was not only cool, but was even cheerful, and did not appear to think the court's decision was by any means final. He told the warden that he intended to have a reargument of the case and that a motion for a new trial would be made to the appellate division and probably also to the court of appeals. The action, he said, would be based on the ground of newly discovered evidence and errors at the former trial.

CURFEW

For Husbands and Buffalo Wives as Vigilantes.

Buffalo, N. Y., June 10.—The good housewives of the East side have organized a vigilance committee to enforce more rigidly the laws pertaining to staying out late nights, and yesterday morning Mrs. Andrew Betka, a woman past 60, tottered into the eighth precinct station with her husband by the ear. She deposited him in one corner of the room and then said he had gone out the night before and had just come home, and as she was president of the society she thought it was her duty to make an example of her husband. Justice Vannatter allowed the man to go on suspended sentence, with a promise to stay at home nights in future.

NOTE OF PRESIDENT PROVES EFFECTIVE

Proposition From United States Meets Approval of Powers.

Washington Suggested as Place For Peace Conference.

New York, June 10, 9:05 a. m.—The Associated Press has definite knowledge that both the Russian and Japanese governments have accepted President Roosevelt's suggestion and that a meeting of representatives of the two contending powers is assured.

Tokio, June 10, 6 p. m.—Japan has agreed to President Roosevelt's suggestion to appoint plenipotentiaries to meet Russian plenipotentiaries.

St. Petersburg, June 10.—It was stated at the foreign office this afternoon, that Russia is ready to appoint representatives to hear the Japanese proposals, on being informed that Japan is nominating representatives for this purpose.

Washington, June 10.—From an authoritative official source, it is learned today that it has been practically determined that the plenipotentiaries of Japan and Russia for the determination of peace terms will hold their sessions in Washington.

A BILLION DOLLARS

Estimated Amount Japs Will Ask as Indemnity.

London, June 10, 12:40 p. m.—The keenest interest is manifested in President Roosevelt's note endeavoring to bring Japan and Russia to an understanding. While the British government is not taking any part in the negotiations, it is giving the most cordial support to the president of whose actions in the matter it has been kept fully informed. Diplomatic and official circles speak in the highest terms of the diplomatic manner in which the president handled the matter and are fully in accord with what they consider to be the only way in which the difficulty could be overcome. The United States not being entangled in any way was really the only country which could take action, but even President Roosevelt could not do more than endeavor to start direct negotiations between the belligerents. Japan, it can be stated, refused to start the negotiations until fully assured of the earnestness of Russia and that her proposals would be seriously considered. Her demands will include an indemnity, the amount of which has been fixed by the Japanese government, and on this point the president is urging lenient treatment. It is considered here that Japan is entitled to an indemnity and it is pointed out that while the payment of an indemnity might affect the standing of Russia among the powers it is not so serious as the loss of territory, beside the payment of an indemnity would be forgotten sooner than the loss of territory and would leave no feeling for revenge. Financial circles in London are of the opinion that the Japanese will demand an indemnity of about $1,000,000,000, that being their estimate of the cost to the Japanese of the sixteen months fighting. This is considered in some quarters to be too large an estimate of the expenditure, which is thought to be nearer $600,000,000.

EARLY PEACE

Is Now Confidently Expected By the Germans.

Berlin, June 10.—The text of President Roosevelt's message on the subject of peace to the governments of Russia and Japan is regarded at the foreign office here as admirable in spirit and phrasing, and positive hope now exists of comparatively early peace. The Russian emperor, in fact, invited the action of the president, and had much to do with the form that the president's representations took. Emperor Nicholas, through the council of powerful personal influences in Russia, became disposed toward peace some days in advance of the president's action. It was recognized at the Russian court, and at this court also, that no man in the world could so well make an appeal for peace as President Roosevelt. His known views, the detachment of the United States from the European system, and the good will Japan feels toward the United States, made the president the solitary statesman who could take such a step without either side distrusting him or feeling annoyed by his solicitude. The conviction here is that Russia is now ready for peace, and seeks peace, and that the only difficulties not insurmountable by negotiation which might arise lie in the Japanese government's intentions and

EMPTY BOAT FOUND DRIFTING IN LAKE

Occupant Probably Sought Death By Chloroform and Drowning.

Boat Was Rented By Harry Allen, a Lithographer.

After drinking a two-ounce bottle of chloroform, Harry Allen, a lithographer, formerly employed by the Duluth Lithographing & Printing company, is believed to have committed suicide by jumping into the lake from an open boat.

The tragedy was first discovered by Capt. Lewis of the steamer Bradshaw. On the trip of the Bradshaw down the lake Wednesday an open boat was sighted in the lake. The steamer drew up alongside of it and the boat was lifted aboard.

In it the crew found an empty two-ounce chloroform bottle, a bunch of keys and 80 cents in silver. In addition there was found a copy of a Duluth paper bearing the date of May 7, on which there was crawled a note, stating that the boat belonged to the boatman at Billings Park, Superior, and the keys to Charles Scott, a sign painter at 209 West First street. No name was signed to the note.

As soon as the steamer reached the next port, Capt. Lewis wrote an account of the affair to the office of the Booth line in Duluth. The letter was received this morning and turned over to the police.

Inquiries were made by the police, and Mr. Scott, the owner of the keys, was able to give the name of the missing man. He stated that the writer of the note was Harry Allen, a lithofirapher, who had worked for the Duluth Lithographing and Printing company.

Inquiries were also made of the boat owner, and it was found that a man answering to Allen's description had taken out a boat last Wednesday and had not returned it.

Very little is known of Allen. He was a very quiet and reserved man, and, apparently, had few intimate friends here. He told one of the men working with him that he had a brother in Texas whom he intended to go and visit.

It is just possible that Allen did not commit suicide but chose this method of getting away from the city and leaving no trace behind him, although no reason can be found for an act of that nature. He might have rented the boat, written the note, thrown in the empty chloroform bottle, and pushed the boat out into the lake from the shore of Park Point. There was a southwest wind on Wednesday and the boat might easily have drifted out twenty miles by the time the Bradshaw overtook it.

If Allen did commit suicide in the manner which would appear to be the case, it is not likely that he was far from the shore of Park Point when it happened, or the act may have been committed within the harbor, the current carrying the boat out through the Superior entry.

If Allen was planning the act, it is difficult to see why he chose such a difficult method. He evidently wished to make sure of being successful, or else drank the chloroform to make the death by drowning easier. The supposition is that he drank the chloroform, and when he felt the stupor stealing over him, jumped into the lake.

No trace of the body has been discovered, and no search can be made, as the act may have been committed anywhere within ten miles of the end of the lake, if it was committed at all.

SECULAR SHOTS AT PULPIT.

Chicago Record-Herald: A Wisconsin preacher is to get a raise of salary because he has become the father of twins. This, together with the proposition to tax Wisconsin bachelors, would seem to indicate that the center of population ought, in the natural course of events, to establish itself somewhere in the Badger state.

Springfield Republican: Justice Harlan's enthusiasm for his proposed Presbyterian cathedral in Washington is not shared so very much by the Presbyterian general assembly, now in session. Strong opposition has developed. It would be surprising did it not. Grandoise and possibly admirable as the scheme is, it scarcely jibes with Presbyterian traditions.

Washington Post: The Reformed Presbyterians of Pittsburg have expelled a member who accepted a nomination for congress on the Prohibition ticket, a rule of the church prohibiting its members from going into politics. The accused man should be able to prove that a man who runs for office on the Prohibition ticket in Pittsburg does not go into politics.

Brooklyn Eagle: A Manhattan missionary—they need missionaries in Manhattan—has secured the services of a reformed mayor, a reformed barkeeper, a reformed gambler, a reformed prize fighter, a reformed policeman, a reformed burglar and a reformed district attorney. But among the clergymen who are to appear with these interesting orators not one appears to be "reformed."

Portland Oregonian: Three Sisters of Charity set sail a few days ago from Vancouver, B. C., for Kimantu, Japan, where there is a large colony of lepers, there to minister to the afflicted until death from this most repulsive of all diseases gives them release. The act is one of utter self-abnegation and ultimate self-destruction, and can hardly be accounted praiseworthy, unless deliberate suicide for a special end can be so considered. Against such self-sacrifice is opposed the theory—of fact—that no human being has a right to do anything premeditatedly that will shorten his or her life. These lepers are beyond all possibility of help, except of the most temporary kind. It is a tremendous stretch of duty that requires untainted persons to give this help with the certainty of acquiring a disease at once the most loathsome, lingering and hopeless of any that afflicts mankind. The most devoted humanitarian can hardly approve such an act with approval, even though he may exalt the motives that prompt it.

CONFERENCE HELD

With New Missionaries of Presbyterian Church.

New York, June 10.—For the eighth successive year there has just been held here a conference with the newly appointed missionaries of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, practically all of the board's fifty-three new missionaries being in attendance. These young workers start for the mission fields during the next few weeks. The conference, like those of former years, was in effect a training class, in which the young people had the advantage of the advice and admonition of the officials of the board under which they are to work. Sessions were held for seven days, and the topics discussed included almost every phase of the work and life of the missionary, speakers being the secretaries of the board and others old in missionary experience.

The fifty-three missionaries appointed this year by the Presbyterian board are assigned to different countries. Four go to West Africa, eighteen to China, five to India, four to Japan, four to Korea, two to Persia, six to the Philippines, four to Siam, two to South America and two to Syria. Two are as yet unassigned. Twenty-one of the new missionaries are men and thirty-two women. Three of the women and four of the men are physicians. Practically all of these recruits for the foreign mission field are newly graduated from American educational institutions. Universities and colleges represented by them include: Amherst, Michigan, Women's of Baltimore, Wittenberg, Columbia, California, Park, Wooster, Hanover, Wellesley, Occidental, Coe, Syracuse, Oberlin, Bryn Mawr, Blairsville, Minnesota, Ontario, Kansas and Pennsylvania. Theological seminaries represented are Princeton, Western, McCormick and Auburn.

Rev. W. C. Dodd, who is stationed as a missionary in the Laos country, north of Siam, under the Presbyterian foreign board, has sent to friends here a report of an interview he recently had with Kun Tum, a native-chief at the head of eight villages. Kun Tum talks of the native religion and says that his people do not worship ghosts and spirits, as do many of the Siamese, but that they believe in one God, who inhabits the ethereal expanse. He is creator of all, including the human race. According to this religion, the original man and woman had three sons. The oldest was ancestor of the Asiatic people. The second took to wife a monkey and was ancestor of the white race, which is consequently active, energetic and cunning; too much for their other brethren. The youngest son was ancestor of the black race.

All the brothers originally worshiped God and had a book from him. The belief is that the white brother and his family were bad and were sent away from the others, taking the Book with them. Other writings were revealed to those who remained, but most of the revelations have been destroyed. To the people of Kun Tum was given two great pillars of stone. These they were instructed to protect and preserve. They were also instructed to keep allen people out of their country, but were told in a revelation to submit to the British. The stone pillars are to be guarded until God appears in human form. This they expect soon to occur. The ancient legend, told thus briefly, fits well with the return of the white race with a Book, the Bible; and this native chief says that he and many others wait to see how it shall fare with those who have become Christians, in order that they may judge whether the religion with a Book is really their primeval religion, and the book the one taken from them so long ago.

MANUFACTURING IN NORTH STAR STATE

Capacity of the Present Plants Inadequate to Meet the Demand.

By C. J. Whellams, Secretary of Northwestern Manufacturers' Association.

Much has been heard, much has been writen and much more will be said and written of the resources of Minnesota, which is today one of the most progressive states in the Union. With the extension of the rapid settlement of the Northwest and the extension of the railorad to the Pacific ocean, Minnesota opened up a home market and created a demand for goods to such an extent that the capacity of the present manufacturing plants situated in the state is not adequate to meet the demand. This is evidenced by the huge volume of business annually done by the jobbing houses of the Twin Cities and Duluth, representing outside industries and which sell almost every article of manufacture throughout the state, the Northwestern states and Canada, their sales running into many millions of dollars yearly, with the trade incerasing from 10 per cent to 25 per cent annually in some lines of goods.

A manufacturer looking for a desirable state in which to commence business or establish a branch of his industry, will at once realize that he can better reach the markets of the Northwestern states and Canadian Northwest, from Minnesota than from the older states and save the cost of freight on his manufactured product. The master craftsman when seeking a location in which to commence business, makes his choice of the state and locality in the state that in his judgment best meets his requirements, as to freight rates, railroad facilities, rents, taxes, population, agricultural resources, and then figures, will manufacturing pay?

The territory west, through to the Pacific coast, comprises an empire, the consuming facilities of which will grow to great proportions. That region is tributary to this state. The raw material obtainable in Minnesota is diversified and extensive and waterpower is aboundant. Its proximity to Lake Superior ports means cheap coal. The manufacturing industry in this state is rapidly increasing.

The average man hardly appreciates the prospects before the Northwest as a whole, and as stated, Minnesota occupies, with reference to the regions north, west and southwest, a decidedly favorable position. The general basis of local and interstate rates to and from points in Minnesota is as favorable as any in effect in any state of a corresponding population, and at all times a manufacturer will find railroads not only willing, but glad to so adjust their transportation charges as to permit manufacturers within this state to compete with those located outside the state.

When one remembers that the state of Minnesota, a few decades since, was a frontier state, and that it now ranks twelfth among all the big states of the country in the product of its manufacturing industries; tenth in car building, eleventh in manufacture of boots and shoes, ninth in printing, and sixth in manufacture of butter and cheese, one is apt to pause and wonder where is Minnesota's market.

Our national market, known as the Middle and the Pacific Northwest, which is tributary to every merchant and manufacturer located in Minnesota, contains a population of 9,268,576, and an area of 913,835 square miles. Add to this the great area of the Canadian Northwest, which will be readily accessible to this state when reciprocity is obtained, (and it will be obtained ere long), then when all the unoccupied acres of this immense empire shall have been filled with a thriving and prosperous farming population, the demand for manufactured and mercantile products will have multiplied in almost geometrical progression.

WHERE TO LOCATE?

This is a question hard for me to answer and be impartial, as each city and town in Minnesota has so many inducements and charms, particularly their own, as shown in the following extracts from a few of the numerous letters sent to me:

The opportunities for manufacturing industries in St. Paul, Minneapolis and Duluth are so numerous and immense that it is impossible to do justice to them in this synopsis, of "Manufacturing Opportunities in Minnesota," in the limited space at my command.

The Winona board of trade says: "Winona has advantages as a place for manufacturing, cheap help, no labor troubles, surrounded with a timber district of pine and hardwood and good railroad facilities. The citizens have a disposition to encourage manufacturers of all kinds. Within the last five years over $2,000,000 have been invested in manufacturing propositions of different kinds."

The mayor of Stillwater says: "Stillwater has excellent transportation facilities both by railroad and water and cheap electric power. Our citizens are at all times ready to back a deserving enterprise with their good dollars. While we offer nothing in the line of a bonus, we have a large amount of Stillwater money, ready to be invested with the right parles in legittimate industries."

The Merchants Progressive league of Crookston says: "Seven railroad lines run out of Crookston. The citizens of Crookston will make liberal inducements to good and legitimate industries."

The Civic Improvement asociation of St. Cloud says: "Good water power is offered and by the building of a third dam, power will be almost unlimited." The mayor of New Ulm says: "This would be a good locality for a paper mill, that would make straw paper. A legitimate manufacturer with some capital would be assisted by our citizens."

The Austin Progressive league says: "We have special clay deposits which will make paving brick, excellent dry pressed face brick, common builders' brick, tile and also pottery. The citizens are willing to take off their coats and pitch in to help the development of these immense deposits."

Much has been said and much has been written of Minnesota's resources, but the tale is still untold. Those who come and see for themselves can finish the story. C. J. WHELLAMS, Secretary, Northwestern Manufacturers' Association.

TEN YEARS IN JAIL

Sentence Given to the Milwaukee Defaulter F. G. Bigelow.

Pleaded Guilty to All the Charges Brought Against Him.

Milwaukee, June 10.—Frank G. Bigelow, the defaulting bank president this afternoon, pleaded guilty to an indictment of ten counts returned by the federal grand jury charging violation of the national banking laws and was sentenced by Judge Quarles to a concurrent sentence of ten years at hard labor in the federal penitentiary at Fort Leavenworth, Kas. The sentence to date from noon today. Bigelow at 2 o'clock entered the court room in the federal building walking between the United States district attorney and his son-in-law, Arthur McGoch and at once took a seat at one of the long tables facing the court. Eleven minutes later Judge Quarles entered the court room.

United States District Attorney Butterfield at once made an announcement that an indictment, containing ten counts had been returned by the federal grand jury against Frank G. Bigelow, all of which were for violations of the national banking laws. Mr. Bigelow stated that he wished to waive examination and plead guilty to all the counts contained in the indictment. District Attorney Butterfield addressed the court, stating that he did not believe the law in any case looks toward the meting out of vengeance, but that the law seeks to have justice done. He stated that the minimum sentence in this case was five years, and the maximum ten years, on each count. It seemed to him that in simple justice, in vindication of the law, a maximum setence on one count should be administered in this case.

Judge Quarles expressed profound sorrow at the stern duty with which he was confronted, but a public officer should not shrink from his plain duty. Suggestions of sympathy, which naturally rise, must be silenced. The case, involving the misapplication of funds of a bank was a most serious one. The crime charged was not only a gross violation, but tended to destroy confidence. The court could see no palliating circumstances and the ends of justice must be served by the meting out of the extreme penalty. In order to provide against any possibility of an error being established in any of the ten counts, the court said he would pronounce sentence on each count. The sentence imposed will be concurrent and not cumulative. Judge Quarles then pronounced that it was the sentence of the court that Bigelow shall serve ten years at hard labor in the federal penitentiary at Fort Leavenworth, Kas., to begin at noon today.

Mr. Bigelow was evidently prepared for the worst, as he took the sentence coolly. He was immediately turned over to the United States marshal.

Elks Have Departed and Eagles Are About Due.

Convention Heralded as Largest In History of City.

The Elks who have been in the city for two days attending the state convention, have packed their gripsacks and silently taken their departure to the different corners of the state from which they came, and now the Eagles are about due.

The state convention of the Eagles, scheduled for next week, is heralded as the biggest thing in conventions ever held in Duluth, and the estimates of the number of people likely to be brought to the city by the gathering, run all the way from 4,000 to 10,000.

The visitors will not be confined to members of the order in Minnesota. The Eagles in Calumet and other towns through the copper country have secured a very low rate on the boats running to Duluth, and, headed by the famous Calumet & Hecla band, they will come to Duluth about 600 strong.

Special trains will bring in the members of the Twin City lodges. There are over 3,000 Eagles in Minneapolis and St. Paul, and fully one half of them are expected to be attracted to Duluth by the cheap fares which have been offered by the railroads.

Grand Forks and Fargo are also sending in large delegations, and all of the range towns will furnish their quota.

The city will be gaily decorated for the occasion. The local lodge has offered a substantial prize for the best decorated building, and all of the stores, hotels, wholesale houses, restaurants and other business establishments are planning to get out all the flags and bunting they have at their command during the four days the Eagles will be in the city.

Elaborate plans have been made for their amusement including entertainments at the Armory and the Lyceum, drives around the boulevard, and a trip on the lake.

The delegates will begin to arrive Wednesday evening and Thursday morning, and by Thursday noon the great majority of them will be in the city. The convention will last 3 days, ending up with a trip on the lake on Sunday.

Cut rates on the railroads can be secured from any city in the state to Duluth and return, and these will doubtless attract a number of outside visitors.

Choir to Take Part In Grand Chorus.

The choir of the First Norwegian Lutheran church of this city will leave this evening over the Great Northern for Northfield, Minn., to partake in the rendition of Handel's greatoratorio, "The Messiah." A grand chorus of about 300 voices assisted by Danz's symphony orchestra of forty-five pieces will be directed by Professor F. Melens Christianson of St. Olaf college. There will be choirs from Eau Claire, Decorah and Duluth, in addition to the local grand chorus. All the choirs have been drilling persistently on this great work since last fall. The First Lutheran choir of this city has also been invited to sing at the opening session of the annual convention of the United church at Minneapolis, June 14.

BEELS MAKES A GOOD SHOWING WITH JENKINS.

New York, June 10.—In a private gymnasium, before a select crowd of sportsmen, Fred Beels of Wisconsin, and Tom Jenkins of Cleveland, wrestled for $1,000 a side. Beels, of whom little was known, wrestled the old champion to a standstill, and then threw him after a struggle lasting two hours and forty-three minutes. Jenkins eventually won the match through superior weight, but declared, when it was over, that Beels was the hardest opponent for his size and weight that he had ever met.

ARMISTICE NEXT

Request For Such Action Will Probably Soon Be Made.

The Armies May Have Already Ceased Aggressive Movements.

Washington, June 10.—Officials who have been closely following negotiations conducted by the president to bring about peace between Japan and Russia, expect that the next move will be a request for an armistice, as it is not thought probable that hostilities will continue after plenipotentiaries are named to arrange peace terms. While there are precedents for the continuation of hostilities even after a peace conference has begun it will be unusual and the belief is expressed that both Japan and Russia have already desisted from further aggressive movements even before the suggestion of the president was received. It is thought here that the United States government will be the medium of communication until some diplomatic channel is established.

Tokio, June 10, 6 p. m.—After acknowledging the receipt of President Roosevelt's letter, Minister of Foreign Affairs Komura, in a note to Minister Griscom, the American minister, says the imperial government has given the suggestion of President Roosevelt the serious consideration to which, coming from an important source, it is justly entitled. Minister Komura's note says that Japan, in the interest of the world as well as that of Japan, is willing to re-establish peace with Russia on terms and conditions that will fully guarantee the stability of the imperial government. Therefore Japan will, in response to the suggestion of President Roosevelt, appoint plenipotentiaries to meet the plenipotentiaries of Russia at such time and place as may be found equally agreeable and convenient for the purpose of negotiating and concluding terms of peace directly and exclusively between the two belligerent powers.

RUNS AWAY WITH CHILD

An Illinois Divine Kidnaps His Own Offspring.

Sycamore, Ill., June 10.—Rev. Joseph M. Cormack, pastor of a Methodist church at West McHenry, Ill., who is under indictment on a charge of kidnaping his own child, is said to have fled with the boy to Wisconsin in defiance of the De Kalb county jury and the courts. A court order had given legal custody of the child to Thomas Marshall a wealthy farmer at Charter Grove, Ill., and father-in-law of the fleeing pastor. When deputy sheriffs visited West McHenry, twenty miles from here, where the father had taken the boy, both were missing.

Reports have reached the state's attorney that the minister had been seen with the boy at Lake Geneva. Later reports say he has left Lake Geneva, but no one knows where he is. The contest for possession of the child began at his birth in Chicago in 1900. The mother died at that time. The grandfather, Marshall, appealed to the courts and was awarded custody of the child. Ten days ago the father took the boy from a school in Charter Grove and fled in an automobile.

Favor a Republic.

Congratulating the people of Norway and the storthing on the action taken recently in separating from Sweden, the members of Lodge Nortun, No. 16, Sons of Norway, have drafted the following message, which will be sent to the storthing at Christiania:

"Lodge Nortun, No. 16, Sons of Norway, sends its own and on the part of their countrymen in Duluth, their warmest congratulations to you and the Norwegian people with heartiest wishes for the future success of dear old Norway, if possible, under the form of government now enjoyed by her sons on this side of the ocean."

DR. MITCHELL

Again Restores Sight to the Blind.

Having heard of the remarkable case of Mr. Charles Hall of 220 Lake avenue South, Duluth, the reporter called at the office of Dr. O. T. Mitchell at 325 West First street and was so fortunate as to find Mr. Hall there waiting to take his treatment.

Mr. Hall had a great deal of trouble with his eyes, and after treating with some of the best physicians and oculists available, and receiving no benefit, he finally entered a hospital, where he was treated for seven months.

Five months of this time he was kept in a dark room, suffering intense pain continually, except when under the influence of drugs, at the end of which time he was told that his only hope was to have one eye removed.

This operation might result in saving some sight in the other, but there was no certainty that it would.

This he refused to have done.

After leaving the hospital he suffered continuously, having to walk the floor night after night, unable to sleep, until he became so run down both in body and mind that he felt such a life was hardly worth living.

He was entirely blined in one eye and could not recognize his friends when he met them on the street.

While in this hopeless condition a friend told him of Dr. Mitchell, who had cured him of an obstinate chronic disease, and at last he was persuaded to go to Dr. Mitchell as a last resort.

The result has been all that he could desire. Before Mr. Hall had taken three treatments his pain had left him and he could sleep every night.

After he had received eight treatments he could recognize his friends when he met them, and now he can see as well as he ever could with one eye, and the film is so nearly removed from the other that he can read large print.

Any one having trouble of any kind with their eyes should consult Dr. Mitchell at once, for delay is dangerous. Consultation free. Phone 579.

Remember Dr. Mitchell has moved to corner First street and Fourth avenue West.

ENGLISH IN MEXICO.

The increasing use, and knowledge of the English language in Mexico must not be considered by foreigners who propose to do business in Mexico as relieving them from a necessity of knowing Spanish, says Modern Mexico. For those who come in direct contact with the masses in any way the native language is still very essential, and will always be. The amount of English that can be heard by the visitor in the main street of this capital city is apt to be misleading. It is not necessary to journey to the interior of the country to reach a section where English is neither heard nor understood. By walking a few squares either to the right or left, away from the beaten track of the tourist and the foreigner, one readily becomes the Mexico that must be spoken to in Spanish. As this publication has said many times, it is more important that the man who comes to Mexico should know thoroughly his own business than he should have a fluent knowledge of Spanish. Ignorance of his business is quickly detected by those with whom he has to deal, and at once discredits him, yet he may employ the services of an interpreter without offense.

Many people who are not intimately acquainted with conditions in the Spanish islands that have recently come under the control of the United States imagine that they will be readily Americanized. They do not know what a long process is required to change the language and the customs of a race. It will not be done in a generation, nor in many of them. Children born of American parents in Mexico invariably learn to speak Spanish before they do English, and it must naturally follow that local customs are to them more familiar than those of their parents. The new dependencies and the constantly growing trade relation between the United States and Spanish-speaking countries, make it most desirable that the education of the young men of the United States should include a thorough course of Spanish. Many young men in coming years will find a knowledge of Spanish a valuable asset of their stock in trade.

THE TOASTMASTER'S TASK.

"My sympathy goes out to the toastmaster," said one of the best after-dinner speakers in New York, to the New York Sun, in recalling a dinner which he recently attended.

"The toastmaster," he explained, "ought to, and must, know the speakers, but after his list is exhausted there are always others who are to be called upon, the impromptu talkers. It requires good judgment to know how to get them on their feet at the proper moment. A break by the toastmaster will undo all the good of the evening and leave unpleasant recollections.

"The toastmaster not only must keep the reins well in hand, but he must keep a clear head. That means that he must not do much more than look at the cup before him. As the evening wears on the timid become more courageous. Good fellowship is contagious. Men who swore that they never could make a speech ask to be called on.

"The speakers warm up and say the things which are remembered. The toastmaster gives the cue. Necessarily he must be brief. Necessarily, also, he must show versatility. That is where his knowledge of men counts. And as he should know how to get a speaker started, he should, above all, know how to head him off. There is where he plays up his diplomacy.

"After all is over and the participants recall the event on the next day and the day to come the toastmaster is only remembered as such. He is the burnt out taper in the cold dawn of the morning after."

Union Men Out on Bail But Will Tell Nothing.

Philadelphia, June 10.—The forty-one members of the National Structural Iron Workers' and Bridge Builders' union, who were committed to the county prison yesterday in connection with the shooting of William Joyce, a fellow member during a meeting on Thursday night, were today released on $1,000 bail each. Joyce's condition is reported improved today and it is now thought likely he will recover.

The police have been working diligently to learn the facts of the shooting, but neither Joyce nor the forty-one defendants can be induced to divulge the details. They adhere to their original story that the shooting was done by a man named Chetwood, who acted as doorkeeper, but the police have been unable to ascertain his whereabouts.

COMES TO CLOSE

Elks' First Annual Convention Ends With Fine Entertainment.

Members of Order Gratified Over Success of Event.

With a delightful social entertainment at the Armory last evening, the first annual state convention of the B. P. O. E. was brought to a close at 11 o'clock, the hour when all functions of the Elks are formally ended and a toast is drunk to the memory of departed members.

Following the close of the entertainment many of the visitors were escorted to the depot by committees where they left on the late night trains for their homes. Others returned to their hotels to make the return trip today.

The local Elks had left nothing undone to make the entertainment of last evening one to be long remembered, and the visitors were sincere in their praises of the hospitality accorded them throughout the convention and especially for the enjoyment given by the session of last night.

Under the direction of Prof. A. F. M. Custance the Rathskeller minstrels made a great hit, with their songs portraying the good fellowship existing in the order.

Frank Gravel, as Professor Rojenvensky in the palm garden setting, and master of ceremonies, led the old with a company of "German students." They sang the Stein song and "Hey Bill," with a vigor that aroused answering enthusiasm in the audience. "Brown October Ale" was another number that drew evident marks of appreciation, as did the Heidelberg student song by Messrs. Hare, Cleland, McCarthy and Gennaart.

The address of the evening was given by Judge Nethaway of Stillwater, who responded with feeling and eloquence to the toast for departed members. Judge Nethaway eulogized the members of the order who have died in the service of their country and the entire audience, while standing, quaffed the toast in spirit.

Miss Allie Piper and Charles Derrance did a very clever and pleasing vaudeville sketch as Sis Hopkins and company, in which much fun was had at the expense of some of the local Elks.

Perrin Somers furnished a good musical specialty and George Proff and William Wendlundt won much applause with their skillful acrobatic stunts.

John Doran and D. Clark furnished a black face turn that was a winner and they gave a jolly to some of the local Elks that had escaped during the former proceedings.

Over 200 of the Elks and their ladies enjoyed the steamer Newsboy trip yesterday afternoon. The river route to Fond du Lac was taken, the boat returning about 6 o'clock. Despite the fog which was thick at times, the crowd enjoyed every bit of the ride.

On the return to Fifth avenue the Elks formed a procession and marched up to the St. Louis hotel, where Granville Pease of the Anoka Union was seized and placed on the hotel counter and compelled to make a speech. Mr. Pease was willing and his subject, "the splendid reception given by the local Elks," was received with tremendous enthusiasm.

The first annual convention which has just closed here was regarded as a preliminary meeting and the Elks, both visiting and local are well pleased with the success of the affair. They feel confident that a start has been made in the right direction and that the organization is bound to grow stronger and better as the years go by.

"Your majesty: The Augustana synod, in convention assembled, representing the Swedish Lutherans of America, gratefully remembering the many tokens of your majesty's grace, begs to deplore the painful relations which have arisen between the countries of the north; invokes on your majesty's wisdom and strength from God, during this ordeal, prays and hopes that the disturbance may be settled to the weal of the sister nations."

NOT ARRESTED THERE.

Couple Not Apprehended In Boyle's European Hotel.

Last evening The Herald reported the arrest of Marie St. Arnold and Thomas Hall in Boyle's restaurant and European hotel. The report was made upon the record at police headquarters that they were arrested at "Boyle's." James Boyle is greatly incensed at the story, claiming that the arrest was not made in "Boyle's European hotel," which he operates, and demands a retraction.

Boyle's European hotel occupies only the twenty-five feet west of Charles Boyle's saloon, according to Mr. Boyle, and the item was incorrect as saying that the arrest was made there, for it was made in the rooms over the saloon and James Boyle claims to have nothing to do with the management of them.

That the arrest was made in the rooms over the saloon is beyond question. It is common knowledge that they are a place of resort for women and that meals are served in these rooms from James Boyle's restaurant and drinks from Charles Boyle's saloon.

It has also been, for a long time, the belief of many citizens that the constant visiting of this resort by women should and could be broken up by the police.

IS NOT EASY TO WORK OUT

Commission Decides Not to Have Central Hay Inspection Yards.

The railroad and warehouse commission is having troubles enough for two bodies in working out a system for the inspection of hay, and the members sincerely wish the legislators who initiated the law had to work out the system themselves.

"It was announced at the capitol yesterday that the railroad and warehouse commission had practically decided not to establish central yards at Duluth, St. Paul and Minneapolis for the weighing and inspection of hay and straw, provided for by the last legislature. The decision of the commission will not be final until after a conference of hay dealers and representatives of the railroads. This conference is for the purpose of working out the details of the plan.

It is said that the decision of the board is based on the fact that the hay dealers could not agree on the idea of a central yard, and the railroads were unanimously against it. The point has also been raised that a central yard will cause excessive expense.

Members of the commission said today that the plan decided upon is practically the same as the system of grain inspection now in effect.

ATTORNEY BLUNDERED.

Reference to Beef Trust Caused a Rebuke.

Columbus, June 10.—A sensation was created in the United States district court today by Judge Wanty rebuking Former Attorney General Monnett for his remarks regarding the beef trust and corporations in general, while making an argument before the jury in the case of Wilfrid Walker, who sued the Baltimore & Ohio road for $50,000 damages for cutting off both his legs. Monnett said he wished to call attention to the crippled man and the rapacity of corporations, and said that the testimony offered by Walker ought to be taken, even in a beef trust investigation case.

Judge Wanty, in his instructions to the jury, told the jury to decide the case on the testimony offered and not by prejudice against corporations.

"I say this," said the judge, "because of the remarks of the prosecution regarding the beef trust and corporations in general. This case is to be decided upon the evidence and not upon prejudice." Mr. Monnett lost the case.

POSTUM

SOME NEW CAVES.

By a recent discovery by C. H. Deutschman in Ross Park, which rears its summit above the clouds overhanging the Selkirk range of the Canadian Rockies, the famous Mammoth Cave of Kentucky may be entirely eclipsed, says the Brooklyn Eagle. Although the investigation so far has been entirely superficial, enough has been discovered to give rise to the belief that the series of caverns are the most extensive in the world. In many respects they resemble in natural form the catacombs of the Romans. There are known to be four entrances to these wonderful caves, but it has not yet been ascertained whether or not they are connected. Thus far only the entrances have been explored to a distance of three or four hundred feet. Some of the chambers appear to be from 100 to 150 feet high and from 6 to 12 feet in width.

A man from Revelstoke who visited the caves says that the vast entrances lead in different directions, but owing to the formation of ice it was impossible to proceed along these entrances to any distance without proper equipment. He and his companions succeeded, however, in exploring an entrance further up the valley into which they proceeded about a quarter of a mile, when once again they were stopped by the ice. The floor of the cave declines from the entrance about fifteen feet in every hundred. The ceiling seems to be of polished marble, and the walls glisten from the light of the torches, reflecting many fantastic shades and colors. In describing his journey in the cave the explorer says:

"From the entrance, which is somewhat narrow at first, to the end of our research we picked our way carefully along the limestone floor, avoiding the immense buttresses which project at almost regular intervals. These natural buttresses stand out in bold relief like the pylons of an ancient Egyptian temple, forming with the wall a succession of smaller caves, resembling a great cathedral with its supporting cluster of pillars. The second cavern which we visited was fully 100 feet wide and about 200 feet long and seemed to be connected with at least two other caves. We advanced only a short distance into the entrance from the walls of which we found carbonate of lime hanging like a beautiful and delicate drapery and from the roof were suspended smaller stalactites. At different points there were entrances into other caves, none of which have been as yet explored.

These caves are situated five and a half miles west of the Great Glacier. The cave is about two miles in a northwesterly direction from Ross Peak. The ascent is not a difficult one, the altitude being about 2,000 feet above the railway tracks and an hour's walk from the station. From the basin to the surrounding peak is an easy climb and when the summit is attained it is said that the grandeur of the scene is unsurpassed. The Selkirks, being in a region of heavy precipitation, are clothed in a magnificent forest growth, there are tumbling cascades on every hand, while snow-capped peaks dot the landscape thickly.

FRANCE'S ART TREASURES.

The French prefects have received instructions to make inventories of the art treasures of all the prefectures, says the New York Sun. The exact value of these is unknown, but it is immense, and has been computed at $400,000,000, reckoning only the reliquaries, pictures, tapestries and things of like kind. If the statues, altars, stained glass windows, etc., are included, it is estimated that the figure will reach $1,200,000,000. The treasures in one small church in the department of Aveyron, which were on view at the exposition in 1900, drew an offer of $6,200,000 from a syndicate. At Beauvais the tapestry in one room in the bishop's palace is worth $60,000. The Rheims cathedral has one reliquary worth $40,000. The present duke of Norfolk's father offered $800,000 for the chausable and stole of Becket, which are preserved in Paris.

TAFT'S CLASSMATES.

Another of the class of '78, Yale, has been taken care of by Secretary Taft, says the Brooklyn Eagle. Paul Charleton, who was a member of the graduating class at Old Eli in that year, has been made law officer of the bureau of insular affairs of the war department, at a salary of $4,500 a year, to succeed Judge Magoon, who is now a member of the Panama canal commission.

"Nobody could be a member of the class of '78 at Yale without being a better man for his experience," remarked Secretary Taft recently as he announced the appointment of Charleton.

"What was your class at Yale, Mr. Secretary?" some asked.

"'78," proudly replied the rotund official.

It looks a shough the president and Secretary Taft were running a race to see which can take care of the greatest number of proteges. The president is looking out for the unemployed Rough Riders, providing then with consulships, clerkships and miscellaneous jobs, while Secretary Taft is offering good places in his department to his old classmates. The other day the president ordered one of his Rough Rider comrades appointed as superintendent of dumps on the Panama canal.

EXPENSIVE COLLECTION.

The methods employed by the government to meet out justice to violators of the federal law oftentimes are involved and also expensive, says the Brooklyn Eagle. A case in point has just occurred, where the government spent nearly $4,000 to secure the punishment of two offenders who had defrauded Uncle Sam of one-fiftieth of this amount. Even after all this outlay, the guilty ones escaped.

When the First Texas regiment came up to Manassas last summer to take part in the third battle of Bull Run, a first lieutenant and a second lieutenant of one of the companies found they couldn't make the trip. A couple of their friends were substituted and made use of the names of the absentees, each drawing from the government the sum of $86 for military service during the maneuvers. After the amateur warriors had departed for their Texas homes, the fraud was discovered. The United States district attorney at Richmond endeavored to have the two officers indicted for conspiracy to defraud the government. The auditors of the treasury department were summoned to produce the forged pay vouchers, and a number of witnesses were brought all the way from Texas. A long and expensive fight was precipitated, and finally the grand jury refused to return a true bill against the officers. The government's expenses footed up exactly $3,800.

PLAIN CLOTHES MEN.

In a small South American state, which had recently undergone a change of administration, the new potentate, says the Youth's Companion, summoned an artist and ordered new designs for all the official uniforms.

"I wish showy costumes—very showy," he said, "for the people are impressed with them. I have here some sketches that I myself have made. Look them over and be guided by these ideas as far as possible."

The artist examined the sketches carefully.

"This," he said, turning the pages, "is evidently for the navy and this for the army; but, if you please, what is this—a long plume on a three-cornered hat, yellow dress coat, trimmed with purple, and—

"That," replied the chief of state, gravely, "is for the secret police."

A DANGEROUS EXPERIMENT

By Michael O'Meara.

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

"Well, I have no patience with gambling in any form, believe that nothing but evil ever came of it and am thankful beyond expression that none of my people ever indulged in it. I never could spend a dollar won in a game of chance."

The speaker rose with regal grace, and moved away from the group, the train of her rich gown sweeping behind her. Her husband rose with courtly dignity and moved after her. The conversation had turned upon speculation and gambling and some rare incidents of wonderful luck had been cited. Mrs. Courtney had closed the subject with the above remark and the group separated.

"Lucky that she married such a model as Col. Courtney," I remarked to Major Freeman, who stood next me. "Now I don't suppose the colonel ever handled a card or put a dollar on a card or a number or even on a horse."

"Oh, I don't know," replied the major and into his genial eye there came a twinkle which I had learned was the precursor of a delicious tit-bit in the way of a story or reminiscence. "Come into the smoking room and I'll tell you a bit of sub rosa history."

I went willingly and presently we were seated in a cozy nook surrounded by a cloud of fragrant smoke, through which we could see through the open door the gay panorama in the drawing rooms.

"Away back before the war when Courtney and I were both young bucks—and he was some years younger than I, an incident happened here in Washington one night which beats any story told out there just now and which would interest Mollie Courtney mightily if she should hear it. The great gambling house of that time was Pendleton's up on Capitol Hill. It was frequented by the most distinguished men of the nation and there were some pretty stiff games pulled off—for those days. Of course, nothing like these modern millionaires go in for, drat 'em. Many's the time I've seen Zach Chandler and Toombs and fellows like that in there playing away all night long.

"Well, Courtney came down from one of the New England states as secretary for some congressman. He was a most lovable lad, frank, manly and sincere and everybody liked him. He was, however, in a most unhappy frame of mind. He was deeply in love with Mollie Putnam and a cruel fate interposed between them, in the dual shape of poverty on his part and a stern papa on hers, who required that the suitor to whom he confided his daughter should have an assured and adequate income. Of course Courtney and Mollie talked knowingly and indignantly about love in a cottage and fighting the battles of life together and all that sort of rot, but it didn't go with old man Putnam—not by a jugful. He wanted to know just where the money was to come from and how much there was of it. Well Courtney was offered an opportunity to buy into a fine business which would have put him in just the position the old man required. But it would cost $4,000, and Courtney had about as much of a way to raise four thousand as he did to find Aladdin's lamp in his bedroom. So he took the chance to come to Washington in the hope that he might form acquaintances who would put him in the way of making some quick and easy money floating about in those days—leastwise any that was clean and Courtney was above handling dirty money. So the lad was as far as ever from his goal.

"Courtney used to drop into Pendleton's once in a while when he was detained at work in the evening. He never played but he liked to watch the games and to meet the fellows who gathered there. I used to go pretty regularly—yes by George, and play as hard as my income would stand, harder, by George, most of the time.

"One night Courtney came in and stood watching a poker game that was pretty stiff. Several senators were playing and two persons whom you might call lobbyists, one of them a fellow named Brown, from the West—a fellow with scads of money who was here to get some sort of a land bill through. They had been playing for some time at a gait very strong in those days. Brown had been winning heavily and had a pile of chips in front of him which represented something like $15,000. Just as a hand was being dealt he was called to the door to see a man on a matter of importance.

"'Sit in Courtney and play my hand,' he said. 'I won't be gone ten minutes. I'll give you half you make and stand losses myself.'

Courtney had done this before under similar conditions and the very fact that he never played himself served as a reason for the players to force him in as a sort of joke. Then he was ultra careful and perfectly safe not to lose anything to speak of. In fact, it frightened him so to be playing some other fellow's money that his entire purpose seemed to be concentrated on keeping out of taking any risk.

"So Courtney sat down and picked up the cards. I happened not to be playing and stood on the opposite side of the table watching the game. As he sat down I caught his eye and there was in it an expression of determination such as I have never seen before or since—and by George, I saw some wicked eyes in the sixties, sir. The play went around and Courtney stayed and when one of the senators bet a hundred, tried to call it but got whip-sawed and dropped out, throwing down his cards. He had queens up and the senator who won the pot did it on a pair of kings, as he showed Courtney in great glee.

"'I know it,' replied Courtney, blushing painfully, 'but I can't help it. They didn't look worth two hundred to me.'

Everybody laughed and the cards were dealt. There were six in the game and Courtney was next to the last man before the dealer. The first fellow put in his ante of a dollar, the second followed, Courtney, who had shut his hand together with a snap after glancing at it, reached over with trembling fingers and put in a hundred dollar chip and a dollar one. The next player calmly raised it five hundred and the the next one who was the other lobbyist, calmly raised that a thousand. The other three dropped out and Courtney, without hesitation, shoved in fifteen hundred and another thousand on that. The senator next dropped out. The lobbyist put in a thousand and the cards were drawn. Courtney drew two. The lobbyist stood pat. Courtney looked at him anxiously and grabbed up his two cards eagerly. A child-like smile overspread his face. It was his bet. He threw in a thousand. The lobbyist raised it $5,000. Courtney bent eagerly forward and swept Brown's entire pile into the center of the table. A gasp of surprise went around the table. There was over $25,000 on the table. The lobbyist looked at Courtney with cold, gray eyes. Courtney's face was twitching violently.

"'Table stakes,' he cried. 'That's all the chips I have.'

"The lobbyist turned a sickly pale and dropped his hand.

"'Not for me,' he said.

Courtney reached forward convulsively and gathered in the chips. At the same time he threw down his cards. In his haste they slipped and turned right side up. Everybody bent forward to see them.

"There was not a count in his hand—not even a pair.

"With a groan the lobbyist rose and threw down his hand. He had three kings.

"And it was out of this pot that Courtney got the $4,000 that put him into business and enabled him to marry the beautiful Mollie—and which incidentally formed the basis of his present great fortune. Of course Mrs. Courtney disapproves of gambling and, incidentally I'll wage her dignified husband agrees with her. But you know at that time he needed the money."

QUEER BOOK BUYERS.

"You would be surprised at some of the requests we have from women," said a clerk in a Broadway book store to the New York Sun. "There is one woman who comes in here frequently to look over the paper backed novels and after she has selected what she wants in the cheapest sort of reading matter she gives us an order to have them bound for her in expensive volumes. She explained to me one day that her husband did not approve of her reading paper backs, but that he did not know the difference if they were well bound. 'He simply thinks that all trash is paper backed,' she said.

"Many persons purchase 'dummies' to fill up their libraries, and still another woman insists on buying all the books she can discover that are bound in the tones of red or maroon. It seems her library is one in red and she wants the color scheme carried out regardless."

KING'S SIMPLE LIFE.

The habits of no other monarch are more simple than those of the king of the Belgians, says the Kansas City Journal. His majesty rises at 6 o'clock and works for a couple of hours before breakfast, a meal which consists of coarse, dry bread, tea and an apple. The morning is spent in the transaction of state business. Luncheon is of homely fare. The king usually drinks filtered water, rarely wine. He takes outdoor exercise in the afternoon. Dinner is a plain meal, for the king is fond of simple joints.

AN EXTREME PENALTY.

"Justice David J. Brewer," said a Philadelphian in the New York Tribune, "made an address not long ago at Haverford. After this address there was an informal little reception, and very interesting it was to hear the justice talk. A Haverford boy said to the learned man during a lull in the conversation:

"'Will you please tell me, sir, what is the extreme penalty for bigamy?'

"Justice Brewer smiled and answered:

"'Two mothers-in-law.'"

QUESTION COMES BEFORE VOTERS

Problem Upon Which They Are to Express Their Desire.

J. L. Washburn Explains Proposition That Will Be Submitted.

In response to a request from The Herald for a statement concerning the question to be submitted at the coming school building as to using the proceeds of the bonds voted a year ago for the construction of a grade school building Director Washburn of the school board made substantially the following statement:

"I am very willing to try to outline the situation for The Herald for the better the matter is understood by the people, the better it will please the board.

"My service on the school board began about four years ago. The matter of a manual training and gymnasium building was even then a live question and there was not then nor was there until after the school election last year, any talk of building it anywhere else but on the high school grounds, and I understand that even as far back as when the high school building was constructed, there was some talk that some day some such building would have to be built there. It came to be in a way a matter that was not controverted that when such a building was constructed it would be there.

"The high school building had been put upon the site of the Washington school, which was torn down to make way for it. A part of the Washington school had been installed in the high school building and a part in what is now known as the Washington building across the avenue.

"During the last few years the number of these grade schools in the high school building has been increased until the greater part of the Washington school is now in the high school building and more room is still demanded.

"Some three or four years ago plans were prepared for a manual training and gymnasium building on the northwest corner of the high school grounds. The plan did not seem to meet the demands and required more money than the board then felt disposed to expend. The matter continued to be before the board at intervals and like buildings elsewhere were examined. The reasons for removing the manual training department from the high school building seemed strongly persuasive, and I am one of those who has believed that it should be removed. The department creates noise and disturbs several school rooms in other parts of the building; it very materially increases the cost of isurance. It was strongly urged that it required more space. We all believed that a building for such a purpose could be constructed for much less than a grade school building would cost, and that we could save money by moving the department out, and with it the chemical laboratory, and by this means make room for more grade schools.

"Upon this intended policy, the matter of bonds for the construction of this and other buildings, was submitted to the voters at the last annual election, and the bonds were voted. The smallest amount of bonds that it was thought it was possible to get along with was asked for. The amount of bonds voted was $125,000. With this money, aided possibly by the ordinary receipts from the building fund, the board expected to be able to construct the manual training building, the building at Hunter's Park and a new school building in West Duluth.

"When the plans were secured for the building to be constructed on the high school grounds, an excessive expense was found to be necessary if the building was to be constructed in conformity with the High School building, and the best bids that could be obtained were substantially 50 per cent higher than the architect's estimate. It was found that stone to at all match the stone in the High School building, laid down on the ground, would cost in round numbers, $25,000 and it proved to be exceedingly difficult to get stone that would exactly match the stone in the High School, because the quarry from which that stone had been obtained was no longer in operation.

"On account of the excessive cost, the board unanimopsiy voted not to put the building there. The board, knowing that there must be either a grade school building or a manual training building in the central part of the city, acquired a piece of ground, at an opportune time, on the upper side of Third street, diagonally across from the High School building, and had another set of plans drawn for a building there, utilizing to some extent the work that had been done in the digesting of plans for a building on the high school grounds. The effort which the board made was for plans for a building at that place, unfinished in part, more in the nature of a shop, yet with sufficient ornamentation to be unobjectionable as a building in that portion of the city; but the bids on these plans and on the plans as they were such that the board finally rejected all of the bids.

"At this point another movement was instituted, partly by certain employes of the school district, for making radical changes in the basement of the high school building and on the first floor of the Third street wing, moving the manual training department into the basement and first floor of that wing. This necessitated radical changes in the heating plant and in certain rooms in the basement.

"This plan suggested the abrogation of a manual training building, at least for the present, and the construction, instead, of a grade school building in the central portion of the city, either upon the ground above referred to, or upon some other ground, if a better site was suggested. In order to put even this plan into operation, the grade school building would have to be first constructed, for to use the first story of the wing referred to would deprive the high school and the Washington school of five rooms now in use. A special committee, consisting of several members of the board, of which the president of the board was the chairman, examined into this question thoroughly and consulted with certain employes or the board. The committee reported against making such radical changes in the high school building, but reported in favor of retaining the manual training department in the basement of that building, substantially in the part of the basement which it now occupies, removing a temporary partition and some articles therein which occupy space. This plan does not contemplate any substantial enlargement of the department, but does operate to give the department a little better working room and at comparatively no additional expense. The report also recommended the removing of certain shafting and changing the power used in that department to a direct electric motor power, so as to avoid the creation of noise and disturbing the school rooms above. The board is unanimously opposed to establishing any part of the manual training department above the basement in the high school. The committee also recommended the construction of a grade school building in the central portion of the city, thus taking out from the present high school building several of the grade schools and providing additional room for the congested condition in the central portion of the city. This report, after careful consideration, was adopted, with the modification that the board first submit to the people the question of whether a portion of the proceeds of the bonds voted last year should be used in the construction of a grade school building instead of a manual training building. If the people answer that question in the affirmative, then the manual training department will stay where it is in the basement of the high school, without substantial enlargement, but with some changes to its advantage the making of which is not expensive. If the question is answered in the negative, it will be the duty of the board to construct a manual training building.

"The problem has been a troublesome one to the board and it is easy to see why it has been. The large high school building, constructed years ago, was not all required for high school purposes. Many of our citizens whose opinion I share, believed it to be too large and too expensive a building; that it contains much dark space which cannot well be utilized for any purpose and the cost of the building has involved not only its use by the high school proper, together with all of its laboratories, but by the manual training department and by grade schools in the building. It would be far more satisfactory if the high school building were simply adequate for high school purposes, with neither grade schools nor manual training department therein, but this board and the people at this time must cope with the situation as it is. All of the time which the board has spent upon it and all the little money which has been spent in obtaining plans, has been in an effort to try to make the fullest and best use of this building and provide quarters for other schools at the least possible expense.

"It now seems that the board can build a grade school of moderate size for a less cost than it can construct a manual training building, in such dimensions, or approximately such dimensions as has been contemplated. The board at the present time is of the opinion that it will be both in the interest of economy and for the best interest of the schools to build a grade school building in the central portion of the city, a building of say ten rooms capacity, but it is unwilling to do this without first going back to the voters of the district for instructions with respect thereto.

"The public mind should be disabused of the idea that there has been any waste of money or any undue expenditure of any portion of the money thus far used, accruing from the bonds. Some suggestions have been made that the school at Hunter's Park has cost far in excess of what was anticipated. Such is not the fact. The architect's first off-hand estimate of the cost of the building at Hunter's Park was $47,000, when he first presented his plans, which amount he afterwards thought might perhaps be cut down to about $45,000. The general contract for the construction of the building, the heating contract, the plumbing contract and the contract for electric wiring and bells have all been let, which contracts I am advised by the architect are all of the contracts, and the whole amount thereof is $46,681, and an adequate building for the district is being constructed and, we trust, will be ready for occupancy at the opening of school in the fall. I think the history of construction will show that the cost of this building will tally unusually closely with the estimates made thereof. The board expended considerable money last year in re-modeling the basement of the Lincoln school and installing therein a much-needed modern system of heating and ventilation. The money was well expended and any portion of the money used in that construction will come back to the building fund from the amounts received from the ordinary taxation in support of that fund. The building fund was further drawn upon to construct the new two-room building on Park Point and the new small building on the Pike Lake road known as the Kruger building. With such accumulations to the building fund as will come from the ordinary methods of taxation, and the bonds already voted, the buildings at West Duluth and the new building in the central portion of the city, if the public so instruct, can be provided for.

"I am a believer in manual training instruction and a believer in the simpler forms of it being put into the grade schools. I believe that some changes should be made in that department in the high school, but on the whole it may be best not to materially change the scope of the latter but by the plan reported by the committee and approved by the board, I am satisfied that the efficiency of the department in the high school building, without material expense, can be very much increased.

"For the board of education I want to say that in all of its efforts it has acted conscientiously, with the best light that it has had from time to time, and I know of no member who has any other purpose than to serve as best he can the people of the district, nor do I know of any member who is not willing at any time to furnish any good citizen an opportunity to try his hand at solving the problems."

NO AWARD MADE

Bids on Car Shops at Proctor Referred For Revision.

Duluth, Missabe & Northern Company to Have Fine Building.

The contract for the construction work on the superstructure of the Duluth, Missabe & Northern Railway company's new car shops at Proctor, was not awarded yesterday, as had been anticipated, but the bids were referred back to the contractors for revision along certain lines suggested by the company before the figures will be considered.

The shops will comprise a large and substantial structure on the Missabe company's yard property at Proctor and will be an important addition to the large building improvements already made at that point.

The car shop building will be 90 by 212 feet, the foundation of concrete and the superstructure of wood and brick.

The contract for the foundation was some weeks ago awarded to W. F. King of this city and the work has been progressing very satisfactorily and it will very shortly be ready for the superstructure, for which the bids have recently been called.

It is considered quite probable that the award on the revised bids for the brick and carpenter work will be made some time during the coming week. The contract is considered as a fairly large one and the work, when it is started is to be pushed rapidly so that the shops will be ready for occupancy within a few months.

THANKS FRIENDS.

G. W. Hibbard Acknowledges Congratulations of Friends.

To the numerous teelgrams and letters of congratulation on his appointment to position of general passenger agent of the National Lines of Mexico, coupled with expressions of regret that he is to leave the North country, George W. Hibbard, the popular retiring general passenger agent of the South Shore road, has been unable to make individual replies to all the kind things said and has, much against his inclination, resorted to a circular form of letter in which he states that he appreciates the congratulatory messages and wishes to assure all his friends that the regrets expressed are not an echo of his own feelings. Mr. Hibbard, during his fourteen years' service with the South Shore road has enjoyed, he states, the confidence, indorsement and hearty support of every official connected with the company and especially commends the co-operation of the North country press which he says has been of great and valuable assistance in the discharge of the duties of his position. Mr. Hibbard says that no matter where his lot may be cast he will look back on his life in the North country with delight.

IS NEARLY READY.

Spur Track to Power House Practically Finished.

By the first of the coming month it is expected that the Northern Pacific company will be delivering material at the Northern Power company's power house site, on the St. Louis river, over the three miles of new trackage that has been under way of construction from Fond du Lac, for the past few months.

The work of track laying on the mile of the old railroad righted-way and the roadmaking and tracklaying process over the new route has been progressing very favorably considering the nature of some of the country, for the iden has been to avoid the heavy grades and heights.

Engineer Cokefair of the power company has been notified by the contractors that the spur track will be ready for use about July 1.

Is Remembered.

Andrew J. Perrin, who will, June 15, succeed Martin Adson as general agent for the South Shore road at Duluth, was the recipient, yesterday, of a handsome gold-headed cane, from the members of the steamship department of the Superior office. The presentation speech was made over the telephone by C. J. Norquist and while Mr. Perrin was listening to it Ticket Agent Eldred of his office handed him the cane.

FREAK EDUCATORS

Roasted By a Pennsylvania School Superintendent.

Emporia, Kan., June 10.—"From the heresy of Chicago, good Lord, deliver us," said Dr. N. C. Schaeffer, the state superintendent of the public school system of Pennsylvania for sixteen years, in his address to the members of the normal graduating class.

The remark was made after the speaker had rapped soundly the "freak professors" of the University of Chicago, who held that education could be better advanced if the students were taught that education was principally play. He dwelt strongly on the work of the teacher and opened his address by saying: "A child is like a savage in its dislike of work and love of play, and the mission of the school is to give habits of work."

MEMORIAL SERVICE.

Knights of Pythias Preparing Program.

Memorial services for the brethren who have died will be held jointly by the three lodges, North Star No. 35, Diamond No. 45, and Kitchi Gammi No. 123, Knights of Pythias, at the lodge hall at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Members from each lodge have been appointed to draw up a program, which is expected to be completed the early part of next week.

The committee is endeavoring to secure some prominent local member to make the address of the occasion. It is expected to have one of the ministers deliver the address. Other local members will also contribute to the success of the services with speeches. Music will be rendered by the K. P. quartet, which is being organized. The main portion of the exercises will be ritualistic.

LOOKING FOR A SITUATION

Twelve-Year-Old Wanted Job As "Bird Policeman."

In search of a position as a "bird policeman," a 12-year-old boy appeared at the office of the Humane society in the city hall this morning.

The boy stated that he had seen in The Herald that the Humane society was appointing a number of bird policemen, and he said he believed he could fill the position during the holidays.

When informed that the duties of a bird policeman consisted in signing a pledge not to kill or molest any birds, and to use his efforts to prevent others from doing so, and that there was no salary attached to the office, the boy was much disgusted.

The Humane society officers have distributed over 700 of the buttons which go with this pledge among the school children of the city.

COUNT WAS AN EXPERT.

His Wife Had New Skirt Now and Then.

Chicago, June 10.—"You'll have to show me," demanded Justice Roth, when Miss Helen Zimmerman said her skirt didn't fit, and that she wanted her $22 back.

"There's my private office; go in and put on the skirt, and then I'll be able to say whether it fits or not."

"But," protested Miss Zimmerman, "I can hardly change skirts in there."

"Oh, we'll close the door, and I know enough about he shape of things to be able to tell whether you use any hoops or pneumatices."

Blushing Miss Zimmerman went into the private office, closed the door and prepared to "show" the justice. On the outside, the court, the lawyers, and H. I. Wolfson, the tailor, and several "experts" whom he had summoned to testify in his behalf, waited anxiously for the "evidence" to appear.

"There, didn't I tell you it was a perfect fit? Couldn't be better," said Wolfson, when Miss Zimmerman finally emerged.

"Why I look like a fright in it," said Miss Zimmerman. "Look at that hump on the hip, and see how that seam bulges out, and the way it sags down behind; yes, and in the front, too. Why, a 'hand-me-down' couldn't look worse."

"Let me have that tape measure, Wolfson," said Justice Roth. "Come around here in front, Miss Zimmerman," and the justice got down from the stand and took a close view of the skirt. Then he measured and stood off a piece and looked and then measured again.

"Did you say that was a fit, Wolfson?" he finally asked, turning to the tailor. "Why, that's a botch; nothing short of it."

"Do you mean that you know more about the fit of skirts than these experts here?" protested Wolfson, looking at the masterpiece Miss Zimmerman was wearing.

"I know a few," said the justice. "Mrs. Roth wears a new skirt now and then, and I've paid a few tailor bills."

INDIANS ARE THREATENED

Leupp Says They Must Reform or Lose Their Rations.

Sioux City, Iowa, June 10.—Facing nearly the entire Winnebago Indian tribe, Indian Commissioner Frances Leupp has threatened to deprive them of their cherished dances, even all government rations and compel them to work their lands, unless they desisted from debasing practices which has completely enthralled them.

The commissioner had a word for the whites who have been grafting this helpless but rich tribe for years. The accusations, said the commissioner, would be sifted to the bottom and he intimated strongly he had evidence to warrant drastic measures.

Indian agents, inspectors and other government officials have fallen into the net of the border grafters and the department has had scandal after scandal on its hands, but was never quite able or willing to make a thorough cleaning out of the alleged debauchers and robbers of the reds. It was a neat trick therefore turned by the new Indian commissioner when he sent a month ago a demure young woman to teach in the Indian school at the agency. Miss Scovel came as other teachers had come and did her work well. But it has just turned out that Miss Scovel is in the government secret service and under instructions from Commissioner Leupp. She has been able to gather the best information yet obtained by the department, for she has seen much from her unassuming position and learned much by sagacious questioning. Not even the newly appointed agent, Mr. McFatridge knew Miss Scovel was anything but a school ma'am. She has turned over to the commissioner a mass of written report which he admits shocks him as he had scarcely expected so deplorable a condition although he had heard much. He believes the Winnebagoes, who were once proud and industrious, to have developed into the most indolent and degraded of any tribe under government control.

The commissioner, whose coming was a direct result of a visit to President Roosevelt and to Mr. Leupp by Rev. Father Joseph Schell, the redoubtable priest who for a year has been trying to drive out the preying gang of whites and to rescue a remnant at least of the perishing tribe, has commended the priest and urged him to continue to assist in the housecleaning. This is a gratifying victory for Father Schell, for he has fought all kinds of odds and taken his life in his hands to follow out his mission among the Winnebagoes.

IS MODEL HUSBAND.

Keeps Only Five Cents From Weekly Wage.

Chicago, June 10.—Michael Maloney is a model husband. The facts prove it, his neighbors swear to it, and the court records attest it. True Michael was brought before Justice Caverly yesterday on the charge of allowing his boy John to remain away from school twenty-one days during the school year, but it was that which led to his discovery.

Otherwise he might have remained hidden in the neighborhood of 524 West Thirteenth street and gone through life unappreciated.

On the stand Michael declared that he thought his boy was attending school regularly, and, in proof of the fact that he was a model head of a family, which he said, consisted of eleven persons, he said he earned $9 a week and kept only 5 cents of that amount for beer.

He also said he worked hard every day and was at home with his three-quarter dozen every night. Truant Officer E. S. Capperell testified that Michael's wife Mary was not content with a "nickel's worth of beer a week, and said he had frequently found her drunk.

Justice Caverly ordered an investigation before he pased judgment on Maloney.

"If the man is the model husband he claims to be," he said, "there must be something wrong somewhere else. We'll see who spends the most money for beer, Mike or Mary."

COMES LONG WAY.

Postal Sent From Paris to Austria Reaches Duluth.

The Duluth postoffice finds some funny things in the mail, but has just discovered one peculiar circumstance which rather surpasses anything heretofore found at this point. A postal card, marked "Paris, France, May 27"—one of those picture postals which are becoming the rage and getting to be the absurdity of the day—reached here a few days ago addressed to one Herrn Hausi Pituk. Such an owner could not be found and it was found by a translator in the local office that the address of the postal had been wrongly interpreted. The proper address for the postal is:

Herrn Hausi Pituk,
Vienna, North Austria.
Kleistgester, II.
L III.
Europe.

That is a lot of address for one small postal, but it is all there. The postoffice at Paris evidently mistook this address as being for some place in the United States and on the card reaching New York the postoffice people there evidently thought it meant Duluth, so on it came. It has been sent back on its long journey to its rightful owner. It will be quite a globe-trotter by the time it reaches its proper destination.

Somewhat similar things are not infrequent. Not very long ago a young man who lives not far from Duluth, sent a letter to his best girl, enclosing $10, to Duluth where she lived. Because of the poor writing and the foreign name, etc., or for some unknown reason the letter was sent to some town in Norway. The peculiar part of the story is that in the postoffice in the town in Norway which the letter reached, there was a man who knew this girl and knew that an uncle of hers lived in the town. He accordingly sent the letter to the girl's uncle, who put the proper address on it and sent it back to Duluth. It eventually reached its proper owner with the letter and the ten-dollar bill undisturbed.

POSITION OF RAILWAYS

With Reference to Rate Making Is Stated.

New York, June 10.—President George F. Baer of the Reading railway clearly states the position of the railways with reference to government rate-making in a statement just given. Said he:

"The railways are just as anxious to abolish discriminations, rebates and all the devices of like nature which more or less from necessity characterized the past as the most ardent reformer can be. They have not only accomplished much in this direction, but they have likewise aided in securing legislation to prevent these things.

"The average shipper always wants a concession. It is a relief to railway companies to have laws prohibiting such concessions, relieving them of the importunities of men who are quite as willing to have laws broken in their favor as ever railways have been to break them. Railways do not object to just and reasonable law, but there is now law enough to protect the public against the evils which are commonly alleged to exsit. What we need is enforcement of law, not new law.

"The proposed federal legislation amounts to this—that under the guise of a measure to satisfy public clamor, the whole power of rate-making is to be transferred to a political body. The owners of railways are to be denied, in a large measure, the management of their own property. Any such law is obviously bad—it is more than that, it is ruinous to the safety of business interests and a long step toward paternalism and the realization of socialistic theories. Government ownership is but one step; further."

PEACE IS WELCOME.

The news that peace is near will be hailed with joy not only in the warring nations, where the friends and relatives of the soldiers and sailors will joyfully hail a cessation of peril, but all over the civilized world.

For the world is weary of the warfare, its appetite for sensations growing out of tales of battle is satiated, and it will be glad to see the end. For more than a year the war has been pursuing its bloody progress, and its pathway is paved with dead men's bones. Thousands of widows and orphans lie wailing beside the way where it has passed, making its trail a trail of mortal agony.

The world, sensation-jaded and longing for a new excitement, rather hailed with interest the announcement of a war that promised to be a long and bitter one. It has been so long and so bitter that blood enough has been spilled to more than appease the blood-thirstiness of the seekers after new sensations. The world is blood-glutted, and longs for peace.

It is pleasant, too, to note the role being played by the president of the United States in this effort to promote peace. In a position where some outside intermediary was necessary to make the suggestion, almost by one accord the warring nations turned to Roosevelt. This man, who has been accused of being a man of war, became willingly and gladly a man of peace. His strong, capable convincing message to the two embattled nations is characteristic, and it is dignified, statesmanlike, effective. While suggesting that it may not be necessary to have the negotiations carried on through an intermediary, he nevertheless offers his services to any extent that Russia and Japan may require.

The appeal for peace is made, appropriately enough, in the name of humanity. In the name of humanity, therefore, everybody will hope that the appeal will not be in vain, and there is strong reason for believing that it will not be, for it was not issued until an intimation had been received from both powers that it would be cordially and even thankfully received.

THE INSURANCE WAR.

On the face of it, the fight in the Equitable Life Assurance company appears to have been settled in the only possible way it could have been settled—by clearing out all of the struggling, gouging, biting contestants and infusing new blood.

The company is strong financially, and its policyholders all over the United States are deeply interested in the promotion of harmony and the elimination of the disastrous strife that has been in progress for some time. How much of good faith there is in the apparent clean sweep made in this bear-pit remains to be seen, but it is believed that it is real and no sham, and that new heads will be in charge of the affairs of the company very shortly.

In Paul Morton, the retiring secretary of the navy, it is believed the company has secured a capable chairman of its board of directors, and one in whose hands the management of the company's business may be safely entrusted.

The Equitable fight has been an evil thing for old line insurance all over the country. Everywhere business has fallen off because of the revelations that have been made of the manner in which the gigantic fund of this company had been juggled by financiers for their own benefit and used to despoil the people. The suspicion that the same thing had been done with the funds of other similar companies led to a general distrust of all the large, old-line companies, and this naturally had a depressing influence upon life insurance business. The fraternal societies and assessment insurance concerns probably reaped a benefit in getting at least a part of the business lost by the big companies.

But the big insurance concerns are strong and well-entrenched, with their immense accumulations of funds that are so attractive to the expert jugglers of high finance, and the blow will not be permanent. If the public becomes convinced that the revolution in the Equitable is real, that Hyde, Alexander, Tarbell and all the other familiar figures in the fight have really been ousted, and that peace has really come, it will go a long way toward reassuring policyholders and public.

THE POLICEMAN'S ERROR.

D. M. Parry, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, said at the tenth annual convention of the association that our government is founded largely on the theory that it should be a good policeman, but not much more.

As the Outlook, commenting on this remark, points out, our government is a most benevolent policeman. He carries our letters, educates our children, gives a farm to those who will use it properly, tells us what the weather is going to be, improves our harbors and waterways, establishes lighthouses to warn our mariners off the rocks, by irrigation turns our waste places into garden spots, cares for the poor, the incompetent and the sick, in some places compels the transportation companies to give the people a square deal, and now he is building a canal not only for our benefit but for the benefit of the world.

But this policeman does one thing that seems to be of doubtful propriety, though Mr. Parry apparently approves of it highly.

"This policeman forbids Americans to buy goods abroad," says the Outlook. "If they do, he fines them. The fine he imposes ranges from 25 to 100 per cent of the cost of the goods. It is, however, just to him to say that he defends this action on grounds of benevolence. By levying tribute upon all Americans, on every purchase which they make, and dividing the tribute among the manufacturers, he thinks the laborers get better wages than they would otherwise get; and perhaps they do. But he seems disinclined to pay this tribute himself. In order to dig the interoceanic canal he has to buy a lot of goods, and he is inclined to buy them where he can get them the cheapest. And as there is no one to fine him for doing so, we rather think he will indulge this natural inclination. Perhaps we should all be inclined to buy our goods where we could get them best and cheapest, even including Mr. Parry himself, if there were no policeman to fine us."

There could not have been an incident more happily designed to point out the unfairness of the stand-patter's attitude than the canal purchase affair. It would undoubtedly do more toward crystalizing public sentiment on the question, and supporting the revision movement, than all the verbal arguments that pen could have written or tongue uttered.

THE CENSUS RETURNS.

The first scattering returns from the census are coming in, and while such returns are of about the same general value that the first half dozen precincts are in the election returns, one thing they call out loudly is: "Prepare yourselves for disappointments." This is not because Minnesota and its constituent communities are not growing, and growing rapidly, but because disappointment is a law of the census.

This is not due to any fault of the enumerators, necessarily, though the tendency of the disappointed is to declare that there has not been a complete count, and that if it had been thorough the result would have been larger. It is due to the natural inclination of every loyal citizen of a community to over-estimate its growth. It takes a lot of people to make a thousand, a good deal more than most people imagine, and probably by this time most of the enumerators have new ideas about how many people there are in a hundred.

There never was a census that was not disappointing. So natural and inevitable is the tendency to exaggerate one's ideas of the growth of a community, that a full census never shows as many people as the citizens think it should. Sometimes census returns are padded up to what the people expect, but that is dangerous and worse than a short count, because the census is taken every five years, and if the next one after a padded count is honest, it will show a decrease where there has really been an increase.

Duluth does not want a padded census, and it is not going to get one. It has had one experience with a state census that was up to popular expectations, followed by a federal census that showed a marked decrease, and it does not want a repetition of the incident. It does want a complete count, however, and as everybody has it in his power to help it along, nobody should complain after the count is made that it was not complete.

BEWARE OF ROUTINE.

Routine in business is much the same thing as getting into a rut. It means that the victim of routine follows the same course day by day, month by month and year by year. He is conducting his business or his work just as he did years ago. He has got it down so fine that it does not call for thought any more, but has become second nature and does itself.

That is where the danger begins to creep in, just where that grateful sense of security is born that comes from the knowledge that you have your routine down so pat that nothing can stir you from it. When it has reached the point where you do not have to take thought of your work, it is time to break the routine, and start out on new lines. A business that will run without thought isn't much of a business. A position that can be filled without the constant exercise of thought, and without the exertion of initiative as a means of success, is a mighty obscure and useless position.

The chains of the habit of routine, once they get firmly established, are as hard to break as the chains of any vicious habit. The closer a man is wedded to his routine, the harder it is for him to divorce himself from it and start out on new and original lines. To make routine a life-long companion is, as a rule, to wed yourself to obscurity and failure, to permit yourself to rust away and sink into a state of mental dry rot.

Look out for routine, then. Don't let your work or business get so you will no longer have to think of them. Keep your eye out for original methods, for original ways of advertising, for new and original ways of attracting attention from the public, if you are in business, and of drawing the commendation of your employers if you are employed. A workman in a rut does well to hold his job, and cannot expect commendation or advancement from his employers. A business man in a rut cannot hope, in these days of originality, to hold his business, but must, if he rests content in the sleepy arms of routine, slip steadily down into the abyss of failure.

Shake off the chains of routine. Be original. Start something.

THE LAUGH PRODUCER.

In an address given not long ago Dr. Emil Hirsch, the eloquent, witty and gifted Hebrew, paid a tribute to the "man that makes us laugh."

The tribute was merited, and shows a fine sense of the value of human endeavor on the part of Dr. Hirsch. It is the more valuable because the tendency is too much toward belittling the importance of the man who lives and works only to make people laugh. To many such an aim in life seems trivial and valueless. Yet this idea is terribly mistaken.

The man who is able to make us laugh deserves the highest tribute of gratitude that man can pay. Anybody can make us gloomy, despondent and depressed if we want to let him do so. Everybody has intervals when the world seems gloomy, when fate seems hard, when disappointment seems to be a law of life, when the future appears dark and hopeless. But not everybody has the power to banish the blues on the joyous wings of a clear, ringing, hearty laugh, and the man who has this power does not live in vain, butterfly-like as his existence may seem to many. Worry kills more people than all the plagues of history, and the man who makes us laugh can banish worry. The comedian, the humorist, the story-teller, who are artists in their line, and can force a laugh out of us when our whole being is crying out that the world is cruel and heartless and that there is no good in anything, are worth their weight in gold.

Who has not carried a burden of woe, more or less imaginary, about with him during a day, and then sat down to a book by Mark Twin, to have those blues disappear in a twinkling? Who has not carried his worries into the theater with him, to have them banished utterly by the skill of a comedian? Who has not sat down with a born story-teller and had his cheery yarns make the world look glad again?

Do not underestimate the value to society of the man who makes us laugh. If there were more like him, or if he were with us more, this would be a happier world, with less trouble and worry in its make-up.

THE INDIVIDUAL'S VALUE.

When a great man passes away, a man who has filled an important place in the world, his loss is felt for a time, but the world moves on, and soon his absence is nothing but a memory. Then everybody marvels at the unimportance of the individual, and moralizes upon what an infinitesimal atom man is, anyway. When humble individuals die by great numbers, and leave no ripple on the surface, that feeling is still stronger.

But these things do not correctly show the value of the individual. We recognize the importance of the unit in human life when one man's carelessness plunges scores to a quick and horrible death. When one man leaves a switch open, when one man forgets his orders, when one man sleeps at his post, and as a result there is a terrible accident, involving loss of life, we begin to realize that after all the individual, no matter how inconspicuous, is very important.

The success of a general, of a captain of industry, of a political leader, depends largely upon the integrity of his following. The general, the captain or the leader may plan, but he must entrust much of the execution to individuals, and the success of the plans depends upon the faithfulness of those who execute them. A failure on the part of a very humble unit in the forces at the command of the general may lead to defeat. The captain of industry may lay his plans most ingeniously, and the negligence or stupidity of an obscure individual he never heard of may defeat them utterly. The political leader may work out the scheme of a winning campaign, and the ignorance or carelessness of a member of the rank and file may throw victory into the hands of the opposition.

The individual is important, and highly so. The success of every large undertaking rests in a certain degree upon the faithfulness, the industry and the courage of everybody concerned in it. One laggard, one careless individual, one coward has it in his power to overthrow everything, and undo all the work of his fellows and their leaders. The failure of one member of society to do his duty involves an untold succession of defeats, and may retard the advancement of humanity to an extent the guilty one never imagines.

While it is well, therefore, not to exaggerate one's importance in the world, it is better still not to underestimate it, and to fall into ways of carelessness because of a disregard of the consequences. If each individual does his duty, no matter how small a part he is called upon to play, there will be no failures. Those who do their duty, then, if there are failures, can always have the comforting thought that they did not cause them.

Hotel Gossip.

Somewhere in the vicinity of New Duluth there is a fisherman who weeps for the loss of a big sturgeon, while in the lobby of the Lenox hotel there is gathered a quartet of respectable gentlemen who relate with glee the manner in which they escaped from the wrath of Walton's disciple. From this disclosure the fisherman may learn the names of those who stole his fish, but he will be disappointed if he thinks he can find his lost treasure for the vandals themselves have no knowledge of its present whereabouts.

Thursday evening J. C. Doyle, manager of the Northwestern Engineering company, found it necessary to take a trip a short distance from New Duluth. Al Ribeneck volunteered the use of his aluminum auto to convey Mr. Doyle, C. A. Venneberg of Minneapolis and Knute L. Fenney, the Duluth photographer, had become tired of holding down a seat in the lobby and stated that they would go along.

"I hope we will meet something exciting," remarked Mr. Fenney, as he slammed the side door of the machine.

The automobile did not meet any accident on the way, but speedily made its way to New Duluth. Mr. Fenney and Mr. Venneberg decided they would take a few turns around New Duluth, while the Aluminum Devil took Mr. Doyle to the point of his destination.

After lingering in the main street of the city for a time, Mr. Venneberg and Mr. Fenney wandered down to the river bank. A short distance up the river they stumbled against a string. They proceeded to investigate, and their joy was great when they felt a pull on the line. They landed a large sturgeon, and were congratulating themselves on their find when they heard a shout back of them.

"Leave that alone," cried the indignant fisherman.

Instead of heeding the command the couple took to flight, and the angry fisherman followed. It was a keen chase, and the fisherman's dog was a participant. The two were nearly exhausted when they spied Mr. Ribenack's machine coming back. They hailed the auto. Those in the machine saw their friends' plight, and ran to meet the pursued. The fisherman was only a hundred feet away, and the dog five feet, when the fugitives clambered into the machine.

"You scoundrels," shouted the fisherman, as the automobile brushed by him. He was pouring out a series of picturesque words, when the machine got out of shouting distance.

The quartet felt elated, and on the way back to town nothing would prevent them from stopping occasionally and relating the experience. But the fun was cut short when the machine reached the hotel. The sturgeon was not anywhere in sight. There was consternation in the party, and with no evidence in sight the guests at the hotel expressed doubt as to the veracity of the quartet, remarking:

"That's another fish story."

Theodore Frerker said that the fish fell into his possession immediately after its disappearance from the automobile. Louis Birch claims he had the sturgeon after Mr. Frerker, but from last accounts Mr. Birch's ice box is empty.

Among the delegates to the state convention of the Elks from Stillwater were Judge J. C. Nethaway, Mayor J. G. Armson and six aldermen. This caused Judge Nethaway to remark at the St. Louis yesterday that the official body of Stillwater was well represented in Duluth.

"Stillwater is pushing ahead quite rapidly," said Judge Nethaway. "The logging industry is coming to an end down our way, and something has got to be done to replace it. And we are successful. A shoe factory, which will employ 300 men, is being established, and there is talk of some pulp mills and box factories being built. A new bank building is being erected and also an auditorium. The latter will cost from $90,000 to $75,000, with seating capacity for 2,500 people. It will be in the nature of an opera house, and will be equipped with a stage larger than that at the Metropolitan theater in St. Paul, which is one of the largest in the West.

"There is a hot fight in Washington county over the election of a congressman," he added. "State Senator Hiller H. Horton will have to run hard to defeat Congressman F. C. Stevens. Stevens obtained for us a new postoffice building, costing $70,000, and the people are backing him."

"While the railroads are cutting sharply into the timber belt and carring away the lumber rapidly, I think that there is no cause for immediate worry that the supply will be exhausted soon," said John Ryan, with the Cloquet Lumber company, at the McKay yesterday afternoon. "There is enough timber left in Minnesota yet for twenty years. When the supply has been exhausted in this state and Wisconsin the lumbermen will move West so that the supply in this country will not come to an end for some centuries yet. There is a great deal of lumber coming into North Dakota from Idaho already.

"As a general thing, timber land is not much good after it has been cut. A second crop may be had, but when it has been gone through thoroughly the first time there is not much use of going over it again. The land is usually too sandy for proper cultivation. There are exception, of course, for between here and Two Harbors, where there is clay soil, the land may be used for agricultural purposes.

"It is interesting to think over the question of what the condition will be when the lumber has all been cleared away, if we can think of such a possibility. Iron has taken the place of wood in many cases. For instance, they are using steel in the big buildings instead of lumber. When it comes to chairs I suppose they will be able to make them out of paper, as they are making many articles out of it now.

Where Sound Timber Grows.

Springfield Republican: The Gridiron club of Washington would seem to be a favorable vantage point from which to seek public office. This administration has found places for five of its members. Not only does Major Carson, the club's president, find an office as commissioner of manufactures in the department of commerce and labor, but Mr. Wynne has been postmaster general and is now consul general at London, Harry L. West is one of the commissioners of the District of Columbia, Francis E. Leupp is Indian commissioner, and Mr. De Graw assistant postmaster general.

Twenty Years Ago.

Taken From the Columns of Duluth Papers of This Date 1885.

A large number of relatives and friends assembled at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Harvey on Thursday evening to witness the wedding of Townsend W. Hoopes and Miss Mayme E. Harvey. The ceremony was performed according to the Quaker custom, of which church Mr. Hoopes is a member. The bridegroom and bride entered the room accompanied by their relatives took seats beside each other and remained silent for five minutes. The bridegroom then rose and announced the marriage vows, the bride following with a similar pledge. Each of them signed the marriage contract, which was engraved on a large sheet of parchment, and prayer by Rev. E. M. Noyes concluded the ceremony. After those present had signed the parchment as witnesses, an elegant supper was served, and at 10:30 o'clock the guests dispersed. Among those present from abroad were W. W. Hoopes of Philadelphia, brother of the groom, and his uncle, R. L. Walter of Chester county, Pa. Mr. Hoopes is superintendent of the Duluth street railway, and in his two years' residence in Duluth has made many friends. His wife, through her longer residence here, is still more widely known and has been a general favorite among the young people.

W. C. Sherwood, a former resident of Duluth, but more recently of Ripon, Wis., has returned here with his family and will remain some time, perhaps permanently.

Miss Madden has resigned her position as teacher in the public schools and accepted a position in Minneapolis. Miss Sadie Starkey has also resigned and will soon leave for her old home in Maine, where she will reside.

A very pleasant surprise party took place last evening at the residence of R. C. Ray. The occasion was the twenty-first birthday of Harry Chandler, Mrs. Ray's brother.

Will M. Spalding left Wednesday night for his mineral claim in 64-5, where he will remain several weeks. He proposes to find mineral if there is any.

A. Bailey, of Dunn & Thomson, welcomed his family yesterday and has moved into the new house recently finished by Dr. Walbank, adjoining the latter's residence.

A. J. Sawyer and W. W. Davis are among the Duluth business men visiting St. Paul this week.

The Weather.

It's the funniest thing out. Here Duluth has had a couple of days of weather that was not quite up to his standard, and Mr. Kicker was grumpily proclaiming as he came down in the car this morning that there hadn't been a decent day in a month. Of course much of what Mr. Kicker says is due to the condition of his liver, and not to the fact that he does not know any better. Probably his breakfast was not to his taste, and possibly he did not dare vent his displeasure on Mrs. Kicker, so he vented it on the weather. In that event it was good weather again, because Mr. Kicker might have got in trouble by venting it on somebody bigger than he was if he did not have the weather handy to talk about.

The fog, not so thick as it was last night, when it was so thick the boats had to keep up a constant precautionary tooting, remained hanging around where it was not wanted until this morning, and evidently awaited a change of wind to blow it away. This made it a little more chilly than it would have been otherwise, for the northeast wind was neither strong nor oppressively cold.

The wind is still due to change to westerly, sometime tonight or tomorrow. It will be warmer tonight, with showers, and Sunday will be warm, though partly cloudy.

The storm is central over Northeastern Kansas and Southern Iowa. Showery weather prevailed in the Northwestern states, the Missouri and Upper Mississippi valleys and the Western lake region. Davenport had the unusually heavy rainfall of 4.58 inches. Cool weather prevails over Lake Superior, Northern Minnesota, the Dakotas, Nebraska, Colorado and Western Kansas, while very warm weather is the rule south and east from Missouri.

DOMESTIC PLEASANTRIES.

Philadelphia Ledger: "Miss Passay has a queer habit of nodding her head and interjecting 'yes, yes' when anyone talks to her. Funny, isn't it?"

"Yes, I think she got that habit waiting for some man to propose."

Detroit Free Press: Van X.—Did you vote a straight ticket on election day?

De Q.—No, my wife made me split it and gave her half.

Boston Transcript: "No," said Mrs. Bounce. "I don't know as there's any real harm in smoking—that is, in itself; but when two or three men get together, puffing at their cigars or pipes, they seem son contented and so happy that I fear they forget what sinful creatures they are. There's where the harm comes in, Mrs. Green, as I've said to Bounce a hundred times if I've said it once."

Chicago Tribune: Freddie—Do you think your father will consent to my marrying your sister?

Lulu—Sure, and I think he will even give tradin' stamps if you'll hurry up about it. He's got seven more besides me.

Philadelphia Standard: Hicks—I suppose Dremer is still pottering along at his inventions.

Wicks—Well, he has actually perfected a great labor-saving scheme at last.

Hicks—You don't say?

Wicks—Yes; he's going to marry Miss Roxley.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: Two is company till they are married, when it becomes a crowd.

It is next to impossible not have some money if you don't get married.

Either a boy is so good that he is sick all the time, or so well that you can't make him take a bath.

There is something about a woman's summer clothes that makes a man feel it wouldn't be much different if she didn't have them on.

SATURDAY NIGHT TALK

On the Commencement Stage.

Yes, the hour has at last arrived to which you have so eagerly looked forward and in which your school life finds its glorious consummation. For weeks you have been preparing both your outward appearance and your inward equipment for this occasion. In honor of you, June has been lavish of its roses, and the skies have been smiling over your head. As you sit there in the center of the stage with your mates about you, all in immaculate attire, with a becoming flush of excitement and expectancy on your face, we down in the audience are more than ready to felicitate you, to heap flowers at your feet and pour forth blessings upon you.

Of course you are the center of everything today, and it seems almost too bad to ask you to think of anyone else. But it may be while the band is playing you can spare just a moment to think of two persons half way down the middle aisle, whose pride and joy at this moment are hardly less than yours. From the moment your little curly head was laid close to theirs, they coveted for you a good education. They felt their own limited advantages and they resolved that their child should have the best "schooling" they could possibly afford to give. So, while you have been flitting back and forth day by day and year by year betwixt home and school, they have been toiling cheerfully, patiently away to make it possible for you to go and to keep you there long after some children join the ranks of wage-earners. Your mother is not quite as fashionably dressed tonight as you are, but what does she care, so long as the darling of her heart looks as well as the rest of the young people on the stage.

Just spare a thought, too, for the teachers. Perhaps you have not always gotten along happily with them, but it may be that you were to blame quite as much as they. At any rate, they gave their best to you, and often when you were unresponsive, and even irritating, they kept on trying to make something of you. Usually most teachers do about as well as they can with the material upon which they have to work. And do you not also owe a thankful thought to all who have a share in your education? If yours is a public school, all the members of the community have willingly taxed themselves for your benefit. If yours is a private school, what you may yourself pay does not probably represent the major fraction of what it costs to educate you.

You have had your examinations and we congratulate you on passing so well. But may we put one or two supplementary questions, not often found on the lists? What have you really gotten out of your schooling? Never mind now about the particular bits of information which you can reel off so glibly—that the earth is round, and that water is made of two parts hydrogen and one part oxygen, and so on. But have you gained out of your text-books and your schoolrooms respect for knowledge? Do the things to be learned seem more in number and more inviting than when you toddled to the primary school? Have you come to honor that body of related truths which we call science? And are you eager to add to your personal store of learning which, I confess, is already large and imposing, other facts and truths to be had from fresh sources of information in coming days?

And have you acquired power to study and to read profitably? Do you know how to handle a text-book, how to utilize a good library, how to sit down with a hard lesson and get it thoroughly so that you can recite any part of it? Have you your mental powers in harness, your memory, your imagination, your logical processes, so that you can drive them as a skilfull coachman drives a four-horse team?

And out of these days and years of routine schooling has there grown up a desire to be useful in the world? You are debtor to many—to your parents, your teachers, to society in general. Don't you want to begin pretty soon to pay back that debt by means of worthy living and helpful service? No one is truly educated who is self-centered, who has not felt the thrill of a desire to put his education at work. If you wrap up your education in a napkin, as the man in the parable did with his talent, you will lose it as he did. But if you realize that through your education a lever has been put into your hands by means of which you can help lift the world out of its troubles, why, then, you have something to show for your schooling besides a pretty diploma.

But pardon this digression. We are halting proceedings and it is time to rise and receive the final injunctions and honors. We would not have introduced an element of diversion or quizzed you with these rather unconventional questions unless we believed that after all they do have some relation to the present hour. For, this glorious moment is not the end of everything. Did you not invite us to your commencement, your real beginning in life?

THE PARSON.

Highways and Byways of The Town.

"Sassiety," said the man who had never tried to move in it because he knew he wouldn't be admitted, "is an aggregation of two-legged animals, rare and otherwise, thet perform regularly fer the amusement of themselves and others."

Perched heavily on the edge of a Bowery saloon card table, with his feet swinging idly back and forth a few inches from the unfragrant floor and a trickling yellow stream of tobacco juice meandering slowly and diffidently from the corner of his dirty mouth, through the whisker stubble covering his equally dirty chin, he cast a bleared eye over the motley bunch of lumberjacks slouching before him, to note the general effect of his monumental burst of inflammatory wisdom.

The hangers-on appeared interested, so he continued talking. The bad whisky he had drunk in such generous quantities had sent the blood coursing freely through his veins, and as it passed over the much-used wheels of speech it caused them to revolve noisily and rapidly, and without any apparent effort on the speaker's part.

"It costs a lot of money to git inside the tent," he observed, "and when

"That's the way its with Sassiety, so you see, Sassiety is a mighty good thing."

once you get there you find that your eyes and brain has been flimflammed by the glarin' yellow and green show bills on the outside and that instead of havin' a good time and bein' beautifully entertained you have to perform with the other animals and help feed 'em, while the admirin' outside public that don't know a good thing when they have it in their hands look on through the stained Sunday newspaper windows and wish they knowed enough to become tamers of the live things they see on exhibition.

"When you go into a circus tent you forget everything but the show and the animals that you see before you. That's the way it is with sassiety, so, you see, sassiety is a mighty good thing, and just as necessary as religion, fer if a person couldn't forget himself and other things once in a while in this life our insane asylums would be workin' overtime, which wouldn't do at all, bein' as they is state institutions. It ain't noways needful fer you to think much about yourself after you git inside the sacred portals. You're supposed to leave your thoughts and your individuality behind you. Did you ever see any individuality or unsound display of intelligence while the circus performers was goin' through with their stunts? Course not. They think and are just what the ringmaster or whoever the boss is wants them to think and be. That's what they're there fer. If you let someone else think fer you in sassiety, and do like the others do, who are in their turn followin' out instructions from the ringmaster, you git along all right.

"There is different kinds of sassity, and different grades, accordin' to the size of the town in which it moves. The word sassiety alone means, or is supposed to mean, the best that is in that particuler town, while the word with an explain' phrase followin' it means somethin' else. You read about a man bein' alone is the sassiety of his dog. That's good sassity. A dog is more like a man ought to be than a good many men ever will be.

"As a matter of fact, dog sassiety is the best kind there is. Fer instance, if I was with a bunch of dogs now I would be on a more elevated plane than I happen to be under present circumstances. Why is it the best? Simply because the dogs have no sassiety of their own, owin' to the fact that the dog tribe has no woman dogs to speak of. You can't have sassiety without females. The canines haven't got any females runnin' loose amongst 'em, and so they have all that surplus affection to waste on man. A dog makes good and reasonable company, until a female happens along, and then he don't care a darn fer you, but goes gallopin' off in a manner most crazy and unnatural, leavin' you in the lurch. This is the only way he is like the human males, and when this time comes you find he really is not superior to your other friends, as you had thought, but that his agreeableness had previously been due to the absence of the sassity rekysite. You see, it all happened this way: Man recognized ages ago that he would never have a true friend he could reasily depend on until there was no females to occupy their thoughts. Naturally, he couldn't kill off all the women of his own kind just so he could better and safer enjoy the company of his friends, so he did the next best thing, and killed off the women in the dog tribe, pickin' the dog out as bein' the second animal in point of intelligence. As soon as he did this the dog got to be a friend he could depend on, and the scheme worked so well that it has been followed out ever since. Nowadays you see only about one female in every 100 dogs, which explains everything.

"And then, again, you read of a man havin' no sassiety but his own. That most generally means he is in bad sassiety, eH had much better be in the sassiety of a woman. A woman ain't bad sassiety fer a man. Just the contrary is the case, my friends, and I don't want you to think fer a minit that I am preachin' anythin' else. What I do say is that the good sassiety of women makes bad sassiety of men fer men. Follow my brilliant beacon light of intelligence and reason, do you?

"So you see a modifyin' phrase, like 'of his dog,' 'but hisself,' etc., sort of dilutes the meanin' of the word, like mixin' whisky with water when you drink it. But I am not talkin' about any of these dilutions, as you all comprehend without my tellin' you. What I'm speakin' about is the straight brand, without any modifiers or dilutors, although I did wander a little when I got to talkin' about dogs.

"If you ain't got any money to get into this circus I'm tellin' you about, the next best way is to write a book, the kind sassiety likes to read, with a hero who speaks such hot words of love and passion that he don't need any matches to light his cigar with. If you can write about a fellar like that, the sacred portals open of their own accord, and you are admitted to the circus. Then you have a good chance to pick out some female companion of the opposite sex, who has money, to travel lifes' pathway with you, so you won't have to write any more sassiety books, and the sooner you do this the better you are off, fer after a man has writ many of them books his brain must be in such terrible shape that he wouldn't recognize a good thing in petticoats if it fainted away in his arms.

"Again, you must not rush in too quick to enter double harness. Wait until you find a woman who appeals to your soul. Love at first sight, or at second or third sight, can't be anything but an appeal to the senses, although the symptoms are often mistaken for those of love. Take my advice, fellowmen, and pay no heed to such an appeal to the senses. If you do you will find your soul is disgusted with the mighty poor sense that your senses displayed, but nine times out of ten you won't find this out till after the knot is tied, and then it is too late. So ever after that, until death do us part, your soul and senses are fighting betwixt theirselves, and you is fighting with the travelin' pardner you didn't know what you was about when you picked out.

"But the question that bothers most men is how they are to attract the notice and interest of the fair one they would hitch up with. That's a problem not at all difficult of solution, my friends. Simply let on that you belong to some swell bachelor's club, and dose her with the tone of the bachelors, single and married that infest this club. Try to get her to view you as a deuce of a fellow—faintly hint at the wickedness you're supposed to be up to with the rest of the bunch in the rascal hours. Prattle to her of the ravishing effect the gleam of fair arms peepin' through filmy laces has on you. Sigh about the thrill that the frou-frou of draperies gives you. Affect reticence when, with female curiosity, she fishes for particulars as to the delights of this den. Then you want to shake your head and radiate the idea that the life of a perfect devil is hardly fit for pure, shell-like ears. By the time you get through with this list, goin' by easy stages, you know, you have aroused both her interest and curiosity it is a sure sign that she is too blamed good and intellectually intelligent to be your mate, and so you had better clear out. Which ever way the deal turns, you see, you come out winner.

"But if you are in sassiety, whether you are winnin' a woman or not, it is a pretty good plan to let it be noised abroad that you are just a little reck- you get along better, with better times comin' your way all the time, if you do. less in your habits. You will find that Go the 'wine, women and song' deal as hard as you want to, without actually being caught at it by your betters, and your future in sassiety is assured. The secret is to do all this without actually bein' seen by women or any unreasonable person of your own sex. If they can hint at your past and shadowy present without any actual proof of your slips its a high recommendation. It's all right fer you to git drunk, so long as you don't make an ass of yourself on the streets where you are any ways conspicuous.

"A funny thing about sassiety is that you can never tell anything about the people in it till you get 'em away from the circus. A good way to do is to take 'em out campin' with you if you want to dig down and discover just what their true selves is. Otherwise, by merely meetin' them in the drawin' room and callin' on them in the parlor, you don't get under the sassiety polish and veneer, and have to grope around in the dark and trust to luck. You can't judge a sassiety man or woman by appearances the way you can a lot of fortunate devils like you. I know just what you are by lookin' at you, but not so with them others. You can't even tell the average sassiety man's shape by lookin' at him, let alone his general characteristics. 'If some of it is made in the image of God, the way good people says, why then He has my sympathy,' a tailor friend of mine said one time.

At this point the speaker was interrupted by an invitation from a friend leaning against the bar, and after the glasses were emptied the two walked out together.

"A dog makes good and reasonable company, until a female happens along, and then he don't care a darn fer you."

EMBEZZLEMENT IS CHARGED

Former Itasca County Treasurer Indicted on Two Counts.

Grand Rapids, Minn., June 10.—Charles C. Miller, formerly treasurer of Itasca county, has been indicted by the grand jury on two counts for the embezzlement of the county funds and will be tried in district court Monday. Miller will be tried first on an indictment charging him with the embezzlement of $412. Residents of Duluth and Superior owning property in this county will appear as witnesses against the defendant who is under $3,000 bonds.

For six years prior to January 9, 1904, Miller was county treasurer handling hundreds of thousands of dollars annually. At the last election he was defeated by Arthur A. Kremer. Miller contested the election and while the case was pending Kremer went to the state supreme court and obtained an order requiring Miller to show cause why a writ of ouster should not be issued. The writ was issued January 9, 1905, but he refused to surrender office. Subsequently he made no resistance and when Kremer took charge through some source he learned of an alleged shortage in excess of $500. Miller was placed under arrest and the public examiner was sent for. A cursory inspection of the books, it is said, showed a deficit of $3,500. Experts were then employed with the result that indictments were returned this week.

In its report to Judge McClenahan last night the grand jury suggested that the examination of Miller's books be continued.

BOTH LEGS MANGLED

While Trying to Board a Moving Train.

Eveleth, Minn., June 10.—Ira Douglas, 25 years of age, was brought here from Iron Junction yesterday afternoon with both legs mangled below the knees as a result of an attempt to board a moving train. George A. Noland accompanied him and telephoned to Douglas' relatives at Superior. Noland said Douglas had been with men who were drinking beer below the coal docks at Iron Junction. The party broke up and Douglas tried to board a moving train. It is not known whether it was an ore or passenger train. Douglas was taken to the More hospital, where an operation was performed.

FOUR DULUTH BROTHERS

Who Have Enlisted In United States Army.

St. Louis, June 10.—A reunion at Jefferson barracks of four brothers, Henry, Martin, Elmer and Edwin Goodrich, all of Duluth and all recent additions to the United States army, was followed by the departure of Henry Goodrich, who has been assigned to the First cavalry at Fort Clark, Texas.

Recruit Henry Goodrich reported at the barracks April 24. Henry liked the army life and routine so well that he wrote glowing letters to his three borthers at Duluth. His pen was as powerful as his cavalry sword may become in the future, for his graphic pictures of the soldier's life induced his three brothers to enlist. They arrived June 5, just in time for Henry to meet them.

The request of the brothers that they all be assigned to the same troop probably will be granted.

THE CLASS SPREAD

Seniors Have Final Social Gathering at High School.

Addresses By Faculty, Members and Other Class Presidents.

Last evening the senior class gave its last and farewell spread in the High school building. The affair was the most successful and enjoyable social event that has ever been given by the class. The halls were handsomely decorated in the red and white high school colors and the grey and red of the class, while on the table were large bunches of purple lilacs and several large bouquets or carnations that were presented to the graduates by Principal and Mrs. Smith, the whole being beautifully set off by large plants scattered here and there.

It was the final gathering of the seniors in a social way before leaving the alma mater in which they have spent the past four happy years. The members were out in large numbers, about ninety of the 110 members being present, as well as many members of the faculty. The other class presidents were also invited as were several of those who had been members during its earlier years in the school.

Edward Furni, president of the class of 1905, acted as toastmaster and called upon the following members of the faculty: Principal Smith, Miss Noyes, Miss White, Mr. Towne, Miss Robinson, Miss Stearns and Miss Von Scholten. They all united in commenoing the class upon the excellent record that it had made during its four years' career in the school, upon its scholarship, its social record, its ability in oratory and debate, and upon the mark that it has made for itself in the field of athletics. They predicted a brilliant and useful future career for all of the graduating students, and were certain from their own expereince with them that in whatever sphere their lot might chance to fall they would fulfill their part well and to the best of their capabilities. Some would go to institutions of higher learning, they said, while some would commence at once to carve their coming life work, but wherever they might be they would build firmly upon the foundations laid in the Duluth Central high school.

Charles McLennan, president of the class of 1906, then spoke for a few minutes, remarking upon the help which the example of the seniors had rendered the present juniors, and concluded by earnestly requesting the entire class to attend the junior-senior reception to be given at the Spalding the night of July 3. He was followed by Elmer McDevitt, president of the class of 1907.

Several members of the senior class were then called upon. Miss Helen Mooney responded to "The Spread," Palmer Harbison to "The Class of '05;" Russel McLean to "Athletics;" William Harrison to "The Faculty;" Harold Cant to "The Girls of '05;" and Stanley Straud to "Farewell." In general they expressed their appreciation for the helpful example that their teachers had set them, for the assistance that the young women had been in making the social affairs of the class successful and also in making it possible to publish a Zenith, and for the great educational advantages that it has been their privilege to enjoy. They said that they would carry with them in after years many fond memories of the happy hours spent together in the high school, and that they were going forth with the determination to make the best of all their opportunities.

Several class songs were also sung and the high school and class yells were given, after which all adjourned to the lower hall where they were joined by the other classes in the dancing that followed.

JUNIORS ARE WINNERS.

Defeat the Seniors In Baseball Contest.

Thursday afternoon the junior base ball team defeated the senior nine in a close and exciting game by the score of 9 to 8, thus giving the former claim to the championship of the school. The seniors lay their defeat to the fact that after they had changed their batting order and tied the juniors, the latter protested and had all those who had batted out of order taken out of the game, which left but four of the senior regulars playing against the juniors.

The line-up follows:

Juniors—	Position.	Seniors—
Ober	catcher	McLean
Cramner	pitcher	Deetz
F. Crassweller	first base	Furni
Bowen	2nd base	H. Crassweller
Forsythe	3rd base	Harrison
Borgen	short stop	Monaghan
McLennan	left field	Downie
Stocken	center field	McCarthy
Abraham and Sarvela	right field	Burns

The principal athletic feature of the coming week will be the ball game between the seniors and sophomores on one side and the juniors and freshmen on the other. As both teams will be well matched the contest promises to be close and exciting from start to finish.

School Notes.

Thursday afternoon a large number of the students enjoyed a two-period vacation because of the large church fire on the corner of Fourth avenue east and Third street. The fire broke out during the luncheon period, and as many of the pupils were out, they took advantage of the opportunity to visit the fire, and found it so interesting that they forgot to return with the result that the recitations of the fifth and sixth periods were greatly reduced in numbers. They were marked "0" for the lessons they missed, but more than one of them was heard to remark that they wished they could get a few more "goose eggs" in the same way.

It is of interest to note that one of the colored students of the high school is a regular contributor to one of the two magazines published in the South. In the Voice of the Negro for May, Miss Alice Ward Smith has an interesting article on the new bridge across the ship canal entitled, "Duluth Ship Canal Suspended-Car Transfer." The article is well written, and explains in full the details and workings of the bridge.

CRIPPLE CREEK DISTRICT.

Production For May Reached Sum of $1,864,215.

Colorado Springs, June 10.—The production of the Cripple Creek district for the month of May reached the sum of $1,864,215, which represents the value of 59,115 tons of rock.

As a proof of what can be done with the low grade ores of the district, no better answer could be given than that of actual results at the Copper Mountain, Wild Horse and a few other of the cyanide mills of this district. Operations at the Copper Mountain mill, which is owned by the Sioux Mining company, are being pushed ahead and things are very satisfactory. This mill is able to handle from 75 to 100 tons of ore a day, and while a majority of the rock has only been averaging $3.60 per ton, the operators are receiving a good profit for their company.

Recent developments in the Vindicator mine, together with a decided improvement in the grade of ore, is adding greatly to the treasury of this company. While mining operations are being being confined between the surface and the 1,000-foot point, there is sufficient ore already blocked out to guarantee dividends for eleven years.

Lessee Webster and associates, operating on the International property on the west slope of Gold Hill, who recently opened up fabulously rich ore at a depth of 350 feet, are still mining ore that practically only needs the government stamp on it to make it currency. The ore shoot was opened about seventy-five feet north of the shaft in the 350-foot level, and while the shoot varies from three to seven inches in width, a great deal of the ore is so rich that it is being sacked. Sylvanite and calaverite are found all through the rock in large quantities, some of it running as high as several thousand dollars to the ton.

The Granite mine, on Battle Mountain, is now producing approximately 1,000 tons a month, the values running from $40 to $50 to the ton. The company has between eighty and ninety miners continually, and the ore is being taken out practically all over the mine, from the surface to the 1,000-foot point. However, the majority of the ore is coming from between the 900 and 1,000-foot point, and the mine never loked better than it does at the present time.

Lessee Walden, operating under lease a block of the first level of the Independence Consolidated property, has opened up a streak of ore measuring from eight to sixteen inches in width, that runs close to $150 to the ton. Returns being received from one carload shipment this week, the carload returning $2,200.

BANKER IS INDICTED

The Grand Jury Returns Twenty-Seven Counts Against Clements.

St. Paul, June 10.—Thomas B. Clements, who was president of the defunct First National bank of Faribault, Minn., was yesterday indicted by the United States grand jury on twenty-seven counts, alleging embezzlement, misapplication of funds and the making of false entries in the bank's books and in his reports to the comptroller of the currency. The amounts covered in the indictment foot up more than $150,000, but according to the estimate of the receiver, the total amount involved is nearly $240,000. Clements, who is out on $20,000 bail, will be arraigned today. His attorneys on Tuesday took the first step in his defense by challenging the present grand jury for a number of causes, the challenge being overruled.

The failure of the bank, on Jan. 3, 1905, which it was alleged was due to the misappropriation and embezzlement of its funds by President Clements, caused a sensation throughout the state. The bank was one of the oldest in the state, and its president one of the best known bankers. Lyman D. Baird, national bank examiner, was appointed receiver, and his first report stated that while the face value of the assets was $619,881, about $532,451 of this amount was of doubtful value. The liabilities were given as $557,488.

Clements is alleged to have used the bank's funds for the purpose of furthering the interests of a lumber company and fruit farm in Georgia, in which he was heavily interested.

The Biggest Sign In New York Is at Twenty-Third Street and Fourth Avenue.

(From the New Yorw Evening Sun.)

Does anybody know the size of the biggest sign in New York? It's at the corner of Twenty-third street and Fourth avenue and is 175 feet long. It is the sign of the J. Walter Thompson Advertising Agency.

On inquiry, it turned out that the size of the sign was practically an accident. Moving from the old Times building to new offices at the corner of Twenty-third street and Fourth avenue, an order was given for a sign. "How big a sign do you want?" was the signmaker's query. "Big enough," he was told, "to run the full length of the office front." "You'll have the biggest sign in New York," he replied; "a sign 175 feet long."

Even this measurement of frontage can convey no adequate idea of the office space behind it, 13,600 square feet upon one floor, and every foot of space a business necessity.

It has taken forty years of steady growth for the business of the J. Walter Thompson company to reach its present prestige and prominence, when it counts over 300 active customers as its clients, and among them many whose names are known to every reader in the land—the representative advertisers of the country.

There may be some yet who doubt if advertising pays, but there can be no doubt that advertising pays if Thompson does it. The best proof of this is that every step of the growth of the J. Walter Thompson Agency has depended on the profit made for customers by the Thompson plan of publicity. So that the big advertising sign of the big advertising business points a moral to advertisers: Advertising pays when Thompson does it.

To lose is often merely not to find—as a business chance or bargain missed, and thus lost, through failure to read the ads.

The previous visit of Grace Van Studdiford to Duluth in the De Koven opera, "Red Feather," did not seem at all to satisfy Duluth people, for they were out in full force last evening to again see and hear the charming star and her company. The opera improves upon acquaintance, and is especially acceptable in being a genuine comic opera and not a jumble of music, comedy and horseplay, and then, too, it has singers who can sing, for which we are truly thankful.

Miss Van Studdiford grows more delightful. Nature was lavish in bestowing its favors upon her, for with a marvelously beautiful voice it gave her beauty of face and figure. While dramatic talent has not been given her in any extraordinary measure, she has vivacity and animation and carries the role of the Countess Hilda in a charming manner. Encores were bestowed with a fervor and enthusiasm which made them ovations. "The Garden of Dreams" is the most beautiful of the songs that fall to her, and the use of the adjective exquisite is fully justified by her rendition of it. "The Merry Cavalier" was another delightful number that exhibited the fine technical ability of her voice, the runs and trills being executed with great brilliancy. Miss Van Studdiford has a most remarkable crescendo. Reaching a very high note with a delicacy that makes the hearer believe that she has almost strained herself to take it, she gradually lets it swell until the auditorium seems utterly unable to hold it, and one is lost in wonder.

Another most delightful singer is Miss Cora Tracy. Hers is a contralto voice of rare smoothness and resonance, with that velvety and sympathetic quality that touches the soul. Her best number is "The Rose and the Breeze," and she was recalled several times.

Harry Davies has a sweet tenor voice, and Harold Crane a fine baritone, and both have some excellent songs.

The comedians are fine funmakers. Leading them is W. J. McCarthy, who in a German comedy part is making laughter all the time. Louis Cassavant and Myron Davies ably support him, and the fun is of the genuine sort.

The chorus work is fine, the costuming lavish and the stage settings entirely in keeping with the splendor of the entire performance.

This afternoon a matinee was given and tonight the final performance will be heard.

* * *

There is nothing talked about in labor circles just now but the Brainerd convention. That begins Monday morning and the delegates from Duluth leave for Brainerd today and other laboring men will go on tomorrow's trains. The delegation from Duluth, holding credentials to the federation convention consists of the following:

Butchers' union, No. 12, Leo Bernhardt; Carpenters' union No. 361, G. M. Davis, Paul Bolz, S. T. Skrove, George M. McNabb, Charles McKinnon; Cigarmakers' union No. 294, Charles Grimes; Electrical Workers' union No. 31, M. F. Redmond, William Runkle; Federated Trades' Assembly, Joseph Shartel, H. Pereault, James Walsh, William Tunell, J. McDonald; Lathers' union No. 12, Bert Campbell; Machinists, F. Booren; Plumbers' union, D. Halpin, John Keenan; Steamfitters' union, O. G. G. Freshney; Musicians' union, Louis P. Weismiller; Carpenters' district council for Northern Minnesota, George A. Hunter; Cooks' and Waiters' union, George Wanch.

* * *

Those who are going to Brainerd should note that the morning train for that point leaves the Union depot here at 8:30, instead of 8:40 as announced. There has been a change of schedule.

* * *

The Duluth delegation to the Brainerd convention met last Sunday and chose the following, who will be recommended to the president of the convention for appointment on committees: Credentials, Dan Halpin of the Plumbers' union; rules and order of business, John McDonald of the Typographical union; constitution and law, James Walsh of the Tugmen's union; resolutions, Joseph Shartel, president of the local Trades' Assembly; officers' reports, S. T. Skrove of the Carpenters' union; finance, Bert Campbell of the Lathers' union; organization, George W. Davis of the Carpenters' union; legislation, Henry Pereault of the Cigarmakers' union.

* * *

Rev. J. K. Shellenberger, pastor of the First Christian church, was elected an honorary member of the Federated Trades' assembly in recognition of his address on "Trades Unionism." Mr. Shellenberger is a sincere advocate of the rights of the workingman and last night in his address, while admitting that he knew but little of the aims and work of the labor bodies, showed that his heart was right. Without getting too churchy for the occasion, he preached Almighty God as the only real arbiter of the differences which exist between capital and labor. He admitted that he does not know of a solution for the problem which is confronting capital and labor, but said that he believes the problem will in time be satisfactorily solved for the reason that he believes in God—that "there is a Divinity which shapes our ends." He urged laboring men to be true to themselves first and then true to their fellowmen, which will be the first step toward the solution of the great problem.

* * *

State Secretary W. E. McEwen made a short address before the assembly, in which he commended Mr. Shellenberger's remarks, and suggested that the assembly frequently listen to speakers who can look at the matter from the outside. Mr. McEwen said that this is one way to broaden out and get out of the narrow rut into which the men of one idea, be it labor, capital or anything else, are sure to fall.

* * *

It is likely that the assembly will invite other clergymen and other public speakers to address them at the semi-monthly meetings which are held. Last night's address proved a success, and attracted quite a number of laboring men other than those who are delegates to the assembly.

* * *

At the Trades' assembly meeting last evening, Grand President Walsh of the Licensed Tugmen's Protective association, which has trouble with T. R. Hancock, a meat market man, and on whom the L. T. P. A. has declared a boycott, which has been endorsed by the Trades' assembly, asked that a stronger boycott be put on the market. He claimed that while Hancock's meat market has lost a good deal of its marine trade, and considerable of its shore trade since the boycott was put on, still a much stronger boycott can be pressed. As a result of his request, the Trades' assembly ordered 5,000 cards to be printed and distributed, announcing the boycott, and asking the co-operation of all those who are in sympathy with labor. The delegate of the Seamen's union will also be notified, and will request the cooks on the boats coming in here to turn down solicitations from Hancock's market.

The assembly also voted to have a blackboard put up in the assembly room on which boycotts and other announcements will be recorded.

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL.

Few People Know How Useful It Is In Preserving Health and Beauty.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form, or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much-improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but on the contrary, great benefit.

A Buffalo physician, in speaking of the benefits of charcoal, says: "I advise Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

Fishing Party Loses Its Horses and Outfit By Fire.

Atkinson—Thomas Sensiba of Atkinson, Iron county, went trout fishing the other day. He took his boys with him. Headquarters were made at one of the Metropolitan Lumber company's camps, where Sensiba left the boys and his team while he whipped a nearby stream. The boys carelessly started a fire in one end of the camp, the flames spread and the camp, horses and wagon were consumed.

Gladstone—The matter of paving with concrete has been brought up at Gladstone. It is proposed to pave Delta avenue with blocks of cement probably a yard square and six inches thick. The cost has been figured at fifty or sixty dollars per twenty-eight-foot lot. What the virtues or demerits of concrete blocks used in this manner are unknown; and it is suggested a small section might be laid as an experiment. The plan may be tried by the city council.

Manistique—A Manistique citizen traded horses with a band of gypsies the other day and was beautifully skinned. He managed to persuade the band to make an exchange and the officers collected the $30 "boot" money he had paid.

E. E. Coombs of Manistique, auditor of the M., M. & N. road, caught a pickerel which measured forty-three inches and weighed twenty pounds, while fishing in Martha lake. The fish will be mounted. Besides the big pickerel, many bass were caught.

St. Ignace—Miss Anna Beveridge of St. Ignace has accepted a position as bookkeeper in Nome, Alaska, at a salary of $100 per month and board, transportation furnished free. Seven or eight women bookkeepers, the majority from Escanaba, engaged for different business houses in the territory, made up the party. The travelers were chaperoned by a young married couple, the goooin having come from Alaska to be married and take his bride to his faraway home. He was commissioned to secure bookkeepers by a number of Alaskan houses.

Crystal Falls—The Iron County National bank of Crystal Falls purchased the entire issue of school bonds recently authorized and has paid the district a nice premium for the privilege. It will amount to a little over $800 when the expense which the bank has assumed as a portion of the deal, is paid. The board has now under consideration the matter of plans and a site for the new school building.

CULMINATION OF ROMANCE

Marriage of Capt. Kent and Miss Treais Has a Story.

When Capt. Frank Kent of the Stevenson mine, at Hibbing, and Miss Elizabeth Ann Treais of St. Dominick, England, were married at St. Paul's Episcopal church, Thursday night, they had met the day before for the first time in twenty-five years.

As children Capt. Kent and Miss Treais lived in the same village in Cornwall, and she was a bosom friend of the girl, who was Mr. Kent's first wife, and who died about two years ago. In the Cornish village dwelled the father of Mrs. Kent, but of late years he had become so feeble that it devolved on Miss Treais to write his letters to his daughter across the seas.

In this manner Capt. Kent, through his wife, was kept aware of the movements of his early friend. After his wife's death he kept up the correspondence with Miss Treais, which ultimately culminted in his asking her to come to the United States and find a new home. Miss Treais is the only surviving and youngest daughter of William and Charlotte Treais of St. Dominick, Cornwall.

Through persevering effort Capt. Kent has worked himself to his present position. Ever since he could remember he has been around mines. Cornwall is full of them, and Mr. Kent started to work in one of them when he was only 10 years of age. He came to this country twenty-five years ago, and was first located in a mine at Ishpeming, Mich. He came with Capt. Morton to Tower, twenty years ago, and he has been on the nearby ranges ever since. He has a home at Hibbing, where he will take his bride this evening.

THE GRAIN MARKETS

Wheat Very Dull and Little Change In Prices.

Flax Trading Also Quiet and the Market Higher.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 10.—The wheat market was a rather dull proposition today. There was rather too much rain in the wheat country. King of Toledo surprised the trade with a report on the Kansas condition in which he reduced the percentage there to 77 on June 1, a decline in two months of 18 points. Last year the June condition was put at 87 with 85 at harvest. A condition of 77 on the government acreage suggests a crop of 77,378,000 bus., against 65,000,000 bus., last year. The Michigan report shows a condition of 97, against 99 last month. Last year at this time the condition was only 47 and at harvest 57.

The English markets were closed today and will not open until Wednesday. Paris closed ½@¾c lower.

The July option was ⅛c lower in Duluth, ⅛c lower in Minneapolis, ⅜c higher in Chicago, ⅛c higher in New York, ⅝c higher in St. Louis and ⅜-½c higher in Kansas City. September gained ¼-⅜c in Minneapolis, was unchanged in Duluth and New York, ¼c higher in Chicago and St. Louis and ½c higher in Kansas City.

Car receipts at Duluth were 4, against 49 last year, and at Minneapolis 154, against 141 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 158, against 190 last year. Chicago received 4, against 20 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 247,731 bushels, last year 383,705 bushels. Shipments 255,146 bushels, last year 216,500 bushels. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 63,300 bushels.

In the Chicago market July corn closed ⅛@¼c up; July oats closed unchanged. Primary receipts of corn were 491,200 bushels, last year 863,550 bushels. Shipments, 687,062 bushels, last year, 457,580 bushels. Clearances were 57,576 bushels.

Trading in wheat in the Duluth market was extremely dull, hardly a trade being made. The July option closed ⅛c lower at $1.11 and without a transaction. New September opened ¼c higher at 81c and fell to 80¾c, closing there. The old September also closed unchanged at 80¾c after selling to 86c.

Flax was as dull as wheat. The July option was about 2c up to $1.48 to get 1,000 bus, and closed at $1.47½. September advanced 1c to $1.29 and October ¾c to $1.29¾.

Oats and rye were unchanged. A quotation of 60c bid was made on September rye.

Following were the closing prices on the Duluth board:

Wheat—To arrive, No. 1 northern, $1.11; on track, No. 1 northern, $1.11; No. 2 northern, $1.09; durum No. 1, 86c; No. 2, 85c; July, $1.11; September, new, 80¾c; September, old, 85¾c. Flax—To arrive, $1.47½; on track, $1.47½; July, $1.47½; September, $1.29½; October, $1.29½. Oats—To arrive, 31¼c on track, 31¼c. Rye—September, 60c. Barley—Feed, 33½@41c.

Cars inspected—Wheat, 4, last year, 49; oats, 9; barley, 1; flax, 2, last year, 9.

Receipts—Wheat, 8,584; oats, 8,591; barley, 871; flax, 2,470.

Shipments—Wheat, 41,291; rye, 4,518.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Kansas Crop Report Gives Wheat Bullish Sentiment.

Chicago, June 10.—The Kansas crop report claiming a reduction of 18 points in the condition of crop June 1, compared with that of April 1, caused a bullish sentiment in the wheat pit here today. July opened ¼@⅝c to ⅞@⅞c up at 89¾ to 89⅞c. After touching 91¾c, the price settled back to 89¼c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 192 cars, against 259 cars last week, and 210 cars a year ago.

Rain in the corn belt had a bullish effect on the corn market. July opened ⅞c to ⅞@⅝c higher at 51⅝c to 51⅝@⅝c. After touching 51¾c, the price reacted to 51½c. Local receipts were 387 cars with 112 of contract grade.

Later the market reacted considerably on a report of a Chicago crop expert, claiming that the condition of wheat had improved materially during the past ten days. On selling brought out by this report July sold off to 88⅝@¾c. Shorts covered on the break, causing renewed firmness. The market closed firm, with July up ⅝c at 89¾@⅞c.

The oats market was strong. July opened a shade to ⅛c higher at 31⅜c to 31⅜@⅛c, and sold up to 31½c. Local receipts were 243 cars.

On heavy selling by a prominent trader the market eased off, July declining to 51⅜c. The reaction, however, was only temporary, a good general demand soon resulting in recovery of practically all the loss. The close was firm, with July up ⅝c at 51⅝c.

Provision were firm. September pork was up a shade at $12.82½@12.85. Lard was unchanged to 2½c higher at $7.40 to $7.42½. Ribs were up 2½@5c at $7.52½.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—Market showed much nervousness today, but on the whole maintained a very firm tone. Crop damage reports played an active part in today's market and while somewhat conflicting, were in the main bad enough to excite the trade to keep the short interest nervous. The reports we are getting from Indiana and Ohio show a gloomy condition prevailing in the Ohio Valley. From Nebraska and Southern Illinois come reports bordering on the sensational damage by fly and rust. Samples we have received of Indiana wheat show a very poor stand and thin. The immediate market will depend largely on the nature of reports we receive from now until harvest time. If the trade is to receive damage complaints such as we have been getting the past three days, the market could easily develop into a runaway affair. The weather too is a factor, as without a clear map from now until harvest time much damage may result. We are in the critical period of the crop.

Corn—Trade in this market did not assume any large proportions. The leading bull house was the principal seller really but they subsequently took much of the corn back that was sold at the opening. Receipts were very much smaller than a year ago. This feature of the market adds courage to the bull side as do also the reports of cash people that daily acceptance of their bids are receiving. The speculative situation looks strained with the principal buying coming from the short interest. Some of the best posted people in the trade are favorable to May and December corn at the present discount.

Oats—Trade shows no new feature. Primary shipments are not over large, but there is a little something being done in the cash way each day. The pronounced strength in the corn pit contributes much to the steadiness of this market.

* * *

Pringle, Fitch & Rankin, Chicago: One of the argest exporting houses in Duluth wires us: "We have corn bids today from every correspondent almost that we ever did business with, and considering that foreign prices are 5 or 10 per cent above Chicago July prices, and that we could work almost an unlimited quantity of corn basis July price in Chicago, we can not help but feel strong on the July corn option."

Committing Magistrates at Central Station Removed.

Philadelphia, June 10.—Magistrates Robert J. Moore and Leslie Yates who were a few months ago appointed committing magistrates at the central station by Mayor Weaver, to succeed Magistrates Cunningham and Kochersperger, were today removed from those positions by the mayor. Magistrates William Eisenbrown succeeds Moore and Magistrate Yates' place was filled by Magistrate Kochersperger, formerly committing magistrate. Magistrates Moore and Yates were strong organization men. To the influence of Senator McNichol, Yates owes his appointment at the central station and Insurance Commissioner Durham is said to have induced the mayor to appoint Moore, who was the reputed leader of the Fourth ward. Magistrates sitting at the central station draw $900 a year additional salary for that service.

ADVANCE IN STOCKS

Market Revised By Settlement of Equitable Life Dispute.

Wave of Pronounced Strength Swept Over the Exchange.

New York, June 10.—The Equitable Life settlement stimulated the stock market and the large buying orders were distributed throughout the list for execution at the opening today. First prices were sharply advanced over last night all round. Metropolitan Street Railway gained 2, and St. Paul 1¾, while the gains running from 1 to 1½ included Canadian Pacific, L. & N., Reading, Northern Pacific, New York Central, Atchison, Brooklyn Transit, Metropolitan Securities, Smelting, United States Steel preferred and Copper.

Profit taking sales made their customary slight inroads on prices, but after the market had demonstrated its good absorptive power prices rose substantially above the opening level. Some stocks which had not risen materially at the outset joined the advance including Pennsylvania, B. & O., Erie and some of the specialties. Advances approximating a point were pretty general. Northern Pacific, Union Pacific and Smelting gained 2 to 2¾.

Prices sagged slightly on a dull demand until the appearance of the bank statement when the current turned upwards again. Metropolitan Street Railway was carried up 4, St. Paul 3¼, Northern Pacific and Corn Products preferred 3½, Atlantic Coast Line and Smelting 3, Steel Foundries preferred 2¾ and Atchison, New York Central, Chesapeake & Ohio, Northwestern, Central of Jersey, Copper, Brooklyn Transit and Tennessee Coal 2 to 2½. Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis rose 6. The closing was active and strong.

Quotations furnished by Edwards-Wood Co., room A, Torrey building.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market closed strong and sharply higher, all departments participating in the wave of pronounced strength which swept over the market, due to better prospects for peace. The bank statement also contributed in forcing short covering. As we have pointed out for several days, the short interest is extremely large. The market by its strength gave evidence of being in a position to respond sharply to favorable news. The market shows a broadening out, trade is larger and conditions seem to hold out much more promise.

* * *

Gates to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market acts firm. The good feature is that it does not run away. London is closed today and Monday and these shorts must cover in New York. Europe will be big buyers next week and this is the time to buy them when the shorts begin to cover. You want to be in the procession.

* * *

Walker Brothers to Paine, Webber & Co.: By reason of favorable peace rumors and settlement of the Equitable troubles the market opened from ½ to 1 per cent over last night's close and gaining in strength during the morning, closed at top prices of the day. And no London market until Tuesday and the possibility of still more favorable news it is reasonable to expect that further short covering will be in line. Market closed strong and buyont with advances from one to three points throughout.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Paine, Webber & Co.: W. C. Greene, president of the Greene Copper company, says in a circular to stockholders: "The production of copper from the mines of the company in Mexico, for the month of May was 5,889,00 pounds, containing as by products 38,970 ounces of silver and 292,593 ounces of gold. During the month the company sold 8,969,000 pounds of copper at an average price of 14,937 cents per pound, representing practically the amount of copper we had on hand unsold. The same policy will be pursued of selling copper from month to month, as produced, at the current market price. While the late sale showed a slight reduction over the previous price obtained, there is every indication that the average price of copper will remain at about 15 cents per pound for the balance of the year."

Paine, Webber & Co.: The opening of the Dawson coal fields since the acquisition of the El Paso and Northeastern properties by Phelps, Dodge & Co., will also affect the saving of over $200,000 per annum in the cost of fuel. The number of stockholders in the company is continually increasing, we now having 4,670 stockholders.

MAIL CARRIERS IN CONVENTION

Minnesota Rural Association Holds Meeting at Excelsior.

St. Paul, June 10.—(Special to The Herald.)—The convention of the Minnesota Association of Rural Letter Carriers opened yesterday at Excelsior. President George L. Rathbun, presided. One hundred delegates, including one woman, were in attendance. Several changes in the constitution were proposed, and a committee to further revise was chosen and made up of F. H. Cunningham, H. H. Windsor, L. J. Crippen, W. H. Dunbar, E. A. Lane, Martin Jorgenson and Mr. Malne.

The resolutions committee appointed consists of August Rosenwald, A. J. Johnson and John Johnson.

The principal address was delivered by H. H. Windsor of Chicago, editor of the R. F. D. News. He said that while conditions were not altogether as they should be, rural delivery was no longer an experiment. Carriers should do all in their power to improve conditions on their routes. An increase of $1 per month on each route would mean an aggregate of $100,000 yearly throughout the country. Carriers throughout the country should receive such additional allowance in salaries as would permit them to discharge their duties without loss of money.

There was a disposition at Washington to rectify the mistakes of the past, and more courtesies were extended rural carriers than heretofore.

The blinds on the cabin were painted pink. He ran in close to the wreck, but could see no name and there were no persons aboard.

Bargains Benefit Both Barterer and Buyer!

A Farm for $10 Down and $4.00 a Month!

This will give you 40 acres of good fertile land in the big red clover district of Bayfield, Wis.,—as many acres as you like on the same basis for each 40-acre tract at $5 an acre.

Fine Investment for Young Men and Women

Think of the thousands of young people paying over money to the great life insurance companies every month with the expectation that at the end of twenty years or more they may only get their money back and a very small interest. Then think of the development of the United States in the past twenty years, and look on a map at the location of Northern Minnesota and Wisconsin as related to the head of inland navigation and the expanding markets of growing nearby cities. Will any reasonable man say that the land in this region will not be worth from three to ten times its present price within twenty years? Reason it out for yourself.

Worth $200 to $300 an Acre.

J. Sterling Morton, ex-Secretary of Agriculture, recently asserted that all well-located land in the United States would be worth that price within 50 years.

"I believe," he added, "that money invested in farms is the best possible investment one can make; even if purchased at what some may term 'boom prices,' one will soon see his investment doubled."

We Will Build You a Comfortable House

On any sized tract that you want, from forty acres up, upon payment of only one-quarter of the value of the land in cash, and spread the balance over several years. For a man who wants to get on a farm at small initial cost, this is a remarkable opportunity. All this land is surprisingly fertile, and it will pay you to investigate its possibilities. The Omaha railroad alone placed 900 families in Northern Wisconsin last year. We have about 60,000 acres to choose from.

Best Farming Land in Northern Minnesota.

We also have about 40,000 acres of the richest farming land to be found in this section of the state, all lying within a reasonable distance of railroads and midway between Duluth and the Twin Cities. We will give it to you for one-quarter its value in cash and the balance to suit your convenience. Runs from $5 to $15 an acre.

Chance for Investors.

We have some snaps in large tracts that can't be beat. CALL OR WRITE.

SALES OF REALTY ARE NOT NUMEROUS

Market Is Dull, Though Some Transactions, Largely of Cheap Property For Improvements, Have Been Made—Settlers Continue to Take Considerable Land Around the City.

With only two days of pleasant weather for the week, the period has not been a very favorable one for the real estate brokers, and there has been little property shown. The market, too, has been rather quiet, though not a dead one, some sales being made right along, both in and out of the city. In the city the bulk of the transfers continue to be in cheap lots for improvement, either this year or the early part of next year, while outside the city considerable land is being taken up right along by intending settlers. Bad weather, conventions, excursions and the like, all have their detracting influences from the real estate business, sometimes more, sometimes less, depending on the people who are most interested in them, and the real estate men have been sort of resting on their oars and waiting for more favorable conditions.

* * *

Most of the building contracts have been disposed of, and only one award was reported at the exchange this week, that of a residence for Carl A. Eggert, cashier for the Fitger Brewing company, on Second street, between Seventh and Eighth avenues east. The contract was given to Otto Johnson. Plans by A. W. tPuck. There are still a lot of heating, plumbing and lighting contracts, both for new buildings in the city and in towns outside the city.

Scott; fractional lots 1, 2 and 3, block 4, Norton's addition, for $800, to Mary Plutinsky; lot 11, block 39, Duluth Heights, First division, for $1,300, to Lillian Stambrough.

The Boston & Duluth Land company has closed the sale this week of a section of land South of Brookston and adjoining the reservation, to George W. Wassom and B. D. Brewster of Peru, Ind., for $5,120. The St. Jean Baptiste church has sold to St. Peter's church, for $6,000, two unimproved lots on the northeast corner of Eleventh avenue West and Fifth street.

* * *

* * *

C. E. Nystrom, architect, has plans on the boards for a 7-room frame residence for Joel Peterson, at Nineteenth avenue East and London road. Mr. Nystrom reports the contract for the three houses for J. F. Craig, awarded to A. Roberts. He has plans nearly complete for a residence on McCullogh street at Lakeside, for Mrs. Dycer.

* * *

Improvement Bulletin: Complaints are being made from time to time over the way contractors blockade streets with their materials and equipment, and the occasional neglect to display warning lights at such obstructions at night. Contractors should remember that accidents are expensive things to have occur and that it is cheaper to give careful attention to showing red lights than to take chances. As to the spreading out of materials and equipment across a street, there are many cases where the contractor does not intentionally allow it, but the piles gradually spread and nothing is done to stop it until more than the allotted space is occupied.

* * *

A. Terryberry has plans out for several cottages at Proctorknott.

* * *

J. A. Roberts has the contract for the new First National Bank building to be erected at Carlton. The plans were made by Palmer & Hunt.

* * *

Duluth has a total of $169,707 for permits issued in May. May of 1904 amounted to $125,488. Every month of this year has shown a gain over a year ago, except March, which had a slight decrease. If the ratio of increase continues through the season, the year will show a total of $2,000,000.

Race For Supremacy.

It is interesting to watch the race for supremacy among Minneapolis-St. Paul-Chicago trains. First place is securely held by the Pioneer Limited and the second place by the Fast Mail. Both trains are entirely owned by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway. There are three other fast trains via this line from the Twin Cities to Chicago every day, and there is no extra fare to ride on them. Address W. B. Dixon, northwestern passenger agent, St. Paul, for further particulars, lowest rates, etc.

Homeseekers and Settlers to the Northwest.

On each Tuesday during April the Minneapolis & St. Louis railroad will sell special low one-way tickets for benefit of settlers, to Northern Minnesota, Dakota and Canadian Northwest. Round trip tickets also on sale same dates at one fare plus two dollars, limit twenty-one days. Through trains daily to St. Paul, connecting in Union depot. Don't fail to consult Minneapolis & St. Louis agents, or address,

GERMANY'S IDEAS FOR NEW U. S. TREATY

Officials Preparing Draft For Submission to Washington.

Berlin, June 10.—The German government's draft of its views on the proposed commercial treaty with the United States is in course of preparation for submission to Washington in July. It is based upon the reports of the German chambers of commerce and other commercial authorities. The Dusseldorf chamber, one of the most influential in the Rheinish westphalian manufacturing district, sent Prince Von Buelow a memorial in which these fundamental principles were laid down:

First—The old Prussian treaty of 1828 must either be formally cancelled or extended to the German empire with binding force for the United States.

Second—If that treaty be cancelled it must be replaced by a treaty of comity and navigation between the two countries. Among other things such a treaty must regulate general navigation and commerce between them, define the rights of the citizens of one country while stopping in the other and perpare the way for an extension of copyright arrangements and the promotion of postal intercourse.

Third—A tariff treaty with the United States must be sought in which one concession shall be balanced by another fully or approximately equalling it.

Section 4 calls attention to Section 4 of the Dingley law permitting reciprocity concessions for only two years and expresses doubt as to whether the United States government is in a position to make a treaty at all without further legislation and whether the United States government could get from congress the right to conclude a treaty for a longer period than five years and then demands that in case the treaty negotiations lead to no practical result, that the general German customs be applied to imports from the United States.

Section 5 suggests that some alleviation to the export business of each country could be secured by the United States continuing the lower rates of duties on German goods in the list provided for by the Saratoga agreement to which Germany would answer with equivalent compensations but not with treaty rates throughout as conceded to other countries.

Section 6 reads: "Whatever arrangements is made must contain provision for supplying free of cost information about tariff matters, for the publication of official lists of goods with regular supplements and for the settlement of tariff differences by arbitration. The treaty must also provide for contesting tariff decisions through diplomatic channels and for the free circulation of samples of goods and each country must pledge itself to accept the findings of the scientific bodies of the other states, as to the composition of food products."

STORIES OF BATTLE

Told By Rear Admiral Enquist and Tokio Correspondent.

Russians Made Desperate Efforts to Pass Togo's Fleet.

St. Petersburg, June 10.—The emperor has received a long telegram from Rear Admiral Enquist, dated at Manila, June 5, describing that portion of the battle of the Sea of Japan on May 27, which took place between Tsu island and Kotsu island. Admiral Enquist says:

"There was a clear sky with a fresh south wind and a very foggy horizon. A Japanese squadron appeared at 1:45 p. m. to the north and engaged us in a tactical conflict, not permitting us to pass them in the direction of Vladivostok. Every time our squadron turned toward the north the superior speed of the Japanese enabled them to outstrip us, while at the same time they concentrated their fire on our leading battleships. The Japanese squadron consisted of nine battleships and cruisers and the Japanese battleship Chinyen maneuvered separately trying to take our ships between two fires. These tactics continued throughout the battle and greatly hampered our transports.

"Fifty minutes after the opening of the battle our battleship Oslabaya was sunk and the battleship Borodino was disabled. Soon afterwards the battleship Kniaz Souvaroff was on fire, losing her masts and funnels, and becoming disabled.

"Our squadron turned to protect the Kniaz Souvaroff, but the Borodino resumed her place in the column, which was now headed by the battleship Alexander III.

"The Japanese tactics compelled our squadron to move in a circle around the transports and torpedo boats, while the Japanese moved in an exterior circle. Owing to the inferior speed of our vessels it was difficult to escape this position, but before sunset our squadron resumed its voyage to the northward.

"At this time one of our torpedo boats near the Kniaz Souvaroff hoisted a signal that the command had been transferred to Rear Admiral Nebogatoff. The Alexander III. then left the column severely damaged. The Borodino, which was then at the head of the column received the enemy's concentrated fire and at sunset after firing her last shot, sank.

"Perceiving the number of Japanese torpedo boats engaged in the action the squadron which had now lost the Kniaz Souvaroff, the Borodino, the Oslabya, the Kamchatka and the Russ, turned to the southward.

"My cruisers in fighting the Japanese cruisers suffered greatly by the large calibre of the Japanese projectiles. With the coming of night the Japanese torpedo boat attacks commenced, the results of which I am unable to report, owing to my inability to distinguish between the Russian and Japanese vessels.

"Several times I endeavored to escape to the northward but was always reattacked and was obliged to turn to the southward.

"On the morning of May 28 not knowing the whereabouts of the remainder of our squadron, facing the risk of meeting the whole Japanese fleet, and having been greatly damaged and wanting coal, I decided that the ships then under my command should make for Manila.

"The conduct of my crews is above praise."

London, June 10.—The Tokio correspondent of the Times in an interesting account of the naval battle in the straits of Korea, says:

"Admiral Togo entered the arena with the best fighting material of his own squadron, four battleships and the cruisers Nisshin and Kasuga, and Vice Admiral Kamimura's squadron of six armored cruisers, Togo steaming fourteen and Kamimura sixteen knots. The Russians opened fire at 12,000 metres. It was wholly ineffectual. The Japanese reserved their fire until 7,500 metres, when they fired six trial shots and scored three hits. The battle then became general. The Russians perpetually essayed to force their way northward, but the Japanese constantly headed them back, so the Russian course described a loop, their ships filing past the Japanese, who poured in a deadly fire from three directions.

"The Russians maintained much the higher rate of fire, but their aim was bad and ineffectual. Togo's strategy completely succeeded. But the most important part of his plan remained for night, loosing his squadron of torpedo boats upon the disabled Russians. These rushed from three quarters, reserving their missiles until within 300 metres, and making practice so deadly that it redeemed all previous failures.

"The battle shows no novel features. Nothing was more notable than the Japanese still in using torpedoes, contrasting markedly with their previous ill success and evidently resulting from the special course of training they recently pursued, together with the teachings of experience."

WEALTHY FARMER

Is Charged With Assaulting His Housekeeper.

Crookston, Minn., June 10.—Four cases have been decided and ten indictments returned in district court. M. J. McCann of Warren, accused of indecently assaulting his housekeeper, Mrs. Arthur Plaistad, was indicted yesterday. McCann is one of the wealthiest farmers of the valley.

The Mallory postoffice robbers and safeblowers, George Norrie, Frank O'Brien and Joseph Davidson, drew two true bills apiece, one for burglary and the other for grand larceny. William Rogers of East Grand Forks, accused of maiming Joseph Tessier, was indicted and will stand trial for biting off Tessier's finger. C. O. Melsness of Nelsville, accused of stealing a car of wheat, has been indicted for larceny in the second degree.

The other indictments are as follows: William McArthur and Frank Gohde, grand larceny and burglary; Robert Casmey, Jr., assault in the second degree; James Clarke, grand larceny. The case of Emery Ulseth of Crookston against the Crookston Lumber company for $2,000 damages for injuries received while loading lumber in the yards here, is occupying the attention of the court today.

The preparation for the Fourth of July celebration call for one of the biggest times in the history of the city. Special trains from Winnipeg on both roads will be run and reduced-rate concessions on all roads for the event have been secured. The Ninetieth Rifles of Winnipeg and Companies I and F of Minnesota and North Dakota national guard will engage in a sham battle.

West Duluth

STRUCK BY CAR

Russell Cox Receives Fracture of Skull and Scalp Wound.

Going Behind One Car, Fails to See Other Approaching.

Russell Cox of 5218 Wadena street was seriously injured this morning at the corner of Central avenue and Bristol street, West Duluth, by being hit by a street car. Cox is only 15 years of age. His mother is Mrs. Jerome Cox, whose husband died only a short time ago.

The young fellow was delivering his route of morning papers, and about 7 o'clock dashed around the end of a car to cross the tracks, failing to notice a work car approaching from the other direction. As he ran across the track the work car hit him and knocked him quite a distance. He was taken to Dr. Graham's office, where his wounds were dressed temporarily.

Then he was taken in a special car to St. Luke's hospital, where his injuries were examined. It was found that he had received a fracture of the skull, above the left eye, and that there was a long cut in the scalp. The skull was trepanned and the wound sewed up. It is too early yet to say how seriously he is injured, but at present he is resting easily. It is thought that his youth and vigor will pull him out all right unless unexpected complications arise.

NEAR DEATH.

Former Resident Injured Badly In New Mexico.

Word has just been received that Joseph La Salle, formerly of West Duluth, was recently dangerously injured in Albequerque, N. M. He has been there for a year or more, engaged by a lumber company in which Sam C. Jackson is interested. Mr. La Salle was hit by a bolt from a lath mill, it flying back and striking him in the abdomen. The doctor in attedance claimed that an inch either way from where he was hit would have proved fatal. As it was, they considered that his chances for recovery were slim, but latest advices report him in no immediate danger.

Mrs. J. La Salle of Piedmont avenue and Third street is the injured man's mother. He has several sisters and brothers here, and others who live out of the city. All were formerly of West Duluth and New Duluth.

Mallory Withdraws.

At the meeting of the West Duluth Commercial club last evening, George J. Mallory, who was put into the field as candidate for member of the school board by the club, announced his withdrawal. He went in at the time because there seemed to be no West Duluth man available, but since that time B. N. Wheeler has entered the race, so that West Duluth is represented by two. Mr. Mallory withdraws in Mr. Wheelrs' favor.

RUSSIA AND JAPAN ACCEPT SUGGESTION OF PEACE

terms. Emperor Nicholas now won for peace, would again decide for war should the Japanese attitude be unconciliatory, or even one of long hesitation and reserve, though it is understood that Japan also gave the president some assurances before he acted.

INTERNAL CRISIS

For Russia Will Come at End of War.

St. Petersburg, June 10, 12:35 p. m.—The radical press which hounds the government no matter which way it turns, is promptly seeking to take advantage of the new situation created by the possibilty of peace. Although for months it has been preaching peace and the abandonment of the whole of the Mancrurian adventure at any cost, is has already veered around and pretends to be horrified at the fact that Russia can contemplate the possibilty of surrendering her position on the Pacific and purchasing peace at the price of an indemnity after the sacrifice of millions of the people's money and thousands of the people's lives and declares that only the people shall decide whether the country shall submit to this humiliation. These tactics will produce all the more effect since so far as the indemnity goes, the radical papers undoubtedly reflect the views of the masses of the Russian people as well as those prevalent in official circles. The status of Vladivostok and the question of an indemnity are sure to be the main obstacles to an agreement, once the belligerents are brought together, but the crisis for which the solid elements of the opposition are waging war against the government and trying to precipitate constitutes the chief danger. Soleman words of warning such as these uttered by the Moscow zemstvoists and the mayors of the principal cities who joined with them in the all-Russian zemstvo congress cannot be lightly thrust aside, although the government is getting accustomed to hard words. The organization known as the league of professional leagues yesterday, at Moscow threatened to translate their words into acts unless the government yielded and resolved not only to inaugurate a strike of all the professional classes, but to arm in self defense. They also bound themselves not to testify at political trials and to provide for each others' families in case any of the members suffered arrest and exile. Months ago M. Witte, president of the committees of ministers said to the correspondent of the Associated Press:

"There will be no internal crisis now or while the war lasts. The crisis will come when the war ends."

His words seem like a prophesy.

PRESIDENT SENDS NOTE

To Belligerents Urging the Ending of the War.

Washington, June 10.—An identical note, the text of which by authority of the president was made public late last night at the White House by Secretary Loeb, has been forwarded to the governments of Russia and Japan by President Roosevelt.

In the interests of humanity the president urges the warring nations to conclude peace. It is suggested by the president that the negotiations for peace be conducted "directly and exclusively" between the belligerent nations.

The note indicates the president's belief that an intermediary may not be necessary to effect conclusive negotiations, but likewise expresses the president's willingness to do all that he properly may to promote the preliminary arrangements for a time and place for the meeting of representatives of the Russian and Japanese governments.

The note is dated June 8, and is as follows:

"The president feels that the time has come when in the interest of all mankind he must endeavor to see if it is not possible to bring to an end the terrible and lamentable conflict now being waged. With both Russia and Japan the United States has inherited the ties of friendship and good will. It hopes for the prosperity of each, and it feels that the progress of the world is set back by the war between these two great nations. The president accordingly urges the Russian and Japanese governments, not only for their own sake but in the interest of the whole civilized world, to open direct negotiations for peace with one another.

"The president suggests that these peace negotiations be conducted directly and exclusively between the belligerents; in other words, that there may be a meeting of Russian and Japanese plenipotentiaries or delegates without any intermediary, in order to see if it is possible for these representatives of the two powers to agree to terms of peace.

"The president earnestly asks that the (Russian) (Japanese) government do now agree to such a meeting, and is asking the (Japanese) (Russian) government likewise to agree.

While the president does not feel that any intermediary should be called in respect to the peace negotiations themselves, he is entirely willing to do what he properly can, if the two powers concerned feel that his services will be of aid in arranging the preliminaries as to the time and place of meeting. But if even these preliminaries can be arranged directly between the two powers or in any other way, the president will be glad, as his sole purpose is to bring about a meeting in which the whole civilized world will pray may result in peace."

The foregoing note was forwarded to the Russian and Japanese governments Thursday afternoon. It is rendered especially significant by the fact that it was prepared and sent only after assurances had been received from Tokio and St Petersburg that such a proposition will be welcomed. While both Count Cassini, the Russian ambassador, and Minister Takahira of Japan, were cognizant of the note, it was not sent to their respective governments through them.

It was cabled by direction of the president to St. Petersburg and Tokio, and there delivered directly to the Russian and the Japanese governments respectively, by Ambassador Meyer and Minister Griscom. In addition to the assurances received by the president from Ambassador Meyer, after his audience with the czar and from Minister Griscom, who had conferred with the mikado's government, the president had indicated to the representatives of the two governments at this capital his intention.

He also discussed the subject with representatives of other powers accredited to this capital. While no intimation of the attitude assumed toward the proposition by either Ambassador Cassini or Minister Takahira is obtainable, it is known that other diplomats with whom the president conferred, cordially indorsed his intention.

A formal reply to the note may not be received for several days, but as already made clear, formal assurances that it would be welcome were at hand. Significant of the character of the document and the attitude toward it which both, Rusia and Japan, have assumed, it is regarded in official and diplomatic circles as the firm and decisive step toward ultimate peace.

BATTLE FIELD

May Be Meeting Place of Plenipotentiaries.

St. Petersburg, June 10, 3:15 p. m.—The text of President Roosevelt's personal appeal to the sovereigns of the warring countries to arrange a meeting of the plenipotentiaries for the purpose of agreeing on terms of peace, which arrived today, rent the veil, and for the sceptics at St. Petersburg, who refused to believe President Roosevelt's efforts to bring the belligerents together could succeed, it came like a bombshell. President Roosevelt's "solo purpose to bring about a meeting" has been achieved, and now it is merely a question whether the results will be the peace for "which the whole civilized world will pray."

It is a diplomatic triumph of the first magnitude, and the diplomats here make no attempt to conceal their admiration for the new world brand of diplomacy, which acts while the remainder of the world thinks.

The formal replies of Russia and Japan are expected to be transmitted through Count Cassini, the Russian ambassador at Washington, and M. Takahira, the Japanese minister at Washington, but the situation is such, at this hour, as to leave no doubt of the acceptance of both, and that the question of the selection of plenipotentiaries and the place of meeting will follow.

President Roosevelt's urgent expression in favor of direct negotiations, exclusively between the belligerents, points straight to the battlefield in Manchuria as the scene of the negotiations, and the diplomats generally here entertain the view that Russia and Japan had best settle their quarrel there beyond the range of possible outside influences. To the policy of non-interference practically all the powers are committed. Great Britain, it is felt here in diplomatic circles, will now complete the realization of what the president has begun by restraining her ally and inducing Japan to profer moderate terms which Russia can accept.

JAPS LOST SIX SHIPS,

According to Report of a Russian Commander.

St. Petersburg, June 10.—A long dispatch from Rear Admiral Reitzenstein to the ministry of marine dated Shanghai, June 6, gives the official report of the commander of the torpedo boat destroyer Bodri which recently arrived there in tow of a merchant steamer, but adds little to the knowledge about the battle of the sea of Japan. The Bodri, after taking off seventy-nine officers and men from the torpedo boat destroyer Blestiaschy which was sinking, tried to reach up with Admiral Enquist's fleet but ran out of fuel and lay helpless until picked up by the steamer Koneling and towed to Shanghai. The officers of the Bodri and the rescued men on board of her reiterate that the Japanese lost two battleships, one of which was of the Mikasa and the other of the Shikhishima type and one armored cruiser and three cruisers.

Rear Admiral Reitzenstein adds that the Chinese authorities requested the Bodri to leave but Vice Admiral Kamimura's squadron arrived off the Saddle islands and her departure would have resulted in the loss of the vessel. Therefore it was decided to leave the torpedo boat destroyer at Shanghai.

A Pretty Shower.

One of the pretty events of the week was a shower given last night at the home of Miss Agnes Campbell on West First street, for Miss Cordelia Longlin, whose marriage to John Sholts will take place next Wednesday. Lilacs were used effectively in the dining room and the evening was spent with music and a jolly good time was had.

The following young women were present: Louise Andrianne, Agnes Campbell, Minnie Vail, Emma Andersen, Florence Campbell, Celia Andrianne, Ethel Streeter, Mina Weatherlow, Francis Campbell and Cordelia Longtin.

BASS FROM SERPENT LAKE.

STRING OF 101 BLACK BASS CAUGHT BY DULUTH MEN AT DEERWOOD.

For a body of water that has been reported pretty well fished out for the past ten years, Serpent lake, which is usually spoken of as the principal lake in the vicinity of Deerwood, is showing up with a good record this season.

The accompanying picture shows the catch of bass made by a party of five board of trade men during one and a half days' bass fishing in this lake.

The total catch amounted to 101 fish, with a total weight of a little over 200 pounds.

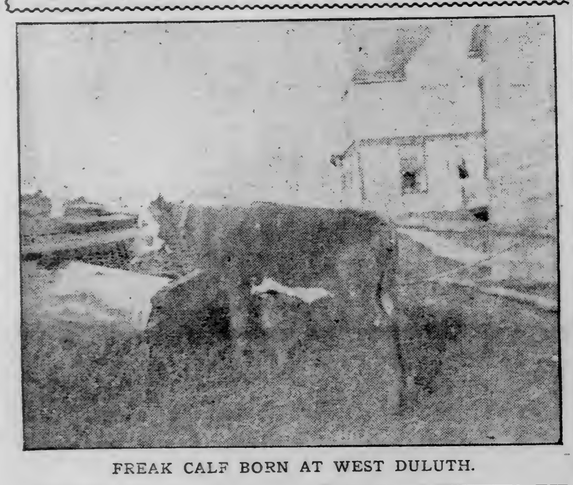
Before the picture was taken the fish were strung on wires in three rows, in accordance with their size, the largest at the top and the smallest at the bottom.

On the top row here shown there are twenty-five bass, averaging two and three-fourth pounds each. Some of these big fellows tipped the scale at four pounds and a little under.

The thirty-five fish on the second row averaged two pounds each, while the forty-one smaller fish on the lower row averaged one and one-half pounds each.

The party of young men were guests during their stay at the lake of D. E. Whitten, a well-known resident of that locality.

CALF THAT IS PART MOOSE.



FREAK CALF BORN AT WEST DULUTH.

Mrs. John Dashney, who lives with the family of James Hay, 505 Seventieth avenue west, owns a cow which has produced something of a monstrosity. This cow was delivered of a calf about six weeks ago that looked peculiar to start with, and now that it is beginning to develop features, gives evidence of having a decided strain of moose in its make-up. Mrs. Dashney, whose husband is foreman for the Powers-Simpson company, just out of Hibbing, brought the cow down from Hibbing in April. The cow was running loose up on the range, and it is believed that the calf, a picture of which appears here, must be the result of a cow-moose flirtation in the woods somewhere in the vicinity of Hibbing.

The head and tail are those of a bovine, but the rest of the body is more like that of a moose. The hind legs are distinctly those of a moose, and the calf is developing what is generally termed a "bell" under its chin, as on the heads of moose.

Of course all healthy calves are frisky, but this one is extraordinarily so. His jumping powers would put a jack-rabbit to shame, and he is hard to domesticate. The mother of this calf is an Ayrshire-Durnam cow, and instead of seeming to feel disturbed over the antics of her offspring, is quite unconcerned and calmly chews her cud as though nothing unusual is about.

ALL THE TRAIL FOR $7

Lewis and Clark Fair Visitors May See 35 Shows For That Small Amount.

the centennial. At St. Louis it cost in the neighborhood of 150 to see the "Pike" with its seventy shows, many of them which were not worth the price of admission. The Trail offers thirty-five of the finest attractions ever included in an exposition. Fancy seeing thirty-five shows for seven dollars.

The most expensive concession on the Trail is the Carnival of Venice, a spectacular production designed by the "king of the ballet," Bolossy Kiralfy. The price of admission to this attraction is 50 cents, and after seeing the show the fee will be pronounced reasonable. Five hundred persons participate on the stage. The scene is laid in Venice and by means of some very fine scenic effects the illusion is faithfully carried out, even to the canals of that Italian city. The canals are of real water. The Carnival of Venice is a terpsichorean extravaganza of the highest order.

Leaving the Carnival of Venice the visitor meanders over to the Homer Davenport farm. Paying 25 cents he enters and beholds the foremost cartoonist of the world comfortably seated on a rustic bench before a crudely built log house. Surrounding the illustrious penman are hundreds of blooded fowls, several specimens of horses of Arabian blood and a magnificent Hambletonian. Davenport will be found affable, urbane and democratic, and if the visitor is of the right sort the cartoonist may offer him a modest sketch as a memento.

Across the way from Davenport's is the Klondike nibbleg exhibit. This concession is pre-eminent from an educational standpoint and offers the visitor a truthful portrayal of mining methods in vogue in the gold fields of Alaska. The building that houses the show is designed inside in panorama effect and a full-sized placer mine is found in operation. Cleanups of real gold worth $10,000 are made every hour. The admission is 25 cents.

Following the Trail the visitor enters the streets of Cairo, paying a fee of 15 cents. He is now in the midst of all that is Egyptian. Strangely garbed people are seen on all sides, now a diminutive donkey belabored by a boy in flowing robe dashes past, or a monstrous camel loaded with human freight lumbers through the street. Ferocious-looking Portland, Or., June 10.—(Special to The Herald.)—Seven dollars will enable the visitor to the Lewis and Clark exposition to see every concession on the Trail, the amusement thoroughfare of which, to see every concession on warriors dance about in mock combat. The shricking strains of curious Oriental instruments are wafted from the theater on the soft, Oregon ozone. For 25 cents the visitor gains entrance to this foreign show house and spends a pleasant half hour viewing the antics of a strange people.

A wonderful show is located almost opposite the streets of Cairo, the Infant Incubators. There is no gaiety about this concession. It represents the most astonishing achievement of modern science, the nurturing of the human being by artificial means. In the pleasing little building housing this attraction are several ingeniously constructed incubators containing real live infants. Visitors are allowed to gaze at them through plate glass, and apparently the tots are content to remain in their snug homes. The admission to the infant incubators is 25 cents.

And so on down the Trail the visitor may meander. A great many of the shows offers admissions as low as 10 cents. The visitor finds foolish shows and serious shows, or he may devote his time to instructive shows. No matter how hard he "hits the Trail," he cannot spend more than $7, which will admit him to thirty-five attractions, unless he chooses to take in a show more than once. The entire list of concessions, with their prices of admission, follows:

Gay Paree, 25 cents; Concert Hall, 25 cents; Infant Incubators, 25 cents; Cascade Gardens, 25 cents; White Swan, 10 cents; Japanese village and theater, 25 cents; Diving Elks, 25 cents; New York Animal Show, 25 cents; Haunted Swing, 25 cents; Streets of Cairo, 15 cents; theater, 25 cents; Donkey ride, 25 cents; Camel ride, 20 cents; Carnival of Venice, 50 cents; Land of the Midnight Sun, 25 cents; Televue, 25 cents; Davenport Farm, 25 cents; Sistine Madonna, 10 cents; Trip to Niagara Falls, 25 cents; Galveston Flood, 25 cents; California Radium exhibit, 10 cents; Burns' cottage, 10 cents; Shooting Gallery, 10 cents; Mirror Maze, 10 cents; White Slave or Glimpse of the Harem, 10 cents; Grand Siberian Railway, 25 cents; and Blue Grotto, 25 cents.

GET WELL—KEEP WELL

Introductory Article of a Health Series By a Famous Expert—"Health Is Your Birthright"—Drugs Never Cure, But Will Tide Over Emergencies—Health Essentials—The Seven Indications of Health—"No Hard and Fast Rules"—Subjects To Be Considered.

BY EDWARD B. WARMAN.
(Author "Scientific Physical Training;" Former Editor Health Department, "Ladies Home Journal.")

(Copyright, 1905, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

When an author writes a book, he writes a preface; the preface is a key that in a measure reveals the contents of the book. If the reader is interested, he proceeds; if not, he seldom goes beyond the mere introduction. If, instead of a book, it is a series of articles the same rule holds good. If the writer is a specialist, the reader wishes to know at the outset—first, is he a mere theorist or does he practice what he preaches? Second, what are the results of his observation and experience? Third, are his teachings such that one can practically apply them and receive the desired benefits?

In answer to the first, I quote from the Chicago Daily Tribune, as far back as 1888: "Mr. Warman is not merely a theorist, but practices what he preaches, and is in consequence one of the healthiest and most vigorous of men."

Second, my observation and experience have been such as to warrant the assertion that health is your birthright. If you have not come in possession of it or, having possessed it, have since lost it, you may still have it. "If thou wilt thou canst be made whole," but you must exercise the will.

Third, laying hold of the principles that I shall endeavor to inculcate you will surely reay your reward, and that reward is health.

FUNDAMENTAL PRINCIPLES.

Health! What is it? Health is wholeness. It therefore stands to reason that there can be no modification or qualification of that term, no such thing as good health, poor health, ill health; but simply and gloriously health, every letter of which is a capital. Besides, health is just as contagious as disease. I hope that every reader of these articles will come so closely in touch with the writer as to feel the effects of that contagion and go forth assured that he has a new lease on life.

But can I get health without drugs? You can never get it with drugs. Drugs never cured anybody. Every reliable physician will tell you that. Nature cures. If drugs would cure the acute cases there would be no chronic ones. The doctors, God bless them—the good ones, the noble, self-sacrificing ones. There are very few of them that would give you drugs if you would take advice instead, but you do not feel that you get your money's worth unless you carry away a prescription or a bottle. But there are doctors and doctors. Some of them represent patience on a monument; some of them put their patients under a monument.

Still I believe in the physician—the good one. Sometimes a man's life is saved by the absence instead of the presence of the physician. A friend of mine in Washington, D. C., told me of a physician—neither noted nor skillful—that saved his life after the most noted physicians had given him up. When I asked him to explain this apparent inconsistency, he facetiously remarked: "As a last resort we sent for him—but he didn't come."

Truly, many a man's life has been saved by the physician not getting, there but I am also frank to admit that the timely arrival of a physician has saved many a life.

I verily believe that the late Sir Morrell McKenzie, M. D., was right when he declared "if there were no doctors nor drugs in the world, the rate of mortality would be less."

Why? Because of the indiscriminate use of drugs and that nature would have a better chance to right the wrong. It should be remembered that Dr. McKenzie died of a disease of which he was a specialist of international reputation. It had become chronic. No drug could cure him.

As a teacher of physical education and hygiene; having lectured and taught in every state and territory and many of the provinces of Canada, and that experience extending over a period of thirty-seven years, I have come to the position where I can view all remedial agencies without prejudice; hence am not a physical training crank. I will put my decision in a few brief sentences, thus:

(1). While drugs do not cure, they will sometimes tide over a case of emergency—not by aiding nature, but by opposing and arousing to greater action as in the case of a torpid liver. 'Tis true, the system may be somewhat weakened by getting rid of the disease, plus the drug.

(2). So great is the power of suggestion (unexpressed) in the giving and taking of medicine that no one can say just how much is due to the suggestion, how little to the drug.

(3). The drug habit will continue until the people shall have been educated to the fact that all of the health essentials are found in fresh air, wholesome food, pure water and exercise, coupled with right thinking.

(4). The efficiency of the drug is more potent in its effect upon the body through the agency of the mind.

(5). Imagination may cause a disease, but the disease thus caused is not imaginary. In this case I would apply an allopathic mental treatment on a homeopathic principle—similia similibus curantur.

(6) My conclusion is that drugs may be used effectively, but the cure is not always due to the effectiveness of the drug.

WHAT ARE THE INDICATIONS OF HEALTH?

There are seven. Not merely one, but all of these are in evidence where health abounds. Health is synonymous of ease and harmony; lack of health, disease and inharmony.

(1) Correct position of the body when sitting or standing.
(2) Correct carriage of the body when walking.
(3) Diaphragmatic breathing.
(4) A clear complexion.
(5) A bright eye.
(6) A sweet berath.
(7) An odorless body.

To acquire all of these is the great desideratum and, as a word of encouragement, I assure you that I can and will vouchsafe HEALTH to all who conform to the general teachings as outlined in this series of articles. Bear in mind there will be nothing dogmatic, no hard and fast rules, but a setting forth of certain well-defined, thoroughly-tested principles from which everyone may choose intelligently and thereby be a law unto himself—after having become familiar with the law.

The following subjects will be duly and carefully considered, viz.:

Correct position and how to obtain it.
My three pet exercises for health.
Eating for health.
Drinking for health.
Bathing for health.
Breathing for health.
Bicycling for health.
Color of clothing as affecting health.
Underwear (silk, wool, cotton, linen) as affecting health.
Insulation as affecting health.
Stair-climbing as an exercise.
How to avoid catching cold.
How to woo and win sleep in two minutes.

Only three exercises? Yes. Those three, without apparatus, will add years to your life and life to your years. I give greater prominence, as will be seen, to the subject of hygiene than to physical training. Why? Because the average person gets more or less physical exercise (the majority less); also for the very good reason that physical training, of itself, does not insure health. (Many athletes die ere middle life and few athletes or teachers of physical training are WELL—i. e., have health).

It took me twenty years out of my thirty-seven, as a teacher of physical education to learn this lesson—this lesson that I purpose teaching you. Since learning it—the value of right living—I have not been ill or tired (in the seventeen years) yet am never idle, except when asleep—from six to eight hours.

I merely mention this little matter for the sake of encouragement to those who desire health, strength and longevity.

(Prof. Warman's next article will deal with correct position and how to attain it.)

INDIAN GIANT AFTER JEFF

The largest Indian now in captivity, if the press agent is to be believed, sat on a cheap bed in a cheap lodging house yesterday afternoon and declined to be interviewed, says the Portland Oregonian. He had a grouch on commensurate with his size, which is seven feet as to height, and 450 pounds in the matter of weight.

This Injun, who rejoices in the name of John Middlesky, wants to be a prize fighter, at least his managers want him to be one. I wonder why, said I to Middlesky, and received no answer, for the big Injun wouldn't talk to me. His managers, two dapper young men from San Francisco, whom I met at the Eaton, told me on the way down to the lodging house, where the freak was being herded, that he could talk four languages, Mexican, two Indian dialects and homespun English. Fancy my disappointment when, upon being shown into the room where the seven-foot 400-pound aspirant for ring honors sat, to find that a large-sized grouch had settled down upon him, and, instead of the ready linguist I had expected. I found a mammoth human animal who was averse to articulate in any tongue whatever.

"Stand up, Jumbo, and shake hands with the gent," was the way in which one of the managers opened the matinee, and "Jumbo" obediently stood up in all his obese majesty, extracted a Joan Cudahy ham, which he uses for a hand, from a capacious pocket, and wagged my arm to and fro.

Kipling has interviewed pile drivers and steam dredges, but say, Rudyard never went against anything like John Middlesky.

Do you think he answered my greeting? Well, I guess not. He reached down and enfolded my delicate fairy hand, and for a moment I was afraid the rude creature was going to accost me. But he didn't.

I said something to him. It was not Websterian, but it seemed appropriate, but he muttered not a grunt.

I sat down on a dissipated-looking chair and gave it up.

"I can't talk to him. He's too proud and haughty for me," was my complaint to the managers. "You told me he talked four languages. Now, let's see him perform."

The manager was vexed.

"Durn him"—he didn't really say durn—"he always does that way when we want him to be sociable. He's kind as a child and a perfect gentleman generally until we want him to talk for the papers. Then he gets sore and won't say a word."

The impresario turned again to his charge.

"Jumbo, tell this man something about yourself." Still never a mutter from Poor Lo.

Here was a novelty and a diversion. I thought of the serried and sometimes inebriated ranks of the famous who had opened their hearts to me, told me their names and admitted their greatness, but this simple aborigine, who got "sore" at the sight of

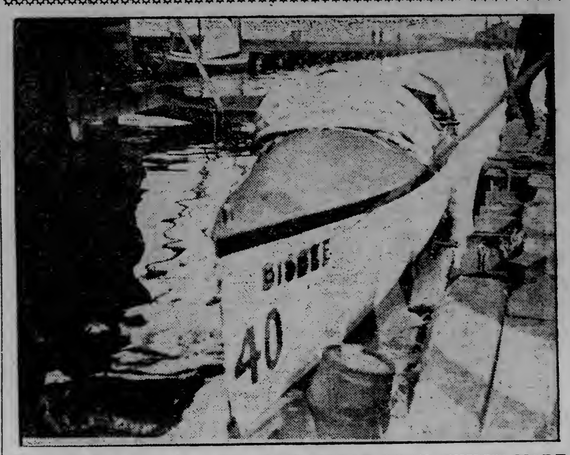
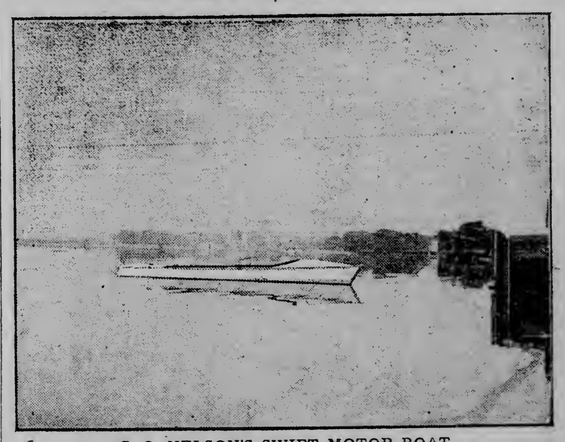
THE BISBEE AND DIXIE TWO SWIFT AUTO BOATS

One Owned By Richard Schell and the Other By C. O. Nelson—Which Is the Faster?



THE BISBEE, RICHARD SCHELL'S MOTOR BOAT, WHICH MADE FAST TIME AT LAKE MINNETONKA.



C. O. NELSON'S SWIFT MOTOR BOAT.

Duluth now has two auto-boats, pictures of which appear herewith, and launch enthusiasts will not rest easy until these two have raced and settled the matter of supremacy. One is owned by C. O. Nelson, the West end furniture man, and the other is the property of Richard Schell of West Duluth. There is no doubt that the question of which is the fastest craft in the harbor lies between these two. One is the fastest and the other is the second fastest. Each is guaranteed to go seventeen miles an hour and the owners claim that each does a little better than that.

The Dixie, which is Mr. Nelson's boat, has not been given a public trial in this part of the country yet, but the Bisbee, Mr. Schell's boat, was tried on Wednesday on the bay and took part in a race on Memorial day in Lake Minnetonka. In the Memorial day race she outdistanaced all competitors. Mr. Schell says she went over the fifteen-mile course in 58 minutes and 10 seconds. In her trial spin on the bay Wednesday the Bisbee certainly tore the water wide open.

The Bisbee is 27 feet long and has a four cylinder 20-horsepower engine. The hull was built by Dingle of St. Paul and the engine was built by the Globe Iron works of Monomonie, Wis.

The Dixie has a guaranteed speed of over seventeen miles an hour. She is 30 feet long and has a 16-horse power engine built by the G. F. Sparks Machine company of Alton, Ill. Her hull was built by H. B. Vehstedt of Chicago.

The shapes of the two boats are an interesting study. Both are built for speed, but show different ideas of different builders. The Bisbee is more roomy above the water than the Dixie, which is built with a long narrow body coming to a razor point. In the Bisbee the steering gear is on the port side of the boat, about the middle and right handy to the lever of the engine so that one man can handle both. The Dixie's engine and steering gear are placed a good deal the same as in an automobile, both in the middle of the boat forward and right together so that the man sitting in the driver's seat has everything before him.

THE IRRIGATION COUNTRY

Eastern Business Men Interested In the Work—Dry Land Reclamation.

While the present irrigation fund $25,000,000 would not go very far, distributed throughout the sixteen great Western states and territories, in two, three, or four million dollar amounts, it is being made to carry forward a quite uniform and comprehensive irrigation development, by making the irrigation works pay for themselves.

In other words it is not the program of the reclamation service to build large projects complete immediately, but to finish a small but independent portion of each project so that the water rights of the lands thus irrigated may be sold to the settlers and thus immediately furnish money with which to carry the work still farther. The government is in each case starting the works, and allowing the project itself and the settlers to provide for its completion. And as in all the government projects the lands are being eagerly taken up by settlers, there is no question of the success and completion of the works, of however great magnitude.

That the eastern part of the United States is not indifferent to the national benefit of irrigation and the development of the West is shown by the intelligent resolutions passed at the recent annual meeting of the National Association of Manufacturers, held at Atlanta, Ga., on May 21.

Recognizing that the resolution of Western desert acres will furnish the finest market possible for Eastern manufactures, the resolutions commended the administration of Secretary Hitchcock of the Interior department, who is charged with the administration of the irrigation law, endorsed by Director Wolcott and Chief Engineer Newell of the reclamation service and pledged to them the support of 3,300 of the largest manufacturers in the United States in their continued efforts to carry out the national irrigation act for the creation of the largest possible number of prosperous American homes.

The resolutions further set forth that the profound importance of the social and philanthropic features of the irrigation movement and the subdivision of large land tracts into small homes should be impressed upon the American people to the end that America should become a nation of rural homes rather than one of large cities.

The resolutions call attention to the great public importance of the national frauds the weakness of our present land laws and strongly support the recommendations of President Roosevelt's public land commission for a thorough reform in our land laws to the end that the public lands be held strictly for real settlers and against speculators.

Colorado, Wyoming and Montana are, apparently, waking up to the fact that several million acres of land in those states which have been for years grazed upon by cattle and sheep and considered worthless for agriculture in any form, can be made to grow very profitable crops of grains, forage, and in some cases even vegetables and fruit. The rainfall in these regions is comparatively slight, but it happens to come at just the growing season of the crops and the soil is wonderfully retentive of moisture as well as productive that from fifteen to thirty bushels of wheat per acre and other crops in proportion, can be raised on as little as twelve or sixteen inches of rainfall, which in Eastern states would not suffice to half way mature a crop. The "dry farm" experts state that there are at least a hundred million acres of land distributed throughout the Western states, in some places in very considerable tracts and in other sections in small patches, where the climatic conditions are such that the lands will yield crops as good as the average farm lands of the Mississippi valley. This class of development by better cultivation of the soil, in connection with the introduction by the government of foreign plants specially adapted to American arid land conditions and further joined by the great agricultural development under national irrigation will cause in the next ten years a mighty transformation in the West.

GUY ELLIOTT MITCHELL.

COLORED INK

SOCIETY

When part of the number of days allotted to June have gone into the past and a number of the months-ago-promised-brides have materialized in lace robes and tulle and maids and flowers, the average attendant of weddings can not help but wonder what does become of wedding presents. Now almost every bride who has a quiet home wedding, or she of the beautiful quiet service or she who sends to her friends what John Henry labelled a "come-to-the-church" has at least one room full of presents. There is cut glass and silver until all your ah's and oh's of adoration have given out, there are maybe three pie knives, and fish servers without end, there are nut spoons and lemon scissors, that are a contraption of the evil one as every body who has ever tried to help herself with one of the evil possessed machines knows, and then there are things too numerous to mention that nobody but the jeweler who sold it knows what they are, and he read it off the box it came in. One dinky little article that might be anything, which is sent to a girl who is to be a June bride was speechlessly examined by everybody within call and at last the poor harrassed one explosively ejaculated "Please say you think it's a cheese knife. I have everything else on earth but a cheese knife and I don't see how I can keep house without one," and considering the wail in her voice and that it was just as easy to make it a cheese knife as a caviar server they all agreed that it was quite the nicest cheese knife ever contrived for the bewilderment of folks who get scared when confronted with more than three layers of silver on either side of a plate.

But to get back to the original question of what becomes of wedding presents. It is a question undoubtedly that has been discussed by other fillers of space but so has that ancient interrogation, "What becomes of all the pins," and even so, there is scarcely anyone that can answer right off hand and tell what does become of the small pointed appliances. So it may again be asked, What becomes of the wedding presents? There are always gifts and, of course, at the time of the wedding they are exhibited all in one room and later they are more tastfully scattered about the house, but still and for all there never seem to be so many. For instance who ever dined at a house where the nuts were served with a regulation daintily filigreed, perfectly senseless nut spoon? And how many are the brides who exulted in the possession of said article. It almost drives one to the belief that in months to come when wedding invitations come to the happy but maybe financially limited young married couple, they look over their store of useless wedding presents and pick out the one from which it causes them the least pangs to separate themselves and send it forthwith to the bride. This may account for the disposal of a few wedding gifts, but is hardly feasible for the almost visible shrinkage which lots of the uninitiated wonder about.

One of the most charming of the June weddings was the lilac wedding of Miss Mary Elizabeth Parker, daughter of Charles Edward Parker, and Hugo John Kremer, which took place Wednesday morning of this week at the cathedral of the Sacred Heart. In the church decorations and the gowns of the wedding party lilacs of purple and white were used, and the colors of the gowns were in those shades only. The altar was banked with the purple lilacs, and about the church palms and ferns were used, and the effect was exceedingly beautiful.

As the guests were being seated a musical program was given by Miss Bradshaw and Miss Wolford of Superior, Miss Bradshaw sang "Calm As the Night" and sang again during the marriage service. At 10:30 o'clock the wedding party entered the church. The ushers, Messrs. S. S. Rumsey, Bert Kremer, Charles Parker and Percy Ginder entered first and were followed by the maid of honor, Miss Mildred Cooper. Then came the bridesmaids, Miss Sara Smith and Miss Hettie Gould, both of Superior, and then the matron of honor, Mrs. A. W. Hepworth, immediately preceding the bride, with her father. They were met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Frank Parker, and the beautiful Catholic mass was read by Father Corbett.

The gowns of the bride and her attendants were most attractive. The bridesmaids wore dainty white India linen, trimmed in valenciennes lace, and wore dainty lace hats, trimmed in white lilacs, and carried great bunches of the same flowers. Miss Cooper wore a pattern gown of white, eyelet-embroidered, and a hat of the same, and carried a graceful bouquet of asparagus ferns, tied with an immense bow of maline. The matron of honor wore a dainty gown of sheerest silk tissue of white, with touches of lilac color through it. She wore a lilac lace hat and carried the purple flowers. The bride's gown was a beautiful lace robe, and she wore a long veil caught with orange blossoms, and carried a prayer book.

A large number of guests were present at the ceremony, and among the out-of-town guests were Mrs. Frederick Nelson Finch and Miss McMichael of St. Paul; Mrs. Kremer, mother of the groom, of Fond du Lac, and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Kremer of Fond du Lac.

At 1 o'clock a wedding breakfast was served at the Spalding. The table was most attractive in pink and white tulips, and covers were laid for twenty-two. Mr. and Mrs. Kremer left on an afternoon train for a wedding trip, and after their return will be at home on Park Point for the summer.

COMPLETES TOUR OF FORTY WEEKS IN IBSEN'S "GHOSTS"

Miss Laura Frankenfield Closes a Successful Season—Comments Interestingly on Effect of Drama on Audiences.

MISS LAURA FRANKENFIELD.

Everyone in Duluth who knows Miss Laura Frankenfield, and few who have lived here for the last few years do not know her at least through her work, experienced a thrill of interested pleasure when hearing of her return from a successful tour through the West with "Ghosts," the play of the master, Ibsen.

Miss Frankenfield and her little company hold the record in America for the longest successful tour in the presentation of Ibsen's plays, having on June 3 completed a tour of forty weeks.

Since coming to Duluth to make her home some years ago, Miss Frankenfield has attracted the attention of the most cultured people of the city with her intelligent and powerful interpretation of the masterpieces among the dramas. With the Shakespeare class of the Twentieth Century club she worked for one or two years and her simple, forceful and clear interpretation of the plays studied, always given in a charmingly modest manner, won for her a following among there refined and cultivated women, and when it was announced last fall that she would appear during the coming theatrical season in "Ghosts," they one and all felt that the play would be intelligently presented by her.

Miss Frankenfield has played for forty weeks in this tredmendous tragedy by the great Norwegian dramatist and moreover has played it successfully. In speaking of her year's work and the interest she feels in the work of Ibsen, Miss Frankenfield says:

"To go out in this play of 'Ghosts' was a great experience for a young actress. There was variety to no end. Discouragements we met, but the pleasure of meeting an audience that thrilled and moved and felt with you, would wipe out almost entirely the feeling of discouragement caused by unsympathetic auditors. To try to present 'Ghosts' to an audience not with you, was a nerve strain that was almost intolerable. It was like throwing the very best of which you were capable under their feet and feeling them going rough shod over it. I remember playing in Sioux Falls, S. D., and my audience was utterly unresponsive and unsympathetic. I felt the strain terribly and half cross at them and, half discouraged with the whole affair, I was busily packing my trunk ready for the train when one of the attendants said two gentlemen wished to see me. I refused curtly to see them but later said that if they cared to wait until my trunk was packed I would talk with them. I didn't suppose they would wait but when I was ready they were still waiting. One of them was a Unitarian minister, who had been delivering a course of lectures, one of which was 'Ibsen and Individualism.' He said that he could not leave the theater without telling me of the good he felt that I was doing in presenting the play, that the truths that are bare and striking in 'Ghosts' were the truths that many people needed even though they would be the first to condemn the play. He thanked me for the pleasure, or maybe one might better say interest, he had experienced and said that he would be quite willing to exchange any good he might do during the coming months for the good accomplished by our presentation of 'Ghosts' and feel sure that larger credit would be on our side. The inspiration and help that those words brought me have helped me all year, coming as they did at a time when it all seemed scarcely worth while.

"Would I like to continue 'Ghosts' for another year? Well, yes, if theatrical conditions were ideal. If my audience might be of my choosing, those who felt interest in the play and the play writer and had an intelligent appreciation of the work we were doing. Many of the people who have seen me play have said: 'I'm glad I saw it, but I never want to see it again,' and the vast majority feel so, some even feeling very keenly that they wished they had never seen it. For it is without any question, awful. There are into Ibsen like Shakespeare, meanings constructed that the men themselves never meant. Ibsen is perfectly plain; he says exactly what he wishes known, and it annoys me dreadfully when people begin to dig and delve for meanings that are not intended. Ibsen is not suggestive. In 'Ghosts,' as in many of his other plays, the awful results of heredity is shown. He is not immoral, however. He shows the awful punishments and sufferings of the wicked, but what makes him almost repulsively awful is that he shows the sufferings of the innocent for the sins of the wicked. And then as one man, a student of Ibsen said to me, 'Ibsen always gives us a problem, but does he ever offer or suggest a solution?' And it is true he does not. But I lay that a great deal to the martyrdom he has suffered in his own country, Norway. He has been misunderstood, reviled and almost persecuted, his fellow countrymen were entirely out of sympathy with him and naturally the pessimistic is uppermost in his nature. And then he so often leaves us tense and suffering in mid-air, so to speak. For instance, in 'Ghosts,' I think it would be infinitely less awful if he told us that Mrs. Alving gave the poison to her son and took it herself. We would at least know it was the end. Of course, the artistic beauty and symmetry would be lost, but it would be less awful to the auditor than the suspense in which he is artistically but uncomfortably left."

Miss Frankenfield is absorbingly interesting while talking of the great Norwegian and his work and she has given the dramatist and his plays much study. She will play next year in her own dramatization of Wilkie Collins' "The New Magdaline." It is written in the time of the Franco-Prussian war and one version has been played this year by Eugenie Blair, under the caption "Her New Life." The rehearsals will begin in August and during the next two months Miss Frankenfield will be in Duluth with her mother at 301 East Third street.

Varied Needs for Vacation Time

A FILMY FRILLY TOILETTE

THE SILKEN BATHING SUIT

PARISIAN CHIC IN A WALKING SUIT

FOR OUTDOOR WEAR

The Traveling Wrap--Outing and Shirtwaist Suits--For the Golf Links and Tennis Courts--Filmy Afternoon Frocks--Hints as to Mourning.

The business woman, with her necessarily short vacation time, has come to be quite a recognized factor in the scheme of things fashionable.

For her has Dame Fashion specially invented the ever-useful shirtwaist suit that has been taken up so enthusiastically by all sections of society, and just as gratefully by the society bud who has never seen the inside of a business office, save, perhaps, as a gratification of curiosity, as well as by the woman to meet whose daily needs it was originally planned.

And even those who are not tied down by the demands of business are taking much to the short vacation fad. This restless generation, instead of making a hegira to some country place early in the season, and "staying put" there, as our Yankee cousins say, all summer, are nowadays making short and flying visits to ever so many places. Nowadays the question is not "Where will you summer?" but rather "What rounds do you expect to cover this season?" So from seashore to mountains, from bathing beach to country club, fair femininity plans to flit; and she likewise plans her wardrobe and her trunk accommodations to meet the demands of those same and frequent flittings.

First and foremost comes the question of a suitable and comfortable traveling wrap. It demands some consideration, this traveling garment, for it must be lightweight, waterproof, cool and yet warm enough to be comfortable; it must be dressy enough to be smart, and yet not too dressy, so that it will look out of place on country roads and for woodland wanderings.

Both the full and the three-quarter lengths are in esteem for this purpose, and it depends altogether upon the style of the wearer which she shall choose.

Much to be preferred are the smart coats of waterproofed silk and sicilienne that display the touch of velvet somewhere in the trimming that is one of the hallmarks of this late season's style. Some of these are made with a body lining that will prove the acme of comfort in a cold wind and yet not add appreciably to the weight of the garment.

The devotee of tennis and golf need not this year make any especial purchases in the way of costumes in which to follow her favorite sport. Anyone of her ordinary shirtwaists will do to top the short skirt, which the Parisiennes are cutting quite some four inches off the ground, short enough in all conscience to satisfy the most rabid adherent of the antigerm theory. One rather more than suspects, however, that it was not with any sanitary or scientific object that the smart skirt has been so shortened; to the initiated it looks as though it were merely to display the distractingly pretty effects in shiny shoes and sheer hosiery that the smart dresser of this year of grace affects.

No matter how remote or how rural the place selected for the vacation time, one simply must, in self-respect, adopt some little frilly and dressy costume for the late afternoon, and who this is cleverly planned it may be made to do duty for all evening as well.

Where laundry bills and laundry facilities are an object of some solicitude, those black habutai silks will prove a perfect treasure-trove. Even for those who are not in mourning they are especially attractive. They are thin, cool, light in weave and texture, and, better than all else, they do not spot or fade. They are even said to be perspiration-proof, but this is a claim that one would hardly care to put to the test by omitting the cleanly dress shield from beneath the arm. One may be quite willing to accept the claim, and with it a feeling of security; but it would be tempting fate to run the risk of ruining a new frock, and a silk one at that, by carelessly neglecting a common precaution.

Those who can afford them are ordering the most bewitching confections—there is no other name for them—in embroidered linen and batiste. Much use is made of the real Irish crochet, not the coarse and inartistic kind that is so often miscalled under this name, and which is made by the Italian and Slav peasantry generally, but the real product of those nimble Irish fingers that displays a daintiness of design and a fineness of execution that simply enslave one's admiration.

The transparent yoke and the deep mitaine cuff are so often made of this fascinating lace, and a backing of sheer chiffon is used, so that the flesh tints take on an alluring softness beneath. The blouse that fastens in the back is quite a favorite, and a full sleeve has just a trifle of fluing at the top to hold the shape. The skirt is usually simplicity itself, an upper part that is somewhat circular in cut—it is considered a pity to cut the allover embroidery into gores, and lose much of it in matching the pattern— and few embroidered ruffles serve as the only trimmings required.

FOR A GENERAL SURTOUT

A Filmy, Frilly Toilette.

The frilly modes of this summer time are daintily expressed in this toilette in which chapeau, visite and frock are all of embroidered batiste, and even the parasol is made to match.

The frock shows yoke and deep sleeve cuff of bebe Irish crochet, just the sheerest of chiffon being used to veil the flesh tints beneath; and the blouse is shirred to the yoke, fastening in the back and dropping with a graceful bouffantry into the deep boned ceinture of soft white liberty ribbon. The skirt is cut with full circular top, soft shirrings adjusting the fulness over the hips and at the back; and two embroidered flounces are posed above the hem, a wavy band of entre-deux serving as a heading.

The visite is one of the very newest effects in summer wraps. This is really but a shaped yoke, cut loose around the neck and with deep V-shaped scallops on the lower edge. The yoke is covered with all-over embroidery and the edge is lavishly ruffled with the embroidered flouncing. Long and narrow ends entirely covered with the shirred flouncing hang almost to the knee in front.

The parasol matches the visite, the top of all-over embroidered batiste, and the edge a mass of ruffled flouncing. The handle is of white corkwood with a shepherd's crook covered with tiny Scotch roses in white and tied with a big splashing bow of white liberty ribbon.

A SUGGESTION FOR SUMMER MOURNING

The Cult of the Tea Gown.

Negligee and Demi-Negligee Styles that are Usually Attractive.

One often wonders why it is that the French actresses who visit here present such a bewitching appearance when they wear a tea-gown, a peignoir, a negligee of any sort upon the stage. One versed in the lore of things sartorial bewails the fact that so many of our best American actresses, even those who have a reputation for clever dressing, fail utterly to impress the audience when seen en deshabille as they do at the moments of the play when they are en grand tenue.

Many of our native born actresses can wear an exquisite dinner gown, a superb ball gown to perfection, but when it comes to the tea gown and the negligee they fall utterly. Is the reason to be found in a recognition of the psychology of clothes, or is it one that is purely physical?

Certain it is that the negligee style of dress will, in those of sensitive temperament, produce a corresponding negligee or negligence (there is no intention to pun in this) of mind and attitude, for the influence of clothes upon the mood and the mind is one that is universally recognized. One can hardly rise to heights of tragedy clad only in a loose bath robe or wrapper, and with one's heels dangling from a pair of quilted mules. The inspiration of clothes is then distinctly lacking, and few there be who can rise superior to this influence and forget the costume in the fervor of the scene. And there is a perilous danger of an untoward slip of attitude or gesture turning the whole tragedy of the scene into a burlesque, for the traditional steps from the sublime to the ridiculous often is made over the bridge of costume upon the stage.

But to return to the teagown and its grace of wearing. For one thing, the tea-gown is distinctly and distinctively the garment of the leisure class, of the idle rich or the merely well-to-do. It demands, in the first place, a well-filled purse wherewith to purchase one of those Parisian confections; and, secondly, the leisure and the correct surroundings in which to display it.

Given the gown and the environment, the next thing is to know how to wear it. Now, there be those who claim that the correct wearing of the tea-gown is an acquired grace, just as dancing, singing, fencing and other accomplishments; and this is a view which several of the Parisian makers of the mode who are noted for the elegance of their production in this line express.

What the French people so expressively designate as "allure" and the dictionaries badly translate as gait, is what is required to the best wearing of the tea-gown. It is an allure of gait, of pose, of the carriage of the whole body, that is required for the success of the tea-gown; and this must be practiced and rehearsed diligently throughout and worked out until even the most critical is satisfied.

No garment brings out one's individuality as does this same teagown. It is not a garb for the strenuously athletic girl to pose in, save and unless she has doffed her strenuosity for the nonce and taken to ways of pleasantness and peace. Dignity and refinement are the first requisites, and bodily grace and charm come next. A repose of face and of manner are imperative, and all of these attributes, when lacking, declare their absence with a cruel sharpness that is positively disconcerting to the onlooker of keen, if not trained, perceptions.

Some women seem born to wear the tea gown, and do so with a queenly grace that invests the simplest and most inexpensive garment of this character with a cachet that none other can imitate. Others again, even when clad in the most harmonious and bewitching design that tout Paris can turn out, are naturally so loud, so fussy in manner, so restless in movement, that the effect of their presence is inharmonious, even when it is not positively disagreeable.

The Parisienne is much given to wearing her tea-gowns for informal and afmily dinners. The French are a home-loving people, and while respecting a wise hospitality, are but little inclined to invite the stranger within their gates to dine with them en famille. The intimacy of home and family life is too sacred to them to be lightly offered to any but time-tried intimates. So it is that the delightful informality of the tea-gown is turned to further uses, and it makes its appearance for dinner as well. Loose and flowing draperies, especially those based upon the styles of the fashions of the First Empire, are best expressed in these. There is usually more or less of a decolletage—for a high collar while en negligee is abhorrent to the Parisienne—and the sleeve is arranged to display to the best advantage the rounded curves of the arm.

The delightful little tea jacket shares in a large and generous measure the popularity of the tea-gown. Pretty much the same lines are followed, except that the jacket sometimes displays a blut or two of ceinture at the waist; and all of the sheer silken fabrics, from chiffon and mousseline to crepe de chine and taffetas, are encrusted with lace and pleating for their better adornment.

Some Frills of Fashion.

In the early part of the season all of the loose material appeared over the bust upon the fashionable coats and bodices. Now it is being moved down to the waistline, and some very smart dinner coats in sheer crepe of an exquisite poppy red are shown with shirrings at the waistline, the gathering being done in the side seams and the sheer crepe wrinkling much, but tightly around the waist. Upon a slender figure the effect is delightful; but one shudders to think of a short waisted, stout and matronly contour thus arrayed.

In some of the latest costumes, where the bodice is of silk or lace, or a clever combination of both, topping a cloth skirt, the skirt has the front panel deftly cut above the waistline so that it extends pretty nearly to the bust. Some soft drapery is usually introduced at this point, and in many instances the draped lines are continued down the front pretty nearly to the knee. This gives a charming effect of novelty, and any idea of bunchiness or bulk is obviated in the close fit of the skirt over the hips.

Many of the summer evening gowns are furnished with what might better be described as arm draperies rather than sleeves. The arm size is provided with a V-shaped piece of material, the broader part cut out to shape and the apex of the V hanging at the back anywhere from the elbow to the waist, or even to knee length. Sheer and gauzy material is demanded, spangles are a decided addition and the edges are elaborated to any extent.

The celebrated actress, Mlle. Lecouvreur, of the Theater Francaise, Paris, passing along the streets at a late hour one bitterly cold night was accosted by a poor woman with four children, who besought the actress to take pity on her. Mlle. Lecouvreur searched in her pockets and found she had nothing. "Wait, my good woman," she exclaimed, "I will soon give you something," and, instantly throwing off her mantle, she began to recite the imprecations of Camilla with such vehemence and talent that a crowd soon collected around her. She then made a collection from her audience, and with the fruits of her charitable action gave the woman sufficient means for food and shelter.

Description of Illustrations.

The Silken Bathing Suit.

The vogue of silk for the bathing suit is one that originally came to us, as do most of the other fashions, from France. The one illustrated shows a full blouse, with deep pleats in the shoulder seams and at the cut-out throat, the fullness so attained being deftly shirred into a featherboned belt that serves to keep the figure from looking doppy. A broad collar of embroidered linen somewhat after the familiar sailor design is used over the shoulders, and just the suggestion of a chemisette is seen in the little band to match that is tucked in across the throat.

The skirt is joined to the fitted belt, a pointed patern in smocking adjusting the fullness over the hips and adding much to the smart appearance. The sleeve is a short puff, with elastic bands run in the shirring to make it set closely to the arm. The little bloomers worn beneath the skirt are less full than formerly, giving sufficient freedom of movement without taking up a weight of water that is likely to hamper the movement of the swimmer.

Parisian Chic in a Walking Suit.

One of those smart pale blue and white pinhead checks in mohair is deftly relieved with a tiny piping of blue velvet edging and folds of black satin. This simple, but very effective trimming appears on the roll shawl collar and on the upturned cuffs that are further trimmed with ruffled rows of narrow yellowish valenciennes. The coat is one of those Eton designs that, while cleverly fitted, still stand away from the figure in the most fetching way, fastening in double-breasted style in front, with a double row of burnt ivory buttons. The sleeve is pleated to the arm size and again into the cuff just below the elbow and finished with a pendant frill.

The skirt is of circular cut, with that smart bias seam down the center front that the Parisian tailor favors so mightily, this obviating any pleats or darts or shirring on the hips. A deep bias fold of the silk material is applied above the hem, several rows of machine stitching at the top serving for trimming effect.

For Outdoor Wear.

There are several novel points expressed in this dainty blouse and smart skirt. The blouse is of sheer India linon, with both lace and embroidery adding to its adornment. The yoke is tucked, and bretelle straps of lace pass from the back to the front and another band of the same serves as a heading to the blouse section, which is embroidered across the body and fastens in the back. The sleeve is one of those full loose leg-of-mutton affairs, shirred on the inner seam and finished with a generous lace frill below the elbow. The skirt is fashioned from one of those novel indistinct sicilienne plaids that are defined with hairlines of color upon a lighter surface, two shades of gray showing in that of the picture. The front is in a tablier, with an inverted pleat down the center and a folded pleat on either side. These are stitched down to knee depth and then pressed flat to flare from there. The sides are circular in cut, with a flounce attached above the knee that rounds up prettily in the back; while the back itself is fashioned to match the front tablier. The skirt follows the recent mandate that it shall be short enough to display fully the smart, shiny black shoe, with its substantial sole and high steeple heel.

Suggestion for Summer Mourning.

For those who are compelled to wear black during the warm weather those habutai silks offer a welcome attraction. Unlike other black silks these will not spot or turn rusty in wear, and even perspiration has no power to fade them. A smart shirtwaist suit is illustrated. The gown is made up unlined. To a round yoke trimmed with narrow black Valenciennes the blouse is shirred, a handkerchief pointed berthe with ruffled lace on the edges adding a note of dressiness.

The sleeve is a full puff with deep lace-trimmed cuff. The skirt is rather original in its lines, tucked circular sections being pieced together with rows of lace insertion and finished with a tucked flounce at the foot. Although these silks are perspiration proof it were not wise to omit the usual dress-shield in frocks of this character.

For a General Surtout.

What the French woman terms her surtout—figuratively and literally, her overall—has come to be one of the recognized needs of the wardrobe. For general wear, for traveling in wet weather or dry, those smart garments are ever appropriate. The Mandleberg model, originated in London, is one well worth copying this side of the water. The material is a waterproofed thibet in a new shade of brown, and a very modish touch is achieved in the use of brown velvet braided in a fancy pattern in black, and edged with a gold cord mixed with white. The upper part of the coat is bloused, and fastens in double-breasted style, with broad pleats over the shoulders. The pleats are decorated with fancy rosette-shaped appliques, and fancy metal buttons make the fastening. The skirt portion is circular in cut, fitted without darts or pleats, and hanging in full folds to below the ankle

DRAMATICAL

ATTRACTIONS AT THE LYCEUM

Chauncey Olcott In "A Romance of Athlone" Next Saturday Afternoon and Evening.

Popular Chauncey Olcott, clever comedian and charming singer, will be seen at the Lyceum next Saturday afternoon and evening in a magnificent revival of one of his most popular successes, "A Romance of Athlone," by Augustus Pitou, Mr. Olcott's manager, which ran for nearly five months in New York on its original production. The production is entirely new, with superb scenery, beautiful costumes and novel electric effects. All the songs written by Mr. Olcott for this play have become very popular, including "My Wild Irish Rose."

The chief interest in the play turns upon the contrasted characters and dispositions of the two sons of Sir Philip Ronyane. Dick Ronyane, personated by Mr. Olcott, is a frank, open-hearted fellow, in love with Rose Manning, the daughter of an Irish hero, Maj. Manning, but who has assumed the name of Eleanor McBride, the Major's ward. Dick's brother, Francis, is paying suit to the real ward, who passes under the name of Rose Manning, but he is embarrassed by an escapade with a certain girl who has been reared in a gypsy camp, but is not a gypsy. To rid himself of this association a plot is concocted with Robin McMahon, the gypsy chief, to remove the gypsy girl Mary from the neighborhood. Among other things the scheme involves the abduction of Bessie Ronyane, Dick's little sister, for whose return a heavy ransom is to be exacted from Sir Philip Ronyane. This ransome is to be the money consideration by which Francis Ronyane is to be relieved from his disgraceful relation to the gypsy Mary. The dastardly plan is skillfully thwarted by Dick Ronyane, who confronts Robin McMahon in Sir Philip's house on the night of the proposed abduction. From these elements an involved plot is formed, but the confusion is finally straightened out, and virtue is triumphantly vindicated at last.

At appropriate moments Mr. Olcott is furnished opportunities for the introduction of the songs for which he is confessedly famous. There is a duel in the last act between Dick Ronyane (Mr. Olcott) and the Hon. Standish Fitzsimmons (Mr. Malchiem) which is said to be a most skillful display of the use of the foil, as both gentlemen are said to be past masters of the rapier.

THE POLLARDS.

The Pollard Lilliputian Opera company is coming to the Lyceum for a week beginning Monday, June 26, and will play two matinees. The bills include "The Belle of New York," "The Geisha," "Pinafore," "The Runaways" and many others of the popular comic opera and musical comedies. WILTON LACKAYE TELLS SOME ANECDOTES AND TALKS WISDOM

New York, June 10.—Wilton Lackaye has been asked what he thinks is the most important theatrical production of the season and he has paused to reply. There is a miniature Lackaye sitting in the curve of his arm who has no scruples of modesty. He kicks his fat, semi-sockless legs and utters the single word:

"Svengali!"

"I wish," says his father, "that all the dramatic critics were of his opinion. The other day a priest gave him a picture of one of the saints. He came home swinging it in his hand and someone asked him where he got it.

"He replied, 'God's man gave it to me,' and then when he was further interrogated as to who the picture represented said again, 'Svengali.'

"So, in his opinion I have been canonized both in the profession and on earth.

"I think the most important thing about the popular revival of 'Trilby' is in the fact that the audiences have changed so little. When a play can be reproduced after an interval of ten years and people are just as enthusiastic about it as ever, it means simply that a great human note has been struck. It means, besides, a criticism on the present day author, who usually takes a novel and with a pair of shears cuts it into lengths for a play.

"'Trilby' was the first of the modern novels to be dramatized, and Potter certainly gave a lesson to budding playwrights, for its success was entirely due to his methods. James A. Herne said once:

"'If you want to dramatize a novel, read it through once and then throw it away, for whatever there is that is vital and dramatic will stick and you are better off without the overloading of incident.'

"Potter with 'Trilby' executed a literary somersault, for he turned the book upside down and his methods are most interesting.

"In the book you are not made aware of the fact that Trilby is hypnotized until the very end, but in the play, in the most simple manner possible, Mr. Potter impressed the audience with the fact that hypnotism was a ruling factor in the drama. In the studio scene Trilby remarks casually that she has a headache. Svengali offers to take it away and does so with a sweeping gesture. Just those few words and that one motion—and think of the result!

"That single incident impressed me more with Potter's ability as a playwright than anything else he ever did. If Sardou had been trying to get that result he would have brought two doctors on the stage, and he would have let them talk half an hour about hypnotism in his attempt to impress his audience.

"In writing a book, so long as your paper and ink hold out, you are not hampered in regard to background, change of scene and multiplicity of character, but when you come to put a play on, you realize that the more you can employ a word or sentence to convey your meaning, so much the better, for scenic effects and a large cast cost money, and managers are still mercenary enough to be moved by such arguments.

"I have had a little experience concerning the difficulties of playwriting myself during the last few years, for I have dramatized 'Les Miserables' of Victor Hugo. I have hacked away at it, off and on, and the other day a friend met me and asked me if I had found anybody to produce it yet.

"'Produce it!' I exclaimed, 'I can't find a manager that can pronounce it, much less produce it.'

"That difficulty is now over and some one who can do both has come forward and I hope to play Jean Valjean, one of the greatest characters ever written, next season.

"'Les Miserables' is a volume of 1,530 pages, and I have estimated that an ordinary page takes a minute to play. The time given a play is three hours, and at least one of the three is consumed on the entr'actes of the orchestra playing, which leaves 120 minutes, or 120 pages for the play.

"When you reduce 1,530 pages to 120 and preserve the story, you are accomplishing rather a herculean task. It is rather like the old story of Sinbad, who was confronted in the valley of diamonds, not with the question as to whether he could take any, but as to how many he would be able to get away with, having but a limited amount of baggage permitted him.

"In the beginning I mapped out the scenario, and believing that dramatizing a book was merely a matter of the collation of the principal facts, gave it into the hands of a clever writer, but when I showed it to a heartless manager, he suggested that I take Hugo's words instead of the other gentleman's, not, of course, that they would be so good, but there might be a prejudice in the minds of the reading public in favor of the great French writer.

"That reminds me of a story of a woman who was called upon to write a paper at a suburban current topics club on Victor Hugo. She went to the Carnegie library erected there and collated her facts from a number of encyclopedias. When she had finished, having a quarter inch of space at the end of her paper, she thought she would add something original, and wrote:

"Whatever we and succeeding generations may think of Victor Hugo, we must agree on one thing, that he wrote good English.'

"Like that woman, my manager thought Hugo's language was good enough, and so in the play we have actually tried, in spite of many difficulties, to preserve the original text.

"I believe its success will depend on the great fundamental truth that melodrama always has been and always will be popular.

"The fashions in hearts do not change, and whatever may be said to the contrary, people really want a thrill and they will go where they can get it.

"That is why 'Leah Kleschna' was one of the successes, if not the greatest success, of the past theatrical season. It gave people a genuine sensation, and though there were many faults in it it was really a kind of sublimated melodrama, and that is what is really needed.

"People say that tragedy lives. It does live if being produced once in every thirty years, and kept in cold storage for the intervening twenty-nine, spells life. Melodrama really does live.

"Look at 'The Two Orphans.' That is always being played somewhere. It may not be on the Broadway stages, but there is never a night in the year that that old melodrama does not bring tears and smiles to the eyes of some audience. 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' is another that will never die, for it has got in it the germ of immortality, the great human thrill."

Asked concerning his preference as to certain parts, Mr. Lackaye answered quickly, shifting the miniature to another arm:

"I like character parts rather than those termed in the profession straight or lead parts, for this reason: There are many leading parts which are very interesting at first, but you soon reach their limitations. No matter how hard you may work to get some new facet on them, you do not succeed, and when the piece runs a long time, playing in a rut as you have to do, your work get mechanical.

"Take a part like Svengali; there is no end to the study you can put on it, no end of the new readings. The makeup, for which I have been so complimented, is really the simplest part of it all, for the pictures of Du Maurier were a gift. All I had to do was to turn my curves into angles, make straight lines for the eyebrows, for the beard, for the lines of the face, and the effect is like changing from a convex mirror to a concave.

"When I played it ten years ago I had a certain conception of the character as I had seemed to read it. I made him a more serious person, really a lurid monochrone. With my added experience, when I came to play the character again, I was impressed with his humor, that sardonic, nasty humor that laughs only at others' misfortunes, and this time I have made that the uppermost quality.

"It is the character part that is the test of an actor's mentality and achievement. Often the character hangs right on a knife edge; accent it with a wrong word, a wrong expression, and it is spoiled. How often you see a man or woman play a part which is absolutely true to their own conceptions, but is absolutely wrong when subjected to the test of the author's meaning and the public demand.

For instance, we will take the character of Trilby herself, which should not be a difficult part to interpret and play, but has always been made so.

"The whole interpretation of the story is found in the knowledge that Trilby was a good fellow, that is, that she was not a dissolute girl, as so many of her companions in the Latin quarter were, but that she was sincere, loving, true, and that fact explained the devotion of three men so widely opposed in temperment as Taffy, the laird and little Billee. If she comes on and utters one word in a tough way, with a guardsman's accent, 'say, fellers'—that sort of thing—the entire meaning of the piece is lost, for the audience realizes that such a person could not inspire such wonderful affection, and immediately the spirit of the drama changes.

"Take the part of Rip, as played by Mr. Jefferson. Of course, after a while, like every character part which is played too many times, it becomes less a play than a personal performance, but even so, what complexities, what fine shades of meaning, what new thoughts, Jefferson for many years put into his work!"

Mr. Lackaye and Mr. Jefferson were great friends. So Mr. Lackaye was led to talk of Mr. Jefferson. He told this anecdote:

"Personally, I do not believe in the curtain call, although one has to bow to precedent. Either your speech is hopelessly bad, in which case you destroy whatever good impression you may have made, or it is of the canned variety, one you keep with you, take out, dress a little and offer again and again.

"Of the two, I think the canned speech is a little more hopeless than the other. In various conversations had with Jefferson he semed to incline to the canned sort. His reason was that you got used to it; it was no effort to bring it forward; you could edit it; add a little here and subtract a bit there.

"One night we were playing at Northampton, Mass., and had a large and enthusiastic audience, many of them from Smith college, near by. Jefferson was called upon to make a speech, and went forward. He said:

(Mr. Lackaye got up and imitated the old actor's manner and voice to perfection.)

"'Ladies and gentlemen:—I am very glad to see you here tonight. I am glad that you are enjoying yourself, and I know you will be pleased to learn that we, too, we back of the curtain, enjoy ourselves, too, in the thought that you are here and that you are enjoying yourself here tonight.'

"You see, he had the traditional speech. Then he ended up:

"'When I look over the footlights and see all your bright and interested faces I feel as if I would like to lean over and shake hands with every one.'

"At the close he made a bow to most uproarious applause.

"When he came off I was standing in the wings. He poked me gleefully in the ribs and said:

"'Well, Mr. Critic, what do you think of that? Nothing the matter with that, hey?'

"'I did not care for it, Mr. Jefferson,' I said slowly and distinctly.

"'Oh, you did not care for it, Mr. Critic; why did you not care for it?'—all the time poking me.

"'If you remember, Mr. Jefferson, you said that when you looked over the footlights and saw all those interestd faces you felt as if you would like to lean over and shake hands with every one. Now, I defy even you to shake hands with a face. John Drew has the only face I could ever imagine shaking hands with, and he might object.'

"'Did I say that?' asked Jefferson. 'You don't mean it.' Then he thought for a moment. 'Lackaye, old boy, I've been making that speech now for thirty years, and this is actually the first time I have ever been called down.'

"'Did it make any difference? Not a bit. The next town we played at, Jefferson made the same speech and in the same inimitable manner would like to shake hands with every face, and not a voice was raised in protest.

"That reminds me," and the anecdotal manner was emphasized by his holding the miniature in the air at the end of one outstretched arm, "of an incident in 'The Pit.' There was a small coon in the cast in Chicago, and one day I stopped to speak to him in the wings and said

"'Sam, what do you want to be when you get to be a man?'

"'I supposed, of course, he would say, 'Oh, a great actor, like you are, Mr. Lackaye.' He did not hesitate a moment, but said:

"'A burglar!'

"I thought that so funny that I managed to give him an opportunity to make that same speech on the stage, his only line, but it never failed to bring down the house.

"When we got to Denver something happened to the little coon and in place of him I put in another boy picked up somewhere or other around the theater. One day, shortly after we opened, I found my latest product crying bitterly in the wings. Naturally I inquired what the matter was. He said, with his head buried in his arm and sobs shaking his small body:

"'Cause I don't tell the truth. I don't want to be a burglar when I get grown up. What'll people think of me?'

"So I cut the line out. And yet they say that I look as if I did not know what trouble was."

GOSSIP OF THE RIALTO

Vast Plans of Klaw & Erlanger For the Next Theatrical Season—"The School Girl" Coming To Duluth—No Change In the Policy of Shubert Brothers.

New York, June 10.—While other managements are entering on the enjoyments of the vacation time and making preparations for the season of 1905-6, Kalw & Erlanger, with their usual enterprise and indomitable energy, are about to begin the new campaign. Their plans for the next theatrical season are so vast that they set the machinery of their big plants in motion months ago. Their own scenic artists, stage carpenters, costumers, etc., numbering over 500 persons, are, and have been for many weeks, busy day and night on the new productions, and will continue so for months to come.

This firm, during the coming season, will produce more original plays than has ever been previously attempted in one season by any theatrical firm in this country or in England. They will employ in their various productions about 2,500 actors and actresses. These enterprises are entirely independent of the theaters they own or operate—simply their own personal enterprises, traveling under their direct management.

The season of 1905-6 with Klaw & Erlanger opened last Monday evening, when they offered in the New Amsterdam Aerial Theater and Gardens the most elaborate and pretentious summer production ever seen in New York City—a Gilbert and Sullivan review, arranged by Frederick Solomon, and a new up-to-date local skit by John PJ. McNally, with lyrics by William Jerome and Jean Schwartz, called "Lifting the Lid."

The morning following the opening of the New Amsterdam Aerial theater, Tuesday, the rehearsals of Paul West, W. W. Denslow and John W. Bratton's new musical extravaganza, "The Pearl and the Pumpkin," began. This piece will be presented in Boston at the Colonial theater, July 17th, coming to the Broadway theater as the opening attraction of the season, August 28th. This will be the greatest production of spectacle ever made in this country. In the staging of this piece, both in costuming and scenery, Klaw & Erlanger propose to create an entirely new standard of artistic excellence. "The Pearl and the Pumpkin" will prove a remarkable surprise to the theater-goers at its premiere. The company will be an immense one. The following are among the principals engaged: Sager Midgeley, George Richards, Harry MacDonough, Allan Ramsay, Joe Kane, James Grant, Taylor Granville, Gertie Carlisle, Ethel Johnson, Ida Hawley, Carroll McComas, Estella Beardsley and Katheryn Hutchinson.

Monday, July 3rd, rehearsals of "The Ham Tree," the big production in which McIntyre and Heath are to star, will begin. This is a musical comedy by George V. Hobart, with lyrics and music by William Jerome and Jean Schwartz. The company engaged by Klaw & Erlanger for this production is a very important one and is composed of some of the best known people in musical and ramatic fields. Some of these players are Alfred Fisher, Belle Gold, David Terrence, Empire City Quartet, Robert O'Connor and W. C. Field. McIntyre and Heath will open their season on August 14th, coming to the New York theater, New York, August 28th.

July 17, the Rogers Brothers will begin rehearsals of the new McNally vaudeville farce, "The Rogers Brothers in Ireland," in which they will play their eighth season under the direction of Klaw & Erlanger. This production will be the largest ever made for the Rogers Brothers. The scenes of the new piece are all laid in Ireland. Max Hoffman will write the music. The company will be larger than ever. Some of the principals are John Conroy, Lynn D'Arcy, Maurice D'Arcy, Charles F. McCarthy, Bessie De Vole and Julia Eastman. The Rogers Brothers will open their season in Buffalo, August 28th, and come to the Liberty theater, New York, Sept. 4.

Joseph Cawthorne, and the big company with which Klaw & Erlanger will surround him in the new McNally musical comedy, "In Tammany Hall," will begin rehearsals July 24th, opening in Rochester, eSpt. 14th and coming to the Herald-Square theater in New York, Oct. 16th. William Jerome and Jean Schwartz are responsible for the lyrics and music of this piece, which will be most elaborately staged.

August 1st the original company seen at the New Amsterdam theater last season in "Humpty Dumpty" will begin rehearsals. This enormous production will be sent en tour intact, playing the larger cities. "Humpty Dumpty" opens in Toronto, Sept. 4th.

On the same day reeharsals of the "Ben-Hur" company will begin. This, the most successful dramatic production ever made, will open its seventh season in St. Paul, August 28th, with an entirely new equipment of scenery and costumes. George Edwards' romantic opera, "The Duchess of Dantzic," under the management of Klaw & Erlanger, which has played only at Daly's theater in New York, will open its next American tour and also the new Montauk theater, Brooklyn, on the 17th of September. Miss Evie Greene will again be the "Sans Gene," and Holbrook Blinn, "Napoleon," and the rest of the original cast will appear.

The next Drury Lane spectacle, "The White Cat; or Puss in Boots," which will be the greatest ever staged in London or America, will open its season at the New Amsterdam theater following Hall Caine's, "The Prodigal Son." The stupendousness of this production can best be judged by the fact that a thousand American costumes will be added to the fifteen hundred worn in London during its presentation there. There are twenty big scenes in the play and four hundred people will be employed.

George Edwardes' musical production, "Veronique," which has been playing in London for over a year, will finish its run there in November and will be brought by Klaw & Erlanger from the Apollo theater, London, to the Broadway theater, where it will follow "The Pearl and the Pumpkin."

Gen. Lew Wallace's romantic novel, "The Prince of India," dramatized by J. I. C. Clarke, will follow the Drury Lane production of "The White Cat; or Puss in Boots," at New Amsterdam theater. This will be produced on a scale never before attempted by any management. The cast is now being selected and Joseph Brooks is touring Europe for materials for dresse, armor, etc., and models for the scenery are being made by the best stage mechanics and artists both here and in England. Messrs. Klaw & Erlanger do not intend to stop at anything to make this absolutely the greatest dramatic production that has ever been staged in the world.

A new musical comedy by C. M. S. McLellan and Gustave Kerker, "The Butterfly of Fashion," will be produced simultaneously in London and America in the spring. Mr. McLellan is now in London writing the libretto and Mr. Kerker will join him there shortly.

The distinguished English actor, Forbes Robertson, in a selection of classic play, including "Hamlet" and "Othello," will tour America after his London season, and a combination is now being arranged whereby Mr. Robertson will divide his time between London and New York.

A new musical comedy by Harry B. Smith, entitled "Seeing New York," will be produced at one of the Klaw & Erlanger theaters during the season. The scenes are all laid in well known localities in New York.

George Edwardes' production of "The Orchid," which has been running at the Gayety theater for the past two years, and has been the attraction at that house ever since the New Gayety opened, will be presentd by Klaw & Erlanger with an American company early in the fall.

Marion Crawford's new romantic play, founded on his great novel, "Zoroaster," is in preparation. Mr. Crawford is now working on the last draft of the play, and Mr. Klaw is in Europe making final arrangements with Mr. Crawford.

Klaw & Erlanger will also produce in the early fall, with Miss Fay Templeton, a new piece with book, lyrics and music by George M. Cohan. The play is to be produced under the personal supervision of Mr. Cohan.

All these plays, with the exception of the one by Mr. Cohan, will be staged by Herbert Gresham and Ned Wayburn, musical direction of Frederick Solomon.

* * *

Arrangements have just been perfected by which the big London success "The School Girl" will be one of the early fall attractions at the Lyceum in Duluth. The music of "The School Girl" was composed by Leslie Stuart of "Florodora" fame, while the book is from the pen of Henry Hamilton, author of that other famous London musical comedy "The Duchess of Dantzig." There are three scenes in the play, the first showing the lawn and entrance to a convent near Paris, the second an open stock exchange in Paris, and the third act takes place in an artist's studio. Girl" scored a phenomenal success in London, playing over 400 nights at the Prince of Wales theater.

To the fact that Trixie Boutelle, "show girl" in "Fantana," is able to think quickly one of the audiences of last week at the Lyric theater, is said to owe its immunity from a shock that would have made the worst work of a feed wire seem as nothing. Jefferson De Angelis, the star of the musical comedy in question, is averred to have rewarded Miss Boutelle handsomely, and it is rumored on Broadway that Anthony Comstock will ask Andrew Carnegie to present her with a gold medal.

In the first act of "Fantana," a chorus of "maids and valets" assists Mr. De Angelis in singing a song, called "Drop in On Me at Luncheon," in the course of which the method of earning a salary as a gentleman's gentleman is accurately described. As an object lesson, each of the "maids" pulls a cord on the person of the "valet" nearest her, and that young woman's livery drops off, disclosing immaculate evening dress underneath. At least, this is what is supposed to happen.

But recently a new member of the company, ignorant of the evening dress detail, put on only the suit of livery.

Fortunately the Fates sent it that Miss Boutelle was the person delegated to pull the cord on this particular "valet." Her quick eye detected a slimness in the new girl that seemed inconsistent with the wearing of the gree—two suits of clothes. "For goodness' sake, Mag," she whispered, in chaste English, "where's them spike-tailed things?"

"Them what?" retorted Mag.

The awfulness of the imminent catastrophe dawned upon the impressionable mind of Miss Boutelle at once. "Don't pull the cord," she murmured to her next door neighbor. "Pass the word along." Could Horatius or Marco Bozzaris have said more under the circumstances? The cords were not pulled, and the threatening repetition of the Godiva disaster was averted.

After the performance someone inquired of Miss Boutelle what the new girl had on under the livery.

"That's no question to ask a lady!" replied the "show girl."

Lee Shubert, who had remained in London for the opening of his Waldorf theater, returned to New York last Tuesday. He and J. J. Shubert constitute the theatrical firm of the Shubert Bros., since the death of Sam S. Shubert as a result of the recent railway accident at Harrisburg. "There will be absolutely no change in the policy of the company," he said to the World. "My brother's plans will be carried out and such new ones as may add to our standing will be pushed vigorously." Mr. Shubert transacted no business in England beyond superintending the inauguration of the season at the Waldorf, but he will bring three foreign attractions to America between September 1st and November. The first of these is the grand opera company, headed by Calve, which is now at the London house and which will be seen in this country at regular theatre prices. The second is Sarah Bernhardt and the third will be the production of an extravaganza until recently presented in Paris.

With revivals galore—good, bad and indifferent—one notes with approbation the business ability displayed by Manager Jules Murry, who has just completed arrangements with the estate of the late A. M. Palmer for "Hazel Kirke," the success of the Madison Square theater in its palmy days. Unusual interest is aroused in the fact that Manager Murry has secured the original Hazel—Miss Effie Ellsler—who will repeat her triumph in this role next season.

The cost of theatrical production and the cost of theater-going have increased almost proportionately within the past century, the patron of the play profiting where there has been any disparity. This is a fact not too generally realized, if one may judge by periodical protests against the charge made for tickets. "When Robson and Crane acted in 'Our Boarding House,'" the thoughtless historian will relate, "the price of the best seats was put above a dollar for the first time. Now one pays $2 for the same places in New York." It is equally true that stalls might have been had at Convent Garden when Quinn and Woffington were there for a sum much less than a dollar, but one must remember also that the expense of running Convent Garden an entire season was less than that involved in preparing a single presentation in these extravagant days.

The original production of "The Mikado" in London—and this was not so very far back—represented a preliminary outlay that probably did not exceed one thousand pounds. The scenery was painted at the Savoy theater and the costumes were made by the wardrobe women of that establishment. Yet we have it on the authority of The London Times that the performance was "a marvel of accuracy." Another Japanese opera, entitled "Fantana," produced this season, has a programme which bears the following interesting line: "Costumes made by Oytama & Co., Nagaski. Properties imported from Japan by Vantine & Co., New York." Which indicates that the management probably does not exaggerate very much in putting the cost of this presentation at $50,000. If the Shuberts wished to raise their prices over those of "The Mikado" in absolute proportion, admission to "Fantana" would be $14.

It is said that Leslie Stuart's royalties from his two musical plays "The School Girl" and "Florodora," have aggregated over $250,000. "The School Girl" alone played over 400 nights at the Prince of Wales Theater in London, and more than 150 nights in New York City. Mr. Stuart is probably the best known of all English composers writing for the musical comedy stage.

• • •

Reginald De Koven has completed the score of "Elysia," the new musical comedy which he wrote in conjunction with Frederick Ranken for the use of De Wolf Hopper. The elongated comedian is soon to shelve his revival of "Wang," and will produce the latter composition in September. Mr. De Koven, by the way, is getting some little reputation as a wit. Speaking of his scrap book recently, a newspaper man remarked: "The average journalist begins by clipping everything he writes."

The composer of "Robin Hood" smiled. "Yes," he answered, "and ends by writing everything he clips."

Boston, where "The Earl and the Girl" is spending the summer prior to its engagement at the Casino theater, New York, has the strictest laws concerning debt that obtain in any city in the United States. For that reason it has been the downfall of many an actor whose creditors have taken advantage of his presence at the Hub. Alexander Clarke, the comedian of the musical comedy in question, had a friend whose peculiarly sunny and careless disposition made him a ready mark for money lenders and their ilk. He went to Boston with some play or other, was arrested, gave bail, and, during the remainder of his stay, was persistently and relentlessly dogged by two deputy sheriffs. Nevertheless, when Mr. Clarke arrived in town and visited him, this rival of Jim looked no less than usual. "I had expected to find you miserable," Mr. Clarke said to him.

"Why?"

"Why? Aren't you followed around by two deputy sheriffs?"

"Oh, yes," answered the young man blithely. "They're a great help to me. One of them keeps my scrap book and the other washes my dog."

Sarah Bernhardt whose farewell "farewell" tour of America is to be undertaken under the direction of the Shuberts, has said good-bye to our shores almost as often as has Adelina Patti. Her visit in "L'Aiglon" two years ago was to have been her last. There is a strong likelihood, however, that the divine Sarah will keep her word this time, though for no better reason than her anxiety to leave a good impression. It is a continually haunting fear of Bernhardt that one day she may hear herself spoken of as "a woman who really used to be a great actress." She is determined to retire before this time comes, and recently set the limit of hr career at two years longer.

While "Lady Teazle" was being sung in Chicago recently, some one presented Lillian Russell with a particularly pretty kitten, which the prima donna promptly christened "Highball." The same evening a young woman friend dropped in, saw the tiny animal frisking about the room, and asked its name. She was much amused at the reply.

"How funny!" she exclaimed. "Why do you call her 'Highball?'"

"Because she's black and white," answered Miss Russell smiling.

Laughing at the retort, the visitor departed to her own room in the hotel, only to return an hour later with her husband. The door was opened in response to her knock, and the couple looked past Miss Russell upon a scene of wreck and ruin. "Highball" had done her worst, as was attested by a large variety of broken vases spilled sewing baskets and overturned tabarets. Regardless of these things, the new arrival walked into the apartment. "I was so entertained by what you said of the kitten," she gushed to Miss Russell, "that I had to bring Will down to hear it. Tell him what you call the creature and why."

Miss Russell smiled again. Then she indicated the trash about her with a sweeping gesture. "Highball," she said; "that's all."

A chorus girl appearing in a musical comedy called "Fantana" is said to have had holes pierced in the ears of her dog in order that he might wear ear-rings. Thinking people will feel, no doubt, that this showed greater intelligence than would have been evidenced if the young woman had followed the common custom of having holes drilled in her own ears.

• • •

"The Royal Chef" was the thirteenth musical comedy produced by the Shuberts. Notwithstanding what this might be supposed to augur, the piece has made a great deal of money. The coming season will be its third on the road.

• • •

Over $10,000,000 was spent in theater-going last season in New York, and about 18,000,000 people attended the play during the course of the year. In spite of this, only two dramas, only two musical comedy successes were few, "The College Widow" and "The Music Master," and one musical comedy "Fantana," achieving a record of 200 consecutive performances or over.

• • •

Alan Dale, the well known New York theatrical critic, in a recent article made the remarkable statement that during the past season there were only two musical offerings of any note; only two successes out of more than forty musical plays presented, in and near New York City. These were the imported musical comedy entitled "The School Girl," which had a previous record of over 400 nights at the Prince of Wales theater in London, and a purely American article entitled "Fantana," from the pens of Sam. S. Shubert, Robert Smith and Raymond Hubbell. Thus the honors are evenly divided between English and American authors. In this conection it is interesting to note that the music of "The School Girl," is by Leslie Stuart, who gained much fame through his last big success "Florodora." Another master hand in the construction of "The School Girl" was that of Mr. Henry Hamilton, who also furnished the book of "The Duchess of Dantzig," which scored a triumph in London, and met with more or less success in this country.

• • •

The tour of Frederick Warde and Katheryn Kidder has come to a close, and they will not appear together next season. Morover these stars now pass from the management of Wagenhals & Kemper. Mr. Warde will probably never appear on the regular stage again. Miss Kidder's plans are somewhat indefinite. She is endeavoring to find a suitable play, and if she is successful she hopes to renew her acquaintance with New York theatergoers next season.

• • •

Billy (Single) Clifford, whose first stellar tour was successful, will be starred next season in a musical farce called "Mr. New York of Broadway."

• • •

James K. Hackett is already making preparations for his next seasons' work. In company with Mrs. Hackett (Mary Mannering), he has gone to the woods of Canada for a brief vacation. They sail from New York, June 7, for Europe, where Mr. Hackett is to see "The Walls of Jericho," with which he will begin his next season at the Savoy theater. Mr. Hackett has secured from Percy MacKaye the American rights to his new play, "The Scarecrow," a quaint, almost weird, drama, with a distinctly original central character. Mr. MacKaye's "Canterbury Tales" and his new play for Mrs. Patrick Campbell are highly spoken of. Mr. Hackett expects "The Walls of Jericho" to run the major part of the season, but is prepared to follow it with "The House of Silence," which he recently presented in Pittsburg, and Mr. MacKaye's "Scarecrow." He is also arranging for a recent European success, the leading part in which is modern and serious.

Since Jefferson's death the veterans of the stage are J. H. Stoddart, 78; C. Leslie Allen, 74; Henry Clay Barnabee, 72, and Denman Thompson, whose years are as many; W. J. Le Moyne is 69; Frank Bangs is 69; Charles A. Stevenson and Louis James are 68; Kyrle Bellow admits to 60, and W. H. Crane does not insist on being considered any older. Other well-known players are E. M. Holtland, 57; Nell Burgess, 59; James O'Neill, 56; Frederick Warde, 54; John Drew, 52; Mansfield, 48; Nat Goodwin the same; Frank Daniels, 45; Chauncey Olcott, 43; Henry E. Dixey, 46, and E. H. Sothern, 41.

Miss Margaret Anglin is probably the only actress in the theatrical business that has a woman press agent. She is Miss Caroline Thompson. Miss Thompson, besides being press agent, has written several sketches and also a play for Florence Roberts, which the actress will produce next season. Miss Anglin's tour is at present confined to the coast, and Miss Thompson, who is now in Denver, tells of an amusing incident that happened at Redlands, Cal. After arriving at the station she directed the cabby to drive her to the theater. Having reached there, she inquired for the manager, and was told she would have to go to his plumbing shop, as he transacted all business at that place. When she found the plumbing shop everything was in confusion, but they dusted off the chairs and desk, and she arranged all the advance business with the head plumber, who was dressed in overalls.

Sophie Brandt, last seen here in "Princess Chic," is now appearing in vaudeville.

Not very long ago the "hello" songs, such as "Hello, My Baby," "Hello, Central" and "Good Morning, Carrie," were in the lead. Now it is "Goodby, Sis," "Goodby, Little Girl, Goodby," "Goodby, Bright Eyes," "Goodby, Eyes of Blue," "Goodby, Sweet Marie" and a number of other "farewell" songs. Song writers, it's about time to think of a new idea.

A rumor comes from London to the effect that Mrs. Langtry has agreed to play a season of at least twelve weeks in vaudeville in America, beginning early in the fall at a New York house. It is reported that her salary will be $3,500 a week, by far the largest sum ever paid on this side of the water for a vaudeville attraction. Some details are yet to be settled before the contracts are signed.

It is also said that Mrs. James Brown Potter, on account of the failures of several very expensive productions put on by her in London this season, is reported to be again seriously considering the very liberal offer made her by American managers for a tour in vaudeville.

Anne Blancke, who has been touring for the past three years in "A Little Outcast," is to be starred next season in a new melodrama called "Fighting Fate."

A story is going the rounds in which De Wolf Hopper figures at the center. The tall comedian not long ago took a long ride on horseback. That thirsty feeling overtook him, he stopped at a country roadhouse, where he called the waiter to bring him a glass of water, which, by the way, is said to be the favorite beverage of the deep-lunged singer.

He took a swallow of the aforesaid water, then quickly set it on the table.

"What's the matter with that?" he demanded of the waiter.

"Nothing, sir," replied the man. "It's all right—it's fresh spring water."

"Spring water!" exclaimed Hopper, whose sensitive palate disdained the tepid beverage; "nothing of the sort; that's good, old-fashioned 'summer' water. Give me, instead, a big, cool glass of beer."

• • •

New Yorkers who take their drama critically have been putting an actress through a rigid examination on a charge of neglect of her "th's" and "w's," and she is declared not guilty. Bertha Kalish's Polish origin aroused doubt as to her ability to pronounce such a simple phrase as "the word" in English without turning "the" into "de" and "word" into "vord." Even so studious a Pole as Modjeska has never learned how not to do that. Now, Modjeska has not stepped out of her professional shoes, but means to step out in them for one more farewell tour, but Kalish is ready to put her feet into them as soon as they are empty. Rumors of her wonderful ability have for years come from our ghetto, and now this Yiddish tragedienne is trying to substantiate them in English on Broadway. She is showing herself in "Fedora," a test at once helpful and hurtful. It aids her because the character of the vengeful Russian has been so perfectly created by Sardou that its inherent power carries any tolerable actress along with it. Kalish is hindered by it, however, because it brings her art into direct comparison with Sarah Bernhardt's and Elanora Duse's, and she can't apply her emotional vigor in a steadily cumulative embodiment, like Bernhardt, nor control her ardent temperament with reason, like Duse. I can't more clearly rate her than by saying that, in my opinion, she is well ahead of Blanche Walsh, abreast of Blanche Bates, and within a possibly overtaking distance of Mrs. Carter and Mrs. Fiske. If she could guide herself as Mrs. Fiske does or be guided by some master, as Mrs. Carter has been by Belasco.

• • •

That Kalish experiement is concurrent with a Kelm experiment. Adelaide Kelm has been the leading actress of a Harlem stock company until, in the way usual to stock theater favorites, she has become the dramatic idol of that part of town. She has played Nan, the Good-for-Nothing, better than Lotta ever did, and Hamlet, the Melancholy, better than Booth, in the fond esteem of her own loyal Harlemites. Now she has hired a theater in which to make a star of herself and it is crowded by her loyal followers, who give flowers to her in masses and to whom she gives her autographed pictures.

Now, Miss Kelm is an uncommonly able actress, and I mean no disparagement when I say that her Camille is the oddest Camille that ever loved, sickened and died. She takes her clientele for the circumspect people that they surely look like, and for their sake she purifies Dumas' social outcast to a degree that would make her creator mistake her for a perfect lady. The wooing by Armande has the manner of a clean courtship, the subsequent relationship looks like pure wedlock, and where the Dumas language doesn't agree with such aspects of the notorious case, the Kelm reading glosses the meaning so white that the black doesn't show through.

• • •

A less admirable animal, from a critical point of view, yet of popular interest, is the young woman who makes a distinctive sight of herself in one of the six extravaganzas that are this week running from spring into summer in Broadway. By light and airy new costumes the showgirls in these plays are made to look cool, and in one case, June stockings are put on a ballet-chorus of seashore bathers. These stockings are black, but so very thin that the skin shows through white. Now, according as the wearers are sleek or slim, the stretched mesh veils or reveals the contents. At one end of the line is a very plump creature over whose calves the June stockings are strained to an invisible film, and she looks like Whitter's Maud Muller, "bare and brown"—except that the cuticle is untanned white—from knees to feet. And a curious optical effect, which Whittier couldn't have seen in Maud, is here produced by the webbing, which of course thickens to our eyes as it rounds this showgirl's edges and thus outlines the changeful white shapes of the dancer with a streak of black. A startlingly graphic moving picture is thus shown—accidentally, of course; but the management hasn't had time yet to stop it and the young woman would be shocked awfully if anyone told her of it. Still, she must wonder why so many opera glasses are focused on her.

Counterfeits.

Read what one of the GREATEST NEWSPAPERS IN AMERICA has to say on this subject:

"The manufacturers of Castoria have been compelled to spend hundreds of thousands of dollars to familiarize the public with the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. This has been necessitated by reason of pirates counterfeiting the Castoria trademark. This counterfeiting is a crime not only against the proprietors of Castoria, but against the growing generation. All persons should be careful to see that Castoria bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher, if they would guard the health of their children. Sherlock Holmes and Raffles Meet In a New Drama—Kalish Ready To Step Into Modjeska's Shoes—A Show Girl In Summer Stockings.

New York, June 10.—Who says the dramatic season is dead? Why, we have this week a new Sherlock Holmes drama by Sherlock Holmes' creator, Sir A. Conan Doyle; and for good measure in crime committed and detected, it is fused and welded with a Raffles story by Doyle's brother-in-law, E. W. Hornung. A summer bargain is this two-in-one play, for it is on sale at half a dollar for the best seat in the evening and a quarter in the afternoon. Over 3,000 persons bought it last night, and I was one of the very few who didn't think it as good as it was cheap. Yet the material is of a kind with that from which Doyle and Gillette, Hornung and Presbrey made strange versions of "Sherlock Holmes" and "Raffles." The triple alliance of Doyle, Hornung, a new collaborator, Watson, has turned out "The Black Mask," one of the very fiercest of all furious melodramas. Its hero is a Hawkshaw Holmes, the villain a Raffles type of social highwayman, and of course they are professional and personal enemies. Raffles is again a cracksman in evening dress, but he doesn't stop with robbing his hosts—he murders them.

"I'm going to kill you," he remarks to the bound and gagged old gentleman whose guest he is. "When I say three I shall plunge this dagger into your heart. One"—the audience stops breathing—"two"—a murmur of gasps runs through the house—"three!" and with the deadly stab a woman shrieks.

• • •

So much for Raffles' new crime done in the manner of the Bowery. Now for Holmes' new feat of sleuthing in a style to match. Subtlety doesn't count theatrically over on the East side, and it wouldn't do to work up too intricate a case. So Raffles' dying victim crawls painfully to a window, drags himself feebly up to the sill, dips a forefinger in his wound and begins to write in blood the nickname of the murderer, Black Mask, on the shade. The red letters appear on the white cloth slowly—B-L-A-C-K—and then the man falls from weakness. But he struggles back to his feet and with a final effort adds one more letter—M—before dropping dead. Now, as the Black Mask is notorious for his dreadful deeds, the riddle of the unfinished name doesn't seem hard to solve. But this is to be a case of circumstantial evidence incriminating the wrong man; so there is an innocent Mr. Blackmore to be accused, and it is left to Hawkshaw Holmes to discover that the uncompleted inscription is not Blackm-ore, but Blackm-ask.

• • •

William Gillette and Kyrle Bellew are not playing Holmes and Raffles in "The Black Mask," and if they were I don't believe they would make an East side audience howl and hiss as two fameless actors do in the "remarkable third-act incident" which Doyle is quoted in the bill as indorsing as "based on fact" and not merely a transcript from his fiction. Holmes and Raffles love one and the same girl. Raffles marries her for her fortune, doesn't get it, abuses her cruelly, and, on learning that she has accepted a purely sympathetic kiss from the still loving Holmes, conceives a dreadful revenge. He will have her lips cut off, so that never again can she kiss any man. He disguises himself as an East Indian prince and tells a surgeon that his wife's lips have been accidentally inoculated with an Asiatic poison, for which there is no antidote. The only way to save her life is to remove the affected lips in a hurry. The surgeon obeys the singular call, finds the wife already chloroformed, gets his scalpel ready, and throws off his false wig and whiskers, also those of the bogus East Indian, and Doyle's Sherlock Holmes has vanquished Hornung's Raffles.

How does that strike the ten-cent gallery. Well, it hit it hard, yet leaves no mark. The urchins who have yelled at Holmes and jeered at Raffles break out into laughter the moment the curtain is down. To them it is all in fun. And a minute later, when a balladist sings between acts, they join heartily in all the familiar choruses. A new one which they caught up quickly, by the way, is a negro ditty with this philosophical chorus

I ain't nevah got nothin' from nobody any time.
So I ain't nevah don' nothin' for nobody no time.
An' 'less I git sumthin' from somebody some time,
I ain't nevah goin' t' do nothin' fer nobody no time.

A new summer style of melodrama has come in and maybe it will last over till winter. "My Tomboy Girl" is the first play that I have seen with the personages turning in a jiffy from heroic declamation to ragtime doggerel, and from gunplay to cake walking. A Virginia lost heiress is a newsboy in New York, and, as the Lottie Williams who acts him isn't feminine as to waist and hip lines, and has a consciousness of the comfort it passes reasonably as genuine—with all save two pursuing villains, who have the kidnapping habit fully developed, and are about to get away with her, when she escapes from trousers into skirts. But she finds time to lead her fellow newsies in a song and dance in the open street; and at the Waldorf-Astoria, where she lets us see much of the corsetting she undergoes ere she looks like a girl than she heads a ballet and chorus of chambermaids.

• • •

It is down in Virginia, though, that sensational melodrama and musical farce are mixed amusingly. As there are two abducting villains the need of two heroines to abduct is met by giving a sister to the Tomboy. Brave Josie and shy Lillian are toted from Fury hall by bad Richard and worse Black Jack to a bandit's cave in the mountains. The bandit business seems to have been prosperous. The spacious cave has an electric lighting plant and looks like a luxurious Oriental harem, with divans in the main cavern and couches in cozy corner grottoes. Twenty octoroons laze around in Asiatic draperies, and we are in doubt what race the playwright means to assign them to until just as we expect them to chant and wriggle couchee fashion they declare their bleached Africanism in a song and dance about the delights of life "down where the Suwanee river flows." The men of the band are dire at their trade, but when they come home from a hard day's work at banditting they take off their scowls, quaff moonshine whiskey and sing, "Here's to the foaming stein" in praise of beer. Being thus softened from a sordid to a genial temper, they pass on from crime to patriotism with a rousing chorus in honor of "our forefathers who fought at Bunker Hill."

• • •

Bad Richard and Black Jack rid themselves of the commercial spirit, too, and seek to be sociable with Josie and Lillian, and right there's where they burst up their bandit business. Lillian is a lopping and weeping captive, but Tomboy Josie is no such easy thing. She puts on male clothes again and pretends to be a visiting robber from over the mountain. Presently her trick is exposed. Then the orchestra strikes into shiver music and the calcium man begins to work red lights. A stream across the mouth of the cave has been planted with torpedoes to destroy invaders. Wires connect the mines with an electric switchboard, with keys to set off various deposits of dynamite here and there around the premises. Josie makes a dash for liberty with Lillian and puts her in a boat. Black Jack leaps for the keyboard to push the button that will blow the boat out of water. But Josie, soonest of sharpshooters, sends a bullet to that other button which connects with a mine under the cave itself. Bang! goes the explosion, and it isn't Josie's boat, but the bandit's home, that is broken up.

WARM-WEATHER DINING ON NEW YORK'S SKYLINE

Natives and Visitors Seek the Many-Storied Heights When Summer Comes—Growth of the Metropolitan Roof Garden—Tuscan Pergola To Surmount the Seven Million Dollar Hotel Astor.

New York, June 10.—(Special to The Herald.)—It was fifteen years ago that a theatrical manager—happy man—invented a new amusement. He was a little like Xerxes, who offered a big prize for the invention of a new pleasure and won it for himself. Up among the domes and Moorish towers of the New York Casino this manager built a garden. There were chairs and tables, there were swaying lanterns and spindling palm trees. Not only there was a little stage where an orchestra played waltzes and where every now and then a girl's voice shrilled comic songs. The performance was not especially artistic and was more than its due measure of dullness.

The main thing about it was that there was a delightful sense of novelty in enjoying oneself, even sadly, on a rooftop. Not since the days of Babylon had there been gardens in the air, and something uncanny and delicious was experienced in lolling far above the grinding tumult of the city and the summer's heat, and in being sung to and danced at.

The novelty of the venture ensured its success, for New Yorkers, and the thousands of other Americans who visit the metropolis in midsummer, have a more than Athenian fondness for new things. Today there are dozens of roof gardens in New York, patronized by ten thousand people every summer night. Of course in fifteen years the mild little performance at the old-time Casino has given way to huge spectacles and brilliant vaudeville, and the gardens themselves have grown in size and luxury. But the germ of them all was in that first aerial concert when the band played Valdteufel waltzes and a shrill voice sang a De Koven ballad.

The second of these gardens was built on the roof of the Madison Square Garden beneath the slim gilt Diana, and there orchestral concerts with a slight infusion of vaudeville were given. Others followed, notably Kaster & Bial's. But while it made one forget the sweltering weather to watch Mlle. Hightoe trip about or the Cavortsky troupe in their wonderful acrobatic gyrations, the sybarites soon discovered that they were crowded and wanted more elbow room and greater ease. "Also," they asked, "if we are to have roof vaudeville, why not roof dining rooms, with the accompanying quiet and coolness and splendid breadth of outlook over the city and harbor?" Hence the skyline restaurant and the hotel roof garden came into being.

The first public skyline restaurant was established twelve years ago in the downtown district on the twenty-third floor of the American Tract Society's building, high up above the roaring turmoil of the Nassau street canyon and Broadway. The restaurant still thrives and is open daily from 8 a. m. to 8 p. m. Thence the sight of the Brooklyn bridge and the bay studded with yachts, the jumble of roofs and domes, feasts the eye while the inner man is likewise being fed.

Most of the business clubs have similar restaurants. The Business Woman's club restaurant on the fourteenth floor of the Downing building in Fulton street offers a haven of rest to wage-earning women during the luncheon recess. The Arkwright club, the Drug Trade club, the Hardware club, the Wool club and the Aldine club are all business men's organizations which have lofty refectories.

The hotel roof garden restaurant, however, exhibits the highest development of catering amid aesthetic surroundings. Most big hotels now afford this pleasure of aerial dining for their patrons. Over the old Hoffman house the roof garden is fitted out in Flemish style, and the whole color scheme is black and white. The Waldorf-Astoria has a sumptuous roof garden for its patrons and guests, where no elaborate meals are served, but merely salads and sweets. The Vendome gardens, on the tenth floor of the hotel of that name, are fresh and beautiful, though they have no extensive view. From the Belle Claire, on the West side of town, the diners have a sweeping view of the Hudson and the lofty Palisades. The Majestic, at Seventy-second street and Central Park west, has conservatories for plants and vegetables, and rustic arbors where the guests of the hotel gather on sultry evenings.

What bids fair to be far and away the most imposing and delightful of the airy restaurants is the one now constructing on the roof of the $7,000,000 Hotel Astor, one which will, it is expected, be thrown open to the public before the summer is far advanced. Here, far up above the din and dust of Broadway W. C. Muschenheim, the proprietor of the hotel, is reproducing on an immense scale a garden of the style made famous among the vine-clad hills of Tuscany. It will cost $35,000, and in the hotel that has furnished New Yorkers with many surprises, promises to be the greatest surprise of all.

The garden measures one hundred yards by one hundred and eighty, or an area of about sixty-five city lots. A continuous pergola will gird the whole, and over the trellis work of this promenade a sinuous moon-flower vine will creep, the blossoms of which open only after sundown. Twelve hundred feet of California privet hedge will encircle the flower beds and paths.

No Italian castello, no French chateau, of the Renaissance, ever had a garden more carefully laid out. The most experienced landscape gardners and the best-known scenic artists have been employed. Exotic and tropical plants and palms of all varieties will be found growing on miniature lawns. The scent of flowers from five thousand flowering plans will fill the air. Numerous electric fountain cascades will gush forth from miniature grottoes, each pouring one hundred gallons of water a minute. The luminous efflorescence of these waters will mingle with myriads of electric lights, turning night into day; and, while the waters ripple and gurgle coolly all about, Italian troubadours will sing to the accompaniment of their national instruments.

Two great pillars, fifty feet high, are being erected to the right and left of the garden, and these will bear aloft very powerful electric lights shaded by alabaster globes. They will stand out like twin beacons and will be visible from the Catskills and far down Long Island sound. An unusual prospect will be spread out for the nocturnal visitor to this new garden of wonders high up in the air. Peering over the parapet one can see, just below, the broad asphalted triangle called Times Square, and to the south, past the Forty-second street corner, which is aswarm with humanity from sundown almost until the stars begin to fade, the eye travels along that glaring section of Broadway that has earned the appellation of "The Great Whiteway;" while near at hand looms the Times building like a tall pillar, and farther off one sees the lofty Flatiron, rising like a colossal ghost amidst the vapors of the night. Or one can lean back at ease and survey a far-off glimpse of the Hudson, a stream inky-black with lights moving mysteriously across it and the faint and melancholy lowing of the whistles of river craft stealing out of its gloom—all this while one is sitting amidst the rippling cascades, sipping some cooling beverage and somewhere near at hand Italian voices are singing "Carmela" or "Sole Mio."

With such Aladdin's gardens at hand it is little wonder that the New Yorker begins to feel that there is little reason why he should leave his native town in summer. Even the Parisian, who has brought open air amusement to its highest perfection, would marvel at some of the garden refectories to be found along Broadway. For the Parisian has never tried the architectural excursion to the moon, and taking his refreshment on a roof tower 300 feet above the street would be a novelty to him.

The roof garden has come to New York to stay. It is growing in popularity every year and becoming more and more a summer feature of the great metropolis.

Manager McNeil's bush league methods didn't result as he expected they would yesterday.

The Crookston manager feared that an attempt was being made to beat him out of the guarantee money for the second game which was scheduled to be played last evening. Accordingly in spite of the cold weather and the fog McNeil had his team on the grounds at 6:30 o'clock last evening, after being shut out 7 to 0 in the first game, and insisted on the second one being played. The players had been hanging around the grounds for over an hour, without any supper, and the things said about the Crookston manager were direct and to the point.

Swenson started in to pitch, but the fog was so dense it was impossible to see any part of the outfielders but their legs. They were blissfully ignorant of what was going on around the plate, and after Weller had drawn four bad ones, Menefee cracked out a single which went for three bags, and Weiler scored. Then the upms decided that the little farce comedy had been in progress long enough. The audience turned up his coat collar, got his rain check and started for home, and the players hied themselves to the nearest restaurant.

In the afternoon game the Crooks collected nine, nice large, round goose eggs as the result of the efforts of that burly son of Thor, named Erickson, whom Manager Van Praagh dug up from some hidden corner of the state. The big fellow had the Crooks sawing at the wind throughout the game, striking out eleven men in nine innings, and allowing but four scattered hits. The visitors never came within hailing distance of the plate.

Colette, who has recently joned the Crookston team, was in the box for the visitors, and aside from the fact that he at times showed a tendency to heave the ball over the grand stand or dig the plate out of the ground, he pitched good ball. Only five hits were made off his delivery, although three of these were for extra bases.

The White Sox let the new man alone for one inning, but started after him in the second. After Neighbors had been retired, pitcher to first, Erickson was given his base, and McAleese promptly swatted out a three-bagger to the deep left field fence. The big pitcher tore around the bases, taking twelve steps to the base, and was home before McAleese reached second. The catcher scored a moment later on McShane's clean single.

The White Sox kept right after the visitors in the second. Weller was hit by the pitch and went to third on a single by Menelee. He scored on O'Dea's outfield fly, and the vistors, when it was too late, worked in a neat double play, retiring Neighbors and Menelee.

In the fourth two runs were presented to Duluth on two errors by Fitzsimmons in right field, one by Livingston, a wild pitch by Colette, and a sacrifice by Bennett.

Two more came in the fifth. After Menelee had been retired, O'Dea drew a base on balls, and Neighbors went safe on a fielder's choice which caught the Duluth catcher at second. Then Erickson rapped out a two-bagger, scoring Neighbors, and came in himself on a two-bagger by McAleese, who appeared to find the Crookston pitcher entirely to his liking.

That ended the scoring, and the Crooks, when it was too late, braced up and played fast, snappy ball for the last three innings.

TWINS WIN AGAIN.

Down Tigers In Exciting Game at Brainerd.

Brainerd, June 10.—Special to The Herald.)—Timely hitting and accurate fielding behind Spicer, who was in the box, won the game for St. Cloud-Brainerd yesterday afternoon in the opening of the series of three with Grand Forks, and it was one of the prettiest games ever seen on the local grounds. The St. Cloud-Brainerd team has shown great improvement since the last game played here and the fans are up and coming and are there now like demons. It was one of the most sensational games ever seen here, the final score 9 to 8, hardly being an indication of the inside workings.

Grand Forks had their premier pitcher, Mr. Bond, in the box, and he was trimmed up to the tune of thirteen hits, nearly all of them timely. Spicer was touched up rather freely in but one inning, the sixth, when he allowed six hits and six runs came in. This really was the only feature that marred the game. As an indication that there was something doing St. Cloud-Brainerd had twenty-five assists during the game, and but two errors are chalked up against them.

It looked like easy money for St. Cloud-Brainerd up to the sixth, and it looked as though Grand Forks might be blanked, but Spicer was landed on heavily in this inning. After this he never allowed a hit and there was no more scoring for the Tigers.

With the score of 8 to 4 in the eighth inning St. Cloud-Brainerd went in with blood in their eye and Mr. "Gold" Bond was given an exhibition of hitting that left him groggy. Five pretty hits, Ripley, Ronesch, Howell, Harris singling and Harris swatting the ball for a two-bagger for the wind-up netted four runs, which tied the score. There was nothing doing for Grand Forks in the eighth. In the first of the ninth St. Cloud-Brainerd started in to cinch the game and succeeded. Ronesch singled but was caught at second. Hanson singled and stole second, coming home on Howell's sacrifice for the winning run. Harris struck out and Wing flew out to Smith in right field. It was one, two three for Grand Forks in the last of the ninth, and they failed to score.

Features of the game were Billy White's fielding at second, he having accepted fourteen chances without a skip, and Ronesch's batting.

FARGO WINS SECOND.

Farmers Duplicate Thursday's Victory at Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, June 10.—(Special to The Herald.)—In another fast-fielding game Fargo defeated Winnipeg by the same score as on Thursday, winning in much the same manner.

Winnipeg took the lead in the first two innings, but after that the Maroons were unable to find Berrigan. Green, who had been pitching good ball, weakened in the seventh, and three hits, aided by a couple of errors by Rogers, let in three runs, winning the game for Fargo.

Winnipeg tried hard to even things up, but double plays in the eighth and ninth innings put an end to their chances.

NEW TRACK RECORD

New York, June 10.—P. S. P. Randolph's Red Knight won the fourth race, a handicap one mile and a quarter at Gravesend yesterday and in doing so created a new track record for the distance, covering it in 2:05 1-5, which is 1-5 of a second faster than Goldheel's time, made in 1902.

Red Knight broke in front and led the field by five lengths, but in the stretch he began to tire, managing to last long enough, however, to win by a head.

The Picket and Alan-a-Dale, both suburban handicap candidates started in this race, but both performed badly, finishing away back in the ruck. Guiding Star, the 3 to 2 favorite, won the Hanover stakes, selling, by a length from Leonard Joe Hayman.

St. Louis, June 10.—Elastic rather surprised the talent yesterday by winning the fourth race at six furlongs, the feature of the fair grounds card.

Mafalda won the feature of the American Jockey club yesterday. Whole Jim Boozeman was the winner of the eevnt over the jumps.

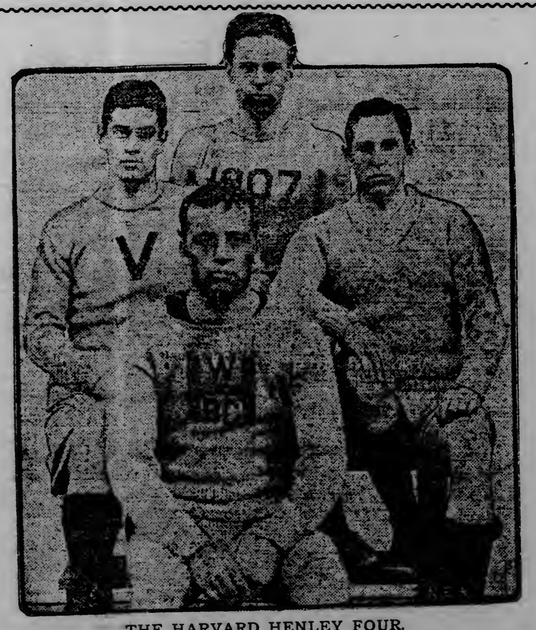
YACHTING RACE

St. Paul, June 10.—The most important yachting event of 1905 in the inland lakes will be the regatta that will be given for the pleasure of the visitors to the 1905 St. Paul Automobile Carnival. St. Paul has the reputation of being the yachting center of the Northwest and thirty or more flyers are owned in this city that are able to show clean heels to nearly every other yacht in the country of their class. Last year the White Bear Yacht club was honored to the extent of being allowed a chance at the Seawanhaka cup, the most highly prized yachting emblem held on the American continent outside of the America's cup. This emblem is in the possession of Canadian yachtsmen at Montreal and while they were able to defeat the St. Paul champion last year the races were the hottest and closest ever held for the cup. The St. Paul boat split heats with the defender and for a while it seemed that the cup would come to White Bear.

Many new yachts have been built this spring and the best of them will enter for the contest to be held in honor of the visitors. The White Bear, the boat that came so near bringing home the Seawanhaka cup may be among the contestants. The yachtmen of St. Paul are hustling for entries and it is predicted by them that the regatta will prove the best in the history of the sport in inland waters. Yachts from Oshkosh, Madison, Minnetonka and the lake ports of Michigan, as well as a possible entry from Montreal are expected. A magnificent prize to be known as the Carnival cup is being prepared for the winner of the big race.

It is announced that the visiting sailors will be entertained on board the fleet before, during and after the regatta.

FAST HARVARD CREW TO ROW AT HENLEY



THE HARVARD HENLEY FOUR.

FARLEY. BACON. MEIER. CORLETT.

Cambridge, Mass., June 10.—Harvard boating circles are deeply interested in the work of the 'Varsity four, which, barring accidents, will be sent to England to compete in the Henley events this summer. The four is composed of Corlett, stroke; Bacon, No. 3; Meier, No. 2, and Farley, bow.

STRAIGHT TALK

Thirty Minutes Work Per Day Won't Make Crew.

Oarsmen Will Adopt More Systematic Training This Week.

With scarcely a month intervening before the regatta will be held here in July, it is up to the Duluth Boat club crews to get in some hard training.

"Thirty minutes' rowing for three or four nights in the week won't make a crew," said one of the coaches to the candidates a few nights ago, after they had come in from a trip on the bay, in which there had been plenty of energy shown but a little too much splashing and uneven work to suit him.

From this time forward there will be no half-hearted measures in vogue. The coaches will insist on regular attendance on the part of all the candidates for the crews, and each man will be assigned to his place. Up to the present time the crews have been selected at hap-hazard, with the exception of two or three places in the boat, such as stroke and No. 7, which are regularly filled by Elmer Whyte and William L'Estrange. The coaches have been compelled to try new men in the other positions, and it was necessary to see what each man could do before a place could be assigned to him. Whipping a crew into shape from twenty or thirty raw candidates in two months is no mean task, yet that is the situation which has faced the coaches. There are not more than four or five men rowing this year who rowed last year, and some of these will be unable to take part in the regatta. The other places will have to be filled by new oarsmen, and the task of selecting them is no easy one.

In spite of the difficulties, however, good progress has been made in the short time the men have had to train. All of the men have at least the theory of the stroke, with the quick jerk of the oar from the water, the slow slide and the "jam" of the legs. In addition to this, practically all of the men are in good condition, as was evidenced by the trip made by one of the eights last week. The men rowed to the Park Point pavilion and back, stopping but once at the turn, and spurting most of the way back, under the coaching of Dr. Lyman, who was acting as coxswain. The crew splashed somewhat, but they got the boat through the water at good speed, and the coach was not displeased at the exhibition.

During the coming week two eights will probably be chosen. One will be composed of the most likely candidates, and the other will be made up of the "dubs." If a "dub" shows himself fit for the first crew he will be given a trial, and in this way the members of the first crew will be kept constantly fighting to hold their positions. It is the wish of the coaches to get both eights out every night next week, and the more men who report for rowing each evening, the better Duluth's chances will be in the coming regatta.

HILDEBRAND INCOMPETENT

Although He Draws a Salary of $25,000 a Year.

New York, June 10.—One of the most important happenings in the turf world recently is the setting down of Eugene Hildebrand, the star jockey, for the remainder of the meet, because of a suspicious looking ride on Harry Payne Whitney's Duenna, when she was beaten by Last Cherry. The race certainly had enough queer features about it to warrant the searching investigation it will receive at the hands of the Jockey club before Hildebrand can ride again.

Hildebrand's ride was astonishing. He sat like a graven image all through the stretch, with a tight hold on Duenna's head. The filly was running head and head with Last Cherry, and the latter was all out and whipping. To every one it was apparent that Duenna must win if Hildebrand once lifted his hands. But he never did.

An explanation was demanded immediately of Hildebrand by the stewards. The boy said his filly had been bumped right at the start, and that he had lost a stirrup. The stewards considered the matter for several days, and concluded that a clever rider like Hildebrand could have won bareback on any filly as good as Duenna was, and set him down for incompetency.

It is a hard matter to criticize the doings of the stewards, but to racing men it seems that the word "incompetent" is a charitable way of diagnosing the case. Just think of a lad that is under a contract of two years at a princely salary of $25,000 being found guilty of incompetency.

With the lad's case now before the turf body, the question race-goers will ask is how the smart men of the turf seem to know when incompetent rides are to come off. Certainly the way the money poured into the ring was evidence that somebody knew what they were about.

Of course, it may be in using the word "incompetent" the stewards wished to plainly convey to the public that there was not the least sign of fraud in the race of the two fillies. That, while they could find none, and that they simply believed Hildebrand's poor work to be a case of overconfidence.

It was common talk, too, that Hildebrand's employer, Joe Yeager, had a heavy commission on Last Cherry, the winner. This could not be verified, however. The stewards examined a number of witnesses about the race, but refuse to make any of the evidence public.

If the Jockey club, as a result of this case, should make a rule putting an end to this business of having jockeys under the control of pluggers and bookmakers, it would be a blessing.

GOOD BALL TOWN

National Capital Crazy Over Home Club's Good Showing.

Harmony Not Necessary to Make a Winning Team.

New York, June 10.—For a real lively, old-fashioned baseball town I think at the present time Washington, D. C., has all the best of it. I saw the Senators drop two games to Boston on Decoration day, and the two large crowds went fairly wild with disappointment, as a squad followed the players' bus, hurling abuse at the victors. It was the days of the Lord Baltimores over again, with the colored population in evidence with cheap talk and a stray stone at the bus, when there was no friction between the men on the field.

I cannot quite appreciate the man at a ball park who considers it a duty to howl at the visiting players in hopes that some one will appreciate his efforts in rattling the pitcher. It is bad enough to see the players on the coaching lines going through monkey shines, and confess that I enjoy good-natured coaching, but half the spectators howling continuously to rattle a lot of old-timers seems like a waste of time, and Washington just now has the noisest attendance I ever heard at a ball game. Among the crowd enjoying the games at Washington was Senator Gorman. Just as fond of the game as he was before the war, when he was the leading player on the White House lot. The senator was the first man to be chosen as the president of a national baseball organization, and did much for the sport up to 1871, when Nick Young came to the front as the man to lead the national organization. Mr. Young, too, was at the game. Attorney General Moody with a party of friends attends the games regularly. Mr. Moody was president of the New England league before coming to Washington as a congressman. In fact, Washington is full of lovers of the game. The departments employ many an old-time player. Doug Allison and Paul Hines are the most celebrated of the lot. Allison was around to see the boys at the hotel. He was the catcher of the Cincinnati Reds in '69, and for a dozen years was the star catcher in the country. This was before there was protector or big mitt invented. Allison was the first to use a glove while catching. It was a driving glove with the fingers cut off. Then he had two fingers made out of sole leather for the left hind, and by the use of laces managed to protect his hands. He was a great ball player. Paul Hines is still playing with one of the department teams. Hines it was who made the famous single-handed triple play in 1878.

Is perfect harmony essential to success in baseball? There seems to be a great difference of opinion on this subject.

When a first-class ball team falls off in play about the first thing you will hear the fans say why there can't be harmony in the team, it is the same crowd that was there last year, but for some reason they don't win and I am sure there is dissension in the ranks.

Take the Boston champions this season, for example. I've heard a number of people say their poor standing was caused by several rows in the team. I mentioned this to Cy Young while in Washington this week and the old Roman had a good hearty laugh at my expense. "Why," said he, "the trouble with the Boston club this year is that we have too much harmony. Last year our players were scraping all the time, and this kept every one keyed up to their best work. Why, when I was with Cleveland it was a poor day when we did not have three or four drag outs, and yet every man worked his head off to win. Take the old Baltimore club, the Boston club, when McCarthy and Duffy were there, the old Chicago club, St. Louis Browns as well as the New York Giants at the present time and you will find that the players continually wrangled with each other, and the only effect it had was to make them a hard club to beat. I have always found where ball players are not hitting they lose their spunk and become all together too harmonious for their team's good. Let a player get his two safe hits in a game he is the happiest man in the village that night, but when he commences to once figure that his lamps are growing dim and his chances for a continuation for a magnificent salary speedily growing less."

There is no life in a team unless the boys are hitting the ball, and the more they hit the more they scrap and the more games to go to their credit. I think Young was right on his claim that you must be aggressive and call each other dumb players.

When all are out to win, victory alone is the salve that heals all sores in baseball, and when a lot of players go to the dressing room after defeat and do not enter into a general powwow and a roasting bee that team's chances for first place has vanished.

Young, of the Boston Nationals, is the pitching find of the season. He is a left-hander and built from the ground up. He has fine speed, good control and a jump on his fast ball. He has shut out nearly all the big clubs and has saved Boston a fighting chance to keep out of last place. The Boston club paid $500 for his release to the Concord club of the New England league, and is paying the young phenom just $125 per month, or $750 for the six months' contract. Mr. Young, however, has grown wise and demanded a raise.

The surprise of the season is the awful time that Boston and New York are having to keep out of last place in the American race.

How the mighty has fallen. They told me in Washington that Pat Dougherty was offered to them for $2,000.

THREE NATIONALITIES

Represented In Winning Yacht Race Combination.

Much interest was felt among all classes of sporting men in the great ocean yacht race. As the favorite won, and it was an American boat, there is general satisfaction to which the breaking of the record by the Atlantic added in no small measure. In fact, all the three countries interested should feel satisfied, as the following placing of the first listed boats show:

Winner—Atlantic. Built in America. Sailed by an Englishman.

Second—Hamburg. Built in Scotland. Sailed by a German.

Third—Valhalla. Built in Scotland. Sailed by an Englishman.

"Anything to Beat Duluth," Policy of League Teams.

St. Cloud-Brainerd and Winnipeg Teams Are Shaken Up.

"Anything to beat Duluth" is the cry of every team in the league at the present time, with the possible exception of the Maroons, who are content to see Duluth win the pennant if they cannot win it themselves.

For two years the Grand Forks management has had its heart set on winning the Northern league pennant. Last year the backers of the team opened their pockets freely and went over $3,000 in the hole in an effort to beat out Duluth. When this was seen to be impossible they lost interest in the game for the time being, and were not adverse to seeing the season brought to a sudden termination.

This year with a salary limit rigidly enforced the managers of the Tigers figured early and late to get the best possible team for the money. They succeeded fairly well, but the team does not appear to be quite up to the standard of the White Sox.

Now the cry has gone up that Duluth is exceeding the salary limit, although Manager Van Praagh let Kennelley go on June 1 to keep within the mark. Each manager has a $500 forfeit posted to keep within the salary limit, and the Grand Forks, Crookston, Fargo and St. Cloud managers are after the Duluth forfeit. But they haven't got it yet and are not likely to do so, as the team is now carrying but ten men and the salaries come within the limit.

As far as the Duluth management and men are concerned, if they cannot win the pennant themselves, they are anxious to see Winnipeg or the St. Cloud-Brainerd combination take it. It is anything to beat Grand Forks with Duluth, and when the Tigers come here for the next series there is apt to be some excitement witnessed. As yet only one game has been played between the two teams, Duluth taking it, and with each day they are kept apart the rivalry is growing stronger.

The Twins are making an excellent showing these days. The team has been given a general shaking up, and it is playing good ball. If the pace set in the last week is maintained, the team will be some place near the top when the season closes, and will give the Duluth team a rub in the series which opens here next week.

Winnipeg has also been strengthened, and while the Maroons have just dropped two games to Fargo, they have the satisfaction of knowing they are the only team which has taken a series from Duluth this season.

Duluth's lead looks big in the percentage column, but if the Twins should come in next week and take the majority of the games in the series, which is not by any means improbable, the lead would not amount to much. Every game lost by Duluth means from thirty to forty points off the percentage.

The games at Athletic park this spring have been drawing well, considering the weather. The team has enjoyed only a few nice days since it returned home, but the fans have turned out loyally, in spite of the cold and the rain. Next week, when St. Cloud-Brainerd comes, the attendance should average close to the 1,000-mark, provided the weather man does the proper thing. This would make up for the games missed during the Grand Forks and Winnipeg series.

MEMPHIS

Summer Race Meeting Will Open June 17.

Memphis, Tenn., June 10.—The program for the first week's racing of the midsummer meeting of the New Memphis Jockey club, comencing June 17, is announced by Secretary Macfarlane.

The list of offerings for horsemen shows a liberal distribution of money, with nothing less than $400 purses and overnight handicaps and special purses of larger value sprinkled through the first week's program.

The feature set for opening day is the Bluff City Handicap, with $1,000 added, for 3-year-olds and upward which will be run over the famous Montgomery Handicap course, with an extra furlong added. Entries to the Bluff City Handicap are announced to close June 10 and weights are to appear June 14.

No attempt has been made to renew any of the old-time classics which have been annually contested at the spring meetings for more than twenty years, but appropriate names have been given to the handicaps to be decided during the meeting.

Racing enthusiasts in Memphis are looking forward to a prosperous season of racing. For many years Memphians have contended that the spring meetings began too late in winter or too early in spring for the bulk of the sport-loving public to leave their business interests, and for this reason the Jockey club officials are preparing to entertain large crowds.

Since the announcement was made that the local jockey club intended conducting a summer meeting news of summer and autumn meets at the smaller tracks in the West and Southwest has gone forth, and it is evident that the close of the Chicago tracks will cause the reopening of many abandoned race courses in Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana.

Announcement is made by the club that a strict interpretation of the so-called Western Jockey club outlaw rule will be enforced.

MADDEN TO RETIRE

New York, June 10.—Back to old Kentucky, where the blue grass grows, and back to the home of his younger days goes John E. Madden, the wizard of the American turf. After the present season the Eastern racing world will know him no more as a trainer, and will see him no more save at rare intervals during the anual sale of his yearlings.

Hereafter Madden, the David Harum of the turf, will devote his abilities to the breeding of race horses at Hamburg Place his Kentucky farm.

With the great trainer will go the best wishes of every man of prominence connected with the turf. Shrewd, hard-headed and strictly honest, he has become the friend and adviser of millionaire racing men, who would go bond for his word.

Madden has never been thoroughly satisfied with the part he has been called upon to play in the racing world.

"It has always been my intention," said he after announcing his retirement, "to go back to Kentucky and devote my time to breeding horses at Hamburg Place, but somehow my interests have always been so tied up that I could not well break away. Now, however, all is clear for my retirement, and I shall go back and lead what has always seemed to me a life of ideal enjoyment.

"Somehow," he continued, reflectively lifting his stubby black mustache, "somehow I have always looked forward to this, even from my boyhood. It has been a sort of lifelong dream with me. I have a little money saved over, but, of course, I shall try to make Hamburg Place pay for its keep.

"Besides," here Madden's voice fell, "I what boys are when they are growing up. But," cheerfully, "these two boys are the best little chaps in the world. One is 11 and the other 7. Their names are Edward and Joseph.

"In spite of the fact that they are only kids, they are the largest breeders of Shetland ponies in this cuntry.

But the Shetland ponies are another story, an establishment within themselves. They are the property of Messrs. John Edward Madden, Jr., and Joseph Madden, aged respectively 11 and 7, the sons of the master of Hamburg Place, and following even at this early age in the footsteps of their father in their love for the horse. It is within the past few months that the Madden boys have established their Shetland pony stud. Of it they are as complete masters as if they had been in the business twenty years. They have some eighteen mares and have recently pruchased from Mrs. E. S. Israel the handsome little stallion Alan-a-Dale, named for Mr. T. C. McAlan-a-Dale, named for Mr. T. C. McDowell's great race horse because he was foaled the day the latter won the Kentucky Derby. And Alan-a-Dale the Shetland is as royally bred in his way as is Alan-a-Dale the racer. He is a direct descendant of the fine stock which Major William Cassius Goodloe imported from the Shetland islands a number of years ago.

The Madden boys are two interesting youngsters. Both inherit the athletic tendencies of their father, and are probably as well developed physically as any other two boys of their age.

Indeed, athletics is a very important branch of the daily study and daily practice at Hamburg Place. Mr. Madden keeps himself in the perfect physical condition which alone enables him to accomplish so vast an amount of work. Last summer a camera fiend out in the early morning hours at Sheepshead Bay caught a snapshot of him jumping flat-footed a five-foot fence, and another got his picture in the midst of a back somersault dive from a spring board into the ocean. Both were widely exploited at the time, and his frequent feats of strength and daring in stopping dangerous runaways have been noted by the newspapers of the country. There is now being constructed at Hamburg Place a very complete small gymnasium. It will contain all the latest apparatus and will be equipped with shower baths and all conveniences.

A peacock could not have been prouder than Madden as he spoke of his children.

"Do you know what they have done?" he continued. "They have leased 100 acres of daddy's farm and have gone into business for themselves. That's Madden all over. They have got to run it and make or break. They have also got to be square and honorable in all things, but I know they will be that, for there is absolutely nothing bad in their make-up.

"After the hurly-burly of the race tracks, I know it will seem quiet and maybe a little bit lonely down there at first, but I guess I will get used to it. I suppose I will wake up in the night with the postbell in my ears and the paddock bugle blowing, but when I think of the fine yearlings I propose to turn out I will be satisfied."

With the retirement of Madden from the track, racegoers will miss one of the most prominent figures on the turf.

He is astute, always alert, and his readiness to sell a horse was never better illustrated than in his disposal of Abdell to Samuel Hildreth after the fourth race on Friday. Abdell has a slight ringbone, but Hildreth took the colt after only five minutes' conversation with Madden. The latter had a feeling for the horse, but he has never owned an animal that did not have a price.

In spite of his great success Madden is comparatively new to the turf. Nineteen or twenty years ago he was "fooling around with trotters," as he expressed it. Before this he was an athlete, well known among foot racers throughout the country.

"I used to stop playing marbles to fool about horses when I was a boy," he said. "You could never tear me away from them. When I grew up I bought an old trotter named Robert McGregor, who was a crack-a-jack in his way. I made $33,000 out of him, and he was the first big thing I ever owned.

"Then I turned right around and bought the trotter Abdell for $10,000 from the Sanford estate. He made a record of 2:23 as a yearling and was the champion of the world.

"I quit the trotting turf at last because I saw there were better opportunities among the runners. Just after I went into running I got a good class horse in Harry Reed, which I afterward sold to Mr. Dwyer."

Madden is as willing to buy a good horse as he is to sell, and he seldom makes a mistake in their value. When he once sets his heart on a yearling he is willing to pay even a fancy price for it, and his judgment is seldom at fault. But once his mind is made up as to its value, he will not deviate from his figures.

As an instance of his quickness in business it will be remembered that Trillo, winner of the Suburban in 1898, was sold at auction to Newton Bennington for $4,000. Fifteen minutes later Madden offered Bennington $5,000 for Trillo. Bennington accepted it. Subsequently Madden sold Trillo to W. C. Whitney at an advance. In that transaction Madden proved his business ability. He made it worth while for Bennington to part with his new purchase quickly, and he resold the horse at a profit inside of an hour.

Madden has developed some of the best horses in the country and won any number of great stakes with them. Under his care Hamburg became famous. A few years ago he took Ballyhoo Bey for W. C. Whitney and trained him so well that he became the sensational colt of the year. Madden started him twice and won both races—the Futurity and Flabush Stakes.

When there is a prospective purchaser after one of Madden's horses, he does not believe in killing off the prospects of a sale by taking a chance to win a race. In 1889 at Morris Park he had Admiration in a race that she could not have lost. She had never started, and only a few men were aware of her high speed. The prospects of a coup were alluring, but Madden would not take any chance for a defeat, and sold her to W. C. Whitney for $10,000 on the morning of the race after a private trial.

Madden has owned more great horses and parted with them than any other man on the turf. His motto is: "I sell winners." A few of the horses that he bought for small sums and parted with for large figures were:

Hamburg, $50,000; Plaudit, $25,000; David Garrick, $20,000; Kilmarnock, $20,000; Prince of Melbourne, $10,000; Harry Reed, $12,000; Yankee, Blue Girl, Black Stock and Highflyer—a half interest—for a price said to be $30,000; McMeekin, $5,000; Gulden, $10,000; Starbright, $10,000; Admiration, $10,000, and Castaway, $4,000.

When on his 1,400-acre farm, Hamburg Place, near Lexington, Ky., Madden dispenses hospitality with a lavish hand.

The celebrated breeder may well be called a model among race-track men. He does not drink, smoke or gamble, and his pleasures outside of race horses are simple and few.

"When I go back to Kentucky," he said, in a sort of farewell talk, "I mean to settle down and attend to a business which I have always liked. I shall expect my boys to be great company for their father, and of course they will have to go to school for some time to come. I shall simply feel that I am going home again."

"Did you ever make a big bet during your racing career, Mr. Madden?"

"Now, what a modern plunger would call a big bet," he replied. "I never was a big betting man. I went into the business simply for the sport of breeding and training a perfect running horse. I shall continue to breed them, but I am through training.

"I have about 100 brood mares on my farm, and I expect to have a fine set of yearlings for sale next season.

"Outside of this I shall devote my entire time to my two little boys."

West, 61; East, 56.

On the showings made by the track and field athletes of the East and West in their intercollegiate meets the Western athletes must be considered as superior to their Eastern rivals, says the Chicago Journal. Considering the work of ten men in the conference meet last Saturday and in the Eastern intercollegiate the previous Saturday from an impartial standpoint the West would overwhelm the East, with Chicago leading with forty points, Yale coming second with fourteen, then Cornell and Michigan with twelve each, and so on, as this table shows.

The tables computed from the records of the competitors in the two championship meets show that the best Western men in each event of the East and the West were to meet in a national championship event that the West would win by the score of 6 to 56. This result is obtained after a most conservative estimate and a more sweeping victory for the West would no doubt result if the proposed national meet were held.

In the 100-yards Blair of Chicago is given first place, with Hogenson, his team mate, second, and Schick, the Harvard star, third. Schick's time in the Eastern meet was 0:10 1-5, while both Blair and Hogenson did the century in even time Saturday. In the 220-yard dash Hogenson is placed first as a result of his time record of 0:22 for the distance, made Saturday around a turn. Schick did but 0:22 1-5 on a straightaway, but is placed second, with Blair of Chicago third.

Amsler of Pennsylvania is the logical selection for the high hurdles, his time for the jumping race in the Eastern meet being 0:15 3-5, while Catlin took the Western meet in 0:15 4-15. Vonnegut of Cornell, though he would have to move rather rapidly to defeat either Nicol of Michigan or Capt. Friend of Chicago.

Garrels of Michigan has the best record for the low hurdles. Running around a turn Saturday he cleared the low fences in 0:25 1-5, while Castleman of Colgate, the Eastern winner, was able to do but 0:24 4-5 on a straightaway course. Track authorities declare that a straightaway course is three-fifths of a second faster than a circular one. Figuring along this line, Garrels is a 0:24 3-5 man on a straightaway track. Castleman is given second place, while Catlin is placed third. Catlin is not fast enough on the flat for a low hurdler, his forte being the high fences, where strength and perfect form count.

In the 440-yard run a slight deviation is made from the records of the men in the two meets in picking the point winners. First place is given to Wayman of Pennsylvania on account of his record of 0:49 2-5, while Groman of Chicago, who was unable to take better than second place in the conference meet in 0:50, is given second place over Waller, the man who defeated him.

Groman is considered the greatest quarter-miler in the country by such judges as Mike Murphy of Yale and Stagg of Chicago. He lost his race Saturday because he had the hardest kind of racing luck, being pocketed no less than five times during the race. In addition to being fouled by Waller on the first turn. His time at the Philadelphia relay games in April was caught at 0:48 4-5 by Mike Murphy of Yale. Third place is allotted to Dives of Harvard, who is considered a faster man than Waller, the Western winner.

Though sentiment prompts one to select Lightbody of Chicago for the half mile run, figures won't lie, and Parsons of Yale with his mark of 1:56 is the legitimate choice. Lightbody is capable of beating this time according to the opinion of all competent judges who have seen him run, but it would be asking too much of Stagg's tow head to ask him to defeat the speedy son of Old Bill after winning the mile run, which he is hoped to do in this dream. Third place is passed down to Squires of Syracuse, who was a good second to Parsons in his record breaking performance. Ramey of Michigan is not faster than a 1:59 man and so is not considered.

Lightbody, he of the machine-like stride, is the only logical candidate for the mile run. Saving himself Saturday for a second race, he ran the four laps in the record-breaking time of 4:25, which was one-fifth of a second faster than the time of Munson of Cornell, the winner of the mile in the Eastern intercollegiate.

Williams of Princeton is given third place over Coe of Michigan, as his record is three seconds better than that of the Michigan runner.

The two-mile run is a hard race to pick. But figuring on the records of the men, Rowe is the one man for first place. His mark of 9:50 is three-fifths of a second better than the record of Hall of Yale in the Eastern meet. The Eastern man is given second place, though there was not more than a fifth of a second's difference between the time of Rowe, the winner in the conference meet, and that of Lyon of Chicago, who ran third. Stone of Michigan is given third place, figuring that his time was at least equal to that of Hall.

Having disposed of the track events thus on the basis of time, attention is turned to the field events, where the somewhat more accurate system of feet and inches is employed to tell the merits of the men. The East is given a clean sweep in the high jump, as Marshall of Yale, Porter of Cornell and Crane of Harvard cleared at least 5 feet 11 inches in the Eastern meet, while Barker of Iowa won the high jump in the conference meet Saturday with a mark of 5 feet 10¾ inches.

In the broad jump Grimes of Princeton entitles him to first place, while Friend of Chicago is placed second by virtue of his leap of 23 feet and ¾ of an inch. French of Michigan did better than the second man in the Eastern meet, hence is placed third.

First and second places in the pole vault are given to Norris of Illinois and Glover of Purdue, who tied Saturday at 11 feet 9⅜ inches, while Dray, the Yale freshman, is given third place, as he won the Eastern contest at 11 feet 9 inches.

In the shot-put the Eastern strong men are entitled to all nine points on their marks, as Rowland of Amherst, the third man in the Eastern meet, heaved the weight two inches farther than Dunlap of Michigan, the winner in the conference meet.

In the hammer-throw the tables are turned, however, as Parry of Chicago, with a record of 156 feet 3 inches; Tobin of Chicago, with a record of 153 feet 4½ inches, and Thomas of Purdue, with a mark of 152 feet 2⅛ inches, beat the record of Van Duyne of Syracuse, who won the hammer-throw in the Eastern games with an effort which was good for but 149 feet 11 inches.

Yale Anxious To Secure Keene Fitzpatrick For Athletic Coach

Ann Arbor, Mich., June 10.—With the desertion of Mike Murphy from Yale, the sons of Eli are now trying hard to land Keene Fitzpatrick, Michigan's famous trainer.

Athletic history at the University of Michigan for the past five years has been eloquent with success. This applies to all lines of athletic endeavor, but is especially applicable to the track teams, whose consistent wins have been the talk of the intercollegiate world.

Those directly connected with athletics have for years known of Keene Fitzpatrick's ability and his constantly increasing success has made his name familiar to those without the pale.

It is no exaggeration to say that today Fitzpatrick stands head and shoulders over every trainer in the country, just as Yost outshines rival football coaches. And without Fitzpatrick Yost could not produce the winning football teams he does.

Keene Fitzpatrick was born in Boston in 1865. He never went to college, receiving only a common school education. He became interested in athletics early and his splendid physique and constant training enabled him to earn a reputation as a first-class all-around athlete. His specialty was sprinting, and this secured him a place on the great fire brigade team of Natick, Mass., with such team-mates as "Mike" Murphy, Yale's noted trainer, and E. Donovan, the first man to run 100 yards in 9 3-5 seconds.

Sought for as a coach, Fitzpatrick in 1890 accepted a position at Yale as assistant trainer. In 1892 he came West, as director of athletics at the Detroit Athletic club, where he brought out many shining lights. In 1894 he became trainer of the University of Michigan, and helped turn out a football team that won the Western championship and defeated Cornell 12-4, then considered a wonderful performance.

The following year the eleven again won the Western championship, but was defeated by Harvard, 4 to 0.

In 1896 Fitzpatrick went to Yale, but remained only two years, returning to Michigan. In 1899 he was appointed director of the gymnasium, a position which gave him a permanent chair on the faculty.

Fitzpatrick's work in turning out first-class teams has been consistent. The unparalleled success of Michigan's football teams since 1900 is due as much to the skill of the trainer in keeping his men in magnificent physical condition as to Yost's coaching. It is seldom necessary to remove a Michigan man from the game on account of injury or exhaustion.

But it is in preparing track men that Fitzpatrick's ability stands forth, for he not only conditions the men, but coaches them. Since 1900 Michigan has won every Western intercollegiate meet, and has lost but one dual meet—that with Chicago in 1901. In 1900 the university sent a team of four men to Paris to compete in the international games, and won three seconds and one third. Fitzpatrick's proteges have never lost an indoor meet, although competing with the best Western and Eastern intercollegiate teams.

The most brilliant Michigan victories on track and field have been those won during the last three years in the Philadelphia meets. In 1903 Michigan astounded the East by winning the four-mile relay hands down from the crack of the East. Yale coming in a poor second.

Last year the men from Michigan not only won the relay, but the shot-put, sprints and hurdles as well. The success of the team this year is too recent to warrant repeating.

This consistent winning has made Fitzpatrick famous as a trainer, and has endeared him to Michigan men. Quiet, unostentatious, Fitzpatrick never advertises himself except through victories. He never touches intoxicants; does not smoke. In short, he is an ideal trainer, sound in body and mind—the sort of man a father wants to intrust the care of his son to; who, by quiet example, sets an ideal for all young men with whom he comes in contact.

GOSSIP OF RING

Promoters of Pugilism Are Bearing Thick On Frisco.

Several Clubs Have Asked For Permits For August.

San Francisco, June 10.—If all the clubs applyng for permits to hold pugilistic contests between now and the end of the year receive the sanction they are after, the license collector will certainly do a land office business. A year ago the business of fight promoting was confined to the Hayes Valley, San Francisco Athletic and Yosemite clubs. Then the Shasta club broke into the game and the amount received by the city for licenses was increased from $3,000 to $4,800, the clubs paying $1,200 each.

For the first few months of this year the Hayes Valley and the San Francisco had a monopoly of the business, the Yosemite being frozen out, owing to some political complications. Now it is said that the Lincoln Athletic club has been given some kind of an assurance that it will receive a permit for August and that the Western Athletic club has also been flattered with the hope that it will receive similar consideration. There is a rumor that other clubs are to enter the field and even the Yosemite must have observed a ray of promise in some direction for it also has made application for a permit, although up to the present it has been repeatedly turned down.

Of course politics, pugilism and promises go hand in hand, but the real truth is that the Hayes Valley is the only organization that can see any distance into the future. It has been granted the sanction for July and as we understand it has entered into a provisional arrangement by which it will most likely present Jimmy Britt and either Hanlon or Young Corbett as its main attraction.

Just to show how the grand grab for permits has mixed up the pugilists as well as the promoters it may be instanced that the Hayes Valley club secured Battling Nelson's signature to a set of articles before the Dane left for the East. At that time the one match that was talked of was the long pending return date between Nelson and Britt. When Nelson left here he was fully persuaded by Levy, manager of the Hayes Valley organization that Britt could also be induced to sign.

The question now arises why is the Hayes Valley talking of featuring Britt and Hanlon or Young Corbett for July, when it had already made a contract with Nelson? The explanation was that Britt was also making contracts about that time. He threw his lot with the Western Athletic club, a new affair in which his brother is said to be interested. Britt now claims that he gave his solemn promise that as long as there was a chance of the Western Athletic club securing a permit some time this year he would hold off for the purpose of boxing Nelson before that club.

There are some people mean enough to hint that Jimmy Britt is not breaking his neck to get at Nelson, but of course Jimmy snorts at an insinuation of that kind. Says he: "Just as soon as the Western A. C. throws up its hands and declares itself out of business I will come to terms with any club that can put me in the ring with Nelson. I am going to stick by the Western until such time however. Meanwhile I have got as much right to make other matches as Nelson has to go hunting for contests through the Eastern states."

This all simply goes to show that the situation is in a muddle so far as the pugilists and the men who arrange battles for them are concerned.

Up in Nevada it is very different. Certain promoters there who have had a long rest are becoming quite breezy and energetic in disseminating information concerning the rustic carnival of nations that is to be held at Reno early in July. It is announced that Jack Root and Marvin Hart are to be the main heroes in this stupendous struggle for the supremacy of sluggerdom. But it mixes matters to hear the affair spoken of as a world's championship for the laurels relinquished by Jefferies and then to read as follows: The men will fight around 160 or 162 pounds. The matter of weights is still to be decided upon.

This possibly may be the mistake of some youthful clerk or press agent. They are not as hardened in the ways of ring sport up that way as they are in other sections of this country. A little thought should remind them, howvere, that with world's champions of the Jefferies kind Meanwhile I have got as much right to make other matches as Nelson has to go hunting for contests through the Eastern states."

He is a student at the English high school and has been boxing for ten years. He was 18 years of age May 22, and weighs 125 pounds. Young Gilmore won his first bout against J. Innis, in twenty seconds. His next two prospective opponents were overweight and withdrew. In the final he met Billy Harrison of Toronto and won easily on points in three rounds. He is of rangy build and possesses a clever left and a fairly strong right.

E. Phillips Oppenheim, a capable producer of thrills, has just issued his latest novel, "The Master Mummer," and those who have read his previous books—and this is a wide circle—will find much in it to entice their thoughts away from their troubles, temporarily.

The author knows how to keep his readers entertained through a story skilfully and enthrallingly. "The Master Mummer" is in some respects his greatest success in this line. It has an ingenious plot, with a steady stream of romantic interest, with strong dramatic touches and some tender sentiment.

Included among its ingredients is a daring rescue of a charming girl from a wicked baronet. The rescuers, from that moment to the end, have their hands full in protecting the fair damsel from her enemies, who are persons in high places without scruple and with much audacity. Nobody who likes pure romance can help being interested in the story of the heroine's life with her three self-appointed guardians, the mystry that surrounds her, her strange experiences and her ultimate fate.

The author has handled well an interesting theme, and has dressed his yarn in an entertaining style and peppered it well with incident. It cannot fail to interest, and the plot is carried along so skilfully that it will carry the reader with it to the ingenious issue of the story.

"The Master Mummer" is published by Little, Brown & Co., Boston.

"On the We-a Trail," by Caroline Brown, has just been issued in the paper novel series of the Macmillan company. It is a tale of love and peril wrapped around the most romantic and dramatic incident in early American history—the conquest of the Illinois country by George Rogers Clark of Virginia. Through this little-known episode, the United States when it became a nation found itself in possession of the great territory which has since been cut up into the states between the Ohio and the Mississippi. During the revolution the Indians, egged on by the "Hair-buyer General," Hamilton, ravaged the frontiers, and to put an end to it Patrick Henry, Governor of Virginia, commissioned Clark, with a handful of men, to go into the West. The capture of Cahokia, Kaskaskia and Vincennes, while obscured by the larger events then taking place on the coast, forms one of the most romantic incidents of history.

Into the tale of this campaign the author has woven a romance which is readable, though evidently the work of an unpracticed but enthusiastic pen. It is full of stirring incident, which could hardly be avoided as the tersest history of the Clark campaign is a thrilling romance.

"An Equal Opportunity," by W. Dennis Marks, has been published by the Patterson & White company, Philadelphia. This is a book with an earnest purpose, which is to find the fundamental principles from which will result an equal opportunity for every human being in a properly organized body politic, and to prove that crime is only any act or its omission which prevents one's fellow-men from having an equal opportunity. The author argues in favor of the doctrine of individualism and demands the abrogation of our present laws of inheritance of property. It is needless to add that his views will prove as shocking, or amusing, to the rapidly growing moneyed oligarchy of our country as were the revolutionary edicts of our forefathers the English aristocracy. We are more intelligent than were the French peasantry, but, like them, are growing restless in the web of oppression and poverty woven about us by the methods of "high finance," and we are seeking some method of preventing the growth of unearned inherited fortunes and the oppression of individual effort by the vast aggregations of wealth, collected by corporations and trusts, directed for the enrichment of a few men not more intelligent, not wiser, not morally better, but simply more cunning and greedy than the great majority of their fellow-men. Before the French revolution, the nobility laughed at the writings of Rousseau, and yet their hides were tanned to bind the second edition of his works. We do not anticipate in America the possibility of anything like that, but there is still room for much improvement in our laws, and particularly in the fundamental principles governing our nation, and the thoughtful consideration of the intelligent for this new point of view of our present social conditions may well be asked. To reformers, to labor leaders—above all to clergymen, conservators of "the salt of the earth," and to all, in fact, who unselfishly desire to uplift the plane of the lives and morals of their fellowmen—should the facts, the ideas, and ideals of this unflattering book appeal, for its author pleads for a social system organized not for the purpose of exterminating vice, but for the cultivation of virtue in each individual.

Those who have been accustomed to think of Russian as a barbaric, outlandish tongue will find their judgment somewhat altered after reading the following paragraph quoted from Prince Kropotkin's new book, "Russian Literature": "The richness of the Russian language in words is astounding. Many a word which stands alone for the expression of a given idea in the languages of Western Europe has in Russian three or four equivalents for the rendering of the various shades of the same idea. It is especially rich in rendering various shades of human feeling, tenderness, love, sadness, merriment, as also various degrees of the same action. Its pliability for translation is such that in no other language do you find an equal number of most beautiful, correct and truly poetic renderings of foreign authors. Poets of the most diverse character, such as Heine, Beranger, Longfellow, Schiller, Shelley and Goethe, to say nothing of that favorite with Russian translators, Shakespeare, are equally well turned into Russian. • • The desperate vagueness of German metaphysics is quite as much at home in Russian as the matter-of-fact style of the eighteenth century philosophers; and the short, concrete and expressive terse sentences of the best English writers offer no difficulty for the Russian translator."

In his book, "The Americans," recently brought out by McClure-Phillips, Prof. Munsterberg gave terse expression to a great many original ideas about the American people. One of his opinions has received such hearty endorsement from two prominent advertising experts, typical business men, that they have used the paragraph embodying it, as a preface for a text book on advertising recently written by them, as follows: "Herewith is printed a paragraph from 'The Americans,' by Hugo Munsterberg; which is so in harmony with our own idea as set forth in the first chapter (which chapter was written and in type long before Prof. Munsterberg's book appeared) that it is set here as a sort of keynote of modern advertising: 'The American merchant works for money in exactly the sense that a great painter works for money; the high price which is paid for his picture is a very welcome indication of the general appreciation of his art; but he would never get this appreciation if he were working for the money instead of his artistic ideals. Economically to open up this gigantic country, to bring the fields and forests, rivers and mountains into service of economic progress, to incite the millions of inhabitants to have new needs and to satisfy these by their own resourcefulness, to increase the wealth of the nation, and finally economically to rule the world and within the nation itself to raise the economic power of the individual to undreamt-of importance, has been the work which has fascinated the American. And every individual has felt his cooperation to be ennobled by his firm belief in the value of such an aim for the culture of the world.'"

The Harpers published William Dean Howell's new novel this week. It is the story of a summer among the New England hills, and bears the title of "Miss Bellard's Inspiration." Lillias Bellard is an attractive and advanced young woman, a lecturer in a Western college, whose attitude toward her lover, an Englishman, is very characteristic and thoroughly and typically modern. She comes to spend the summer with her uncle and aunt because she thinks the daily contemplation of their Darby-and-Joan-like happiness will change her attitude of seeing into one of certainty. But other people, with other and complicated matrimonial tangles, interfere with Miss Bellard's would-be calm, dispassionate view, and create a subtly but distinctly humorous situation. Mr. Howells takes full advantage of the opportunity offered to delicately satirize some modern methods of courtship.

A review of "The Accomplice," Frederick Trevor Hill's new novel, which recently appeared in one of the smaller papers, amused the author. In it Mr. Hill is accused of ignorance of technical points of the law in conducting the case of the People vs. Emory. "I plead an alibi," writes Mr. Hill to his publishers, the Harpers. "It is the foreman of the jury and not the writer who describes the murder trial. The whole story is told from the layman's point of view. I have seen many famous or infamous criminals tried during my sixteen years at the New York bar, and ought to know the technique of law, even if the juror foreman who tells the story does not. In depicting the feelings and sensations of the juror, however, I had to rely on observation and imagination, as lawyers in active practice are not allowed to act as jurors, and I have, therefore, never had the opportunity of occupying a juror's seat."

Andrew Carnegie recently gave the very interesting reason why he wrote the "Life of James Watt," published by Doubleday, Page & Co. He said: "When the publishers asked if I would write the life of Watt, I declined, stating that my thoughts were upon other matters. That settled the question, as I supposed, but in this I was mistaken. Why should not I write the life of the maker of the steam engine, out of which I had made a fortune? Besides, I knew little of the history of the steam engine and of Watt himself, and the surest way to obtain knowledge was to comply with the publishers' highly complimentary request. In short, the subject would not down, and finally I was compelled to write again, telling them that the idea haunted me, and if they still desired me to undertake it I should do so with my heart in the task."

In a letter to his publishers, H. B. Marriott Watson told of the origin of his rattling sea romance, "Hurricane Island," which has gone into a third edition. He says it is founded on the episode of the abdication of the Archduke John of Austria, who quit royalty because he preferred his actress wife. He called himself Johann Orta, and set sail in his private yacht. "Hurricane Island" is the story of a prince who falls in love with a great artist and takes her and his sister on a long yacht cruise. There is much treasure on board, and among the things that happen are a mutiny and a wreck.

Aside from the peculiar timeliness of "The Life Insurance Company," by William Alexander, published by D. Appleton & Co., the author has accomplished a difficult feat. One often hears even men who are carrying policies say that they can never understand the details of Life Insurance.

"The agent just told me what it would do to me," one policyholder was heard to remark, "and I took out the policy."

"To you, or for you?" was asked.

Mr. Alexander has traced the progress of a company from its beginning to its conclusion, illustrating each forward step by clear explanations, so that one cannot fail to understand the whole scheme. He even introduces little arguments between two people into the text to illustrate his meaning. The arguers become quite excited, and call each other names, but their argument clears up the last shadow of obscurity in the explanations. The book makes it possible for every one to gain a clear knowledge and comprehension of the Life Insurance business.

"The Evolution of Man," by Wilhelm Boelsche, translated by Ernest Untermann, has been published by Charles H. Kerr & Co., of Chicago. This work, by one of the leading scientists of Germany, was originally published in Stuttgart in 1904 and is now for the first time offered to English readers. It is not in any sense a mere summary of the work of Darwin, but on the other hand it gives a birds-eye view of the work accomplished by a generation of scientists investigating along the lines which Darwin laid down. J. Howard Moore, instructor in zoology at the Crane Manual Training High school, Chicago, says: "The Evolution of Man" is a simple logical exposition of a highly important fact. The book is scientific and reliable, but written in language so plain as to be delightfully adapted to the general reader. It points in the direction in which the evolving mind of the race is headed, and ought to be widely read. Men who are emancipated on questions of industrial policy are are frequently not acquainted with those wider generalizations of science of which industrial truths are but corollaries. This book will open a wonderful window to many such minds."

Lady Duff-Gordon, who, it will be remembered, is a sister of Elinor Glyn-whose amusing story of English society, "The Vicissitudes of Evangeline," has recently been published by the Harpers, has just given a most interesting private exhibition of "psychological" frocks, at the dressmaking establishment conducted by her in London under the name of "Madame Lucile." The costumes were not only a feast to the eyes, but a revelation as well as regards perfection of cut and a clever commingling of color. Some five dozen beautiful gowns designed by this veritable artist were displayed to fine advantage by graceful young women, who promenaded up and down a broad aisle between the spectators, before posing a moment on the stage. Two of the most striking costumes were "A Greeting," an exquisite creation of deep purple voile with a hat of pastel-blue straw and pink roses; and "Hebe," in palest blue over pompadour silk. One tableau illustrated the "Seven Ages of Woman," from the school girl period to that of the dowager. The exhibition proved that Paris will have to look to her laurels in the matter of dress. Both Lady Duff-Gordon and Mrs. Glyn are noted for their beautiful dresses.

Hamilton W. Mabie has written an interesting introduction for "Fairy Tales Every Child Should Know," which Doubleday, Page & Co. have just published. Among other things, he says: "The fairy tale belongs to the child and ought always to be within his reach, not only because it is his special literary form and his nature craves it, but because it is one of the most vital of the textbooks offered to him in the school of life. In ultimate importance it outranks the arithmetic, the grammar, the geography, the manuals of science; for without the aid of the imagination none of these books is really comprehensible.

The old-fashioned daguerreotype is nothing in the way of a travesty on the human face compared with the modern newspapers, according to Anna Robeson Brown, author of "The Wine-Press." At their request the author sent her photograph to D. Appleton & Co., her publishers. The book is serious in plot, and the author assumed a calm, tranquil, forceful expression. The publishers had it reproduced and sent the reproductions to a number of newspapers. The result was startling. In Boston Miss Brown appeared as dark and tragic as Othello. In Philadelphia she either laughed or wept. It was difficult to tell which in the general blur. In New York she looked severe. The inference is that it is not safe for the modern student of physiognomy to rely upon the newspapers for the pursuit of his studies.

D. Appleton & Co. have acquired the "Booklovers Magazine," of Philadelphia, and will publish it in New York, under the title of "Appleton's Booklovers Magazine," beginning with the July number. It is said that D. Appleton & Co. expect to greatly increase their sales of books and the efficiency of their advertising through its agency. It is understood that the policy of the magazine will be changed, and that the fact and fiction of Appleton's best authors will be published in it serially. The house will naturally make an extraordinary effort to have the first number published under the new title a great success, and much is to be expected of it.

Awhile ago, when the editors of McClure's were struck with Mr. Chester's manuscripts and wanted to see the author, he came to New York for the first time in his life, and made up for his tardiness. Shortly after his return, he wrote to a friend: "I wish I were back in New York. It has taken this long for the New York fever to grip me good and hard—but now I've got it."

The chief feature of the current Harper's Weekly (dated June 10) is a four-page illustrated supplement, describing the great Japanese naval victory in Tsushima strait. Another feature of timeliness and importance is an article summarizing the results of the recent railroad-rate hearing before the interstate commerce committee. Apropos of the coming boat races at Henley, W. D. Howells tells of his experiences in "A Day at Henley." Kenyon Cox, vice president of the Society of American Artists, tells how the proposed art union of the Society of American Artists and the Academy of Design can best be brought about. Joseph Conrad, the well-known author on an exciting phase of sea life; "The Gambler," the new novel by Katherine Cecil Thurston, author of "The Masquerader," is continued; in addition to the regular editorial comment, several pages are devoted to pictures of important current events.

In the thirty-two pages which comprise the June American Boy there is not a dull line; and both in variety and class of matter the paper is head and shoulders above any other periodical for boys. The cover page, entitled "Texas Bids Goodbye to the President," showing a great throng of happy smiling faces, makes an appropriate index to the high class stories and articles in the magazine. Kirk Munroe's stirring story, "For the Mikado," is advanced three chapters. "A Page Without a Pull," being the tsory of a page in congress, finishes most happily, and Mr. Spalding concludes "The Origin and Early History of Baseball." Further chapters of "My Four Years at West Point," and "A French Frog and an American Eagle," are given. Among the many larger articles and stories which will delight the reader are: "Bunker Hill Day in Boston," a most suitable story for June; "The First Marathon Race," which gives the origin of this race, which is now a part of important athletic meetings. "Animal-Devouring Plants" tells of the queer food that certain plants require. "In Lemster Woods" is a thrilling story of two boys and a hunger-crazed wolf.

The June issue of the Arena, which closes Volume XXXIII. of this magazine, contains a strong and varied table of contents. In it, Rudolph Blankenburg continues his series of remarkable exposures of corruption in Pennsylvania. This paper entitled, "Municipal Black Plague" deals with the unparalleled corruption which has existed in recent years in the city of Philadelphia—a corruption which finds no parallel in the annals of American commonwealths unless it was under the Tweed Ring. "The Commerce of Latin America: A Magnificent Field Neglected by the United States," by Professor Frederic M. Noa, is a paper that should appeal to the more thoughtful Americans, and especially to wide-awake and enterprising men in business and commercial walks of life. Another paper of great interest and value is entitled "Juggling With Facts and Figures About Transportation; or, How the Railway Interests and Their Special-Pleaders are Seeking to Deceive the People," by W. G. Joerns of Duluth, as since the adjournment of congress there has been a systematic and persistent effort on the part of the great railway corporations to prevent any legislation which will give the people any real relief from the tyranny of these over-rich and law-defying bodies. Mr. Joerns in his admirable paper dissects the specious pleas that have been advanced by representatives of the railways.

Reports from both sides indicate that the number of spies who have met a summary fate during the present war in the Far East has broken all records. In its current issue Leslie's Weekly—whose special correspondents and artists in the field have made real to the public so many phases of the great conflict—presents a page of photographs of the scenes attending the execution of three Koreans employed by the latter. The disastrous defeat of the Russians in the Straits of Korea is taken note of in pictures of the commanders and the leading vessels engaged in the remarkable naval battle. The budget from the Orient comprises also a lively letter from Eleanor Franklin, describing a grand garden party given by the emperor of Japan, the letterpress being re-enforced by views of the most magnificent garden in the Japanese empire. The number is made notable by the initiation of the "news photo prize contest" for all photographers, professional and amateur, fine pictures of timely interest being displayed.

"The Lady From the Sea," a new novelette by Cyrus Townsend Brady, appears in the June number of Lippincott's. As the title indicates, this is a tale of the sea, so thrilling, so romantic, so full of adventure that it compels devouring interest from its first to its last page. The heroine is named Ellen Smith, and the captain, who is her gallant lover, and her jailer as well for a time, is named Jones, and he had begun his career at the age of 11 as captain's servant. This humble origin was displeasing to his sweetheart's father, and only after three years of separation from the girl he loved, Jones returned with a determination to seek Ellen and take her, willy nilly, for his own. A charming short story by Eleanor A. Hallowell is called "Hickory Dock." It is about "A Man and a Girl Who Trifled With Time." It is extremely diverting and is very cleverly treated.

The June 3 issue of Public Opinion is devoted entirely to recreation. Five special articles are contributed presenting many different phases of the pleasure to be found in the open air. Arthur Hewitt writes of "Photography in the Open"; Henry C. Nicholas contributes a graphic picture of the financial side of the annual exodus of American tourists to Europe; G. Upton Harvey writes of the sports of the American Jack Tar; Hrolf Wisby tells how one may find sport and recreation in an automobile, and Albert Britt writes feelingly of "Golf as the Duffer Plays It."

"The Green-Eyed Monster," the story in the Argonaut of June 5, is from the French of Jules Moinaux. It is a bright and sprightly tale of how a jealous husband made a fool of himself, of the part a gay Lothario took in the trouble, and of how a woman's wit brought calm out of confusion.

MORTON IS CHOSEN

Chairman of Board of Directors of the Equitable Society.

Hyde's Controlling Interest Is Sold to a Syndicate.

New York, June 10.—Paul Morton, who retires from the secretaryship of the navy on July 1, was yesterday elected chairman of the board of directors of the Equitable Life Assurance society. His election marks the first and most important step in the reorganization of the society, and was followed by the tender of the resignations of President James W. Alexander, Vice President James H. Hyde, Second Vice President Gage E. Tarbell, Third Vice President George T. Wilson and Fourth Vice President William H. McIntyre.

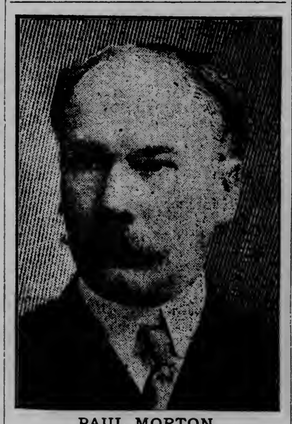
It is known that Brayton Ives and Charles Stewart Smith, who were from the outset of the controversy, on the side of the conservative element, protested against some of the proceedings of the meeting and are believed to have voted against Mr. Morton's election.

The new chairman, to quote Senator Depew, did not consent to take office until he had received positive assurances that he would have a "free hand as to measures and men."

Mr. Hyde "divested" himself of the majority control, but as made clear in his letter to the board, retains a substantial interest in the society.

All of the resignations submitted to the meeting are subject to the pleasure of Chairman Morton, and none has yet been accepted.

Just what action Mr. Morton will take as to these resignations, was not disclosed, but it was strongly intimated that President Alexander and Vice Presidents Tarbell, Wilson and McIntyre retired with the belief that their executive relations with the Equitable has ended.



PAUL MORTON,
New Head of the Equitable Life Assurance Society.

The interests to which Mr. Hyde disposed of his stock number some two score individuals, led by Thomas F. Ryan, vice president of the Morton Trust company, which has close relations with the Mutual Life Insurance company, one of the Equitable society's principal rivals. Mr. Ryan is said to be heavily insured in the Equitable, as are, according to report, many of the others who acted with him in the purchase of the Hyde holdings.

The price paid for the Hyde estate stock, which is to be trusteed practically in perpetuity, was not disclosed, but estimates vary from $3,500,000 to $5,000,000.

In addition to the majority of shares held by the Hyde estate, which includes the widow of Henry B. Hyde, founder of the society, and his daughter, Vice President Hyde is said to hold some other shares, and it is these holdings which Mr. Untermeyer refers to as the "substantial interests" which his client retains. Mr. Untermeyer makes this statement relative to the Hyde interests. He has since the beginning of the Equitable controversy acted as Mr. Hyde's counsel.

The men requested to hold the majority stock by Mr. Ryan are Former President Grover Cleveland, chairman, George Westinghouse of Pittsburg, and Morgan J. O'Brien, recently elevated to the chief justiceship of the appellate division of the supreme court of this district.

Mr. Ryan is the acknowledged head of the Metropolitan Traction company and only a fortnight ago induced Mr. Morton to ally himself with this interest as the operating chief of the New York City Railway company, by which title the Metropolitan surface lines and their affiliated companies in Manhattan and the Bronx are corporately known.

Concerning the purchase of the Equitable stock and the disposition of it, Thomas F. Ryan said:

"In connection with some other policy holders who, like myself, have never had any relations with the Equitable, except as policy holders, I have purchased from Mr. Hyde a majority of the stock of that society. We have made this purchase for the sake of putting an end to the present unfortunate condition of the company's affairs, not only in the interest of the policy holders, but for the business interest of the entire country. We propose upon receiving the stock to immediately divest ourselves of all voting power and accomplish in substance and effect the plan of mutuallization already approved by the superintendent of insurance. We propose to do this by conveying the stock to a board of trustees, composed of men of such character as to command universal confidence and having no connection with Wall street, with power to vote the stock for the election of directors—as to twenty-eight directors in accordance with the instructions of the policyholders of the society, and as to the remaining twenty-four directors in accordance with the uncontrolled judgment of the trustees.

"This will at once accomplish the object of putting the control of the company in the hands of the policyholders and will eliminate entirely the one-man power to which so much objection has been made.

"Our willingness to take this course has been influential in inducing Mr. Morton to accept the chairmanship of the board and to undertake the reorganization of the society, which it is our wish to have made as thorough and complete as possible.

"I have already asked ex-President Cleveland, Justice Morgan J. O'Brien, presiding justice of the appellate division of the supreme court of this department, and George Westinghouse of Pittsburg to act as trustees of the stock. The last two named are among the large policyholders of the Equitable."

The directors of the Equitable went into session yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock, the meeting being attended by twenty-seven of the remaining thirty-seven directors. They were: J. W. Alexander, Chauncey M. Depew, A. C. Deming, George H. Squire, Thomas D. Jordan, Charles Stewart Smith, Valentine P. Snyder, Alvin W. Krech, William Alexander, John J. McCook, C. Ledyard Blair, Brayton Ives, James H. Hyde, Gage E. Tarbell, C. B. Alexander, M. Hartley Dodge, J. F. De Navarro, Bradish Johnson, Alfred G. Vanderbilt, August Belmont, H. R. Winthrop, George J. Gould, George T. Wilson, Thomas T. Eckert, William H. McIntyre, H. M. Alexander and David H. Moffatt.

For some hours prior to the board meeting, Messrs. Depew, Belmont and Moffatt, who, with Louis Fitzgerald and J. B. Forgan of Chicago, constituted the nominating committee, were in session.

The statement of Samuel Untermeyer, counsel for Mr. Hyde, was as follows:

"Mr. Hyde has sold a majority of the stock to a representative of the policyholders represented by Thomas F. Ryan and of whom he is one. Mr. Hyde retains a substantial stock interest and will continue to be identified with the company. All the officers, including Mr. Hyde, have placed their resignations in the hands of Mr. Morton, subject to the control and disposition of Mr. Morton. The interests of the policyholders have been most carefully safeguarded by Mr. Hyde, as will be apparent from the terms of his letter to the board."

Yesterday evening Mr. Ryan made public a letter to Mr. Cleveland, named as one of the trustees. Copies were also sent to Justice O'Brien and Mr. Westinghouse.

Mr. Ryan asked Mr. Cleveland to accept a place on the board of trustees in the following words:

"I beg you to act as one of this board with other gentlemen, who shall be of a character entirely satisfactory to you.

"I should not venture to ask this of you on any personal grounds; but to many people of slender means, to soundness and public confidence would certainly be a great public service, and this view emboldens me to make the request.

"The duties of the trust would be very light, as in the nature of things, when a satisfactory board is once constituted, there are few changes, and all the clerical and formal work would be done by the officer's forces of the company.

"I have written similar letters to Justice Morgan J. O'Brien, presiding justice of the appelate division of our supreme court, and to Mr. George Westinghouse of Pittsburg, two of the largest policy holders of the society."

Mr. Morton's election is believed to mean the solution of the controversy which began between the Hyde and Alexander factions in the Equitable society some months ago and which became publicly known in February of this year. There were charges of irregularities and gross extravangances on both sides, the fight at times waging with such bitterness as to threaten the welfare of the Insttiution, which number some 60,000 policy holders with assets in excess of $400,000,000 and a surplus estimated at $80,000,000.

Chief among the charges preferred by Vice President Hyde was that President Alexander, as a trustee of the Hyde stock, was desirous of wresting control from the estate. On the other hand it was charged by Mr. Alexander that Mr. Hyde and his friends were conducting the affairs of the society without regard for the welfare of the policy holders.

It was Mr. Alexander's contention that the wellbeing of the society demanded its mutualization, that is an actual voice by vote in the affairs of the society by every policy holder.

Mr. Hyde agreed to the plan of mutualization and in the meantime suits against the society were begun in this and other states resulting in various forms of litigation. The plan to mutualize the society was recently defeated or stopped by decision of Justice Maddox of the supreme court of this state.

One of the disturbing factors throughout the situation was Second Vice President Tarbell, who, as head of the agency division, incited a movement against Vice President Hyde.

There were also charges of "syndicate operations" made by President Alexander against Mr. Hyde and some of his associates on the board of directors of the Equitable and in reply to this Mr. Hyde stated that Mr. Alexander has practipated in the operations.

As a result of these revelations an investigation committee was formed in the Equitable directorate, headed by H. C. Frick. The committee presented a voluminous report which criticized practically all the leading executive officers of the society. The report was rejected, whereupon Mr. Frick and his associates on the committee, with the exception of Mr. Brayton Ives, resigned from the directorate as also did half a dozen others.

The proposition to elect a chairman of the board of directors with plenary power to organize the society in all its branches was then determined upon and resolutions were adopted, calling for a complete change of policy in the executive and financial departments. Mr. Morton's selection under the conditions named will effect these reforms.

Cass Lake

Cass Lake, June 10.—(Special to The Herald.)—Cass Lake will soon have a brass band that gives promise of equaling any similar organization in this part of the state. Three years ago, this place had a band that was a source of pride to everybody living here. Elegant instruments were purchased by the village council, a leader was hired, and Cass Lake's band received much favorable mention from all parts of Northern Minnesota. At the close of the summer season, the leader left, interest in the organization waned, and the band was no more—and all efforts to resuscitate it have failed until within the last fortnight. H. L. Read, the old manager of the band, and other enterprising citizens have taken hold of the project. There are a large number of old band men living here, and it will be but a few days until the band will be a flourishing reality.

The Cloquet baseball club will go to Superior Sunday for a game with the Superior team.

an interviewer and simply ossified, interested me.

For the purpose of making conversation I inquired the size of his biceps, but no one present knew what that was, and I was compelled to ask the dimensions of his right arm. They told me it was eight feet long, or something like that, and I believed.

I was also informed that he is a full-blooded Cocohpaw Indian, of a tribe that is supposed to inhabit the wilds of Mexico, and that for ten years last past he has been a policeman on the Yuma reservation. During that time his achievement was the arrest of five belligerent Yumas, after a struggle, in which he defeated the five. I believed that also. Furthermore, he is 29 years old, and is to be pitted against James Jeffries, the actor, for the championship of the world.

DUN'S WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

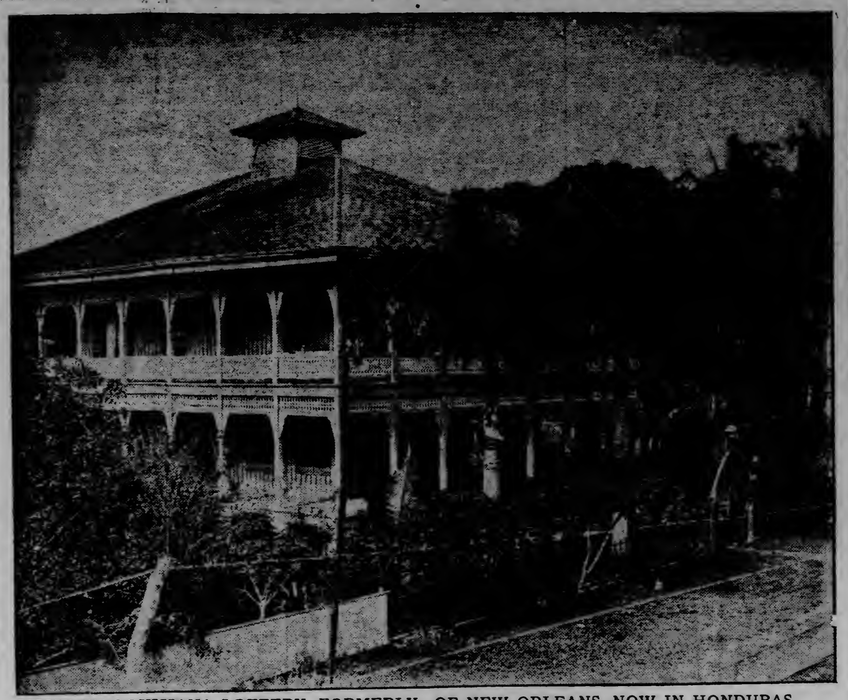
Some Improvement Is Shown In Business Due to High Temperatures.

New York, June 10.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly Review of Trade says: Although trade reports are still irregular and in many cities below expectations, there has been improvement in response to higher temperature and less rain. Manufacturing activity is fully maintained in textile fabrics and there is an enormous output of iron and steel, despite some reduction from last month's record breaking rate of production. Building operations are large and materials in excellent demand. Foreign commerce for the last week at this port shows a splendid gain compared with 1904, imports increasing $3,137,944 and exports gaining $1,470,405. All returns for May make favorable comparisons with same month last year, railway earnings increasing 8.06 per cent, while bank exchanges rose 31.3 per cent. Textile manufacturers are in strong position, buyers gradually appreciating the changed situation. There is little speculative buying, but more disposition to provide for future requirements. Prices are very firm. Further weakness has developed in packer hides, the only supporting factor being the light supply of cow hides that are sought by tanners of upper leather. Country hides are in a relatively better position and South American dry hides are firmer here than in Europe. Supplimentary fall contracts are still arriving at New England footwear factories from salesmen at the West, and sample orders for spring lines are also received. Failures this week in the United States are 216 against 198 last week, 211 the preceding week and 227 the corresponding week last year. Failures in Canada number twenty against twenty-nine last week nineteen the preceding week and twenty last year.

SPANISH HONDURAS A LAND OF WONDERFUL RICHNESS

Fred Brown Talks About the Interesting Little Republic.

Banana Trade One of Principal Industries of the Country.



HOME OF LOUISIANA LOTTERY, FORMERLY OF NEW ORLEANS, NOW IN HONDURAS.

"Honduras is a land of wonderful richness, but if any money is made there it must be made from the development of the country's natural resources, as there is little money in the country itself," said Fred Brown, who recently returned from a most interesting trip through the little republic, about which little or nothing is known in this country.

Mr. Brown went to Honduras for the purpose of buying up some timber lands, and while there he covered much the same ground as that covered by Richard Harding Davis, when he traveled through the country gathering material for a book which he later published.

"If Richard Harding Davis went through that county now, I believe he would be lynched," said Mr. Brown in relating the story of his trip. "In his book he quoted some old author who said some things that were far from flattering to either the people or the country. In some way the people got the idea that they were the sentiments of Mr. Davis himself, and I never heard anybody so universally 'knocked' as was Richard Harding.

"Spanish Honduras should not be confounded with British Honduras. Spanish Honduras is an independent republic lying just south of British Honduras. The republic is 400 miles long and about 180 miles wide at its widest part, having a territory about equal to that of Ohio.

"It is reached by a semi-weekly service by boat from New Orleans. The boats are owned by the United Fruit company, and the service is as good as that on the Atlantic liners. The trip takes three days and a half, and costs $25 each way.

"On the way from New Orleans to Porto Cortez, the seaport of Spanish Honduras, the boat touches at Belize in British Honduras and Porto Barrios in Guatemala.

"Porto Cortez is the entry port on the Carribean sea. It is a town of about 5,000 inhabitants, and is the headquarters for the Honduranian navy. The navy consists of a flagship for the admiral, which is about the size of the Vidette, so Honduras can scarcely be rated as a world power.

"The army headquarters is also at Porto Cortez, where about a dozen men are located. They go bare-footed and in times of peace, drill with wooden guns.

"Porto Cortez is the outlet for all the bananas grown in the republic, and by the way a whole book might be written about the banana trade. I met a cousin of Mr. Frank Brewer's in Honduras, who is making a fortune out of bananas.

"The town is the terminus of the Ferro-carul Interoceanica railroad, which probably gives the worst service and earns the most money of any railroad of its size in the world. It is only forty miles long, and is the only railroad in the republic. While making the trip over the line one day, one of the Englishmen who lives in Porto Cortez offered to bet me $2 to $1 that we would run off the track before we got to the end of the line. I took him up. He then offered to bet even money he could tell the exact spot where we would run off. I took him up on that, too, and he won both bets. We ran off just where he said we would, and it took two hours work in the hot sun to get the train back on again.

"But the railroad carries an enormous amount of freight and thousands of passengers each month, in spite of the wretched service.

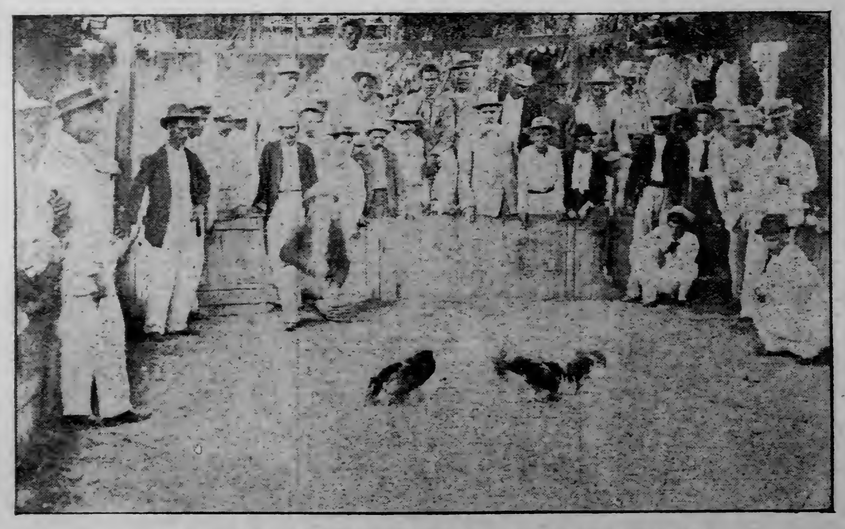
"All the bananas grown in the interior are shipped to Porto Cortez over this line, and from there are sent to New Orleans. The banana lands along the line of railroad sell for about $100 gold, and it will pay for itself in a year. If the railroad were taken hold of by an aggressive American company and extended, it would pay big profits, and it would make land now worth from $5 to $8 an acre, worth as high as $100 an acre for banana land. There is a market for all the bananas that can be grown. All that has to be done is to ship them to Porto Cortez and get your check for them from the United Fruit company.

"A good example of the unprogressiveness of the Hondurianians is given in the lumber business. White pine in Spanish Honduras sells for $45 a thousand, and is imported from the United States, while the hills in the country are covered with it. But there is not a sawmill of any account in the republic. There is no country in the world with better or more good logging streams, and yet they import their pine timber.

"The country is rolling and hilly.

THE STANDING ARMY OF HONDURAS.

TYPE OF HOMES OF THE RESIDENTS IN HONDURAS.



ONE OF THE PASTIMES ENJOYED BY PEOPLE IN HONDURAS.

The valleys are covered with fine grasses and the hills with pine. It would also be impossible to enumerate one-tenth of the hardwood in the country. Mahogany, laurel and Santo Maria are the most plentiful kinds. Some of the streams are used for floating out mahogany logs, but no pine is cut in the republic.

"The sugar lands are the greatest snap in the republic, and give another example of the opportunities gone to waste. The sugar lands will produce $100 profit per acre each year, and they can be bought for a nominal sum. And yet, with thousands of acres of sugar lands at their very doors, the people import their granulated sugar from the United States. It sells for 13 cents a pound, and the common brown sugar for 6 cents.

"There is quite a quantity of brown sugar produced there, but much of it goes to make 'guara' or 'agnadiente' the national drink. The traffic in guara is a complete monopoly of the government, and is an enormous revenue producer. But even some of the guara is imported from Cuba, as the crop of sugar grown in the republic is not sufficient to meet the demand.

"I didn't see a plow in the entire republic while I was there. Corn is planted with a sharp stick and yet it yields 100 bushels to the acre per crop, and two crops a year.

"Steers sell there for $16 a head gold, and the supply is not equal to half of the demand. They are never housed, and they feed themselves the year around on the grasses. It is estimated that it costs about $2 a head to raise steers, and an acre of ground will take care of two of them.

"Hogs also show big profits there. It costs about a cent a pound to raise them, and they sell on the ranch for about six cents. They feed on coroza nuts, and it is a funny sight to see them lying on the ground under the trees waiting for the nuts to fall. One hog will take a tree and lie under it all day waiting for the nuts.

"The country has plenty of good tobacco land, but the natives know nothing whatever about curing it. If the Cuban methods of drying and curing were introduced the Honduras tobacco would be just as good as any other. Some of the crop from the Dulce Nombre de Jesus ranch took first prize at the St Louis exposition.

"The great need of the country is better transportation facilities. More wagon roads and railroads will have to be built before it can develop. At present all transportation is done by mules with the exception of the work done by the little railroad I mentioned.

"Maunel Bonilla, the president of the republic, is a Honduranian, about 45 years old. He is an energetic and exceptionally clever man, and has been introducing American or 'gringo' methods into the country. He has improved the money system, although it is still bad enough. There are two kinds of money in the republic, 'real' money or gold standard, and 'monkey' money. A dollar in 'monkey' money is worth about 8 cents, and I will never forget the look on the face of one of the passengers on our boat when he treated the crowd to cigars and was asked to cough up 'eleven dollars.' He finally settled for 88 cents in American money.

"The population of the country is about 500,000 people, most of them Hondurianians, who are descendants of the Spaniards and native Indians, and the altogether different from negroes. There are quite a number of English and Americans in the country, and at Porto Cortez they have their clubs and societies, and lead quite a pleasant social life.

"Quite an interesting building, at Porto Cortez, by the way, is the Louisiana Lottery building. The lottery was driven out of the United States, and was moved there, and drawings are made every month.

"The country is overflowing with good chances to make money, but it must be made, as I said before, from the development of the natural resource. There is no money in the country. The natives are content to live along from day to day. They keep a hog or two, a few chickens and possibly a cow, raise a little corn and tobacco and carefully avoid any semblance to the strenuous life.

"There are plenty of indications of all kinds of minerals and oil in the country, but no development has taken place."

TIME IS THE TEST.

The Testimony of Duluth People Stands the Test.

The test of time is what tells the tale. The public soon find out when misrepresentations are made, and merit alone will stand the test of time.

Duluth people appreciate merit, and many months ago local citizens publicly endorsed Doan's Kidney Pills; they do so still. Would a citizen make the statement which follows unless convinced that the article was just as represented? A cure that lasts is the kind that every sufferer from kidney ills is looking for.

J. Vaugan of 532 First street west, Duluth, Minn., says: "In the summer of 1898 I told the people of Duluth, through our local newspapers, of the splendid results I had obtained from the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. My trouble was a kidney and bladder disorder that was painful and annoying, and had clung to me for a considerable time. The kidney secretions were quite irregular, and contained a sediment which varied in color and condition. There were dull, heavy pains through the loins, and I was very restless at night, being unable to remain in one position for any length of time. The trouble was becoming worse, when I was induced to try Doan's Kidney Pills. I continued taking them until entirely relieved of the affliction. I am glad to say that the cure has been permanent, and will always be pleased to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills."

OUR YOUNG FOLKS CORNER

Scotty's Six Nickels.

BY WILLIAM WALLACE, JR.

Scotty was only eight years old, but that was no reason why Scotty should be held in check from earning money. Hank and Walt were doing that which would result in remunerative returns. Their father had set aside a patch of ground, on which they were cultivating a garden, the vegetables to be sold and the money to be Hank's and Walt's to use personally. Of course, Hank and Walt were big fellows. Hank being 13 years old and Walt 11. This made some difference. But Scotty was no baby—not a bit of it! And he resented the fact that his brothers were shown this favor of money-earning over his head.

That morning Scotty had heard his big brothers planning on what they would buy with the money earned from their garden. Hank wanted a pony and Walt wanted a rifle. Scotty wanted things, too, but how was he to obtain the money to buy them with? He wanted a pony and cart, a rifle and drum, a pair of sidewalk skates and—oh, ever so many things. But "want must be his master," he guessed.

So he walked sullenly out of the garden where Hank and Walt were busy weeding vegetables, and took his seat on a stone step near the front gate. As he sat there two boys came up from the big meadow below Scotty's home. They carried each a basket filled with wild flowers. They stopped at the corner, near where Scotty sat, and waited for a street car. Scotty's house was in the suburbs of a big city, which was reached by a line of trolley cars. As the boys waited Scotty overheard their conversation.

"I've got 'nough this mornin' to bring in fifty cents," said the larger boy, a fellow about 12 years old. "That'll take me to the circus an' sideshow, too."

"I ain't goin' to spend mine fur the circus," said the smaller boy, barefooted and freckled. "I'm goin' ter have a pair of tan shoes, I am."

Scotty got up and went over to the boys. Pointing to the flowers, he asked: "Going to sell them?"

"Yep," answered the elder boy. "What you s'pose we'd do with 'em—eat em?"

The younger boy laughed.

"Who do you sell 'em to?" asked Scotty, unabashed.

"To folks," replied the big boy, grinning.

Scotty thought a minute, then continued to question: "Do you sell many?"

"Yep, we sell all we can git," the boy informed him. "But it's so blame fur out here an' takes so much time to pick 'em."

"How much do you get for 'em?" went on Scotty, as if it were his right to know all about the boy's business.

"Five cents a bunch—we ties 'em in bunches about the size of your fist," the boy willingly told him. "We git about 50 cents out of a basket."

"Fifty cents!" exclaimed Scotty. Then he fell to thinking. But a car was coming 'round the curve. In another moment the flower-venders would be whirling toward the city. If he spoke of the business proposition that had come into his mind he must be quick about it. "S'pose I pick flowers for you and have 'em in the baskets all ready when you come," he ventured, his heart palpitating with his own boldness. "What'll you give me, huh?"

The car was almost there. The big boy raised his hand to signal the motorman. But he had a quick brain for business, and as he sprang on the rear platform of the car he answered Scotty:

"I'll give you 15 cents for each full basket—baskets to be as big and full as this 'un. Take it up?"

The conductor rang the bell as the boy spoke, the car started on the whiz, but Scotty opened his mouth and yelled with all the power of his healthy young lungs: "Yep, I'll have the flowers here at this corner when you come back! Here—see?"

The car flew on, the electric wire slinging as it went. Scotty turned and ran to the cellar where he knew a lot of old fruit baskets were stored away. He selected two about the size of those carried by the flower-venders and, hanging them over his arms, he ran, unobserved by any of the family, to the spreading meadow, half a mile away.

For an hour—it seemed much longer—Scotty gathered the wild blossoms. Still he had not one basket full. He became discouraged and was on the point of throwing up the job when he remembered Hank and Walt at their task. Why, they had been working a long, long time. All through May they had plowed and planted. Now they were weeding and hoeing without present results. It would be sometime before their sales began. Then why should he—eight-year-old Scotty—expect to make a million a minute? No, he must not give up.

If he could only fill two baskets in a forenoon that would be 30 cents. And two more in the afternoon—why, that would make 60 cents! Sixty cents! Scotty went to work wildly. In less than two hours from the time when he entered the meadow he walked proudly up the hill with his two baskets full of beautiful flowers. As he neared the corner in front of his own home his heart beat high, for a car from the city stopped, the big boy, carrying two empty baskets, dropped off and waited for Scotty to come up. Scotty breathlessly watched the boy go over the flowers critically. Then he took the full baskets and poured their contents into his own baskets, straightened up with an important air, took a greasy old wallet from his torn hip pocket and counted out six nickles into the palm of Scotty. Six nickles! Thirty cents! All Scotty's own!

"That makes us square, don't it kid?" the big boy asked with business coolness. Scotty's breath caught, he was almost two happy to speak. He only grinned and nodded his curly pate.

"Now," went on the boy, who realized he had made a good business deal, "you may keep on pickin' at the present quoted figger—basket, 15 per. Satisfactory?"

"How many baskets full do you want?" asked Scotty, a gold mine opening to his mental vision.

"Jest as long as wild flowers grow jest that long there's a stiddy demand," said the young flower dealer. "But there's my special comin' and I must be off. Do you want to engage yourself to me for the season as picker?"

"You bet I do," boldly spoke out Scotty, holding tightly to the six coins in his small, sweaty palm.

The big boy calmly put the bulging money wad back into his hip pocket, raised a warning finger to the motorman of his "special," took up his two full baskets and sprang on the platform of the city-bound street car. As he did so he nodded a patronizing farewell to Scotty, who stood watching him with admiration and surprise in his eyes.

As soon as the car was out of sight Scotty opened his tightly closed hands and looked long at the six nickels lying in his two palms—three in each. Then carefully putting the money in his blouse breast pocket, he picked up his empty baskets and ran swiftly into the house to tell his mother all about his good luck. He found her busy in the dining-room setting the table for dinner.

"See, mamma, see!" he exclaimed, joyously, jerking the 30 cents out of his pocket. "Just lookie, 30 cents—six whole nickels, and all mine, too. I've earned it, I have. Just guess how!"

Then, before his mamma could guess a single way in which Scotty had earned the money, he had told the whole story in a jumble of words that made mamma smile. Then she put her arm about his shoulders and said: "You must not forget to be thankful for the meadows full of wild flowers, for they are the source of your earnings."

"I won't, 'deed I won't," vowed Scotty. "I'm dreffel thankful that I don't have to plow and plant and dig and pull weeds like Hank and Walt, I am. All I've got to do is to pick the flowers that grow everywhere on the ground and sell two baskets full for six nickels. Six nickels—ain't they big?"

"And what is my boy going to do with all his wealth?" asked mamma, amused at his enthusiasm.

Scotty thought a minute. The pony and cart, rifle and drum, sidewalk skates, etc., were mere trifles of the past. His money should not go for such things. A happy gleam sparkled in his big blue eyes, a look of love filled his sunburnt boyish face as he threw his arms about his mothers waist and said: "I'll help papa to pay the debt on our nice new house." And how his heart swelled with pride as he made this promise.

"Dear, thoughtful little son," mamma said, her eyes moist, although she smiled. "Papa need have no fears concerning that debt since he has such a generous and industrious boy to help him pay it off."

HOW TOMMY LOST HIS LIVES.

Old Tommy Cat possessed nine lives,
Nine sturdy lives had he;
One he lost by falling down
From the top of a sky-high tree.

Then forth he went with lives but eight,
Stayed out one night till eleven,
Met a gent of his very own stripe—
Came home with lives but seven!

Proud of his strength and agility,
He tried on a dog his tricks
Of claw and tooth, of spring and leap—
And the dog left him lives just six!

Then he was careful a wee short while
Though on care he didn't thrive;
Cook saw him helping himself to meat—
A broom—and Tom's lives were five!

A baby lived in the house with Tom
And this baby loved him more
Than was really good, for Tom was squeezed
Till his lives numbered only four.

Then off he ran from his old home
O'er the wide world went to see,
When an auto passing gave him one
Quick lick! and his lives were three!

What was the use of being downcast?
For with life he wasn't yet through;
A bird cage near by caught his cat-eye;
A leap!—an old lady!—lives two!

One day 'neath a tree he saw a deep hole,
"A mouse!" he cried. "Now for some fun!"
So down he crouched to wait for the snake
That crawled out—and his life was one."

So home he went in sore, deep distress,
Took a look at himself in a glass;
So shocked was he at the loss of his lives
That he fell in a fit—alas!

Alas and alack! he never came back
To the place where his lives had been spent;
But over the edge of the ninth brink o' death
He catlike and "meow-owing" went.

FANNY FERN.

Mrs. June Bug's Farewell Party.

BY MAUD WALKER.

Owing to the lateness of spring old Mrs. June Bug had not left her comfortable winter quarters, in a cave which led back under a ledge of rock, to go to town for a gay summer season. It was her custom to give a farewell party each spring before shutting up the cave for the warm months. Her family was a large one, consisting of Mr. June Bug, nine young lady daughters, seven sons, dozens of uncles, aunts, nieces, nephews and relatives-in-law.

"Suppose we have our reception this week," grunted old Mr. June Bug, resting from his breakfast and rolling a cigarette into shape from the heart of a clover blossom. "I think the rains are over for a spell and that summer will now set in in earnest."

"Yes," answered Mrs. June Bug, resting her front feet on the cottonwood leaf which formed the table cover, "if we give our June party it's high time we were about the preparations. By next week we must pack and fly away to town; though, to tell the truth, I feel I'm getting a bit too old to break up each year and go gadding about like a young bug."

Unlike the human family, who flit from town in summer, the bug family leave the country and swarm in town and city, holding a round of revels through the sweltering months, for they prefer torrid temperature to frost and snow.

"Yes, indeed, mamma," cried one of the Misses June Bug, lifting her wings airily, "we should set about the invitations at once."

This sprightly Miss June Bug loved social life, and was never so happy as when flying around in a gay quadrille to the music of the cricket and katydid orchestra that was always engaged to furnish music for the June Bug functions.

"Well, suppose you girls and mamma write the invitations this morning," suggested one of the oldest sons, who was hall. In a few minutes all the lady bugs of the household were gathered there, talking over the plans for the coming social event.

The cave occupied by the June Bugs was divided by nature into several large apartments, stone walls serving as partitions, through which were cracks or openings which served as communicating doors between the rooms. The outer apartment, into which a tunneled opening led, was set aside as the reception hall and banquet chamber. Here the grand functions were held.

Mrs. June Bug kept a well-regulated establishment, for she employed as servants two species of ants—small black ones as house servants and large red ones for stable and grounds. A fine, energetic honey bee was engaged as housekeeper, and Mrs. June Bug threw all responsibility on the shoulders of Mrs. Honey Bee, who was worked like a slave.

It was a sorry fact that no member of the June Bug family was ever known to work, but that they lived off the labor of ant and bee.

"Now," said Mrs. June Bug, resting herself comfortably against a smooth pebble and looking languidly round on her lady bugs, "suppose we make out the list of guests' names. Then the girls may write the invitations without further delay. Let us begin with the wasps. I'm really fond of the Wasps, they are so elegant, so haughty."

"And the Locusts, from Upper Creek," exclaimed one of the Misses June Bug, who was receiving the attentions of one of the musical young male Locusts. "Don't forget the Locusts."

"Oh, that wouldn't be possible with you here," slyly remarked a joking old Aunt June Bug. Then everyone laughed at the young Miss' expense. "Yes, the Locusts, of course," agreed old Mrs. June Bug, putting a check to the laughter. "And on the list—"

"And the Butterflies!" gaily exclaimed the gay son who had just that moment returned from his fly through the woods.

"Oh, yes, yes!" cried all the younger June Bugs in a voice. "The Butterflies, of course. They're so stylish and so gay and lighthearted. The Butterflies by all means!"

So the invitations were written out on fresh daisy petals and wrapped in soft green grass blades. Then old Mrs. June Bug tapped on an empty acorn shell with a bit of fish bone, which summoned an ant servant. "Here," she commanded, handing the budget of invitations to the tiny servant, "give these to Lightfoot with the order that they be delivered at once to the parties to whom they are addressed. Away!"

The little black ant bowed its head submissively and with its load—larger than itself—turned to obey without a word.

Lightfoot, a huge red ant, and one of Mrs. June Bug's favorite servants, was a dandy of fashion. "I'll drop in and talk the affair over after I've had my morning buzz through the woods." Then the gay, idle chap took a last sip from a wild plum blossom and, excusing himself from the table, flew from the cave, going on his morning fly to keep his wings strong and trim.

Mrs. June Bug excused the members of the family from the dining-room and retired to her own apartment, which led off to the right of the large reception room on goldenrod blossom, with sheep-sorrel sauce, was a dish much relished by the guests. A delicate salad of chopped clover leaf, with gnat-oil dressing, followed the meats, and fresh dew caught in wild strawberry leaves was the delicious nectar that washed it down their insect throats.

At table all grew gay and kept the tired, industrious little ants busy waiting upon them. Many toasts were spoken, jokes cracked and ballads sung. Then followed the ball.

Round and round the cave they flew and hopped in the mazes of the dance. There were couples of June Bug and Butterfly, Wasp and Bee, Grasshopper and Locust, etc., till the room was filled with their gay chatter and swish of wing.

When the evening was almost over clouds gathered over the earth and darkened the face of the silver moon. A low rumble of thunder hoarsely whispered that a storm was in progress of making. But the merrymakers in the cave of Mrs. June Bug did not hear the warning for the sounds of revelry filled their ears against any other noise.

But in the kitchen the busy Mrs. Honey Bee and the ants heard and listened. Instinct taught them that danger threatened from the clouds, and without any ado they betook themselves into a deep, dark crevice high up in the rock of the very innermost part of the cave. There they huddled in a cool place and waited.

But they did not have long to wait. Pretty soon a crash like the blowing up of the earth resounded and a lurid light for an instant turned everything a burning red. The rock walls and roof of the cave shook and crumbled, being shattered to a thousand fragments. A mass of debris filled the cave and the banquet hall and ballroom of Mrs. June Bug was no more.

The next morning the ants crawled out of their hiding place, which had been secure from the lightning bolt that had caused such disaster to the better part of the cave. Old Mrs. Honey Bee, her legs stiff and her wings cramped from staying in such close quarters so long, followed the ants out into the open. Here they all looked about them. Not one June bug, nor one single guest at the party, was left to tell the story; they had perished in the midst of their revelry.

"Work saved us," said one sober little ant, looking at Mrs. Honey Bee.

"Yes, had we been in society we'd all be buried now," remarked another ant, refreshing himself with a sip of dew from a grass blade. "After all, it is just as well to live a bit slower and be surer," said old Lightfoot, playing the philosopher. "As for me, I'm glad to be free from the restraint placed upon me by a lazy employer. Now I shall go forth and work for myself and lay up my own earnings. Who wants to join me in organizing an ant colony?" All the ants expressed an eagerness to follow him, and from that day they went forth daily to their work, establishing the reputation they have ever since enjoyed, that of being forever busy. And so ended the farewell party given by the family of June Bug.

AUTO-ANIMALS FOR THE CHILDREN.

Cut out each auto-animal or bird as published and paste on heavy paper; turn rapidly from right to left and see the wheels go round. The collection will amuse the children on rainy days.

Children's playhouse built in a great spreading shade tree; drawn from one built by two boys. The carpenter work was strong and secure.

WHEN GRAMPA TELLS A STORY.

When grampa tells a story
Us kids is quiet as mice,
An' set around clost to him
Behavin' awful nice.

He tells of wars
And hunts and fights;
Of storms what raged
On winter nights;
Of injuns in
The forests bold—
Of things that n'er
Before was told!

When grampa tells a story
We swaller every word,
For he can tell the best one
A feller ever heard.

He tells of things
So long ago
You wonder if
They can be so.
Of times when the
U. S. was new
And him a kid
Like me an' you.

When grampa tells a story
You shiver an' you shake,
For he has gone through dreffel things
That 'd make an army quake

He tells when steam cars
Didn't run;
When folks told time
By sand and sun.
And with a tear-drop
In his eye
He'll say the good
Times have passed by.

Little Biographies of Big Masters.

[Note to Children: Cut out and paste in a scrapbook the series of short biographical sketches now running in this department. They will be convenient for future reference.]

Raphael Sanzio, or Sauti, was born on Good Friday in the year 1483, in Urbino, Italy. His father was a painter of some repute and a man of parts.

When Raphael was but eight years old he had the misfortune to lose his mother, and three years later he suffered a still greater loss, the loss of his father, thus becoming, while yet a wee bit of a lad, an orphan, indeed.

His adoring father was his first instructor in the art of drawing and mixing colors, and the little Raphael—always a delicate boy—heeded his father's instructions.

In 1504 Raphael made his first visit to Florence and was filled with admiration for the works of Leonardo da Vinci and Michelangelo, which he saw there. In the following year he undertook the work of several large canvases for various churches of Perugia.

Among Raphael's most noted compositions is that series called "Raphael's Bible." This series consisted of small frescos which adorned the cupolas of the loggia of the Vatican.

At the early age of 25 Raphael's glory was sung from boundary to boundary of Italy, and not in his own country alone was his name known. He was commissioned by Pope Julius II. to decorate the unfinished halls of the Vatican with frescos. Before the completion of this work, however, Pope Julius died and his successor, Pope Leo X, came into power. But, like Julius, Leo X proved to be a great admirer and patron of the wonderful genius, Raphael.

The greatest portrait ever painted by Raphael (and one of the greatest ever painted by any hand) was that of Pope Leo X., who is shown between two cardinals. This truly great masterpiece of portraiture was begun in 1517 and completed in 1519.

This does not mean that Raphael was engaged in painting constantly on this portrait for two years, for often he was employed on dozens of canvases at a time, some being put aside for months together in an unfinished state, to be brought to the easel later and completed.

Probably the most celebrated pictures from this great master's brush are "The Sistine Madonna" (Royal Gallery, Dresden) and the "Transfiguration" (Vatican Gallery, Rome).

"The Transfiguration" was the last work completed by his hands. On Good Friday (his birthday), April 6, 1520, Raphael died, after a short illness of about two weeks. Only 37 years of age, in the morning of his power, his brushes dipped in fresh-ground colors, so to speak, with eyes still looking heavenward for inspiration, he was led down into the Valley of the Shadow.

The house at Urbino in which Raphael was born still stands, and thousands of people from all over the world who love the name of Raphael visit it each year.
